really in love with Manuel, in spite of his many faults and in spite of the way in which he had treated her. So when she heard Manuel making a bargain with Liberty to the effect that if she would go north with him he would betray the Mexicans and forsake the forces of the revolution, she at once told Alviera.

LIBERTY (Episode No. 13)—"Strife and Sorrow"—(Two parts—Nov. 6).—The episode opens with Pedro recovering from the wounds that he received from his automobile accident. He is bathing them in a stream, while Liberty, who has been recaptured, is riding towards Manuel's shack. Lopez's men are reconnoitering and Manuel and Theresa are eating in their shack.

At the ruins where Bob and his men are being besieged he is ministering to their wounds when a spy arrives with information about the whereabouts of Manuel. Liberty, realizing the danger that Bob and his men are in, agrees to surrender herself to Manuel if he will let Bob go. This he agrees to do, and the two of them watch the Americans go over the hill.

The spectacle of seeing Bob leave overcomes Liberty and she swoons in Manuel's arms. He carries her to the hut and they are followed by Theresa. Theresa is wild with jealousy, as she still loves Manuel, in spite of the way that he has mistreated her. She bursts into the hut and threatens to shoot Liberty unless she is sent away. This Manuel refuses to do, and the Mexican girl, in a fit of rage, shoots Manuel. Then she turns the pistol on herself and ends her misery.

When the Mexican soldiers enter the hut they find Liberty standing over the two bodies holding the smoking pistol in her hand, so she is arrested and taken to Chihuahua to be thrown into prison. In the meantime Lopez and his troops have surrounded Major Winston and his men in the desert. The Americans are outnumbered fifty to one, but they put up a plucky scrap. But the fight goes against them and the major is wounded. A pit is dug and his body hidden in it, in the hope that the Mexicans will not find it. The episode closes as eight American soldiers, the last of the major's detachment, are standing back to back as Lopez and his men draw upon them.

LIBERTY (Episode No. 14—"A Modern Joan of Arc" Two parts—Nov. 13).—At the close of the thirteenth episode Liberty and Pedro had been captured and were on their way to the prison at Chihuahua. Out on the desert Major Winston and his men are surrounded by a detachment of Mexicans, who outnumber them about three to one, but the Americans decide that they will fight, as they know that they will receive scant mercy at the hands of the bloodthirsty villains who are about them. But it is not long before numbers begin to tell, and, although the Americans put up a brave fight, they are getting the worst of it.

All this time Bob and his men have been held imprisoned in the ruins on the hill. They have been fighting to good advantage when the leaders of the troops that are opposing them decide that instead of wasting so many troops they will starve them out. This is very disheartening, as they have provender for only a few days left. Then some one makes a great discovery. From the hill it is possible to see the fight that the major and his men are having in trying to come to their aid. They see the latter's men cut down and realize that there is not much hope of assistance.

At last the major himself is wounded. The handful of his men who are left, feeling that the game is up and wanting to save their commander, dig a hole and put the major into it. They then fix the hole up with bayonets and put coats over so that he can breathe. When they are finished they have made a safe retreat. The remainder of the soldiers are then wiped out by a charge that is led by Lopez in person.

At last he can stand it no longer and goes to the doctor. The doctor confirms his worst fears and tells him that it would be a crime to marry. But when he tells his sweetheart all this she laughs and says that she wants him anyway. The picture ends with the somewhat dubious happiness of the couple.

LIFE'S MAELSTROM (Two Parts—Nov. 16).—The cast: John Barclay (Murdock MacQuarrie); Myra Barclay (Edythe Sterling); Willard Wade (Bud Chase); Walter Reeves (Harry Ham); Herbert Lampson (G. A. Williams); Fisherman (W. L. Rodgers); His Wife (Mrs. Jay Hunt). Written by Murdock MacQuarrie. Produced by Jay Hunt.

Myra is the daughter of old John Barclay, well known on the stage. A few years before the opening of the story she had run away from home with a man whom she had thought that she loved. But after a few months she realized that he did not really care for her. But it was too late to go back, as she was too proud to ask her father's forgiveness. One day the police come after her husband and she finds that the reason that he never stayed at home was that he was a burglar by profession.

In the town where Barclay is playing he is taken sick, but acts in the performance, as there is no one to take his place. This brings on a serious illness that causes the disbandment of the company, as he is necessary to its existence. In the meanwhile Myra has reached her last resources. There is nothing left to pawn and the landlord wants his rent. She is sick so she cannot work, and there is nothing left for her but the streets. She is picked up by a kindly woman and taken to the hospital. But before this has happened she has written to her father, telling him of her plight and asking him to come to her aid.

When old Barclay has fully recovered from his illness he sets out to help his daughter, but finds that she has left her lodgings without giving a new address. While resting in his rooming house, thinking of the best course to follow he hears a typewriter hammering away and finds that there is a young author writing a play. Barclay, from the wealth of his long experience, gives him advice and gets a manager to promise to put it on. So the two of them go to a secluded spot by the seashore to revise the play.

In the meantime Myra has been discharged from the hospital, well but penniless. She does not know what to do, but at last decides to end it all. She jumps from the top of a bridge, but is rescued by some fisherfolk, who take care of her. But she has lost her memory and cannot remember anything that has happened. To this place come old Barclay and his young friend. When Myra sees her old father her memory returns and there is a happy reunion. Then later the news comes that Wade has been killed in trying to escape and the family is happy in the knowledge that the only cloud that was hanging over them has been dispelled.

THE LONG SEARCH (Special release—Nov. 17).—The long search ends out on the border with the death of Starlight, an Indian girl. She was stolen from her cradle by the Indians when she was only a child and her brother, at the deathbed of his mother, promised to look for her until he found her, if it took the better part of his life to accomplish his purpose. True to his word, he goes to the border and enlists in the army. One day after a raid on the camp of some Indians they find an Indian girl who has been wounded. When he bends down to comfort her he finds to his surprise that it is his long lost sister, whom he recognizes by the birth mark on her arm. The long search is ended at last as his sister dies in his arms.

HONOR THY COUNTRY (Three Parts—Nov. 14).—The cast: Dick Sterrett (Edward Cecil); Betty Thomas (Neva Gerber); Count Del Vaine (Joseph W. Girard); Lieut. Scott (Charles Perley); Florita (Rhea Haines); Boyd Thomas (Robert Emmons). Scenario by Alice Von Saxmar. Produced by Ben Wilson.

Dick Sterrett is the commander-in-chief of the forces of Count Del Vaine in a little South American republic. Lieutenant Scott is an American naval officer on leave who has been amusing himself with Florita, the niece of the ruler. Dick tells Scott that it is dangerous to trifle with the honor of the girl, but Scott scoffs at the idea. Boyd Thomas, a wealthy American, arrives with his daughter, Betty. The girl de-gets Jack's predicament. The guests gather around the table and Jack is unable to escape without disclosing his identity. After various difficulties with the fountain, in which Jack's rival, as well as Spike himself gets a soaking, Jack is dragged forth, where explanations follow and Jack attends the party in his overalls, while Spike makes himself solid with the cook and likewise enjoys a good meal.

A CAPABLE LADY COOK (Nov. 17).—The cast: Hubby ("Kewpie" Morgan); his wife (Belle Bennett); Sweedy (Wallace Beery); ice man (T. Moreno). Written by Harry Wulze; produced by Wallace Beery.

Hubby can't stand his wife's cooking and he goes to the employment agency and gets Sweedy as a new cook. They arrive home and dinner is about to be served. Sweedy never reaches the table, however, for her foot slips and the expected dinner flies away. Sweedy then starts to clean house, but soon gets in wrong by raising loads of dust.

Sweedy now starts to do more cooking, but gets a note from the iceman saying he will meet her on the corner and go for a lark. Sweedy takes the wife's new gown and goes to keep the appointment. Hubby discovers the note, thinks his wife is false, follows and brings Sweedy home, where, in the parlor, he protests against such treatment and declares his love in hot terms, which is overheard by the wife. She steps in and the astonished husband discovers his terrible mistake.

REX.

THE DIAMOND LURE (Nov. 16).—The cast: John Morgan (Rex Roselli); Lucille Morgan (Betty Schade); Frank Wilson (Lloyd Whitlock). Written and produced by John McDermott.

One day while Lucille is riding through the park she notices a couple of crooks climbing into a machine just ahead of her and attack the owner named Wilson. Sensing that something is wrong, she follows them through the street, and, picking up a couple of cops, rescues him. Then she takes him to her home and he meets her father.

In the days that follow Lucille and Wilson become fast friends and one night Lucille and her father are invited by Wilson to his home, where he shows them a priceless diamond that he has brought from Egypt. While Lucille and Wilson are admiring a beautiful necklace in front of a mirror Morgan secrets the famous diamond in the old-fashioned locket which Lucille had removed. Lucille sees this in the mirror.

Wilson finds the diamond missing and gives Morgan three minutes in which to return the stone. Morgan is frightened. Lucille quietly opens the locket, takes out the diamond and throws it on the floor. When the three minutes are up Wilson rises to phone the police. His feet touch something on the floor. It is the diamond—and he begs forgiveness for his rash accusation.

LOST IN BABYLON (Nov. 19).—The cast: Alan Martin (Mildred K. Wilson); Nathan Bush (Malcolm Blevins); Katty Lee (Edith Roberts). Written by Harvey Gates; produced by Millard K. Wilson.

Katty's aspiring mother has decided that she shall marry the wealthy bachelor, Nathan Bush, but Katty is not over enthusiastic. Mrs. Lee sends Katty to the city to study music for a year, after which she is to return home, marry Bush and lead the village choir. But, arrived in the city, Katty longs for the bright lights and all their supposed joy.

She makes the acquaintance of a young reporter, Alan Martin, and he asks to call, thinking that he will have a quiet evening with the little country girl. But he reckoned without his host, for Katty had determined that she would see the sights of the great city.

With the aid of a couple of girls in the rooming house Katty gets "doled" and is such a sight that she almost takes Alan's breath away. Alan turns back and tries to persuade her to tell him if she is without funds. At last they become very good friends and on their honeymoon they go to see Nathan, and the choir—go to see and nothing more.

A MILLION DOLLAR SMASH (Two parts—Nov. 15).—Lucille is the sweetheart of Jimmie who is her father's assistant. Her father is the station agent at Koko, an important post, as there are many shipments of gold that are all the time coming through. One day they receive word that there is a big shipment coming. On the train that is bringing the gold is "Nitro Ned and his gang, who plan to get the money. They see the bank messenger and are about to grab the coin when he gets off at Koko. The crooks follow. The first thing that Ned does is to "get in soft" with the daughter of the master. The station master is very well pleased, as he does not like Jimmie. Jimmie is bounced and the new man takes his place.

The crook now proceeds to get the combination of the safe by means of a looking glass. Finally they decide to rob the safe, but Jimmie is on the job and holds them up with a gun. Then they lock the boy in the safe and plan to take the whole thing. The express freight is coming through that morning, so they plant a lot of dynamite so as to blow the safe into one of the vacant cars.

The time fuse goes off at the right time and the safe is blown into the car. They proceed to side-track the car and finally separate it from the rest of the train. But they fail to take everything into account. Soon the car is running wild and they are powerless to stop it. It gets to a town and goes through the streets, much to the astonishment of the natives. But the car cannot be stopped. It dashes over a cliff in a whirlwind finish. Jimmie has just enough strength left to climb out of the ruins and capture the crooks and so gains the girl whom he loves.

THE SON OF A REBEL CHIEF (Two parts—Nov. 18).—The cast: Will Dozier (William V. Mong); Elsie Dening (Nellie Allen); Colonel Dozier (Marc Fenton); Old Wesley (Harry Holden). Written and produced by William V. Mong.

Will Dozier and Elsie Dening are sweethearts and live in the South. Colonel Dozier, is a strong sympathizer with the South, while Will, unknown to his father and sweetheart, favors the cause of the Northern people, his mother's people. When the call comes Will joins the Northern army and his father and Elsie are heartbroken. Will tries to see his father, but the latter sends him a note telling him to do whatever his heart says is right. Colonel Dozier frees the slaves on his plantation, closes the house and goes to take up his commission with the Southern army. One of the slaves, Old Wesley, follows his master and acts as his body guard.

Some time later Will is detailed with his company in the vicinity of his former home. He prevails upon his old mammy to give a dinner for the Northern boys, but as they are making ready for the feast the Colonel and some of his troopers arrive. Will discovers his father and compels him to allow him and his men to escape.

A few weeks after this Will is doing guard duty and has with him the note given by his father. He is attracted by a noise nearby and discovers a Southern soldier making notes of their encampment. He dislikes to shoot the man, but remembers the message of his father. He orders the soldier to halt, and, when he starts to run, fires. Will follows into the underbrush, where he discovers the man, dying—and also that he has shot his father.

When the war is over Will returns to his home to find Elsie and the faithful old servants tending the grave of his father and mother, and through the efforts of Old Wesley the two young people are brought together.

UNIVERSAL SPECIAL FEATURE.

LIBERTY (Episode No. 12—"For the Flag"—Two parts—Oct. 30).—At the close of the last episode Pedro was about to dash over the cliff in the auto which he had commandeered. Liberty was on the road trying to make her escape and was hiding behind trees and attempting to take every advantage she could to escape detection. She thought that she was about to make her escape when she heard the forces of the rebels approaching. She made a good fight, like the plucky girl that she was, but the odds were too great and at last she was taken into custody and led back to the insurrecto camp.

Manuel was now in charge of the camp and as he saw Liberty brought in he thought that at last his thwarted desires were about to be realized. But Theresa was now in the camp and was madly jealous, as she had all along been receipt and promises to get the money for him. But later La Sage suggests that Hugh help him marry his sister, Eleanor. When Hugh hesitates, La Sage threatens to show the 200 pound receipt to Hugh's colonel. Thereupon, Hugh consents, and La Sage is introduced into the Butterworth home. Hugh confesses all to Chumley and tells him that La Sage wants to marry Eleanor. Blink Blunk, La Sage's former chum in prison, comes to Hugh's home and is helping himself to several pieces of bric-a-brac when Lord Chumley discovers him. Relieving Blink Blunk of these articles, Chumley learns that he knows La Sage. Chumley promises Blink Blunk money and protection to learn La Sage's history. When Chumley again meets La Sage he threatens to expose him as an ex-convict if he shows the receipt for 200 pounds to Hugh's colonel.

Later, Hugh leaves with his company for South Africa. Chumley tells him to keep quiet and serve his country—that he will raise the missing 800 pounds due the widow. Chumley sells his effects and secures lodgings opposite the barracks, but he has lost the name and address of the widow and has much trouble in trying to locate her. During Chumley's absence La Sage tells Eleanor that Chumley has caused Hugh to gamble away the McGregor fund. Inquiring from the slavey who takes care of his apartment whether she knows Lieut. Butterworth, Chumley is informed that Butterworth gave her mother 200 pounds from the regiment. Delighted that he has at last located the widow, he pays her the missing money and secures a receipt for 1,000 pounds. At Hugh's home, La Sage insists on an early marriage, threatening Eleanor that if she does not consent he will expose Hugh to his colonel. Eleanor promises to marry him if he will spare her brother, but Lord Chumley returns in time to prevent this sacrifice, bringing with him the widow, who states that she received 1,000 pounds from Lieut. Butterworth. La Sage denies this, and produces the receipt for 200 pounds, but Meg, the widow's daughter, says "that was a wedding present for Tommy and me." La Sage is taken off by detectives, and the last scene leaves Eleanor in Lord Chumley's embrace.

JOKER.

THEIR FIRST ARREST (Nov. 18).—The cast: Sam (William Franey), Jake (Milburn Moranti); Sheriff (Charles Conklin); Widow (Gale Henry); Helen (Lillian Peacock). Story by Smythe Addison; produced by W. W. Beaudine.

Sam and Jake have graduated from a correspondence detective school and are anxious to get to work. Both are in love with Helen, the sheriff's daughter, but the latter orders them to leave his daughter alone. While they are still at the house the sheriff gets a message from a widow living near by that a burglar is in the house, and Sam and Jake both scent a field for action.

The sheriff sets out to capture the crook—and the two detectives do the same. Meantime the crook has ransacked the place and the widow is cringing in terror in one of the rooms. When the sheriff arrives she does not recognize him in his makeup, and, mistaking him for the crook, faints. The crook in an adjoining room is as frightened as is she.

The widow revives and herself captures the crook whom Helen had taken into custody, but released when Jake and Sam appeared with the sheriff, whom they declared was the real burglar. The widow now marches the crook to the station, where the others are putting the sheriff through the third degree as per the instruction book. The sheriff removes his disguise and he and the widow decide that they can find happiness together, and so Helen wins a new mother.

VICTOR.

A CASE OF BEANS (Special Release—Nov. 14).—The cast: Mrs. Newlywed (Fritzie Brunette), Mr. Newlywed (Jack Prescott); the grocer (Jack Bramall); the maid (Jane Bernoudy); the ice man (Tom Walsh). Written by L. V. Jefferson; produced by Robert Daly.

Mr. and Mrs. Newlywed are almost happy. They would be really happy if the wife did not neglect her husband for the sake of her friends. Hubby gets angry and rebels at his diet of beans. He fills the bean can with rocks for a joke.

Wifey's friends give her their jewels to put in the vault for them, and she hides them in the bean can until she has time to go to the vault. The servants find the jewels and think that the couple are crooks. They set the police on their trail and then the fun begins. The bride sets out for the vault with the can of gravel. In the end the husband is forced to eat the gravel, so that that part of the joke does not turn out quite as per expected. But the mystery is at last cleared and the couple are made happy by the experience.

HER CHANCE (Nov. 19).—The cast: Geoffrey (Harry Carter); Henry (Lee Hill); James Martin (Wilbur Higby); Mrs. Martin (Velta White); Amy (Lillian Concord); Frances (Lois Wilson). Written by Constance Crawley and Arthur Meade.

Frances is the poor relation in the household of the Martins, who are wealthy Americans and who have social ambitions for their daughter. They invite Lord Geoffrey to spend the week-end with them so that they daughter can "get him on the string."

The guest arrives and Geoffrey receives the attention of Amy, while there seems to be a mutual interest between Henry and Frances. Frances has been turned out of her room to accommodate Henry and when she finds that she has forgotten something she goes to his room to get it. She is seen leaving and accused of wrong-doing. Henry, however, knows that she is innocent and gets her address to follow her.

At last Amy succeeds in her plans and becomes engaged to the nobleman. Then Henry returns with Frances and says that she is Lady Fairfax, as he is the real lord. Frances is happy and Amy flies to her mother's arms when she find that her fiance is only a bogus lord.

IMP.

GUILTY (Two Parts—Nov. 17).—The cast: Ramon (Harry Carey); Copeland (E. N. Warleck); Captain (L. C. Shumway); Nedra (Peggy Coudray); Benton (Lee Hill); Grace (Edith Johnson); her uncle (Marc Fenton). Scenario by William Parker; produced by Henry McRae.

Ramon Valentine, an author of socialistic tendencies, who is living in the slums to gather material for a novel, finds himself under suspicion for murder. He has attempted to assist a poor family who are threatened with eviction by Copeland, a millionaire tenement house owner. He gains the enmity of Barns, a detective, who comes to arrest him for the murder, and only the confession of Joe Pagliano saves Ramon from being charged with Copeland's death.

Joe tells of murdering Copeland because he turned a deaf ear to Joe's pleas that his baby was starving and he could not pay his rent, and then dies from wounds received in the battle with Copeland. Ramon assists the Pagliano family and becomes interested in Nedra, Joe's eighteen-year-old daughter. This growing love is blasted by Jimmy, a slum boy, who has been acting as Ramon's ferret. He says that Nedra is associated with a band of thieves.

Ramon goes that night to see for himself. While Nedra is breaking into a house Ramon sees a girl being kidnapped. He recognizes her as a girl whose life he saved in an auto accident. He battles with the kidnappers, but is outnumbered. They pursue Ramon and the harbor police engage in a running duel as the kidnappers are fleeing with the girl in a motorboat. Ramon rescues the girl in the nick of time. He learns that her uncle was attempting to do away with her so as to come into her property.

Grace recalls Ramon's previous heroism in saving her life, and it is evident that Ramon has found some one who is going to become the heroine of his real life novel.

THE THREAD OF LIFE (Special Release—Two Parts—Nov. 19).—The cast: Dr. Carl Richard (Ben Wilson); Lena Peyton (Frances Nelson). Written by Joseph Gollomb; produced by Ben Wilson.

Mame Carter has been shot in a quarrel between her brother and his pal over some spoils and is taken to the hospital. There her life is saved by Dr. Richards, and as he comes to attend her every day, she falls in love with him. But the doctor is engaged to a nurse in the ward and repulses all the childish advances that the little slum girl makes. This so angers her that she gets her brother to promise that he will put the nurse out of the way.

Mame has the nurse taken to a little house in the woods, but she has misgivings and when the doctor comes in she blurts out the whole affair. He rushes to the scene of the attack and arrives just in time to save Lena from perishing in the house, which the crooks have fired. Mame is now happy, as she sees the man whom she loves happy, and the doctor is happy, as Lena is soon to become Mrs. Dr. Richards.

MOTOR MAT AND HIS FLIV (Cartoon Comedy—Nov. 18).—Motor Mat is a new creation and he will not last very long at the speedy rate that he is traveling. He buys a flivver from a mail order concern and after it arrives by parcel post his troubles begin. He starts the thing and then cannot stop it. He rides past the policeman and does a million things that he should not do, and at last the motor gives out. But this does not discourage him, and he gets a little squirrel to be his engine. In order to make the creature go, he hangs a little nut in front of it. To reverse, he merely changes the side on which the nut is hanging. The picture ends, however, when he tumbles from a cliff, and that is the end of his tale.

The second half of this film gives some more of the incomparable scenery that Dr. Dorsey has taken for the Universal program.

Jack returns from college and is told by his father that he is going to start him in business as his partner. Early the next morning Jack reports for work and finds that he is to learn the game from the ground up, and is accordingly made apprentice to the boss plumber. While on the first job he learns the art of loafing, and on returning to the shop is called up by his girl, who invites him to an afternoon reception. He agrees to come, but Spike forces him to stick to the job.

At the girl's home a miniature fountain, which has been arranged on the dining room table, fails to work, and the butler sends for the plumber. Spike and Jack are assigned to the job. Jack is compelled to crawl under the table, while Spike turns the water on in the kitchen, where he gets to flirting with the cook and for-

NOT IN THE NEWS (Two Parts—Nov. 14)—The cast: Faith Markham (Marguerite Clayton), Elliot Dexter (Sydney Ainsworth).

Elliot Dexter and his brother are released from prison, the former vowing to lead a decent life, the latter determined to make society pay. Elliot rises rapidly in a bank, marries Faith Markham. She is told the secret of his past. At forty-five he finds himself president of a bank. His brother has continued his life of crime. He discovers Elliot in his exalted position and frightens Faith into paying him money for his silence. When she has exhausted her private account to save her husband worry, the brother breaks into the house to force her to give him money. In the darkness Elliot shoots him as a burglar. He is exonerated, and the reporters never learn the real story.

CANIMATED NOOZ PICTORIAL, No. 19 (Nov. 15).—As usual the Canimated Nooz is on the job when the thing happens and not after it's all over. Thus, the earthquake in Turkey is filmed. The earth's quiver was discovered to have been caused by La Belle Fatemma rehearsing her vaudeville act. Wives of policemen are shown taking the examination for places on the force. This consists proving they are handier with their fists than their husbands. Travel pictures include a trip through Sardine Canyon. Carl Kickoff shows how to kick a football, in the educational section. Other features are shown. Lake Tahoe, California, and vicinity, makes up the half reel of scenic.

Albany, N. Y.—Holding a public reception from an observation car, forms a strenuous part of the President's brief visit in this city.

Chicago, Ill.—Enthusiastic crowds greet the President on his arrival here.

Oakland, Cal.—As a forerunner of the $50,000,000 shipbuilding boom which has hit this city the launching of the 7,000-ton turbine ship Capto is made a gala occasion.

New York, N. Y.—Prominent women, headed by Mrs. Amos Pinchot, open a street stumping campaign in behalf of President Wilson.

Bridgeport, Conn.—Fighting the flames for the benefit of sick and injured firemen, furnish plenty of thrills to the inmates of the Hotel Dan Johnson.

SELIG TRIBUNE, No. 87 (Oct. 30).—New Haven, Conn.—In commemoration of the two hundredth anniversary of the founding of Yale College, a pageant is held in which 9,000 men, women and children participate.

San Francisco, Cal.—The arrival of the Hughes Women's Special in this city is made more interesting by the Wilson women, who start counter demonstrations along the Hughes line of march up Market street.

Chicago, Ill.—While returning from charity work, two men and two women met death with tragic swiftness, when their auto leaped through the open Twelfth street bridge, into the river, thirty feet below.

San Diego, Cal.—Ten thousand persons hear Miss Maud Howe deny the existence of any real basis for the designation of the Hughes women's train as a "billion dollar special."

Media, Pa.—The Rose Tree Fox Hunting Club members hold their annual Autumn meet, which affords many tense moments to the many society folk who crowded the grounds.

Fort Sheridan, Ill.—Shivering troopers, with shivering mounts, fresh from the blistering atmosphere of Texas, are greeted with cold breezes from off Lake Michigan on their arrival home.

Fashion in Furs.—These two excellent examples of the furrier's art have Dame Fashion's seal of approval this season.

THE TEMPTATION OF ADAM (Three Parts—Nov. 13).—The cast: Rose Addison (Kathlyn Williams); Adam Cavanaugh (Guy Oliver); Dorothy Blaine (Eugenie Besserer), Dolly (Vivian Reed); Homer Forrest (Charles West); the banker (Al. W. Filson), J. J. Strong (Frank Clark).

Written by Louis V. Jefferson. Directed by Al. Green.

Adam Cavanaugh becomes a theological student, and is about ready to take orders when he falls in love with Dorothy Blaine, and marries her. Dorothy, a splendid wife, is ambitious for her husband's success. She helps him to advance in the business world, and Adam comes to love money, and substitutes the worship of Mammon for the worship of the Cross.

In time he becomes unscrupulous in a matter in which he makes money. Cavanaugh's daughter, Dolly, is ready to make her social debut, and Adam puts over a crooked deal to make the money he needs for the occasion. In order to do this, he ruins a business associate, Homer Forrest, who has a beautiful and resourceful wife. Rose, Homer Forrest's wife, learns the story of his financial wreck and vows to wreck vengeance and humiliation upon the man who has led to her husband's downfall.

Rose plays the siren, leads Cavanaugh away from his wife, breaks up his home, and finally causes him to confess with his own lips that he was guilty of the crime for which her husband had been incarcerated. When he makes his confession, his wife, daughter and other witnesses are in another room. A dictograph is utilized, causing the man's words to be plainly heard. As he is led away to prison, he blames his wife because she taught him to worship money as against the worship of the Cross.

THE GIRL DETECTIVE (Nov. 18).—The cast: Norman Kirkland (Robyn Adair); Otto Taylor (Leo. D. Maloney); Robert Blake (E. J. Brady); Mae Sayler (Eugenie Forde); Rhoda Davis (Virginia Kirtley). Written by Wm. Alfred Corey. Produced by Burton L. King.

Norman Kirkland is paymaster of a large mining company and Otto Taylor is his assistant. On pay day temptation comes to the assistant, and his temptation is too great to be overcome. Taylor abstracts money, and then to avoid what seems to be certain detection, puts the money in the wrong coat, and accuses Kirkland of theft. Taken to police headquarters, Kirkland is searched and the money is found on his person.

Rhoda Davis, a detective, believing that all is not as it should be, asks to be assigned to the case. She secures the handkerchief in which the money had been wrapped, and visits several laundries in an endeavor to confirm her theory. Finally she finds the laundry mark which shows the name of Otto Taylor, and the handkerchief is identified as his. Thus is the real criminal made to confess his crime.

BIOGRAPH.

NEAR TO EARTH (Nov. 13).—The cast: The husband (Lionel Barrymore); the wife (Gertrude Bambrick); the husband's brother (Robert Harron); Sandro (Walter Miller).

Two brothers, Gato and Giuseppe, run a truck farm in the West. Gato has become tired of a bachelor's life, so seeks Marie, the fishermaid. Marie, at the beach sees him coming down and beckons to him. He no sooner reaches her when she runs away. However, Gato soon catches her. At the shrine in the mountains they plight their troth and Gato marches home to introduce his wife-to-be to Giuseppe.

Some time after Gato is a settled married man and a busy one. So absorbed is he in his money-making that he fails to kiss Marie and to show her other tokens of affection she seems to long for and demand. Gato, though he may seem to be inclined to be domineering, intends to hand over to Marie all the money he makes, so that both he and she may return to Italy. Marie, however, can only feel incensed at his apparent neglect. Then Sandro, the wanderer, comes into their life, obtains a job as farm hand on Gato's farm. Unconsciously, he feels the unrest in Marie's heart and he attempts to take advantage of it on the way to work on the following day. She closes the door in his face. Some days later Gato receives a big price for his land from prospectors, who are sent out by a new railroad, which is to pass through that region. He concludes to wait until the deal is settled before surprising his wife with the good news. He sets out to town with his friend Philippo to close the deal. It is then that Sandro asks Marie again to go with him. At first she refuses half-heartedly. Then he threatens to throw himself over the embankment and end it all if she will not leave, and he proves to her the truth of his assertion by running over to the cliffs. He is about to throw himself over the cliff when Marie stops him and assents to his demands.

Meanwhile, Gato in town, has received the money and has purchased much finery for his wife. Giuseppe, the younger brother, finds the note which Marie has left: "Gato—You no longer show me love. I go with Sandro.—Marie." Giuseppe concludes to follow and avenge his brother and bring back the weak and fickle Marie. In the little shrine where Marie and Gato plighted their troth and swore eternal vows, he finds them. The sight of the shrine is enough for Marie, for it brings back with overwhelming force the sacred vows she had sworn to Gato. Besides, Sandro has shown his true character by compelling her to carry the pack. She welcomes Giuseppe with outstretched arms, but her joy soon turns to terror for the two men clinch in a desperate struggle and soon Sandro was rolling down the rocky embankment on the beach below. No harm, however, came to Sandro, for picking himself up he walked off a sadder but wiser man.

Giuseppe took Marie home. Outside she paused in fear. Gato had returned home, his surprise complete. A new hat lay upon the table. Bundles were strewn upon the floor, but nowhere about could he find Marie. She slunk down upon the steps, but at last Giuseppe prevailed upon her to enter. He pushed her gently through the door, where she faced her lord. After reading the note, which she had left, Gato could think of only one explanation, "You have ruined our lives forever," he cried. "There can be no other way than death to wipe out disgrace." In his rage he began to choke her, but she, taking the stiletto from the table, begged death by that rather than at his hands. As the dagger descended, he suddenly let it fall, for his strong love for his wife surged to the surface. As his brother retired, Gato brought forth the presents he had purchased her, and told her of his luck.

LORD CHUMLEY (Three Parts—Nov. 15).—The cast: Eleanor Butterworth (Lillian Gish); Lord Chumley (Henry Walthall); Lieut. Butterworth (Walter Miller); Gasper La Sage (Charles H. Mailes); Tommy Tucker (Gus. Pixley); Mez. McGregor (Helen Hart).

La Sage and Blink Blunk having served their term in prison are released, and some years later we find La Sage the proprietor of a gambling house in London. Lieut. Butterworth invites Lord Chumley to his father's country home for the season. Chumley accepts the invitation, for he is in love with Hugh's sister, Eleanor. Hugh has been selected to deliver 1,000 pounds, collected for the widow McGregor. La Sage is aware of this, and meeting Hugh at the club, entices him to his gambling place. Here La Sage and his friends drug Hugh and rob him of 800 pounds.

The next morning, having recovered from the effects of the drug, Hugh goes directly to the home of the widow, and taking the money from the envelope is surprised to find that there is only 200 pounds. He delivers the 200 pounds to her and receives a receipt for it. In desperation he appeals to La Sage, who takes the Important Announcement To Film Manufacturing Companies

Arctic City was built for the accommodation of the Motion Picture Trade. All Picture Companies invited to visit Arctic City when desiring to make Western, Northwestern and Alaskan Pictures. Buildings erected to suit any picture purpose for company's desiring them. Scenery unsurpassed. For terms apply to, "CARIBOU" BILL, Port Henry, N. Y.

AFTER twenty-five years' experience in the "GREAT NORTHWEST" as guide, mail carrier, and with trading companies, and six years' experience as technical director for a number of the companies, Caribou Bill Cooper has utilized his extensive knowledge of conditions and keen conception of scenic effects and built an "ARCTIC CITY" in a romantic gorge near Port Henry, N. Y., on the shore of Lake Champlain. It is beautiful for situation and resources, with wonderful scenery of the Champlain Valley, magnificent mountain views, rivers and lakes, also iron mines and furnaces. This spot is a genuine boon to film companies desiring proper setting for plays laid in the Northwest or Arctic regions, and is also suited for western pictures as well.

Among its many advantages, we make special mention that Mr. Cooper has the only real Alaskan Huskie sledge dogs this side of the Rockies—thirty of these dogs trained to the business with the real Alaskan Sledges. He also has a number of western saddle horses educated to cliff-jumping or any other desired feats on land or water.

Arrangements have been made with all the local merchants to carry all necessary clothing and supplies needed. Professional and extra people competent to take parts can be supplied if desired.

The following companies have tested this wonderful city and its surroundings; some of them have returned several times: Solax, Popular Players, Vitagraph, Equitable, Edison, Peerless, B. F. Rolfe, Metro, Famous Players, Fox, and others.

Mr. Cooper has made arrangements for conveyances for local work and, taking advantage of the nearby beauty spots, which abound in this section. No locality can equal this for film companies. For the benefit of visiting companies there have been extensive improvements since last year.

Inspection Invited. Only seven hours from New York on the D. & H R. R.

Winnipeg, Man.—The Manitoba Amusement Company has just been formed, with the following named as incorporators: W. B. Lawrence, Mrs. Lawrence, Gordon T. Howden, Walter Fogg, and Bruce Campbell.

Name in Letters of Flowers.

Vancouver, B. C.—A delightful innovation has been used on several occasions recently by Manager J. R. Muir, of the Dominion theater. Instead of the usual painted banner across the front of the lobby, bearing the name of the star or the play, Mr. Muir has displayed the name of the star in letters of flowers, supported at top and bottom by a flower border. The wire base for this beautiful form of banner is very easily constructed.

Operators Win with Diplomacy

Vancouver Picture Operators Meet with Managers and Have Sincere Talk on the Question of Wages—Robert Foster Speaks for the Local Union and Persuades Owners that Increase in Pay Is Needed.

By E. C. Thomas, 821 Rogers Bldg., Vancouver, B. C.

VANCOUVER, B. C.—A meeting of importance to the moving picture operators of this city was held recently at the Rex theater, and attended by a majority of the local managers, as well as by several members of Vancouver Local No. 348, I.A.T.S.E. The conference was held for to bring about certain changes desired by the operators, including a higher scale of wages.

Robert Foster, chief operator at the Dominion theater, acted as spokesman for the union men, and handled the matter in a manner that won the approval of all those present.

The former union scale called for a minimum of $15.00 per week, with an eight-hour day in the downtown houses, while the minimum in suburban theaters was fixed at $12.00. Many houses, however, have paid considerably more than these amounts. It was pointed out by Mr. Foster that with living expenses here maintained at such a high level, a man with a family would have difficulty in maintaining himself on $15.00 a week, and it would be impossible for him to keep his mind strictly on his work of operating. There was no intention of calling a strike, said Mr. Foster, or of using any such methods of enforcing their requests, but he put the matter in the simple light of justice to the men. The theater managers were quick to appreciate this attitude, and the minimum scale was forthwith raised to $20.00 per week. All but one of the large downtown houses have agreed to this arrangement, and it is thought that all will be included within a few days. The minimum scale in suburban houses was raised to $16.00 per week.

Another improvement in conditions is involved in a change of the operators working hours, calling not only for a continuous shift, but shorter hours than before. Heretofore, when the moving picture theaters were under the jurisdiction of the city, two operators were required in the booths, and the men worked on "split shifts," each operator working part of the afternoon and part of the evening. Now, however, the provincial authorities have decided to allow one man to handle two machines, and as none of the houses run for more than twelve hours a day, the maximum time an operator will be required to be on duty will be six hours. Some of the men will work only five hours per day, or even less.

It is possible that slight changes will be required in some of the operating rooms, but nothing radical is contemplated. It is considered likely that additional switches will be required, so that the light can be instantly shut off from the rewind bench.

Needless to say, the operators are greatly pleased over the new order of things, and look forward to a still further improvement of conditions.

"Battle of Somme" Banned by Vancouver

Fear That Western Canadian Citizens Haven't Stomachs Enough to Enlist After Seeing the Horrors of Real War.

VANCOUVER, B. C.—"The Battle of the Somme," the official British film epic which has been acclaimed as the greatest war picture ever taken, has met the usual fate at the hands of the British Columbia board of censors. It has been condemned.

This remarkable picture, which is controlled in Canada by the Famous Players Film Service, Ltd., has been passed in every other province in the Dominion of Canada, and is now being exhibited to capacity houses in all parts of the country. But notwithstanding the judgment of other boards in Canada as to the advisability of showing the picture, and the judgment of the absolute leaders of thought and action of the British Empire, it remained for the British Columbia censors to decide that the film did not constitute a suitable exhibition. Major Tite and other local military officers were called in to confirm the decision of the censor, and did so—because, it is claimed, they feared the showing of the film might interfere with recruiting in this province.

The board has indicated that the picture will be passed provided certain excisions are made, but as these will amount to many hundred feet the Famous Players officials are unwilling to have the cuts made. If it becomes necessary, however, this will be done, and the film exhibited in its shortened form, as it is considered of too much interest to British Columbians to forego the showing of it entirely. But apparently the real battle scenes, in which the Canadian public is so intensely interested, will be lacking, and the pictures thus be changed so as to be as much as possible like the scenes regularly shown in the weeklies.

Ben Soskin, manager of the Famous Players exchange in Vancouver, has left for Victoria to lay the matter before Premier Bowser, in an effort to bring about a reconsideration of the matter.

The distributing organization recently brought out a special number of the Famous Players News in the form of an "extra," and reproducing enthusiastic comments on the film by dozens of British newspapers. King George V, by the way, said after viewing the film, "The public should see these pictures, that they may have some idea of what the army is doing, and what war means."

Radical Change in Censorship in Winnipeg

Provincial Treasurer Brown Wanted to Know Why Pictures Were So Poor—Managers Explain Censor Methods—These Will Be Changed.

WINNIPEG, Man.—Through the interest taken in the moving picture industry by Hon. Edward Brown, provincial treasurer of Manitoba, a radical change is coming in the censoring of pictures submitted to the Saskatchewan board, which passes on all productions slated for showing in the two provinces.

The board of censors has been too narrow in its judgment, and was closely followed by the appeal board, which, except in a few instances, acted as a confirmation board. Productions were rejected on the slightest pretext, and conditions were becoming intolerable. The matter came to the attention of Mr. Brown, and he immediately called a meeting of the exchange managers, at which the question was gone into thoroughly. Mr. Brown inquired why a better grade of pictures was not being shown, and whether or not the regulations of the new Public Amusements Act were working out to the satisfaction of the picture men.

What the Board Was Doing.

The exchange managers stated that many pictures were entirely spoiled by the numerous excisions, and also declared that many fine productions were not even brought into the province because of the reputation for narrow-mindedness which had been acquired by the censor board, as the probability of rejection rendered it inadvisable to go to the expense of having the pictures sent to Winnipeg and censored.

Mr. Brown admitted that he had seen some films which were so badly cut up that the remaining portions failed to tell a story, and indicated that hereafter a picture which is not considered suitable for presentation in its entirety before children may be passed for exhibition before adults only. This is a change which affords distinct relief, and will mean the passing of many pictures of types which have heretofore been rendered almost unintelligible by excessive cutting, or else rejected entirely. Mr. Brown also voiced the opinion that the censor board was wasting a great deal of time and money in examining films which had already been passed by the Ontario board of censors. Any pictures which had been approved in that province, he thought, should be suitable for presentation in Manitoba and Saskatchewan, and he certainly is right.

The headquarters of the inter-provincial board will be moved to the north wing of the new parliament buildings, the change probably being made about Nov. 1. Two new projection machines are being purchased by the government to accelerate the work of inspection.

Pleased With Mr. Brown.

A. L. Johnson, local manager for the General Film, informs the World correspondent that the exchange managers are much pleased at the interest which has been taken in the industry by Mr. Brown, and his application of a deep knowledge of fundamental principles in dealing with the situation. It is thought that as a result of his efforts a decided change for the better will immediately ensue.

Operator Chosen to Sit on New Board.

Vancouver, B. C.—Robert Foster, operator in charge at the Dominion theater, has been appointed a member of the new provincial examining board for operators, under the recent amendment to the Moving Pictures Act, and has already entered upon his new duties, having left on a trip to cover a number of western British Columbia towns. The chief censor and assistant censor Oswald are the other members of the new board, and Mr. Oswald has also left the city for the purpose of conducting examinations. The entire province will be covered before the first of the year, while examinations for operators in the Vancouver district will be held at the board's new room in the court house building in this city, where an especially complete collection of projection apparatus has been assembled.

Mr. Foster informed the World representative that the examinations to be held would be real examinations, and that to pass them a man would have to be a competent operator, with a knowledge extending beyond mere threading up and turning the crank.

SPOKANE ITEMS.

Prosperity and Plenty Hereabouts.

Spokane, Wash.—Moving picture men from outside towns of the Spokane country, who have visited the city recently, report business good and that the wheat and potato crops, good prices, activities in the lumber mills and mines and other sources of revenue, for workmen and farmers, have added greatly to their incomes.

J. E. Gregg, proprietor of the Gregg theater, Coulee City, Wash., was a visitor at the Pathe exchange and said: "Business has been fine with me. The wheat crop has been a great boom to business. I have from 100 to 200 persons at every show and my prices are ten and twenty cents. I give shows Tuesday, Friday and Sunday nights with a Sunday matinee, and have the only place in town. The farmers and others from ten to twenty miles around come into town in their automobiles to see the show and bring their families with them. It is a treat for the children as well as the adults."

J. B. Gardner, of Sandpoint, Idaho, who operates the Gem theater there, said: "Business is good with me and the people come from the surrounding sections to the shows. The lumber mills are running steady, which aids business. The Charles Chaplin comedies get the money."

E. M. Densmore, proprietor of the Gem theater, in the Union Park section of Spokane, said: "Everybody in my section of the city has money and they come to the show. There is work for all who really want work, and this results in good business for me every night and Sunday matinee."

Gathered Among Spokane Exchanges.

A. H. Hilton of Lewiston, Idaho, has sold the Grand theater and taken over the Temple theater, there. He is having it entirely remodeled and is installing indirect lights inside and putting a number of lights outside. He went to Seattle for draperies and some other equipment. The house seats about 850.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Anderson, who run the Bell theater, Palouse, Wash., motored into the city to visit R. T. Madden, of the Mutual exchange, and report business brisk.

Peter Arena of Whitefish, Mont., has just opened the Liberty theater in that place and reports business starting fine. L. J. Shaw, formerly proprietor of the Rex, at Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, has taken the management of the Liberty for Mr. Arena.

Williamette Valley Feels Prosperity

Oregon's Exhibitors West of the Cascade Mountains Feel Real Business Impetus—Patrons Loosening Up—George Bligh Again Comes to Town With a Smile—Road Men Report.

By Abraham Nelson, 601 Journal Bldg., Portland, Oregon.

PORTLAND, Oregon.—After many months of just breaking even, the Williamette valley exhibitors are again beginning to see the sunshine through the Oregon mist and reports from the South are looking up. Several theater transfers, a new circuit and keen picture competition denote returning prosperity to the territory south of Portland, which road men have heretofore dreaded to cover.

At Salem It's Fine.

So said George Bligh, he of the gay hued raiment and optimistic temperament. George stayed away from Portland's Film Row for a long time because he couldn't conscientiously live up to his reputation for optimism, but the other day he came back, diamonds, vest, smile and all. He reported big business on return engagements of "Civilization" and "The Birth of a Nation," dandy crowds on "Purity" and general good business on his regular program of Mutual master pictures.

George Guthrie, who operates the Oregon at Salem, has done well on "Gloria's Romance."

Baum Goes to State Line.

Sol Baum, manager for Bluebirds, has been making personal calls on his patrons in Oregon, Washington and Idaho and recently completed a trip to Ashland and return. He reports the Vining and the Lyric theaters at the state line city to be enjoying prosperity under the able direction of Mrs. Bergner during her husband's absence in San Francisco and that the wail of poor business that road men have heretofore reported as coming from Southern Oregon exhibitors was entirely absent.

The Eugene theater, at Eugene, is now operating under the direction of Wm. Alexander. This house is showing a few days of Hippodrome vaudeville, but depends on a well-known feature program for its chief attraction. A. H. McDonald of the Rex is successfully meeting his competitor with Pantages vaudeville and a competing feature program. The way both theaters are lavishing money on their shows indicates that the theater business in Eugene has picked up considerably during the past month or two.

At Oakland, Oregon, Doc. H. H. Owens has his new theater about completed. It is called the Wigwam.

M. G. Cooley, Silverton, has sold the Gem theater to Earl Hartman. Mr. Cooley still owns the opera house.

"Kirk" Comes Back Happy.

A. S. Kirkpatrick, traveling representative for Mutual, spent the week end in Portland after a successful trip through Southern Oregon and Coos Bay. He reports that A. F. Edwards of Gardiner, Oregon, has a most excellent theater. Although the town is 200 miles from the state's metropolis and out of the usual line of travel, Mr. Edwards conducts his house in big town style.

Mr. Kirkpatrick reports that Frank Hull has sold his theaters at Eagle Point and Central Point to H. L. Hall, who has also purchased the house at Talent. He will operate the three theaters in a circuit.

Scarlet Fever Epidemic.

Portland, Oregon.—W. E. Tebbetts, manager of the Alhambra theater, reports that a scarlet fever epidemic among the children in the southeast section of Portland has been playing havoc with the picture show patronage. Several schools in the district have been closed and 105 cases of the malady are said to exist in that part of the city. The reopening of one of the schools indicates the passing of the epidemic, however.

Gets New Organ.

Walla Walla, Wash.—A. W. Eielr has installed a new photoplayer in the Bijou Grand theater. The instrument cost $12,000 and is the only one of its kind here. Manager Eiler does not hesitate to say it is a dandy.

Why Compete in Costume Plays?

Portland, Oregon.—During the recent showing of two versions of "Romeo and Juliet" at two of the best theaters exhibitors commented on manufacturers' persistence in making costume plays and on the inadvisability of the duplication of such productions by competing manufacturers. Such a state of affairs does not get money for anybody, said one exhibitor, stating further that if the stars were put to work in two different, original, real screen stories at one-tenth of the reputed cost of the Shakespearean productions they would have got money for everybody concerned.

"Manufacturers must know that costume plays are passe," said the exhibitor in question. "If they don't know it they are not in touch with the situation."

Censor Under Civil Service.

Portland, Oregon.—The office of secretary of the Portland censor board has been ruled to come under municipal civil service. Mrs. E. B. Colwell, the secretary, has been ordered to take on examination to test her fitness for the job. The chances are she will keep it inasmuch as 40 points out of the possible 100 will be given for experience, personal qualifications and education. Mrs. Colwell has all the experience there is in these parts in being censor secretary, because she has held office ever since the present censor ordinance went into effect. After a city position has been placed under civil service the incumbent cannot be retired except for cause shown.

Lannon Reports Luck.

Portland, Oregon.—Jack Lannon, of the Greater Feature Films Co., Seattle, visited Portland for a few days and closed with the People's theater to run "Where Are My Children?" a week, starting Nov. 12. He has state rights on Pavlowa and "Where Are My Children?"

Picture Operator's Wife Burned to Death

Burning of the Princess Theater at Republic, Wash., Has a Tragic Outcome—Operator's Wife Visiting Booth Is Caught in Flames.

By S. Clark Patchin, E1811 Eleventh Avenue, Spokane, Wash.

SPOKANE, WASH.—A fire started in the operating room of the Princess theater at Republic, Wash., on October 21, at 11 P M. The wife of the operator, Mrs. B. F. Hibbard, was visiting her husband and lost her life in the burning building. The property loss to buildings burned, as a result of the fire in the theater, amounted to $15,000, of which only $500 was covered by insurance.

Some Pathe and other films were destroyed by the fire. The fire destroyed two adjoining buildings and for a time the entire business section was threatened and the Eagles Aerie building, across the street, was slightly damaged.

The moving picture show was nearly over when Mrs. Hibbard suggested to her husband that the carbon would not last. Mr. Hibbard was preparing to put in a new one when the red hot carbon dropped from the pincers to the floor on which were some unreeled films that the operator had not stopped the performance to reel up. The films started to burn and were threatening the clothes of Mrs. Hibbard when the husband kicked the burning material out of the fireproof box through a trap door into the balcony of the theater.

A brisk fire immediately followed and soon the wooden fixtures and buildings were burning fiercely.

Mrs. Hibbard yelled "Fire," and the thirty persons in the audience were able to escape. Mr. Hibbard, calling on his wife to follow him, charged through the flames, believing his wife was obeying his command. He escaped, seriously burned, but the flames overcame her and the fire had made such headway that her rescue was impossible.

Three small Hibbard children were left motherless.

The Palace theater was owned by W. L. Stedman and B. F. Keck, and was formerly known as the Republic opera house. Recently it was remodeled for a moving picture show.

The operating room, asbestos-lined and fireproof, was situated toward the front, next the lodge rooms, and was approached by a stairway through a trap door.

Mr. Hibbard is in a prostrate condition, with hands and face badly burned, at Frank Keck's house.

Report on Municipal Government

San Francisco's City Government Recently Reported on by Bureau of Municipal Research of New York—Says Many License Fees for Doing Business Are Too Low—Light in Picture Theaters Discussed.

From F. A. Church, 1507 North Street, Los Angeles, Cal.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal.—A survey is being [illegible] of the municipal government of [illegible] by the New York Bureau of Municipal Research, and preliminary reports have been issued. Moving picture interests are much interested in the [illegible] many of the existing [illegible] are too low many are graded [illegible] and not a few lines of business escape the payment of any license tax. [illegible] recommendations of the bureau are carried out it is believed that marked changes may be made in the license fees paid by moving picture houses, and that film exchanges may be called upon to pay [illegible] tax.

The portion of the report of most interest to exhibitors, however, is that given over to the subject of "commercialized vice and its contributing causes." Among other things the bureau recommended that portions of moving picture houses be set aside for the use of unescorted women and children, and that the management of [illegible] be compelled to keep their houses partially lighted. The report declares that total darkness in theaters is [illegible] for commercial reasons and is unnecessary.

Eastern Film Men Visit Coast.

San Francisco, Cal.—Andrew J. Cobe, of New York, spent a week in this city late [illegible] in the interests of the Unity [illegible] of which he is vice-president and [illegible] manager. M. A. Leavy, president of the [illegible] was also here and a thorough canvass was made of the business situation in this territory. The concern recently released its first serial, "The Yellow Menace," and while Mr. Cobe made [illegible] for further releases, including [illegible] Two-reel-a-day comedies made by [illegible] of Ambrose Lake.

Former Manager Tendered Luncheon.

San Francisco, Cal.—The Film Exchange Board of Trade of San Francisco recently tendered a luncheon to H. W. Oviatt at the Tait-Zinkand cafe, the affair being attended by almost every member of the organization. Mr. Oviatt until recently filled the position of manager for the local branch of the Pathe exchange, and was one of the founders of the Film Exchange Board of Trade, being its treasurer until his retirement from the local field. At the luncheon he was presented with a handsome umbrella by members of the organization, the presentation speech being made by N. K. Stout, of the Mutual. He will be succeeded as treasurer of the board of trade by Louis Rosenthal, manager of the local branch of the Metro.

Film Heads Meet.

San Francisco, Cal.—Tracy L. Ford was host recently at a luncheon at the Hotel Stewart to members of the Animated Cartoon Film corporation, sixteen persons being present. Matters of interest to artists, cartoonists, and photographers were discussed and views exchanged. Among those present were Frederick Burgh, president of the corporation; Byington Ford, secretary and treasurer; C. E. Cleveland, superintendent, and Seth Heney, manager.

Peerless Adds New Line.

San Francisco, Cal.—The Peerless Film Service, 100 Golden Gate avenue, has arranged to release the "Katzenjammer Kids" in this territory, and now has a splendid line of comedies, including the "E. & R." Jungle Comedies, and the Christy Comedies. In order to keep its film stock in perfect condition a film cleaner has been installed.

Artcraft Enlarges Offices.

San Francisco, Cal.—The Artcraft corporation, which recently opened offices in the Pacific building, has taken over two adjoining rooms, and is now ready for its first release. C. Mell Simmons, of the local branch, has completed a highly successful trip through the territory south of this city, while division manager Arthur Kane has been meeting the many exhibitors who have called at the local office to arrange for service.

Breck Supply House Adds to Line.

San Francisco, Cal.—The Breck Photoplay Supply Co., 70 Turk street, has secured the exclusive agency in this territory for the new line of advance slides of players put out by Frank P. Howe of Los Angeles. These slides are uniform in design, with a border representing the proscenium arch of a theater surrounding the picture of the star, and a space at the bottom for the names of coming attractions.

Paramount in Small Towns.

San Francisco, Cal.—One of the most interesting developments of late in the work of the local Progressive exchange has been the manner in which theaters in some of the smaller cities in the San Joaquin Valley have come over to the Paramount standard. Among those that have signed recently for this service have been the Empire theater, Sunnyvale; the Palace, Pittsburg; the Angeles theater, Angels Camp; Dreamland, Riverbank; Mission opera house, Dinuba; Sunset, Fowler; Rex, Clovis, and the Alpine theater, Alpine. Some of these houses are in towns of scarcely more than 500 inhabitants.

Film Man Off for South America.

San Francisco, Cal.—Sol L. Lesser of the All Star Feature, is preparing to investigate the South and Central American markets for film, and has sent C. Hendriques on this mission. Mr. Hendriques expects to dispose of considerable film while away.

Young Production Well Received.

San Francisco, Cal.—"The Common Law," featuring Clara Kimball Young, has proved such a success at the Portola that it has been retained for a second week. For the first time since assuming charge of this house manager Eugene Roth has advanced the admission price, fifteen cents having been made the minimum for this production. Capacity houses have been the rule for this production, the increased price for matinee performances having had no appreciable effect.

New Exchange Ready.

San Francisco, Cal.—The De Luxe Film Lasky Corp. has succeeded the Lasky Amusement Enterprises, and the De Luxe Film Corp., with offices in the Humboldt bank building, and has taken over additional office space which is being fitted up for film exchange purposes. This concern has secured the California rights to the "Conquest of Canaan," and is arranging for an elaborate trade showing at an early date in the Theater St. Francis.

Immense Organ for Oakland House.

A Wurlitzer Hope-Jones Unit Orchestra costing $48,500 is being installed in the new T. & D. theater at Eleventh and Franklin streets, Oakland, Cal., which is to be opened November 22. The delivery of this instrument at the theater a short time ago took the form of a parade, wagons bearing the sections being covered with banners calling attention to the fact that this instrument would be the largest on the Pacific Coast and would be installed in the world's greatest photoplay house, one with a seating capacity of more than 3,600.

The largest pipes in this unit orchestra weigh as much as a ton and are installed in specially constructed concrete chambers above the proscenium arch. A large force of workmen are busy installing the instrument in order to have everything in readiness on the opening date.

Seattle News Letter

By S. J. Anderson, East Seattle, Wash.

F. D. Cochran Visits Seattle.

SEATTLE, WASH.—F. D. Cochran, brother of R. H. Cochran, vice-president of Universal, arrived in Seattle the other day from China. Mr. Cochran has been two years in the Orient establishing Universal exchanges in Manila, Tokio, Singapore, Bombay, and Rangoon, Burma. His trip home is merely a furlough for himself and Mrs. Cochran, for he expects to return after a few weeks visit. He paid the local offices a visit and, after a ride through the city, left for Portland. From there he will go to San Francisco, Universal City, and on to New York.

Mr. Cochran states that the Universal films have a clean sweep in the Orient, with no competitors of any moment to dispute their supremacy, and the kind of picture demanded by the exhibitors and the people is not the society drama nor the comedy, but the most sensational melodrama. Business conditions, he says, are excellent.

Changes in Seattle Paramount.

Seattle, Wash.—Several new employes have been added to his staff by Manager Frank S. Fountain of the Paramount exchange, notable of which are G. G. Maxey as head of the merchandise department, who was formerly a road man for Pathe of this city, and Bernard Reuben has been promoted to the office of chief booker.

Walla Walla Theater Changes Hands.

Walla Walla, Wash.—The Dime theater has been purchased by W. H McDonald and H. C. Tilley from the Crews amusement company. Messrs. McDonald and Tilley paid a visit to Seattle this week to make the bookings for their theater, and signed a contract for Triangle films.

Mr. Exhibitor:—You will get more helpful information by carefully reading one trade paper weekly than by skimming over three or four. The MOVING PICTURE WORLD is the one paper you need.

Seattle, Wash.—H. G. Rosebaum, Northwest manager of Artcraft, has just returned from a trip covering the larger towns in Montana, Idaho, and Eastern Oregon. He reports excellent business, adding that out of twenty towns he booked nineteen. Montana, states Mr. Rosebaum, is at present the best state for the picture business in the Northwest.

Censorship Talk in Colorado

Mothers' Congress in Denver Asks for Censorship—Proposes Running a Theater of Its Own—Reopening of the "Nation" Film Suit and Powers of Denver's Excise Officers—Pueblo Stirred by "Purity."

By E. C. Day, Denver Times, Denver, Col.

DENVER, COLO.—Moving picture censorship bobbed up from different angles in Colorado this week and as a result the courts, public officials, film manufacturers, exhibitors and moving picture devotees have all been given something to think of.

Usual Cry for Censorship.

The combined convention of the mothers' congress and parent-teachers' association started the ball when the course of a discussion relative to the proper rearing of children, the usual cry for censorship of moving pictures, was raised. The Denver, through its attorney, reopened the old suit filed by Elliott & Sherman to prevent the city from interfering with the showing of the "Birth of a Nation" in Denver. Elliott got a temporary restraining order when the original suit was brought and no further action was taken until this week when the city filed a supplemental answer. The temporary injunction will be dissolved and the case tried on its merits.

In the New Charter?

Since the filing of the original suit the city charter has been amended with respect to the powers of and duties of the excise officials. The city attorney contends that the new charter gives the manager of safety and excise a right to "issue, revoke and suspend theater licenses at his discretion."

If this contention is upheld by the court the official will be able to stop any entertainment that does not meet with his approval, through the revocation or suspension of the license of any exhibitor who refuses to obey his mandate.

Club Women Want Own Theater.

The upshot of the moving picture discussion before the mothers' congress and parent-teachers' convention may be the erection and operation in Denver of a theater by these organizations themselves. Mrs. W. R. Ramsey, president of the Denver District of the Mothers' Congress, is back of the move. It is planned to have the state organization finance the building of the theater and then to exhibit educational films exclusively.

Pending the time when these plans can take definite form the mothers have named committee to wait upon local exhibitors and urge the adoption of a practice now in use in other cities of giving Saturday morning performances for children only.

"In the meantime," said Mrs. Ramsey, in discussing the question with the correspondent of the Moving Picture World, "we are co-operating with those who are willing to give us the best picture shows. The mothers' congress has already made an investigation of the picture houses of the city and all the managers have expressed their good will toward us."

Trouble Over "Purity" in Pueblo.

The question of censorship was also raised in Pueblo out of the prevention by city authorities of the showing of "Purity," the Mutual production in which Audrey Munson is starred. The picture was booked to run for one week in Pueblo beginning October 25. The police stopped the show and Manager Ward C. Robertson offered no opposition pending a review of the production by a committee of citizens representing all walks of life. This committee is to be composed of 100 persons. If a majority of this body finds that the picture is immoral, no attempt will be made to show it, but if on the other hand they approve of the production, it will be exhibited regardless of any attempt of the city commissioners to stop it."

Manager Robertson has engaged Attorney E. F. Chambers to represent the theater in the controversy that is threatened when the next attempt is made to show the picture. Denver is showing the picture this week and other bookings will make it unavailable for use in Pueblo for two weeks.

The city commissioners stopped the exhibition on request of the city federation of women's clubs He admits that there is no city ordinance empowering such action, but used the power vested in him by the city charter to revoke theater licenses to enforce his mandate.

New Theaters and Interesting Items.

STEVENS POINT, WIS.—Fred Shaurette, of Stevens Point, and Clinton Ostrowski, of Milwaukee, have purchased the equipment of the Ideal theater from C. W. Rice and that house, which has been closed for several weeks, will be operated by them with Universal service.

Valley Junction, Wis.—J. F. Hackett has sold his show to Mr. Hart of Elroy.

Evansville, Wis.—Albert Keesey, who recently leased the Grand theater from Marlin Wilder, closed that house because of lack of business.

Boyceville, Wis.—An opera house is under construction here.

Mauston, Wis.—When "The Birth of a Nation" is shown at the Armory, Nov. 13 and 14, it will be under the auspices of Company D, Wisconsin National Guard.

Milwaukee, Wis.—The Toy theater, which has been charging 15 cents admission, has reduced its price to a dime.

Portage, Wis.—Manager Eulberg of the Portage opera house has been making a number of changes in compliance with the suggestion of fire department officials.

West Allis, Wis.—The Board of Education has purchased a moving picture machine for the Washington school in the first ward.

Stoughton, Wis.—Guelson & Bacon, local exhibitors, have announced that the admission for adults will be raised from five to ten cents.

Milwaukee, Wis.—The Press Club of this city had a private showing of "Purity."

Denver Operators to Dance Thanksgiving Eve

Local Union Plans a Big Time at the Second Annual Ball—Committee Has Been Appointed to Plan for the Affair.

Denver, Col.—The Rocky Mountain Screen Club is still on a quiet hunt for a screen notable to lead the grand march at its proposed ball. The organization's efforts to land a star have thus far been unsuccessful and in the meantime plans are indefinite.

Denver, however, is to have a grand ball under the auspices of one branch of the moving picture industry. It is the second annual ball of the Operators' Union. It is to be held Wednesday night, November 29, the eve of Thanksgiving

Last year the operators' ball was the biggest event of its kind held in the city. It was held in one of the city's largest dance halls, but this proved entirely inadequate to hold the crowd and as a result the city auditorium has been engaged for the coming ball.

The committee in charge of the affair is: George Thomas, chairman; Oscar Olson, J. E. Dunn, Tom Melton, Herman Brady, and James Dooley.

Marshall Stedman Guest of Honor.

Denver, Colo.—Marshall Stedman, engaging director of the Universal company in California and the husband of Myrtle Stedman, Paramount star, was the guest of honor at the weekly luncheon of the Rocky Mountain Screen Club, Thursday.

Mr. Stedman is in Denver for a rest. This is the first vacation that he has had in years.

W. A. Calkins Joins Pathe.

Denver, Colo.—W. A. Calkins, former manager of the Bluebird exchange in Denver, has accepted a position as road man for the Pathe company.

L. J. Bartel Comes to Denver.

Denver, Colo.—L. J. Bartel, formerly of the Universal staff in Des Moines, is now assistant manager of the Universal exchange in Denver.

THE BLUEBIRD Photoplay "The Eagle's Wings" is one of those rare productions that cannot be adequately described. It is too big; based on too great a theme; its hundreds of scenes cover too wide a range and its appeal to the emotions is too strong to be presented understandingly in words alone. The story is based on the idea of National Defence. No tawdry costume play is this; no trick photography or mimic warfare. For the so-called spectacular, there has been substituted a gripping realism that is universal in its appeal. "The Eagle's Wings" is not on the BLUEBIRD Program. It is a special release, and but for the fact that BLUEBIRD (Inc.) paid a huge sum for it, it would have been State Righted. It presents an unique and wonderful opportunity to all Exhibitors.

Since the first announcement of that marvelous drama of patriotism "The Bugle of Algiers," hundreds of thousands of copies of the story have been distributed to soldiers in the trenches, because regardless of nationality, it is one of the world's greatest stories of patriotism. The same qualities which have given the book a phenomenal sale are the strong points in this unusual play. The many announcements made in the Saturday Evening Post have created a demand for this superb picture which means capacity houses to you. Book now through your local BLUEBIRD Exchange, or

SHE GREW UP WITH THE MOTION PICTURE

EVERY great movement in the world's history, every great epoch in art and industry, has had its individual who, better than anything else, has represented it. Napoleon was the great light that burned in an age of social chaos; Benjamin Franklin was the great mind that mixed common sense and fiery patriotism in the Revolutionary days; Andrew Carnegie was the genius of steel. When science and art combined to perfect the motion picture—that delicate mechanism by which animation was given to shadows—it was a little girl who opened the hearts of millions by the spark of genius and love expressed on the screen. That little girl was

WHAT NEW YORK'S GREATEST CRITIC SAYS ABOUT THE SEX LURE

FROM THE NEW YORK JOURNAL NOV. 1, 1916

STAGING OF "SEX LURE" WORK OF GENIUS

By "ZIT."

Yesterday there was a private showing of a six-reel feature entitled "The Sex Lure," produced by Ivan Abramson, the genius in the directing of motion pictures. There may be other directors who produce one hundred to five hundred thousand dollar productions, but when it comes to putting an artistic finesse into a picture that costs a small amount to manufacture and make something that costs six thousand look like fifty thousand, that is the time ability tells.

Most any one can do a great deal with a great deal. But how great can a director make a thing with a small amount of money?

I have seen many, many pictures, but I don't pretend to be a critic. In fact, far be it from me to think that I was ever considered one, but I do want to go on record as saying that "The Sex Lure" is a most beautifully told story, and the most interesting one I have witnessed in many moons. For every one in the production is an artist and an actor, and Ivan Abramson has dug deep into the soul of each one of them and brought out the necessary talents to depict each part the way the author intended.

Every point in the motion picture industry has been covered by this wizard, Abramson, in this picture. To tell the story would only spoil it for those who are going to see it on the release date, which is next week.

It is home stuff—true stuff—nothing exaggerated. There is thrill after thrill. You have everything—love, murder, kidnapping, deceit, wrecking of a home, factory life, poverty and riches. It's a picture you can't afford to miss. It's a picture you have got to see. It's a picture that will hold you every minute.

If you went to see the picture at 4, and you had to catch the 4:45 train, you would miss the train to see the finish. I missed my dinner, and I want to go on record as saying that if that's a sample of Ivan Abramson's work we are going to hear a whole lot more of Ivan Abramson, and it won't be long.

THIS BOY HAD NEVER SEEN A WOMAN. HE KNEW NOTHING OF SEX, OR OF THE REAL WORLD. ALL OF THE LIFE HE COULD REMEMBER WAS SPENT ON A SECLUDED ESTATE. THEN HE RETURNED HOME TO FIND HIS PARENTS SEPARATED BY AN UNGRATEFUL BUT ALLURING FIEND-GIRL. HOW WAS HE TO PROCEED? HOW OVERCOME THE LURE OF SEX? "What's Going On In The Mutual"

WEEKLY NEWS OF THE MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION AND ITS 68 EXCHANGES

NOVEMBER 25, 1916

"The Vampires"—New Gaumont Series Coming November 23

ON THURSDAY, November 23, the Mutual Film Corporation will release the first episode of "The Vampires." This is the new Gaumont series of detective-mystery tales which succeeds the famous "Fantomas" series. The series consists of nine episodes. Each episode is three reels in length. Each story is complete in itself. Paris and its environs are the location of most of the tales. Each episode is crammed with action—thrills—mystery!

A Real Thriller.

The house of Gaumont is famous for its "series" productions. Gaumont directors are noted for the thrills and sensations they can devise and execute. Audiences all over the world have been amazed at the daring deeds performed by Gaumont players. The "Fantomas" series of mystery-detective stories made money for every theatre which booked it. "The Vampires" is conceded to be even stronger—even more sensational—even more surprising and interest-compelling. The theatres showing this new series of sensational three reel plays are sure to be packed at every performance. There is a bit of curiosity and love of the weird and unusual in every man, woman and child. By showing "The Vampires" any exhibitor can appeal to this latent love of the bizarre. Profits are sure to result.

Nine Three Reel Chapters.

"The Vampires" is released as nine episodes, each three reels in length. The first episode of "The Vampires" is entitled "The Detective's Head." It is released on November 23. Bookings are now being taken at Mutual film exchanges. Prompt action is necessary if you are to secure this new series for YOUR theatre.

"Charity?" a Special Offering

The Mutual Film Corporation is soon to release as a special feature de luxe, "Charity?" a seven reel subject produced by Frank Powell. "Charity?" is an expose of modern social conditions. It makes its appeal in behalf of common justice and fairness. It features Linda A. Griffith, wife of David W. Griffith, and known to film fans the world over as "The Biograph Girl." Supporting her in the picture appear such favorites as Creighton Hale, Sheldon Lewis and others. "Charity?" seems likely to rival for box-office value the great Mutual feature "Damaged Goods." It will be available on and after November 27 at all Mutual Exchanges.

William Russell As An Indian Chief In "Lone Star"

Another of the William Russell Series of Mutual Star Productions is the Mutual feature offering this week. "Lone Star" is its title. It is five reels in length. It features this popular favorite in the role of an Indian chief. As a boy he sees his mother die because the Indian medicine-man is unable to drive out the "evil spirits" with which he alleges she is possessed. Shortly afterward he sees a white physician at work and marvels at the difference in treatment. He resolves to become a physician himself. After becoming an interne at an Eastern hospital he meets and falls in love with a beautiful white girl. The girl's father, however, spurns the Indian suitor, rebuking him for daring to love a white girl. Later Lone Star strips the mask from so-called "white civilization" and decides to return to his own people. The girl he loved is taken ill. Lone Star's surgical skill alone can save her life. The father appeals to him for aid. Forgetting the taunts that have been heaped upon him, Lone Star ministers to her. Then, stoically, he packs his grip and departs for the tepees of his tribe. This unusual picture can now be booked at any Mutual film exchange.

Signal Chapterplay a Hit

"A Lass of the Lumberlands," the great new Helen Holmes chapter-play, is growing in popularity with each new release. Chapter four is crammed with thrills. An automobile accident, and a daring crawl by Helen Holmes from window to window of a speeding train are but a few of the thrills in this chapter.

Sequel to "Diamond From the Sky" Is Now Ready for Release

THE long awaited $10,000.00 sequel to "The Diamond From the Sky" is now ready. Every motion picture exhibitor knows what a tremendous success the famous serial attained. The triumph scored by this production is a matter of history. And now the sequel—an entirely new story which bids fair to score an even greater triumph—is ready for release. Writers in every state in the union, almost in every town in the United States, tried for the $10,000.00 prize offered for the best suggestion for a sequel to the original tale. Thousands of manuscripts were sent in. Months were spent in going over them. Finally the best one was chosen. The trained scenario staff of the American Film Company, Inc., prepared a working script from the prize suggestion. Work of production was then immediately begun. Now the production is finished. On Monday, November 27, the first installment of the sequel will be released. The sequel is in four chapters, each two reels in length. Each chapter is a big feature offering in itself. The four chapters form a tremendously powerful box-office magnet for four weeks.

Old Favorites All There.

All the old favorites of "The Diamond From the Sky" are again in the cast. One after another theatre patrons will recognize old friends on the screen. Again they will behold Arthur Stanley and Esther. Again they will see William Russell as Blair Stanley, the scapegrace, and Charlotte Burton as his beautiful accomplice in crime. Once more they will laugh at William Tedmarsh as Quabba, the hunchback, and his almost human monkey. Quaint Orral Humphreys, as Smythe, the English solicitor, will appear again, along with all the other almost forgotten characters who made the original story so tremendous a success. It will be a sort of family reunion after a long separation. But don't imagine that the sequel to "The Diamond From the Sky" depends upon its predecessor for its popularity. The sequel is even stronger, more powerful, more sensational and more thrilling than was the tale which it concludes.

The Prize Winner.

The name and identity of the winner of the $10,000 prize will be disclosed only in the films. This feature alone will attract thousands to the theatre showing the picture—for there is scarcely a community in the country that hasn't someone in its midst who tried for the prize. Bookings on this great sequel to "The Diamond From the Sky" are now being taken at all Mutual film exchanges.

MILLIONS have been waiting for the Sequel to the famous serial—"The Diamond From the Sky." And now it's ready for release. On Monday, November 27th, the first chapter of the $10,000 Sequel will be shown for the first time in theatres all over the United States. This is the Sequel to the most successful serial yet released. This is the film that has been made from the $10,000 prize suggestion. The Sequel is stronger—more powerful—more sensational, than was the original production. It is in four chapters, each two reels in length. Each chapter is a big feature in itself. The four chapters insure tremendous box office receipts for four continuous weeks.

"The Diamond From the Sky" was itself a $10,000 prize story. It ran in fiction form in newspapers all over the country. Millions of people saw it. Hundreds and hundreds of theatres played to capacity business with it as an attraction. A prize of $10,000 was offered for the best Sequel to "The Diamond From the Sky." People in every state in the Union tried for that prize. Thousands and thousands of manuscripts were written. Months were necessary to read over all the suggestions offered. Finally the prize winning suggestion was chosen. The trained scenario staff of the American Film Company, Inc., then set about preparing the working script of the production. This finished, the task of filming was begun. And now it is completed. On Monday, November 27th, the first chapter of the prize-winning Sequel will be released.

All the old favorites of the original production are again in the cast. Arthur and Blair Stanley—Esther and Vivian Marston—Quabba, the hunchback and Smythe, the quaint English solicitor, are all again to be shown on the screen. Popular William Russell—beautiful Charlotte Burton—talented William Tedmarsh—funny Orral Humphreys, are all in the cast again together with many new players. The Sequel is an entirely new story. It is tremendously thrilling, powerfully dramatic, superbly photographed and enacted by the very best cast obtainable. It will pack even more theatres than did the film production which it completes—the original "Diamond From the Sky."

Thousands are going to visit the theatres showing the Sequel to see the winner of the $10,000, for the films alone will disclose the name and identity of the Sequel's author. Bookings are now being taken on the Sequel to "The Diamond From the Sky" at all Mutual film exchanges. Be the first in your vicinity to show it. Don't overlook this wonderful opportunity. Don't wait. Circus folk declare "The Jockey of Death" is as fascinating as "the greatest show on earth."

Ministers of the Gospel say "The Flower of Faith" is one of the best sermons ever preached and the sweetest story ever told.

Reviewers characterize "The Ocean Waif" as the daintiest of comedy-drama features.

Fashion experts enthusiastically assert that the latest modes were never before so uniquely presented as in "The Adventures of Dorothy Dare."

Newspaper men say "Beatrice Fairfax" has all the excitement and mystery that surrounds the lives of newspaper people.

You can't ask for better endorsements of these five sure-fire winners.

Gentlemen:

Attention Mr. Goldfrap

We take pleasure in advising that we are in receipt of a letter from one of our customers, namely Mr. A. R. Moore, of Eustis, Nebraska, reading in part as follows:

> "After using films from three different Exchanges, I find that none have proved as successful as Unicorn, for quality and service; and last but not least, as money getters." (Signed) A. R. Moore.

which again proves the Unicorn brand of films, as this is only one of the many letters we have received from the different exhibitors in our territory, and right now we have numerous requests for our new program which will put in its appearance very shortly.

Yours very truly,
UNICORN FILM SERVICE COPPORATION.

EXHIBIT B

FROM N. Y. MORNING TELEGRAPH:

The Inference is Obvious—Unicorn!

An Unsatisfied Demand for Short Film Plays is One of the Trade's Problems.

A serious situation in the motion picture business seems to have arisen in THE GROWING SCARCITY OF SHORT-LENGTH FILMS. Producers who have in mind only the exploitation of stars and the possibilities of metropolitan productions are by way of forgetting the many thousands of small town houses which cannot afford—by reason of small seating capacity and limited attendance—to pay for great features, great names and celebrated productions. The same is true of many of the small neighborhood picture theatres where small prices accompany a general desire for variety.

The short film, like the short story or the small painting, has its own advantages On the regular stage, the stars of the drama are seldom within the reach of the small houses or the patrons of vaudeville. These facts make plain the need and the commendability of the short film for the 5,000 to 7 000 lesser picture houses which cannot afford the great features or the star performers, for the simple reason that their theatres are to small and their accustomed scale of prices is to low to permit them to offer the longer and more famous attractions.

Gentlemen:

I put "The Girl From Frisco" on my dullest night--Saturday. This is a great downtown city on Saturday and it seemed impossible to draw patrons to my house on that night. But "The Girl From Frisco" certainly pulled them out last Saturday and I am assured of twenty-five good Saturdays. I have run almost every serial and series of pictures produced in the past two years in my theater and I can frankly say that I received more personal comments from my people on your series than all the others combined. The exhibitor who does not run this series is sure a dead one.

I also use "Ham and Bud" and the "Hazards of Helen" pictures; in fact, my programme would not be complete without them.

Yours sincerely,
Theodore Beiersdorfer.

Facts and Comments

OUR recent article showing the triumph of American-made pictures in Italy has once more, and in a very striking manner, called attention to the possibilities of export. Does it not seem strange that we know how to make the best pictures in the world, but cannot distribute them to the producer's best advantage? We are speaking of the foreign market, of course, although the domestic problem needs a lot of solving, too. We regret to say this, but it's so fearfully true that we cannot resist. Most American producers either know nothing or care nothing about foreign markets. Take the case of Italy, where, up to very recent times, there was but one American company that had any considerable sales. Do you imagine that these new pictures, or rather these new companies, would have got into Italy if there had not been a direct deal between Italy and the United States without looking to an intermediary in London? This may be heresy, and our esteemed British contemporary may issue another edict of excommunication against us—but heresy or not, it's a fact, is it not? Again, take the case of Latin America. Direct dealing from New York has brought about wonderful changes in that market which we persist in neglecting. South America has been converted and enlightened as to the quality of American-made films by Americans going to Buenos Aires and exploiting their pictures there and in Peru, Chili, Bolivia and Uruguay. The foreign market is more valuable to the American producer than it ever was before. Let him not give it away or sell it for a mess of pottage.

IN a large Southern city the power of the screen was successfully demonstrated in a greatly increased registration of voters. To get the voters to register is often harder than getting them to the polls. The exhibitors in the city we have in mind urged registration from the screen. No man has a greater respect for the screen than we have, and we are used to scrutinize closely any use of it other than that of showing pictures. To admonish voters to register is performing a civic duty and has nothing to do with partisanship. Hence we were glad to learn that the oldest politician does not remember a bigger registration than this year's, when the slides on the screen helped along. Incidentally, the politicians were very much impressed with the power of the screen, and that, we are sure, will never do any harm.

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD wishes to record its appreciation of the letter and the spirit of a resolution passed recently at the convention of The Motion Picture Exhibitors League of the Maritime Provinces of Canada in Halifax. The resolution is to this effect: "Resolved that this convention express to The MOVING PICTURE WORLD its special thanks for the great service it is rendering to the cause of the organized exhibitor." We take this occasion to assure all our friends and readers that we are endeavoring to make this publication the most helpful, the most accurate and most interesting paper for exhibitors throughout the country. Every indication that we are succeeding along this line is extremely gratifying to us.

WRITING from Colorado, a friend and reader of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD says that "the motion picture industry in our state . . . is probably more free from opposition and adverse legislation than it is in any other state. This fact may be responsible for there being no exhibitors organization in Colorado." Very probably. As a rule we preach organization to deaf ears until Necessity goes into confinement and brings forth Invention.

ANY effort to refer the character and quality of motion pictures to the great forum of public opinion is a step in the right direction. From a friend and reader in Cleveland we learn that hereafter the patrons of one of the biggest theaters in that city "on leaving the theater are to be handed a card on which will appear the following questions: 'How did you like the picture as a whole, the story and the star and the photography? What did you particularly like about it? What was your principal dislike?'" These popular tests will be made once a week. The management has offered a prize of one hundred dollars for the best criticism. There is no art more quickly responsive to popular demand and popular taste and the Cleveland way is a good way of getting a valuable record.

How Intelligent Is a Crowd?

By Louis Reeves Harrison

ON no other subject are men so decided in their conclusions; on none so widely-varying opinions, and, therefore, so few correct ones, as on the intelligence of an average audience at the picture show. There are all kinds of off-hand estimates among men engaged in the branches of production, distribution and exhibition of moving pictures. Summed up, they amount to nothing definite. The opinion of each man is about as broad as his own particular knowledge of human nature, and very few men are reasonably well acquainted with themselves, to say nothing of being qualified to state definitely what others think and feel.

Laying aside all prejudice against the millions who spend their money to see a story visualized on the screen—they comprise all classes—the first step in getting at the truth lies in self-examination. Take your own case. You are quite intimately acquainted with certain very decided merits of your own, which are very little appreciated, when not wholly unsuspected by your own dear circle of friends. Among them all—they may number a handful or several hundreds—how many of them really understand you? Are you, too, fit to judge them?

A is a friend of yours who is succeeding, perhaps through a combination of ability and good luck, in a business where your friend Z is barely holding his own. Z comes to you with a so-called bit of friendly information, which is merely a misconstruction of something A has said about you injurious to your business, your family or your aspirations. A denies saying anything of the sort, but he is too proud to apologize for what he has not done, and you cherish a secret resentment against him.

You ought to know that success excites envy in pitiful human nature, that a covert attack is always the weapon of a weakling; only the brave and strong make their critical remarks to your face, and A should be given the benefit of the doubt in view of his denial. If you cannot see through the motive behind covert personal detraction, what right have you to pronounce the motives and character of people you do not know, the larger proportion of whom you have not even seen?

We must take a broad view, rather than a narrow one, of human nature. Normal men and women are merely composites of good and bad characteristics, good or bad according to the ethical codes of their respective communities—I am not speaking of decadents—and they are very nearly related in the matter of impulse and sentiment. So far as impulse and sentiment are concerned, almost any big audience of normal human beings comes close to being a unit. It is only when we come to consider the intellectual control of impulse and sentiment that we arrive at a genuine differentiation of human character.

The average human being in mature life lacks time to study. He thinks in the terms of his business, his family life, the latest news and the sports and games. He is rarely engaged in studying nature, history, science and literature. Admitting this to be a fact, does it mean that he is incapable of understanding almost any subject clearly and beautifully presented to his attention at the picture show? You are probably one of us, just an average man—do you find the screen exhibits entirely too good for one of your mental capacity? It makes no difference if you have a few more dollars and comb your hair oftener than the rest of us—are you not one of the millions yourself?

Why take an aloof attitude? Why mount a little pedestal of primitive egotism and look down on human nature? You will not do this if you are a man of high intellectuality well seasoned with common sense. Intellectuality may enable you to perceive much that other men barely see, but it is not impossible that you lack common sense if you cannot draw conclusions that are not self-evident from those that are. There are millions of persons of very limited acquirements who have a fund of native good sense, whereas it is not conspicuously infrequent for us to meet with a lack of it in persons of great learning.

Common sense teaches us that there is a wide difference in the activity of comprehension in a mixed audience. Some have a quick grasp upon all that is shown. Others lack swift perceptions where the mind alone is addressed. A few are highly intellectual. The great mass is not so. On this account a proposition stated in language easily comprehended by a few is not so readily understood by the many. But we are not stating a proposition in language. We are picturing a phase of human life which is addressed largely to the emotions.

Let a skilled writer put forth in the best terms at his command that a certain law handed down from past generations and still in force is so unsuited to people of today that it should be discarded as worthless. A few will read and understand the essay. Now apply that law to a phase of life in the pictured story with high emotional power, create a drama of great intensity from human nature and experience—it can be presented to millions of limited intellectuality, yet reach their intelligence.

Do we not stumble on this question of intellectuality, which relates very largely to intellectual perception of what is presented to the mind from a purely intellectual point of view and usually in language? A very sensible mixed audience may not be at all intellectual. Should we not give consideration to the medium and the method of presenting an idea? That same unintellectual audience may be easily affected by what is shown on the screen in a story addressed to human sensibilities, may be extremely susceptible to the impression made by an idea, and thus a great truth may permeate common intelligence.

We know that common intelligence often revolts against mere preachment, that it often remains unconvinced by argument, but it is hardly safe to assume on that account that it does not exist. Is it not more true that the interesting picture story, with its profound impression upon human sensibility, with its subtle approach to the mind through the emotions, is bound eventually to prove itself to be the golden medium through which truth travels from its source to our capacity for receiving it?

The great mass of common people is not always right, but that is far from meaning that those same people are unwilling to be set right. The fact that they are often wrong goes far to show that they are susceptible to such influences as poor moving pictures exert. It would be disheartening to think that these same people were so lacking in intelligence as to be incapable of understanding the truth when it is rightly presented to them. To give them what is false to our finest ideals will less imply a lack of intelligence on their part in the present and the future than a lack of intelligence upon the part of those controlling production.

The Paralysis of Common Sense

By W. Stephen Bush.

ON very short notice I could name to you more than a score of cases where exhibitors are slowly ruining themselves by paying inflated prices under the mistaken impression that they must kill off their competition. In one instance two houses in a small suburban town are running this race of death. One of the houses paid eighty-three dollars for one day's service, with five cents admission for matinees and five and ten cents at night, seating capacity nine hundred, and a six-hundred-seat theater right across the street. In another instance an exhibitor paid forty-two dollars for a picture for which his competition had been paying twenty-five. Bidding against each other for service, the exhibitors naturally create fictitious and inflated values. Sooner or later the crushing impost tells its tale, and one of the bidders goes to the wall—only to be followed a little later by another man who thinks that he can make two theaters pay where only one paid before.

Nor are the ruinous prices the worst feature of the situation. The worst part of it is the demoralization of the exhibiting business in every section where this paralysis of common sense sets in. We all know, of course, of the dangers of surfeiting, boring and disgusting the public with a show of ten or twelve reels. I have found that wherever this fatal fever of competition arises it proves itself contagious, and on more than one occasion towns and cities have suffered from bad attacks, starting with a race of death between exhibitor and exhibitor.

The next evidence of demoralization in such a state of affairs is the nightmare of losing the service on which you have taught yourself to depend, and which possibly you have been at pains and at expense to advertise. Take a territory where the exhibitors are weak and unorganized, or where they are furiously fighting each other—stability of service comes to a tragic end. A wise exchange man, to be sure, views such conditions with regret and seeks to help the warring exhibitors to a better understanding of their situation. He will warn them against the follies of excessive and unfair competition. I have known exchange men fair and honest enough to warn intended competitors and even to recommend a cheaper service. I know of at least one exchange which has built up a national reputation on such a basis of fair and reasonable dealing.

Alas, all exchange men are not wise, and of late the other kind seems to have been decidedly in the foreground. There are altogether too many exchange men who look upon disunion and disorganization in the exhibitors' ranks as a special opportunity to display their generalship, and what in common parlance is called their "gypping" ability. They look upon the exhibitor not as the man on whose prosperity depends their own; if you tell them that the exhibitor is the most important factor in the industry they will give you the laugh. They know him as the hunter knows his game and in no other way. To their way of thinking there is no closed season, and every method of hunting is legitimate, if it is successful. Their conversation with the exhibitor is mostly limited to such remarks as "I have to charge you thirty dollars more because Smith is after the service" and "I don't care—I have got your deposit." I know of one case where an exhibitor was told that, other things being equal, they preferred to deal with his competitor because his competitor had never publicly spoken against the advance deposit system and he had. In another case a man was called up at three in the morning and threatened with cancellation. No reason was given, but the man had been prominent in organization work. There are too many exchange men who have no conception of their responsibilities and no particular qualifications for it. They are given great power, in many cases the power of life and death, as far as the exhibitors' business is concerned. This power, instead of sobering them, fills them with an exaggerated sense of their own personal importance.

On whom, after all, must the blame for these intolerable conditions be laid but at the door of the exhibitors themselves? Their indifference, their bidding against each other for service, their unwillingness to get together and act in common wherever there are common interests, are to blame. If they were properly organized they would not have to worry about service. If they realized that a little temporary advantage over a fellow-exhibitor will in the end weaken their own power of resistance to aggressions and arbitrary rulings there would be far more happiness and withal far more prosperity in the exhibiting family. The remedy for all these evils is simple. It is organization. It is the practical application of this remedy which seems so difficult. From its earliest days the Moving Picture World has urged the exhibitors to organize, because there is strength and prosperity in organization, and a strong and prosperous exhibitor is the foundation of all our prosperity. There is nothing mysterious about this, nor yet anything unpractical. There are well-organized cities and towns today where competition has been regulated by counsels of common sense and where the distressing fear of cancellation is unknown. Therefore, we say once more: Get together and organize!

"Over Developing"

By W. Stephen Bush.

OVER developing the popularity of stars is bad business. It is bad business for the producer and equally bad business for the exhibitor. It makes the whole industry depend on highly variable and at times wholly false standards of value. If we ever get to the point where the whole industry revolves like a huge satellite about a dozen or two of stars and near-stars and quasi-stars we will all suffer.

The star has its proper place in the motion picture firmament. Charging extravagant prices just on the popularity of one star will lead to disaster if the success of the play is made dependent entirely upon the star. Herein lies the gravest danger. Trusting to the star, the producer is apt to forget that a story is as necessary as the star itself. Nothing is less permanent than the fame of a motion picture star. There comes a decline inevitably. The history of the motion picture here and abroad is full of stars that have declined more or less rapidly. We might recite a score of instances of vanished stellar glory. The decline may come at any moment and the star in its descent may drag down the producer and the exhibitor.

There are old Biographs made some six or seven years ago in which appear half a dozen artists who then drew a very modest salary. The same artists now draw more than ten times as much money. Whom has the great change benefited most? Is the producer making more money? Is the exhibitor getting an adequate profit? In other words, has the great increase in expenditure brought a proportionately greater increase in profits to all concerned?

These questions are constantly discussed by exhibitors "where exhibitors most do congregate." From what we can learn the majority are by no means pleased with an exclusive star system.

Hodkinson to Head Superpictures

Associated With Former Paramount Chief are Raymond Pawley and Frederick J. Collins

ANNOUNCEMENT was made last week of the organization of Superpictures, Incorporated, a sales and distribution concern, with a capital of $9,000,000. The company is chartered under the laws of Delaware. The stock is divided into $6,000,000 7 per cent. preferred and $3,000,000 common. The company is controlled by men prominent in the formation of Paramount Pictures Corporation and by the owners of McClure Publications. A nation-wide advertising and publicity campaign is contemplated.

William W. Hodkinson, president of the Progressive Motion Pictures Corporation—which in several western cities distributes the Paramount program—and up to last June president of Paramount, is the president of the new company. Frederick L. Collins, president McClure Publications, is vice-president. Holland S. Duell, of the law firm of Duell, Warfield & Duell, is secretary. The treasurer is Raymond Pawley, formerly treasurer of Paramount and also formerly president of the Famous Players Film Service of New Jersey. Mr. Hodkinson and Mr. Pawley are still members of the board of directors of Paramount. The former will be the active manager of the new enterprise. He has always stood for the best things in motion pictures, and this fact will with those in the know in the picture business serve as a guarantee of the high standard and aims of Superpictures.

In a formal statement issued by Superpictures the announcement is made that within ten days the company will be in active control of one of the three largest distributing organizations in the country. but that as a matter of policy the name of the organization in question is withheld for the present. This led to the belief on the part of many who have been acquainted with recent gossip that it was confirmatory of the reported absorption of Triangle by McClure's, and, of course, by Superpictures. The fact that an associate of Mr. Hodkinson refused to confirm the report rather than to enter a denial of it added to the belief that such a transaction was in course of negotiation.

The statement authorized by Superpictures is as follows:

"Superpictures, Inc., as the name implies, is formed to encourage, finance and distribute motion pictures of quality. It aims to standardize the motion picture distributing business through the maintenance of high quality in its own productions and methods and through the ownership of stock in other distributing concerns. To this end, Superpictures is acquiring a substantial interest in the Paramount Pictures Corporation, the Progressive Motion Picture Company and the Famous Players Film Company, and, within ten days, will be in active control of one of the three largest distributing organizations in the country. The name of the latter organization is withheld at this time as a matter of policy.

Mr. Collins and Mr. Duell, who own a controlling interest in McClure's Magazine and other McClure Publications, bring to Superpictures, Inc., the publicity connection and the financial strength essential to the highest success in this field.

"Superpictures' first release will be a series of seven pictures produced under the auspices of the McClure Publications and starring Nance O'Neill, H. B. Warner, Ann Murdock, Holbrook Blinn, Charlotte Walker and other stars of equal magnitude. This series will be accompanied by a powerful advertising campaign in the important newspapers and magazines throughout the country, designed to establish in the public mind the name and significance of the word 'Superpictures.'

"Superpictures, Inc., will not confine its activities to the output of any one producer or group of producers, but will pick and choose from the product of the best studios those productions which measure up to its standards. These and only these will be called Superpictures. To this end, Superpictures has set aside a large proportion of its capital for the financing of unusual pictures which, in the present condition of film production, might not otherwise reach the public. It is not the purpose of Superpictures to produce pictures, but rather to see that such productions as it stamps with its trademark are efficiently managed, honestly sold and adequately financed.

"Duell, Warfield and Duell, who represent Mr. Collins and the McClure interests in the suit that is now pending against certain stockholders of the Paramount Pictures Corporation to compel delivery of stock under an option agreement of June 13, 1916, state that the incorporation of the new company, in which Mr. Collins is interested, has no effect on the present litigation, except as it indicates the probable ultimate possession of the Paramount stock in case the action is successful. Mr. Collins' option covers all of the stock of the corporation and the purchase price is $12,000,000. Examinations before trial in this suit are now being held prior to an early settlement in the courts."

Mr. Zukor Issues Statement.

When asked if he had anything to say in regard to the announcement issued by Superpictures to the effect that that organization is acquiring a substantial interest in the Famous Players Film Company, Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players Film Company and of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, made the following statement:

"None of the officers of Superpictures has ever held any office or any stock nor is Superpictures now acquiring any interest in the Famous Players Film Company. All the stock of the Famous Players Film Company is owned by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation."

Hiram Abrams, president of Paramount Pictures Corporation, when shown the statement issued by W. W. Hodkinson relative to his new affiliations in the motion picture industry, stated that any interest acquired by Superpictures, Inc., in Paramount Pictures Corporation could in no event be greater and would absolutely be limited to the stock owned by Mr. Hodkinson and Raymond Pawley, directors of the corporation, and their associates. Their holdings, it was declared, would not in any manner affect the present control of Paramount Pictures Corporation and its present policy of distributing the productions of Famous Players, Lasky, Morosco and Pallas Pictures.

When Mr. Abrams was asked to make a statement as to the suit of Mr. Collins against the Paramount Pictures Corporation, to enforce an alleged option on its stock, he said that that was a matter for the courts to decide and that he had no comments to make.

Christie Film Company

A Series of Two-Reel Comedies to Be Released by This Organization.

C. H. CHRISTIE, manager of the Christie Film Company, who arrived in New York from Los Angeles on November 3, announces that his organization will start releasing a new series of two-reel comedies next month. These releases will be made weekly, and Mr. Christie expresses the fullest confidence in the merits of the pictures.

Al E. Christie, the well-known producer and head of the firm, has secured the old studio at Los Angeles where he started making comedies for the Universal, and the new series will be produced there. This studio, by the way, was the first to be built in the hub of film production.

The company from which the casts will be chosen will be made up of Betty Compson, Billie Rhodes, Eddie Barry, Neal Burns, Harry Ham, Harry Battenberry, Ethel Lynne, Jane Waller and Stella Adams, who have given such a good account of themselves in the Christie one-reel comedies. The new series will be released through the Independent exchanges. Mr. Christie states that F. J. Hawkins is no longer connected with his organization.

GENERAL FILM CHANGES BRANCH MANAGERS.

R. M. Simril has been placed in charge of General Film Company's Jacksonville branch, succeeding H. T. Tucker, who has been assigned to the managership of the Atlanta office, succeeding C. C. Ezell there. Mr. Ezell has been transferred to Dallas as successor to D. Prince, who has been named as manager of the Detroit branch, succeeding E. M. Ames, resigned. Effective November 13, P. J. Swift will assume the managership of General Film Company's branch at Charlotte, N. C., taking the place of William Conn, who has resigned.

William Tedmarsh, the American-Mutual actor, resumes the role of "Quabba," the gypsy, which he played in the Mutual's ten thousand dollar serial, "The Diamond From the Sky," for the sequel to this installment story which is soon to be released.

The Motion Picture Exhibitor

WRITE US EARLY AND OFTEN

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD carries the most complete record of Exhibitors' News. This department aims at being the fullest and fairest chronicle of all the important doings in the ranks of organized exhibitors. To keep the department as complete and as useful as it is now we request the secretaries of all organizations to favor us with reports of all the news. Coming events in the ranks of the organized exhibitors are best advertised in this department of the Moving Picture World.

TO ORGANIZE FRISCO EXHIBITORS.

Judge Tugwell Talks to Trade on Important Subject—Effort May Bear Fruit.

A MASS meeting of exhibitors in the San Francisco Bay region was held in the spacious exhibition hall of the American Photoplayer Company at Golden Gate avenue and Jones street, San Francisco, on the morning of November 3, to discuss plans for the formation of a State and local organization. Judge A. P. Tugwell, the representative of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry in the Far West, was present and outlined in detail the work of this organization, the problems with which it has to cope, and the plans for future development. He stated that while the trade in the East was well organized, the West was backward, and that a part of his work was to arouse interest in the need for organization. He pleaded for immediate action on the part of San Francisco exhibitors and so impressively did he present the cause of organized effort that it was decided on the spot to call another meeting within a week to carry out the plans outlined. As soon as this is done a state organization will be effected, with a nucleus of three locals, and a campaign for membership commenced. Judge Tugwell stated that it was the plan to make this city the headquarters, on account of its importance and central location, for the Pacific Coast division of the National Association.

Earlier in the week Judge Tugwell was the guest of the Film Exchange Board of Trade of San Francisco at a luncheon at the Tait-Zinkand Cafe, about thirty film men being present to meet him, and told of the work of the organization from the standpoint of the manufacturer and distributor. He also attended a meeting of this organization in the Board rooms and discussed with members the proposition of affiliating with the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry. As some exchanges are already members, through their affiliations, this proposition could not be acted upon at once and it is unsettled whether local exchange interests will join as a body or as individual firms, if it is decided to affiliate.

BOOSTING MICHIGAN CONVENTION.

A. J. Moeller, of Howell, secretary of the Michigan State Branch Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, calling attention to the Michigan convention says: "You and I can accomplish nothing as individuals and it behooves both of us in order to derive benefits that can be obtained through co-operation, to assist one another. Now, then, be reasonable just once. Do not say what you have done, but rather, I will help to accomplish something. Crawl out of your shell and expand. Put some of your energy and brains in motion—declare yourself. If there is one spark of interest in you, do not smother it, but let it burn. Throw away your hammer, buy a horn and make your slogan, 'Detroit December 12.'"

MARYLAND MEETING POSTPONED.

Big Attendance Is Confidently Expected for Meeting to Be Held at Baltimore, November 26.

THE meeting of Maryland exhibitors, which had been called for November 5 at the Hotel Emerson in Baltimore, was canceled at the last moment owing to unforeseen complications. The meeting had been called by Thomas Goldberg of the Goldberg theater in the Walbrook section after consulting with a large number of Baltimore exhibitors.

A conference was held later at which a number of exhibitors attended, among them L. A. De Hoff, manager of the New theater; F. A. Hornig, L. Schlichter, Joseph Brody and Thomas Goldberg. It was felt that Maryland and especially Baltimore was in urgent need of an exhibitors' organization and that no time should be lost in getting together. After an informal discussion it was decided to call another meeting to take place on Sunday, November 26, at the Hotel Emerson at three o'clock p. m. A list of all the theaters in the state of Maryland was furnished to National President Ochs, with a request to issue the call for the meeting from National Headquarters.

The exhibitors present at the informal conference pledged themselves to make the meeting on the 26th of November a success numerically and in every way. The meeting will be addressed by W. Stephen Bush and probably by the National President, Mr. Ochs.

MINNEAPOLIS LOCAL GAINS MEMBERS.

Twelve new members were taken into the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Corporation of the Northwest at last Tuesday's meeting. All of the new members are prominent in the activities of the industry in the Northwest and Secretary Koenig of the association has hopes of getting as many more willing workers into the association by the time the next session is held, November 14. No meeting was held November 7 because of election, but on next Tuesday exhibitors will discuss matters of importance at a luncheon at the Hotel West, at noon. The members admitted to the association last week were: N. C. Jensen, Opera House, Mora, Minn.; L. A. Haglund, Lyric, Swea City, Iowa; Joseph Bauer, Dixie, Westbrook, Minn.; A. J. Zuercher, Opera House, Melrose, Minn.; Messrs. O'Malley and Christian, Palace, St. Paul, Minn.; Joseph Friedman, Strand, St. Paul, Minn.; Jacob Barnet, Crystal, Minneapolis, Minn.; L. E. Joppa, Opera House, Dallas, Wis.; P. J. Bibb, Grand, Walker, Minn.; H. B. Smoots, Milo, Little Falls, Minn., and F. F. Baumbach, Idle Hour, Bryant, S. D.

A letter from Mayor W. G. Nye was read at the meeting. The executive withdrew his request for a list of film features every week from Minneapolis exchanges. The matter of shares of stock for members of the association was brought up by D. G. Rodgers and discussed at length. A motion was made and seconded that Secretary Koenig be provided with an assistant. A committee composed of L. V. Calvert, D. G. Rodgers and Thomas J. Hamlin, was appointed to present to Mayor Nye the exhibitors' ideas regarding censorship by a committee of exhibitors, exchangemen and newspapermen.

NORTH CAROLINA CONVENTION.

The next convention of the North Carolina State Association is to be held in Charlotte, N. C., Dec. 19, 20 and 21. Local members of the organization have already held a meeting and from tentative arrangements this convention will very easily be the biggest and most successful one so far. The Selwyn Hotel has been selected as headquarters and some one or two well known screen stars are to be invited.

North Carolina will be remembered as having been responsible in several instances for suppressing unwise and unjust legislation anent the film industry.

MANY PLAYERS TO ATTEND BOSTON BALL.

General Manager Grant Reports Hearty Co-operation from New York Film Men.

PHOTOPLAY patrons in Eastern Massachusetts are on their toes awaiting the annual "Movie Ball," under the auspices of the Massachusetts branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America. Wednesday, November 22, is the date and the Boston Arena, which on previous years has housed "New England's greatest indoor event," is the place. Samuel Grant is the general manager of the coming show, and he is bringing to the function the experience he has gained on past similar occasions—and he has had a lot of it. He is dividing his time between the Boston and New York offices of the committee. The former location is the headquarters of the league's executive committee, 127 Pleasant street. The general manager's quarters in New York are in Room 904, Columbia Theater Building, 701 Seventh avenue.

Mr. Grant has received assurances from New York film men of their hearty support, which is an indication of the rank held by the Boston moving picture men as managers of annual balls. There is every reason to believe the exodus from New York of film men and players that has marked previous occasions will be equaled on November 22. Present at the ball will be former Governor David I. Walsh, a great favorite in the motion picture industry and the present Bay State executive.

Among the players who will attend will be Doris Grey, of the Thanhouser company, who last year was chosen by a committee in attendance at the ball as the prettiest girl and was given a position by Thanhouser. That she will get a hearty reception from her fellow-townsmen goes without saying. Her presence will add interest to a similar contest to be conducted this year by the Atlas Film Company of Boston, of which Leon Dadmun is president.

Mr. Grant has been promised a large attendance of players. Among those already positively pledged are Anita Stewart, Alice Joyce, Lillian Walker, Marc MacDermott, Harry Morey and Master Bobby Connolly of the Vitagraph; Grace Darling, International; Flo LaBadie and Doris Grey, Thanhouser; Dorothy Arnold and Jack Sherrill, Frohman; June Caprice and Stewart Holmes, Fox; Lucille Lee Stewart and Huntley Gordon, Ralph Ince; Zena Keefe, Frankie Mann and James Morrison, Ivan; Margaret Gale and Eric Mayne, "Yellow Menace"; Paul Panzer and George Fawcett.

BOOSTING THE BOY SCOUTS.

Alameda County, Calif., Exhibitors Go "Fifty-Fifty" on Plan to Raise Fund.

This self-explanatory letter has been sent to all exhibitors in Alameda County, Calif., asking co-operation in a plan to lend support to that movement:

Gentlemen: The men behind the Boy Scout Movement in Alameda County believe that every home should be stimulated to take an intelligent and active interest in the welfare of the Boy Scouts. To that end a plan is suggested which ought to benefit financially the proprietors of motion picture houses and give them valuable publicity.

It is proposed that November 23, or November 29, be extensively advertised as Boy Scout Day, for the purpose of raising money for the Boy Scout organization. Tickets of admission, good at any motion picture house in Alameda County, entering into the agreement, will be printed for that day, having on the reverse side the names of the theatres inviting the patronage.

These tickets will be sold by school children, Boy Scouts, Mothers' Clubs, fraternal and commercial organizations.

The profits from tickets thus sold will be divided on a percentage basis, 50 per cent to the proprietor and 50 per cent to the Scout Committee selling the tickets. The money taken in at the box office will be divided on a 60 per cent. and 40 per cent. basis, 60 per cent. to the "house" and 40 per cent. to the Scout Committee.

This, we believe, is combining good business with a movement which aims to make "The Boy Scout of today the effcient man of tomorrow."

What is your decision? Very truly yours,

H. L. BEACH, President, WILLIAM F. KRAHN, Secretary of the Motion Picture League of Alameda County.

THOMAS MEIGHAN ARRIVES IN NEW YORK.

Thomas Meighan, well known Lasky player, has arrived in New York from Hollywood, Cal., and will now be permanently stationed at the Famous Players studio in the east. The transfer of Mr. Meighan is, of course, made possible by the merger of the two producing companies on the Paramount program.

This is the first time that Meighan has been east since he played the role of the attorney for the defense in "On Trial" before joining the Lasky Company..

MACDONALD DIRECTING "THE BEST MAN."

Director Donald MacDonald of Universal City has under production a two-reel drama entitled "The Best Man." The cast consists of Lee Hill, Lois Wilson, Nellie Allen, Charles Dorian and A. E. Witting.

ART LEADING PICTURE THEATERS.

Programs for the Week of November 12 at New York's Best Motion Picture Houses.

"The Plow Girl" at the Strand.

MARY MURRAY in "The Plow Girl," a play which carries the audience from the South African veldt to drawing rooms of fashionable London society, was seen at the Strand theater during the week of November 12. The plot deals with the adventures of Margot, a little girl who is the family drudge of a dissipated South African farmer, who sells her to an innkeeper. The play is from the original story by Edward Morris, adapted for the screen by Charles Sarver. Jesse L. Lasky is the producer. Another chapter of Ditmar's "Living Book of Nature," was shown; also a new comedy, travel and scenic studies and the Strand Topical Review. The Steindel Instrumental Trio, composed of Max Steindel, 'cellist; Ferdinand Steindel, pianist and Alben Steindel, violinist, were heard in a classical program. Grace Hoffman, the coloratura soprano, was the soloist.

W. S. Hart at the Rialto.

Spectacular motion pictures of Admiral Sir John Jellicoe's grand fleet in the North Sea, were the added features of the program at The Rialto. These films are owned by the British Government and were taken under the personal supervision of Charles Urban, perfector of the Kinemacolor process. They show actual sea fighting, with the firing of tremendous broadsides, launching of torpedoes, submerging of submarines and other authentic activities of the squadron which is maintaining Britain's supremacy at sea.

Wm. S. Hart, in "The Devil's Double," was the dramatic star of the bill, and Charlie Chaplin in "Behind the Screen," was the comedy feature. Mr. Rothapfel's "Literary Digest of the Screen" showed the latest news in picture form, and the usual educational feature was on the program. The soloists were Jeanne Maubourg and Elsa Diemer.

"War Brides" at the Broadway.

"War Brides," the Marion Craig Wentworth drama which Herbert Brenon has transferred to the screen with Nazimova in the leading role, began an unlimited engagement at the Broadway theater, Sunday evening, November 12. The play made a profound impression on the speaking stage and will repeat this success on the screen. Nazimova gives a powerful portrayal of Joan, the woman whose husband is killed in battle and who tries to offset the war brides decree with her cry of "No more children for war." The cast and the production make this picture one of unusual merit.

Eighty-First Street Theater Bill.

At the Eighty-First Street theater for the entire week, Douglas Fairbanks, in his latest satire, "American Aristocracy," and a Mack Sennett comedy were shown. On Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday a later Keystone comedy was placed on the bill.

REGARDING "A TRIP THRU CHINA."

H. H. McPike, a stockholder in the China Cinema Company, sends a protest to the Moving Picture World regarding an item published to the effect that Sol Lesser had secured the California rights for "A Trip Thru China." This is what he says:

"Mr. Lesser has not and never did have any interest or connection whatever with the picture 'A Trip Thru China.' The California rights, and all other rights, are still retained by the China Cinema Company and Mr. B. Brodsky, of 332 Pine street, San Francisco. Mr. Brodsky is now booking the picture to play in the principal cities of America and Canada, and you can readily see that such a notice as you have published in your issue of November 4, though no doubt innocently done by you and through some false representation made to you, will necessarily cause confusion and embarrassment to the real owners of 'A Trip Thru China,' and we hope that you will, in fairness, give proper correction to the misstatement."

LOU ROGERS RESIGNS.

Lou Rogers, for seven years contract manager and Canadian manager for the Fox Corporation, has announced his resignation. Mr. Rogers leaves his present employ with the hearty good wishes of Mr. Fox. He is well known to exhibitors all through the country and the announcement of his resignation will come as a great surprise. In speaking to a representative of the Moving Picture World, Mr. Rogers said that his plans for the present are indefinite, but that he may have interesting news for the trade in the near future.

Bronx Exhibitors Hold Fourth Annual Ball

This Year's Function Brings Big Crowds—Prominent Photoplayers Present—Grand March Led by Violet Mersereau and Carlyle Blackwell

THE entertainment and ball held under the auspices of the Cinema Exhibitors' Association, which is Bronx Local No. 2 of the M. P. E. L. of A., at Hunts Point Palace, Southern Boulevard and 163rd street, Bronx, New York, on Monday evening, November 6 (Election Eve) can undoubtedly be recorded as the social event in moving picture circles in that borough for this year. This is the fourth annual affair of this kind to be bestowed upon the populace of the Bronx by the Cinema Association, and it was held in the same hall as the three previous ones.

The throng was slightly bigger than that of last year. A conservative estimate places the number at 3,700, and that all enjoyed themselves cannot be denied. The number of prominent photoplayers present exceeded those present at past affairs given by the Cinema Association, and of course the more of these shining lights at an affair of this kind the higher the spirit of the occasion rises. There were also several persons prominently identified with the business staffs of the different film companies on hand to add to the hilarity. And increasing the merriment of the guests were the remarks by several well known local politicians expressing confidence in their election to their respective offices and extending an invitation to all to call upon them in their new quarters.

There was a surprise in store for the merry makers when the Universal picture entitled "The Girl Who Would Not Tell" had been projected. Simultaneously with the ending of the picture a band of nine pieces, which was stationed near the entrance to the hall, struck up and led Violet Mersereau, who was featured in the picture, around the guests who were seated on chairs on the ball room floor. Miss Mersereau was recognized immediately and vigorously applauded. She was escorted in her march by H. H. Van Loan, of the Universal's publicity department. She then mounted the stage and after a formal introduction by Adolph Bauernfreund, trustee of the Cinema Association, Miss Mersereau made a short address in which she thanked all for the kind appreciation of her work and wished all a most enjoyable time. After the entertainment was over Miss Mersereau could be seen tripping the light fantastic with other stars of filmdom.

Rose Tapley, one of the Vitagraph stars, after a short poetic recitation, told of her contemplated trip throughout the country. She was greeted with prolonged cheering, for Miss Tapley is a favorite with Bronx audiences.

Wally Van needed no introduction. As Official Announcer Bauernfreund walked upon the stage with Wally to perform his duty of introducing the young idol of picture fans, some one shouted "Oh you Cutey!" That was enough for Bauernfreund. He left the stage to "Cutey," who, as soon as he began to speak, was extended a roaring welcome. "Cutey" stood there for a few minutes smiling broadly. When the noise had quieted down a bit he expressed his appreciation of the reception given him, and then left the stage to Official Announcer Bauernfreund, who brought before the footlights in this order, Carlyle Blackwell, of World Pictures, and Huntley Gordon (Luciel Lee Stewart's director), both of whom gave short speeches which were well received.

By this time Bauernfreund had to relinquish his "job" as official announcer, for his voice was going back on him. Not because of any illness, but because of the lung power that was necessary to carry the voice above the hum to the back of the hall. So Henry Cole, vice-president of the Cinema Association, was delegated to introduce the rest of the entertainers. In stentorian tones he announced the hero of "The Crimson Stain Mystery," Maurice Costello. There was a spontaneous outburst of cheering, and when quietness was restored, Maurice recited with considerable dramatic expression "Down by the Rio Grande." When he had finished he was given another ovation. All of which attests, of course, to the popularity of Mr. Costello with Bronxites.

Luciel Lee Stewart, the dainty and petite little star who is now being featured in the Ralph W. Ince productions showed that she has a very sweet and charming voice by singing "Somewhere a Voice is Calling." Her actions were very graceful and the demonstration was applauded. William Shea and Nell Shipman, luminaries in the Vitagraph firmament, were also much in evidence all the evening.

Little Emma Gorman, a child picture actress, contributed a most enjoyable little sketch to the entertainment program. She recited very effectively a short piece on how a director works and the expenses attached to the wardrobe of a picture actress. Miss Gorman was brought to the ball by Herman Pollak, treasurer of the Cinema Association and manager of the Webster theater, Bronx, where the child actress appeared before coming to the affair. Mr. Pollak was running a picture entitled "The Soul of a Child," in which Miss Gorman was featured.

"Dainty Ruth," a child of no more than six years, added to the enjoyment. She is a little Bronxite and was "discovered" by Henry Cole. Mr. Cole in introducing the little girl said that she will soon appear in Thanhouser productions. Her act which consisted of songs and dances took well. She is a blithesome little miss, and judging from the way she carried herself, it seems pretty safe to conjecture that she will quickly become a twinkling little star in picturedom should she become connected with a picture concern. Mr. Cole said that he was particularly happy over his "find."

The motion picture part of the program was made up of subjects from the studios of Vitagraph, Vim, Keystone and Universal not yet released. "Hash and Havoc," a comedy by the Vitagraph elicited a volume of hearty laughs. So did the Vim comedy, "Pipe Dreams." The Triangle subject, "The Waiters' Ball," was a mirthful comedy and put the audience into raptures of delight.

The grand march, which was started shortly after midnight, was led by Violet Mersereau and Caryle Blackwell, followed by John J. Wittman, president of the Cinema Association, and Mrs Wittman. The ballroom floor was transformed into a whirlpool of gaiety when the grand march was over, and the dancing continued until the daybreak appeared in the horizon.

Among persons well known in the trade who could be seen on the ballroom floor were Joseph Brandt and Paul Gulick, of the Universal Company; Victor Johnson, of Vitagraph, Sam Spedon, S. M. Berg, Sam Trigger and George Balsdon, manager New York branch of Greater Vitagraph.

A neat program of thirty-six pages was given out by the Association. It was printed on good coated stock paper and bound in heavy green paper. It contained large half tones of a number of photoplayers and the officers of the club. Its advertising pages were well patronized by the trade.

ESSANAY TO USE TITLE "MUSTY SUFFER."

Here is some good news for the thousands of photoplay fans to whom the name "Musty Suffer," made famous in Kleine comedies by Harry Watson, Jr., has come to mean huge cargoes of slapstick joy. Special arrangements have been made between George Kleine and George K. Spoor, president of the Essanay Film Mfg. Co., by which the generic title, "The Mishaps of Musty Suffer," will continue to be used to cover a new series of Watson comedies to be made by Essanay. Mr. Kleine has given express permission to the Essanay Co. to employ the name in connection with Essanay-Watson comedies.

Two series of "Musty Suffer" comedies, each consisting of ten one-reel productions, have already been leased under the Kleine standard through the Kleine Edison-Selig-Essanay Service. It is understood that the new Essanay "Musty" films will also appear on the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay program. A number of side-splitting scenarios have been prepared for Mr. Watson's use, and a company of experienced laugh-makers assembled to support the star Work on the forthcoming series has already been begun.

MR. KONOFSKY, WRITE.

Relatives of J. Konofsky, who was connected with the motion picture industry in Philadelphia in 1907 and 1908, are anxious to hear from him. Mr. Konofsky has recently been active in motion picture enterprises in China and if this notice meets his eye he is requested to write to Jack Konofsky, 451 Grand street, New York City.

Max Linder Is Now With Us

Famous French Comedian Arrives After Stormy Voyage and Makes Quick Jump for Essanay Studio.

MAX LINDER arrived in New York on the morning of November 7. At the French Line Pier to meet the screen player who was the first to attain distinction in the comedy field was George K. Spoor, president of the Essanay Company. While the Espagne, three days overdue, was being warped into her dock Mr. Spoor was asked how long the latest Essanay acquisition would remain in New York. The Chicago manufacturer replied he was going to try to get him started for Chicago that afternoon, Mr. Spoor adding he had been in town since Monday awaiting the arrival of the steamer.

Mr. Linder, through his secretary, Albert Petitmaitre, told a World man he had had rather a rough trip. In the Bay of Biscay the Espange had collided with an unknown vessel and a serious accident had been narrowly averted. For a hundred feet amidships, on the port side, the French liner showed the marks of the bow of the unknown vessel, which disappeared without sending out any signals. All the passengers had been stationed by their lifeboats while the officers investigated the extent of the damage, which fortunately proved immaterial; fortunately especially because the seas were running so high small boats would have had slim chance. Head winds were encountered throughout the trip.

Mr. Linder in manner is as serious as one might expect him to be jovial. His bearing exemplifier what we read of the Frenchman of today and reflects the determination and sense of responsibility of a nation under stress. Mr. Linder has contributed his "bit" to the French cause. It is said he purposely has limited his contract to twelve months so that in case he is again called he may be free to return to his country.

At the outbreak of the war the player entered the artillery division of the army. He was severely wounded in the left shoulder, the injury entailing three operations. After a period of two and a half months in hospital he went to Italy and made personal appeals to the Italian nation to enter the war on the side of the allies. For his work there he was thanked by Prime Minister Salandra. Later, in Switzerland, where he went to recuperate, he engaged in the making of a few pictures. Mr. Petitmaitre said Mr. Linder weighed less than ninety pounds when he left the hospital, but the secretary added the player had picked up to his normal weight, seemingly about 135 pounds.

Mr. Linder will immediately enter upon the making of comedies. Four scripts awaited his arrival at the Essanay studio. In the direction of these he will have the assistance of Leo White, at one time associated with Chaplin in the making of Essanay comedies.

The appearance of Mr. Linder in American-made pictures will be awaited with deep interest by those of the photoplay public who remember his exceptional work in the French Pathe Company. To the newer followers of the screen he may perhaps be described as an athletic or even acrobatic Sidney Drew. Before he entered the army he was known the world over as the best-dressed man on the screen. Incidentally it might be added that judging from the amount of baggage he brought along he has intentions of sustaining that reputation. He likewise is known as a man without fear. His courage has been demonstrated on numberless occasions.

"Here's welcome and good luck to Max Linder."

Mutual After Chaplin Film Pirates

Has Started a Campaign of Civil and Criminal Actions Against Fakirs.

A CAMPAIGN of damage suits and criminal prosecutions against film pirates operating with fake Chaplin pictures has been ordered by President John R. Freuler, of the Mutual Film Corporation.

A special "protection fund" of formidable proportions was set aside for the purpose when the Chaplin project was launched. A staff of detectives and legal aids has been organized for operations under the direction of Samuel M. Field, general counsel of the Mutual.

Attempts to steal Chaplin prints from a number of the Mutual's sixty-eight exchanges in the United States and Canada, have led to discoveries that will come to light in the form of raids and action in the criminal courts.

A recent raid in a southern city recovered several stolen Chaplin reels. Meanwhile indictments for grand larcey have been returned against three men, who will be taken into custody on warrants now in the hands of special detectives, if the fugitives can be overtaken.

"I suppose this thievery will continue," remarked Mr. Freuler, "until we put two or three of these fellows into prison. That we will most certainly do. The bold and astonishing daring of the thieves, crooks and grafters upon the fame of Chaplin is beyond belief. Exhibitors are being offered pictures of Chaplin made up of ancient junk, stolen, "duped" and assembled together by various devious and unlawful methods. Such pictures are of no value to the exhibitor and any showing of them is a damage to the reputation of Mr. Chaplin.

"The old Chaplin pictures are no more representative of the Chaplin art of today than the nickeldeon of 1905 is representative of the modern theater. We are spending $670,000 for Mr. Chaplin's services, and a good many thousands more to put out the pictures. We have a good deal ready to spend in prosecutions to protect our investment, and our customers. This statement is not a threat—it is a sincere promise."

Winston With Sunbeam

CHARLES L. WINSTON, of Boston, formerly associated with the Keith publicity department there, is now a resident of New York. He comes here to assume charge of the publicity department of the Sunbeam Motion Picture Corporation. It is another demonstration of youth being served, as Mr. Winston has not yet reached the quarter of a century mark in years.

While in Boston he had charge of the publicity at Keith's National Theater and later became manager of the Boston Theater, which two houses by the way are the largest in New England. Mr. Winston was recognized as Boston's premier publicity promoter and while enjoying that honor, was engaged by President Wilbur Dunham to come to New York for Sunbeam.

June Caprice, now one of William Fox's stars, was "put over" by Mr. Winston. For it was he who took her to the opening of the Braves' new baseball park in Boston, and presented her to the 45,000 fans present as "Mary Pickford." This little stunt netted several pages of publicity for Miss Caprice, who was then known as Helen Lawson.

Many other stunts are attributed to Mr. Winston's fertile and vivid imagination and it is expected that he will take good care of the Sunbeam stars, while he is here. At present he is busy letting the public know that Ty Cobb is making a six-part feature called "Somewhere in Georgia," which is slated for release in the near future. He is a product of the Boston Post, on which paper he served for five years as a reporter.

PARAMOUNT'S NEW TRAVELING MEN.

Charles H. Powell, formerly connected with the Cincinnati office of Paramount, has been appointed special traveling representative of the Famous Players Film Service, Inc., of Pittsburgh, distributors of Paramount pictures in that district. Henry P. Zapp, formerly connected with the Casino Feature Film Company, of Detroit, Mich., was recently appointed special traveling representative of the Famous Players Film Service, Inc., of Pittsburgh, distributors of Paramount Pictures. Mr. Zapp has a wide acquaintance in the film industry.

LE MOYNE IN "THE PRINCESS OF PATCHES."

Charles LeMoyne has arrived in Chicago from the Selig studios, at Los Angeles, Cal. He will enact an important role in "The Princess of Patches" to be produced by Director Al Green.

Richardson Still Rolling Around

Latest Self-Conducted Tour Included Trenton, Philadelphia, Lancaster and Reading— Gets Good Reception at all Points

ON SUNDAY, October 29, just to keep myself in practice and my blood in circulation, I gave my two-wheeled steed a drink of gasoline and pointed her nose toward Trenton, N. J., in response to a request by Local Union No. 359 that I then and there appear and deliver a lecture on projection. Arrangements had been made to continue the trip to Philadelphia, Lancaster, Reading and Easton, Pa., in each of which cities I was to give the men a talking to on projection.

At Trenton the boys were waiting to accompany me to the New Bijou theater, Chestnut and South Clinton streets, the use of which house had been donated by the management for the occasion. But the best laid plans of mice and men oft gang aglee, or so it is said, and certainly they did this time, since we missed each other and I proceeded in solitary grandeur to the theater, where several of the men had already gathered. The time of the lecture was set for two o'clock. The committee afterwards swore by the Beard of the Prophet they had kept close watch, but I had come in so fast that I was invisible. The Trenton operators were mostly all present, but while a few of the managers turned out, their attendance was far from satisfactory, notwithstanding the fact that lecture was of the most vital interest and importance to every single one of them. The trouble is, Mr. Manager does not realize the importance of the matter until it is all over, and then it is, of course, too late. I talked for two hours, and found my audience close and apparently appreciative listeners.

Brother Walter G. Murray, secretary Philadelphia Local Union No. 307, under the auspices of which I was to speak in that city at 8 p. m. the same evening, had come up to Trenton by train to hear the lecture and ride back with me on the Go-Devil, occupying the chicken roost, of course. Shortly after leaving Trenton darkness threw her mantle over earth, and when we attempted to "light up" it was discovered that the tail light had gone bluey—was out of commission. Traffic was heavy on that portion of the Lincoln Highway at that hour of that particular day, and the tail lightless vehicle stood an excellent chance of being stood on its head and bumped clear off the map by some ambitious speed merchant. Brother Murray, however, is of an inventive turn of mind—also he was behind and would get the full effect of the aforesaid bump, if it came. He ruminated for a moment on this fact, then pulled out a full case of cigarettes, lit one, mounted the chicken roost, gave several vigorous preliminary puffs, held the Sweet Caporal behind his back, fire end to the rear, and said: "Proceed," which I did. How many cigarettes Murray consumed in the next thirty miles deponent sayeth not. But we were not bumped, and arrived at the Home of the Liberty Bell right side up with care in ample time for dinner and the lecture.

After dinner we went over to the Ridge Avenue theater, the use of which had been given by the management for the occasion, where a representative, though not-so-large-as-it-ought-to-have-been audience was gathered to listen to the gospel of better projection. As is usually the case, particularly in the larger cities, a considerable number of the men, usually the managers, not realizing the value and importance of the lecture to them, failed to appear. This is also in part due to the fact that the very ones standing sponsor for the affair, the local union in this case often do not themselves grasp the full significance of the occasion, and take as energetic steps as they might take to secure a full attendance of all concerned.

In this instance the staging of the lecture was due to the enterprise of Walter G. Murray, secretary of the local, who, I believe, assumed most of the responsibility and did practically all the work.

The Philadelphia meeting was, however, everything considered, satisfactory, and one of the first questions asked after the lecture closed (it usually is the first question asked) was: "How soon can you come back?" In fact, some of the men wanted me to double back on my return trip from Lancaster, which I only escaped by promising to return later.

In the audience was Mrs. Sidney K. Stanley, wife of her operator husband, who was also present; Mrs. Jack Greenberg, Mrs. H. B. Johns, and the future Mrs. Louis Krouse. Louis Krouse is business agent of Philadelphia local No. 307. It is said he is an excellent business agent, but I really did not know he was such an expert picker. The future Mrs. Krouse is a strictly de luxe edition—the real article, as it were. Congratulations, Brother Krouse. May the future of yourself and the Mrs. Krouse-to-be be filled with sunshine.

Frank Rembusch, of Mirror screen fame, was there. Incidentally he was kind enough to speak very highly of your humble servant's efforts at lecturing. I talked for two hours and to my surprise even the ladies expressed themselves as having been deeply interested.

I am dictating this after my return to New York and before me lies a letter from Brother Murray, in which he says: "The consensus of opinion among the exhibitors and operators present is that the lecture, although not as highly attended as it should have been, was a great success. Brother William Hamilton, who accompanied us on our tour of dissipation after the lecture, has appointed himself a committee of one to take up the work of education here in Philadelphia."

From Philadelphia to Lancaster is less than a hundred miles and was covered in record time. As we drew near Lancaster a car was seen standing beside the road and three men stood on tiptoe in the middle of the road in an endeavor to see how high they could raise one hand, while with the other they wig-wagged frantic signals to stop. They proved to be Brothers C. Patterson, Walter Martin and W. R. Suter, camped beside the roadway awaiting our coming. I followed them to Lancaster, though Nancy Hanks, the go-devil, strenuously objects to eating automobile dust.

I have already, some time ago, described Lancaster's three leading theaters, particularly the magnificent Hamilton owned by the Hamilton Amusement Company. I want again to say that in all my travels I have never seen a more pleasing general result, taking the picture on the screen in conjunction with the auditorium lighting than I saw in the Hamilton theater, Lancaster, Pa. This time I only visited the Penn theater, A. H. Gatland, manager and owner; George Kamm and W. R. Suter, operators, and the Scenic, R. A. Barton and Robert Robinson, owners; W. R. Dean and C. W. Martin, operators, all of whom it was my privilege to meet

At dinner I was the guest of Mr. Krupa, general manager of the Hamilton Amusement Company, and his charming wife, Mrs. Krupa. Good fellows—both of them, and real managers as well. I enjoyed the hour thus spent very much indeed.

At midnight every moving picture machine operator and manager in Lancaster foregathered in the rooms of the T. M. A., where a nice dinner was served, after which the editor spoke for two hours to a very attentive audience. Those present were: George M. Krupa, manager Hamilton Amusement Company and Hippodrome theater; John S. Workman and S. E. Moore, operators, Hamilton theater; A. H. Gatland, manager Penn theater; George J. Kamm, and W. R. Suter, operators Penn theater; R. A. Barton and Robert Robinson, proprietors Scenic theater; Warren R. Dean and C. Walter Martin, operators Scenic theater; Oscar J. Cramer and Cecil Patterson, operators, Hippodrome; Chas. C. Smith, operator, Lancaster theater; Clarence J. Trayer and J. Rodney Good, operators Grand theater; William Snyder, manager Grand; Edgar N. Hoover, operator Colonial theater; William E. Powell, manager Star Theater, Columbia, Pa.; Chas. B. Shultz, operator, Family theater.

From Lancaster to Reading, Pa., is less than forty miles, but a heavy fog and miles of roadway covered with nice, freshly crushed stone made it seem twice that far.

At Reading Ben Zerr, past president Exhibitors' League of Pennsylvania, awaited my coming, but due to a blunder on the part of the hotel clerk we missed connection. After an hour's wait for Brother Zerr, who all the while was seated in the hotel lobby industriously engaged in waiting for me, I took a stroll up broad Penn avenue, and soon was shaking hands with Thomas Harford, chief operator for Carr and Schad, who own four of Reading's best theaters. Brother Harford introduced me to Mr. Schad, who promptly sent for his chou-chou wagon to take me "over the mountain." While waiting for the gasoline buggy, I inspected the Arcadia, one of the Carr and Schad houses. It has an excellent lobby, approximately 30 x 75 feet, divided lengthwise in its center by a row of arches which form the entrance and exit aisles. The house seats about 1,000, all on one floor, except for thirteen boxes in a narrow balcony in the rear. All seats, including the boxes, are 10 cents. The ceiling of the auditorium is slightly arched. The picture is deeply bordered in black and not too large. The lighting of the picture is good and the speed approximately correct. Harry Cedar was at the machines.

I visited several Reading houses, as will be related further on, and in no instance did I find anything to complain of in the projection. The light was invariably brilliant, and the speed was correct, and the latter is something I have been unable to say for any other city I have visited. There have been cases of individual theaters running at proper speed, but in no city except Reading have I visited any considerable number of houses without being compelled to criticise that item.

Ben Zerr was responsible for my visit to Reading. Brother Zerr is an earnest, energetic and thoroughly likeable man; also he is a corking good exhibitor. During the afternoon, under his guidance, I visited the Grand theater, of which W. C. Kantner is manager and owner. This house is up one and a half floors above the street. It has a 14-foot black-bordered screen, and a brilliant projection light. The speed of projection left nothing to be desired. George Webster is operator. Frank D. Hill is manager of the Lyric, and 'tis said (and after meeting Mr. Hill I firmly believe it), he is a prince of good fellows. He is one of those men who believe that a smile goes considerably further than a grouch, and he patterns his life after that theory. The Lyric seats 1,050, and has a 19-foot picture. The light and the speed of projection were excellent, but the picture is too large. Brother Hill will do well to reduce its size. Winfield Steele is operator, and Friend Steele bears the reputation of being a progressive and thoroughly excellent operator.

At the Princess, one of the Carr & Schad houses, the picture was bright, the speed was right, and the only criticism was a white light showing beside the screen. The Pictureland, George Bennethum manager, is a long narrow house. In the center is a four-foot aisle, and on one side of the aisle is a bank of four chairs and on the other a bank of three chairs. Nevertheless the house is so long that it seats more than 300. The picture entirely filled the end of the room, except, of course, it did not come down to the floor.

I found only one thing to severely criticise in all Reading operating rooms, viz., too much light and light walls. Paint those walls black, gentlemen, and cut out the light. In one house I found the very limit in observation ports. This operating room had observation ports round in form and exactly 4 inches in diameter. The wall was about 16 inches thick at that. Imagine it if you can. In order to see the picture the operator was actually compelled to glue his nose right up to the wall and squint through with one eye. The manager agreed to have the opening cut larger at once, and I hope he has done it.

At 11 o'clock practically every operator and manager in Reading climbed aboard deep sea going automobiles and we motored out into the darkness around the mountain to a roadhouse where a really excellent banquet was served, after which the editor preached the gospel of better projection until 3 a. m., only to find that quite a number complained that we did not talk long enough. The affair was very thoroughly enjoyed by all the participants.

Taken altogether Reading, so far as motion pictures are concerned, has to be classed among the progressives.

Three p. m. next afternoon found me shaking hands with C. D. Buss, of the Third Street theater, Easton, Pa., and 3.30 saw me in bed doctoring what might be termed a peach of a headache. At 11 p. m., however, I had succeeded in chasing Mr. Headache into the tall timber, and at the Third Street theater met a very genuine surprise. The management of that house certainly is the liveliest kind of a live wire. I had written Mr. Buss offering to lecture in Easton, and the management of the Third Street theater certainly had gotten extremely busy, for within its walls that evening was gathered not only every manager and operator in the city of Easton, but a representation from South Bethlehem, Allentown, Bangor, Penn Argyle, Pa., and Belvidere, N. J.

Those present were: C. D. Buss, Third Street theater, Easton, Pa.; Leroy Meeker, Easton, Pa.; Raymond Henry, South Bethlehem, Pa.; Earl Roberts, Third Street theater, Easton, Pa.; Daniel Constantino, Third Street theater, Easton, Pa.; Albert Arnold, Strand theater, Easton, Pa.; Le Roy W. Middlecamp, Strand theater, Easton, Pa.; D. O. Atkinson, Berwick theater, Easton, Pa.; W. B. Bisbing, Berwick theater, Easton, Pa.; Joseph Carman, Jewel theater, Easton, Pa.; Boyd C. Cunningham, manager Philadelphia Branch Artcraft Pictures Corporation, who came over from Allentown to be present; H. W. Herberger, manager, Lehigh Orpheum theater, So. Bethlehem, Pa.; H. R. Lynn, operator, Lehigh Orpheum, So. Bethlehem, Pa.; R. I. Osterstock, operator, Lorenz theater, Bethlehem, Pa.; T. W. Heiberger, Broad theater, Bethlehem, Pa.; D. E. Knorr, Pergola theater, Allentown, Pa.; L. F. Heiberger, Lorenz theater, Bethlehem, Pa.; C. B. Wanamaker, Allentown, Pa.; Elmer L. Stamets, Jewel theater, Easton, Pa.; S. A. Seifert, Colonial theater, Easton, Pa.; J. Fred Osterstock, manager, Colonial theater, Easton, Pa.; J. L. Sletor, Able Opera House, Easton, Pa; Edward H. Houck, assistant manager, Colonial theater, Easton, Pa.; Edward M. Black, Alble Opera House, Easton, Pa.; Chas. A. Bryfogle, operator, Regent theater, Allentown, Pa.; George J. Zboyoosky, manager, Palace theater, So. Bethlehem, Pa.; F. S. Emmett, proprietor, Regent theater, Allentown, Pa.; Wilson F. Ritterm, Diana theater, So Bethlehem, Pa.; Robert P. Tibott, Diana theater, So. Bethlehem, Pa.; Chas. M. Morley, Easton Express, Easton, Pa.; George Snyder, Easton, Pa.; I. Khorn, manager, Star theater, Easton, Pa.; W. F. Pascoe, manager, Circle theater, Easton, Pa.; Stewart L. Burk, Pastime theater, Easton, Pa.; Michael A, Carman, Star theater, Easton Pa.; Meyer Zimmerman, Pastime theater, South Bethlehem, Pa.; Paul A. Wentzel, Diana theater, South Bethlehem, Pa.; E. O. Garrington, manager, Palace theater, Penn Argyle, Pa.; William W. Eyer, manager, Broadway theater, Bangor, Pa.; Dean A. Snyder, operator, Broadway theater, Bangor, Pa.; A. B. Widener, manager, Opera House, Belvidere, N. J.; Paul E. Widener, operator, Opera House, Belvidere, N. J.; Joseph W. Fisher, operator, Opera House, Belvidere, N J.

The meeting was a thoroughly successful one. The audience was both appreciative and very attentive, afterwards expressing itself as highly pleased with results.

It will be observed that Allentown, Pa., had a good representation, notwithstanding the fact that car service stopped at midnight and it was therefore necessary to come by automobile—rather expensive. I had written two theater managers in Allentown, suggesting a meeting there, but had received no response. As I passed through Allentown I stopped and asked one of them the reason for his silence. He said, "I found it impossible to get the men together and therefore did not do anything," all of which may be very true, but in view of the representation which came to Easton it looks rather "queer." First Showing of "War Brides."

Herbert Brenon's Screen Version of Marion Craig Wentworth's Play, with Nazimova as the Star, Makes a Highly Successful Debut at the Broadway Theater, New York.

By Edward Weitzel.

SUNDAY evening, November 12, Herbert Brenon's screen version of "War Brides," the remarkable one-act play by Marion Craig Wentworth in which Nazimova, the distinguished Russian actress, made a notable impression on the spoken stage, was given its first public showing at the Broadway theater, New York, with the creator of Joan, the woman who leads the rebellion against the rearing of children for war, in her original part. With this attraction as its sole screen feature, the management of the Broadway theater passes into the hands of the Lewis J. Selznick-Carl Laemmle-Herbert Brenon combination. "War Brides," which has been put on a for a run, is the first Brenon contribution to Selznick Pictures.

The audience which attended the premiere was a representative one. It contained such well-known members of the city's artistic and social life as Mr. and Mrs. O. H. Harriman, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Clark, Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Hearst and party, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander B. Moore (Lillian Russell), Mrs. Aimee Crocker Gouraud, Mr. Daniel Frohman, Mr. George M. Cohan, Mr. William A. Brady, Messrs. J. J. and Lee Shubert, Mr. Adolph Zuker, Mr. Jessie Lasky, Mr. Cecil B. DeMille and Mr. Frank Keenan. The new picture received an enthusiastic reception. At the end of the showing an insistent demand brought Herbert Brenon onto the stage. Mr. Brenon's remarks were brief, but heartfelt, as he thanked the audience and referred to the assistance given him by Nazimova and others connected with the production. A review of "War Brides" will appear in the next issue of this publication.

"THE MAINSPRING" TO BE RELEASED BY UNIVERSAL.

The Universal has scheduled for release as a Red Feather for the week of November 27 "The Mainspring," a story by Charles Agnew McLean, directed by Jack Conway and featuring Ben Wilson with Francelia Billington.

Universal's Juvenile Program

Establishes a New Department Whereby the Demand for Children's Program May Be Satisfied.

IN RESPONSE to the demand for programs suitable to the needs of the children's performance, created by the combined efforts of the Women's Clubs, Parent-Teachers' Associations, etc., throughout the country, the Universal Film Manufacturing Company have established a Juvenile Program Bureau. This Program Bureau has arranged thirteen separate programs of four to six reels each. These programs can be booked singly each week from the Universal exchanges for demonstrating purposes, or booked for the course, the latter being the most economical method by a difference of $10.00 on the course. The prices of the programs range as follows:

Four reels, one time, $8.00; 13 weeks (1 day a week only) $100.00.

Five reels, one time, $10.00; 13 weeks (1 day a week only) $120.00

Six reels, one time, $12.00; 13 weeks (1 day a week only) $140.00.

In patronizing the Universal Juvenile Program service a minimum of four reels must be booked, and expressage must be paid both ways by the renter outside of New York. The contents of programs 1, 2, 3 and 4 as quoted below will serve to enlighten the reader as to the constructional quality of the course:

Circulars announcing this course of pictures for the entertainment of the children and the family group are being sent to the women's clubs and to exhibitors throughout the country. These circulars also suggest plans by which the financial problem, including a systematic sale of tickets, may be solved. Application for these circulars may be made, and further information concerning this pioneer move may be had at the offices of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, 1600 Broadway, New York City.

CLOWN LEAVES CIRCUS TO JOIN KEYSTONE FORCES.

The lure of the pictures gets 'em all. The latest recruit to leave other fields, where success had already been won, for the camera stage, is Jack Harris, for more than ten years one of the clowns with the Sells-Floto circus. When Director Walter Wright, of the Triangle-Keystone forces, was making some special pictures at the circus, Harris did some work before the lens. He became greatly interested. He followed the Mack Sennett players back to thir own lot, and watched them do stunts.

Result—one perfectly good clown has deserted the sawdust, and the big top, to aid in the production of Keystone comedies. And the first picture which he has aided in making is called "Her Circus Knight."

MARGARET MILNE JOINS VAN DYKE CO.

Margaret Milne, a sister of Peter Milne, the well-known motion picture reviewer, has been added to the cast of the first picture that the Van Dyke Company is producing for the Art Dramas Program. This is the first time that Miss Milne has worked in pictures but she has already had considerable experience on the legitimate stage.

Read Talks of Foreign Rights

General Manager of Harper Corporation Says Show Your Buyer the Goods.

IF in a foreign country you would sell a big film for a big price don't leave the transaction to the untender mercies of the mails, but send a man to that country with the film under his arm. That is the declaration of J. Parker Read, Jr., general manager of the Harper Film Corporation, which is the name of the concern exploiting Thomas H. Ince's "Civilization."

"I have given up expecting men to pay large sums of money for a film they have never seen," said Mr. Read the other day in his office in the Times Building. "I am working out a different stunt. I am sending a man very soon to London, Paris, Madrid and Lisbon to show 'Civilization.' In less than a month I intend to follow him and take part in closing out deals which I am confident he will have well under way by the time I arrive. The subject has been slightly altered so that by no possibility will it run counter to the popular pulse in the nations we intend visiting.

J. Parker Read, Jr.

"We have recently executed a contract in this office which in a large measure helped to open our eyes as to the possibilities of a big subject in foreign countries when those subjects could be shown directly to the intending buyer or buyers. A man came in here from Argentina. My observation of the South American market, gained in the course of five visits there, is that ordinarily subjects sell at so much a foot, perhaps eight cents would be an average figure. My first price of a figure for Argentina was $30,000. My visitor offered $2,000, believing apparently he was making a big offer. We went into statistics—got down to brass tacks—we talked of theaters and population. When we got through the contract was for $20,000. My father, who recently went to Brazil, has sold that country and Uruguay for the same sum. These things were accomplished by adopting the identical business methods with other countries that we use here—by giving the buyer a chance to see and examine your goods. I firmly believe that by following out this principle in my coming visit across the water we are going to reap some real profits, perhaps a record. I think we can build up a line of steady customers abroad for Ince productions."

Mr. Read spoke of the custom of selling film rights for Great Britain "and her colonies," as if the latter factor constituted but a minor part of the deal. He expressed the conviction that in the colonies were to be found territory that heretofore had been much undervalued. He believed them worthy of careful investigation. As an illustration he said he was sending a man to Australia to look into the possibilities there. Another representative would be sent to India and China and still another to Cuba and Porto Rico. Speaking of India, Mr. Read said he had been given to understand that in that country 80,000,000 out of the total population were interested in theatrical amusements. "Even if the actual total be but 25 per cent. of this," he said, "it affords a good working basis. Yet a wise buyer will nonchalantly refer to the 'colonies' as having a relation to the British Isles as of perhaps 10 per cent. It does not sound good to me. The same is true of France and her colonies."

AUTO RACE FOR UNIVERSAL CUP.

Officials of the Universal, including Carl Laemmle, Pat Powers, R. H. Cochrane and Joe Brandt, have engaged a private car in the special train which will leave the Pennsylvania Station at 6 a. m. Thanksgiving Day for Pittsburgh, where, at the new $1,000,000 Uniontown Speedway, the most famous automobile drivers in America will compete for the solid silver $3,000 trophy donated by the Universal to the winner of the 112-mile feature event.

Alec Lorimore Goes to Australia

Well-Known Film Man Will Represent the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation in the Antipodes.

THE Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has engaged Alec Lorimore as its special representative to Australia and he will sail for Sydney about December 1. Mr. Lorimore is one of the best-known figures in the motion picture industry and is recognized as one of the ablest of the men in the field. His successful efforts in behalf of "Civilization" are still fresh in the minds of everyone in the trade. The selection of Mr. Lorimore for this important work is especially happy because of his English origin, which will permit him to meet the Australian film men with an understanding denied the average American.

The sending of Mr. Lorimore to Australia by no means marks the introduction of Famous Players and Lasky subjects to the antipodes, as they have long held a foremost rank in the amusement field in the island continent, being distributed by the Australian Film Company, Ltd., under joint arrangement entered into by the producers for the distribution of their features everywhere except in the United States, where they are handled exclusively by the Paramount Picture Corporation.

Alec Lorimore.

Though the present system of distribution has proven highly successful, it is felt by the producers that the sending of a special representative to Australia will give a personal touch to the business relations of the producers and distributors which thousands of miles of intervening ocean have rendered impossible.

Under the auspices of the Australian company Mr. Lorimore will make a complete survey of Australia, New Zealand and Tasmania, meeting as many exhibitors as possible and carrying to them the personal greeting of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, of which he is the first emissary to make the great journey to Australia since the formation of the company.

It is a little more than four years since Mr. Lorimore entered the American film business. English by birth, his earlier associations were of a strictly commercial nature. He is still under forty years of age, but had the advantage of starting his business career in the Bank of England—the leading institution of its kind in the world. After a successful career in England, Mr. Lorimore gratified a desire for traveling, and located for a time in Canada. Mr. Lorimore then accepted an offer to undertake the publicity and advertising departments in the Gaumont Company in New York. This was a step to the general sales agency for America and Canada for the same company, and this again led to Mr. Lorimore becoming assistant to the general manager.

Mr. Lorimore cut, titled and edited films for the Gaumont Company with great success; he also supervised productions, printing, etc. The experience he thus gained in the business side of the motion picture industry led to his being appointed to an important organizing post with William Fox.

Mr. Lorimore next became President of the National Movement Motion Picture Bureau, a concern which handled the well-known Boy Scout picture that created so much interest in the United States last year. When Thomas H. Ince came to New York in June with "Civilization" and wished to enlarge his staff by including in it a man of organizing ability, he selected Mr. Lorimore from many applicants.

TOM MIX AT LOS ANGELES.

Tom Mix, the Selig cowboy star, and his company have been transferred from Newhall, Cal., to the Selig studios at Los Angeles. Mr. Mix at present is engaged in directing a Western drama, "Twisted Trails."

Screeners to Dance on November 18

Annual Affair of the Film Men's Club Promises to Equal Its Four Predecessors.

ARRANGEMENTS for the fifth annual reception and ball of the Screen Club, which will be held at the Hotel Astor on the evening of Saturday, November 18, are in full swing. Jule Burnstein, chairman of the committee on sale of boxes, reported on November 10 that twenty-two allotments already had been made. King Baggot will be chairman of the floor committee and Frank Carroll will head the reception committee. Oscar Lund will have the direction of the grand march, which is scheduled to begin at 11:30 o'clock. Mr. Lund has designed one formation among others which will represent the initials of the names of the club's three presidents, B. K. and Q., King Baggot, James Kirkwood and the present incumbent, Billy Quirk. Twenty-five members of the club are now rehearsing the movement, so that it may be put over without a hitch on the big night. The music will be provided by the Astor's great organ and its concert orchestra.

The grand march will be led by President Quirk and a leading motion picture actress, not yet named. The evolutions of the dancers will be to the music of a march composed by Mrs. Billy Quirk, which will be dedicated to the woman selected to lead with the president. The march has been played several times at the Strand and at the Palace. The electrical effects will be under the supervision of Club Treasurer Will C. Smith, of the Nicholas Power Company, who on four previous occasions has so markedly contributed to the pictorial side of Screen Club balls.

The annual affairs of the Screeners, which for the two preceding years also have been held at the Astor, easily rank as one of the best functions in which the film industry is concerned. At the close of the ball two years ago Daniel Frohman was led to remark that he had never known anything in the amusement world which would approach it.

Among the boxholders are Carl Laemmle, P. A. Powers, the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, Bluebird Photoplays, William A. Brady, Barry O'Neil, Billy Quirk, Monmouth Film Company, E. K. Lincoln, Edwin Carewe, World Film Corporation, Will C. Smith, C. A. ("Doc") Willat, Adam Kessel, Jr., J. V. Ritchie, Herbert Brenon, Nicholas Power, Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, Vitagraph, Herbert Blache, Fox Film Corporation, and Paul Scardon and Harry Morey. Two boxes will be reserved for the convenience of the representatives of the daily and trade press.

New International Branch Managers

Charles S. Goetz Goes to the Cleveland Office and J. S. Applegate to Kansas City.

THE International announces the appointment of Charles S. Goetz as manager of the recently established Cleveland office and J. S. Applegate for its Kansas City branch. Mr. Goetz goes to the International with a wide experience in marketing films. He began his career with Warner's Features as a salesman with Cleveland as headquarters, but was soon promoted to be branch manager at New Orleans and a little later was made division manager, having charge of the whole southern territory. From Warner's he went with the World Film Corporation as District manager of the Middle West, with Cleveland again as his headquarters. Within six months he was made sales manager of all branches with headquarters in New York. He resigned to go with William Fox and opened the Pittsburgh and Cleveland branches, and then became connected with the Gene Gauntier Studio. A year later he joined the Bluebird Company.

Mr. Applegate's experience in the film field has not been so extensive, but he has been successful. He entered the business a little over a year ago when he became a salesman for Pathe in the Des Moines office. He was only five months on the road before being raised to the position of manager of the Denver office, from which he resigned to take his present position.

TO EXPLOIT OUR INDUSTRIAL RESOURCES.

An appropriation of $5,000 has been set aside for the installation of a bigger and more complete library at the Triangle Kay-Bee studios in Culver City. There always has been a research department at the disposal of the Ince authors and directors, but the general expansion of the literary staff has necessitated a commensurate expansion of the bookshelves. Miss Florence Vincent has been appointed librarian.

Chicago News Letter

By JAS. S. McQUADE

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION IN CHICAGO.

Organization of a Chicago Executive Division of the National Association of the Moving Picture Industry Now Under Way—Similar Divisions to Be Established in Other Important Centers.

At a meeting held in the offices of John R. Freuler, president of the Mutual Film Corporation, Friday afternoon, November 3, Frederick H. Elliott, executive secretary of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, who had come on from New York for the purpose, outlined the plans and paved the way for the formation of a Chicago executive division of the parent body.

Fifty representatives of the National body were present, and to them Mr. Elliott explained the purposes of the National Association, suggesting that the formation of a Chicago council, or executive division, was for the purpose of avoiding any possible objection that might be raised by the fact that the parent association was a New York body and controlled by New Yorkers. He also explained that similar councils or executive committees would be established in the principal centers of the country, and that a meeting similar to the one held in Chicago would be called in Los Angeles by Judge A. P. Tugwell about the same time.

It was proposed that in the Chicago executive division the various subdivisions of the National Association should be maintained, and that all applications for memberships in the National Association from this territory should first be passed upon by the Chicago committee and the result of their deliberations forwarded to the legal department of the parent body. It was also proposed that a transportation committee be appointed to work out transportation problems in this territory, and that the decisions of the committee should be forwarded to the main transportation committee in New York to receive official sanction.

Mr. Freuler, who was elected chairman of the organization meeting by acclamation, then discussed the advisability of organization and the aims of the Chicago advisory committee. He dwelt on the importance of the thorough representation of every branch of the industry and of having as large a membership as possible. He maintained that it would be necessary to comprise within the organization a majority of those interested in the industry, in order to make the efforts of the Chicago executive division have full effect.

In line with this declaration of policy, Mr. Freuler appointed a temporary advisory committee, composed of the following members: Watterson R. Rothacker, M. A. Choynski, Donald J. Bell, I. Van Ronkel and John Bowman, who represented, respectively, Classes 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5 in the industry, as designated in the by-laws of the parent body. L. H. Frank was appointed temporary secretary.

After a general discussion of the plans on the requirements for eligibility to membership, it was announced by Mr. Freuler that the next meeting of the temporary advisory committee would be held in his office, at 3 o'clock, Wednesday afternoon, November 8.

At the opening of the Wednesday meeting, Mr. Van Ronkel moved that Mr. Freuler be made permanent chairman of the temporary advisory committee, which was carried by acclamation. Mr. Bowman then nominated Mr. Frank as permanent secretary, which was also carried unanimously.

Mr. Freuler drew attention to the fact that he had received a check for $150, and brought up the question of the advisability of electing a treasurer, as the organization had none at the time. Mr. Van Ronkel suggested that for the present the chairman should receive all moneys and have his secretary, or some one appointed by him, attend to such matters.

The chairman then stated that the first business that should be considered was the defining of the purposes of the temporary advisory committee. After considerable discussion, during which many points were covered, it was concluded that the purpose and membership should be governed as provided for in the by-laws—article 1, section 2, paragraph 5, of the parent body. A few changes were then made in the by-laws, and it was decided that the by-laws as maintained by Mr. Freuler and Mr. Bell be recommended at the next meeting for adoption.

Mr. Rothacker moved that a copy of the memorandum be made and submitted to the executive secretary of the National Association before final action was taken by the Chicago body. This motion was carried, and it was ordered that copies of the by-laws be made and sent to members of the advisory committee.

The date of the next meeting was not fixed at the time of adjournment.

Infringers on "The Spoilers" Enjoined.

Judge Reid, Judge of the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of Iowa, Cedar Rapids division, sitting at Dubuque, Ia., Friday, November 3, after hearing arguments for two days, directed the attorneys to prepare an order enjoining the Gate City Feature Film Corporation from further exhibiting "The Spoilers" in the States of Iowa, Nebraska, Missouri and Kansas.

Cooney & Verhoeven, of Chicago, together with Trewin, Simmons & Trewin, of Cedar Rapids, represented the complainant, the Selig Polyscope Company, and Henry Rickel, W. J. Barngrover and Rickel & Dennis represented the defendant.

The suit was originally brought by the Selig Polyscope Company on the 5th of July, 1916, in Cedar Rapids, Ia., and claimed that the rights which Martin & Estes had and which they claimed were assigned to the defendant corporation had expired December 31, 1915, and that the people who were now attempting to exhibit the picture had no right to do so. Owing to court matters it was impossible to bring the motion for a preliminary injunction up before the present time, and Judge Reid consented to hear the same in Dubuque, where the above order for injunction was directed.

Chicago Film Brevities.

Harry A. Sherman, of Sherman-Elliott, Inc., arrived in the city Wednesday, November 8, from New York City, and announced that the Masterpiece Film Corporation had purchased State rights to "The Crisis" for Missouri, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware, Virginia, West Virginia and the District of Columbia. The consideration for exclusive rights to this territory, Mr. Sherman states, was $100,000.

H. P. Wolfburg, who was affiliated with the General Film Co. for the past seven years, will have charge of booking "The Crisis" for the Masterpiece Film Corporation. The plan proposed is to book the big superfilm at all first-class theaters after the methods of a high-class road show.

Mr. Sherman's visit had chiefly to do with a business conference with William N. Selig. He was very enthusiastic over the outlook for "The Crisis."

An invitation exhibition of "Charity," the seven-reel feature made by the Frank Powell Company for the program of the Mutual Film Corporation, with Linda Griffith and Sheldon Lewis in the leading roles, was given at the Ziegfeld theater at 10 o'clock Friday morning, November 10, invitations for which were sent out by John R. Freuler, president of the Mutual Film Corporation. As is known, this film subject deals with charity and child welfare. Bishop Samuel Fallows, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, delivered an address, and a special musical program was offered for the occasion.

J. V. Hogan, manager of the Beverly theater, Janesville, Wis., was seen one day last week at the George Kleine offices, Chicago, where he was arranging for a program of the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay service. The Beverly is owned by the Janesville Amusement Co., and 10 cents admission is charged for five-reel features and a single-reel comedy. Satisfactory business is the rule at the Beverly. Mr. Hogan managed the Colonial theater at Oshkosh for several years, and I met him there some time ago at a convention of the Wisconsin exhibitors, when the late M. A. Neff was national president of the M. P. E. L. of America.

H. J. Wienold, manager of the Rosewood theater, 1823 Montrose avenue, this city, called at our office last week and subscribed for the World. The Rosewood is owned by Miss Regitz and seats 1,000 people. The program consists of World, Metro and other features, and an admission of 10 cents is charged. Mr. Wienold stated that "Ramona" has been booked at the Rosewood for a date some time in December at an admission of 25 cents. Mr. Wienold reported good business.

Herman Bland, operator at the Waverly theater, Harrison and Halsted streets, this city, was a visitor last week, and subscribed for the Moving Picture World. Prior to his connection with the Waverly theater, Mr. Bland was operator at the Playhouse theater, 1846 W. Madison street, for eight years. The Waverly seats 700 people and charges 10 cents admission for programs of Fox, Bluebird, Gold Rooster and other makes. Samuel Abrams is the owner.

The Chicago Political Equality League will hold a bazaar in the Elizabethan Room of the Congress Hotel, Saturday, November 18. One of the features announced is a "gallery of moving picture stars," which will contain autographed photographs of all the prominent picture players in the country. Miss Virna Harman Walker will be manager of the moving picture booth.

While on my recent vacation I called at the Detroit office of the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay service, in the Peter Smith Building, and was very pleasantly received by Louis Nathan, manager; G. E. Applegate, assistant manager, and Mr. Marshall, city and traveling representative. This office force was decidedly buoyant over the popularity in their territory of the above-named service, and excellent business was reported. "The Return of Eve," which was shown two days at the Drury Lane theater while I was in Detroit, was very well received, and Manager Smith told me that he had been highly complimented on the merits of the picture. It was shown to crowded houses, which are nearly always the rule at the Drury Lane. Fifteen cents admission is charged at all times throughout the entire house, and it is Mr. Smith's intention to raise the price to 25 cents in a few weeks.

Harry Weiss, general manager of the Central Film Corporation, announces that he will require still larger quarters to handle the Clara Kimball Young product in the States of Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin and Kentucky.

Mr. Weiss states that he is now negotiating with several Chicago theaters for seven-day runs of the Clara Kimball Young product in a restricted territory. Owners of the better class of theaters in Chicago are gradually finding that longer runs and high-class pictures bring the best results.

Very favorable reports from all parts of his territory are received by Mr. Weiss. Good business is the general rule, and, notwithstanding the depression that naturally comes with a presidential election, houses have shown to good attendance. In fact, all indications point to the greatest prosperity that exhibitors have yet known in this territory, Mr. Weiss says. In many instances moving picture theaters show an increase of from 25 to 50 per cent over the corresponding period last year.

The following changes have been made in the Central Film Corporation's staff: Sidney J. Goldman, roadman, has been made special representative; William Weiss has been added to the sales force, to succeed Mr. Goldman, and will look after Indiana and Kentucky business, and Phil Dunas has been made traveling representative in Wisconsin and Illinois.

Harry E. Aitken, president of the Triangle Film Corporation, made a brief stop-over in Chicago last week on his way to the Coast.

Frank Powell, of the Frank Powell Productions, Inc., New York, and a well-known director, was in Chicago Saturday, November 4. He was accompanied by his attorney, Arthur Butler Graham. Mr. Powell made the seven-reel "Charity" feature, which will be shown on the Mutual program in the near future.

Jones, Linick & Schaefer have announced that they have secured a lease on property at Lawrence avenue and Broadway, this city, for the erection of a theater that will cost $500,000. The theater will be known as the Broadway, the main floor of which will seat 2,000 people and the balcony 1,000. Elevators and dressing room shower baths will be features of the new structure, it is given out. Work on the Broadway will begin at once, and it is expected that the theater will be completed about July, 1917. This will be the first of six houses that will be built in the near future by the Jones, Linick & Schaefer firm.

The recent annual outing of the junior and senior students of Valparaiso University, Ind., was devoted to an inspection of the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company's plant, 1339-1351 Diversey Parkway, this city. The students were shown every detail of moving picture manufacturing during their visit. Every department was visited and the different processes were thoroughly explained by Vice President N. J. Baumer, who also showed the students a three-reel industrial picture which illustrated sections from different moving picture advertising campaign successfully handled by the Rothacker company. The students, who were in charge of Dean R. C. Yeoman, enjoyed their experience hugely, and a vote of thanks and a Valparaiso flag were given Vice President Baumer. In January another trip will be made by the students, when they will have the privilege of actually seeing a photoplay in production.

Miss Marguerite Clark will be seen in "Miss George Washington" (Famous Players), to be released through Paramount, November 20.

Grace Wynden-Vail was recently added to the publicity department of the Paramount Picture Co. in Atlanta, Ga. She writes for various magazines under the nom-de-plume of "Sally Ann."

A new fireproof film box has been invented by E. A. Rupert, manager of a picture theater in Aberdeen, Wash. The invention has been patented and will be placed on the market about the first of the year. It is announced that this film box will have the indorsement of every fire chief in the United States and Canada, as it is claimed that it absolutely protects films from accidental ignition or explosion.

Vivian Reed, the Selig star from Los Angeles, arrived in the city last week to take a prominent part in "The Princess of Patches," which will be produced in part at the Chicago Selig studios and in the southland. Miss Reed is known as "the girl with the million-dollar smile," a title gained by reason of her face adorning numerous high-class art calendars before she appeared in moving pictures.

Robert H. Kelly, assistant director to Al Green, now engaged in the production of "The Princess of Patches," in the Chicago Selig studios, is known in sporting circles as "Rawhide" Kelly. Before Mr. Kelly ventured to appear before the camera he promoted numerous pugilistic combats and managed many fighters in various parts of the world. It is claimed that Mr. Kelly organized the first boxing club in New Orleans, but that we leave to sporting editors to decide. Mr. Kelly earned a fortune in the fighting game and lost it in mining ventures. He has had considerable experience in the making of moving pictures and has worked with several of the larger companies. He has been with the Selig company for some time.

Charles LeMoyne arrived recently in Chicago from the Selig Los Angeles studios and will work under the direction of Al Green in "The Princess of Patches." Mr. LeMoyne headed the LeMoyne stock company which toured the Pacific Coast for years.

The following programs have been announced at the prominent downtown theaters in Chicago for the ensuing year:

Studebaker—"Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea" (Universal) enters its fifth week and is still showing to capacity houses.

Ziegfeld—Alice Brady in "Bought and Paid For" (World) and Earle Williams in the Vitagraph serial, "The Scarlet Runner."

La Salle—Second and last week of Mary Pickford in "Less Than the Dust" (Artcraft). This production will end its run on November 19, and will be followed by "The Masque of Life" (Signet Film Co.), which features Rita Jolivet.

Colonial—"The Birth of a Nation" (D. W. Griffith) will close its successful run of seven weeks on Saturday evening, November 18. It will be succeeded shortly at the same house by Griffith's "Intolerance."

Max Linder, the great French photoplay comedian, accompanied by George K. Spoor, president of the Essanay Film Manufacturing Co., arrived in Chicago from New York, by the Twentieth Century, Friday morning, November 10.

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

From the Stillman.

EVIDENTLY the Stillman is not going to stop advertising just because it is open now. The house is putting Cleveland on the picture map, and C. L. Madden, in charge of the advertising campaign, is finding something new almost every day. For one thing the Stillman does not believe in paper that gives all but a strip to the attraction. It is the show at the Stillman that is important. Most houses use the regular twenty-eight sheets and merely strip the paper with the house name, or at best put it on a headed board. The Stillman uses the smaller sheets from the manufacturer and works these into its own design. The cut shows a manugraph for E. H. Sothern. Only the Manugraph three-sheet is used. The rest is hand work, and the result is a bill for the Stillman theater that tells the attraction but tells it as a Stillman attraction. It is a nice distinction, but a profitable one. In passing, note the house monogram. Mr. Madden writes that it is proving a real asset. A design is an asset to any house, but comparatively few managements realize how important an aid it is. Mr. Madden even puts it on the house ticket as is shown here. There are eight different forms of tickets used for different locations, but all are of the same general design, the color being distinctive. All carry the line "This ticket good for purchase price on any date." This is just another effort to make everything about the Stillman characteristic. It is a contract to the "Good this date only." Note, too, that this ticket is good for different locations in the afternoon and evening.

Two thousand window and tack cards are used each week, carrying the house name, the design, the title and the prices. There are also two hundred cars with signs on the dashboard, the cost being ten cents per day per car. A complement is a post-card with the same general idea of the house name above a panel, the panel broken at the top by the monogram. Below is the program for the week. Each attraction is followed by the showing times. With but one program for the week the titles and other matter can be well displayed in the space.

Two programs are used, one of four pages for the upper floors and an eight-pager for the orchestra, though it is probable that the eight will presently be used for the entire house. The front design is a simple design of stripes crossed by two strips, the upper carrying the inevitable monogram. Sometimes it is printed in one color and sometimes in black and tint. Inside the center pages are devoted to the program, and on the eight there are four pages of house talk. In the program some space is given to descriptive matter of the overture and songs, as well as to the film subjects, to emphasize the fact that these are part of the program and not interruptions. Audiences are apt to take things at face valuation, if that valuation is proper, and a brief description of the song with perhaps some comment on the composer and singer will make that song a distinct feature of the program instead of merely a filler. This is a point where even the larger houses often fail to make good.

Special advertising has the same distinction. A card for the Common Law is a double post-card of heavy white stock. It is printed in a sage green and black with "Remember Valeria West" and the monogram on the address side and a larger monogram on the back. It is bordered with twelve-point border. Inside the top half is given to the feature and the lower part to the other attractions. The card has an odd scaling arrangement doing away with the usual paper clip.

Even so small a thing (apparently) as the stationery supplied in the rest room and lounge is carefully looked after and the cards, paper and envelopes are of a grade that the most fashionable patrons are accustomed to use in their own homes and better than many possess. A neat design in one corner of the card and on the flap of the envelope is the only advertising. The newspaper advertising is worth more space than one issue can afford, so must go over. It will be worth waiting for since it is done by an expert, and Mr. Madden explains about the different styles and sizes. If Mr. Madden's good nature and postage stamps hold out we are going to give you a lot of good tips from Cleveland.

Misleading.

The Liberty, De Pue, Ill., gets out a rather misleading throwaway in which "The Birth of a Nation" is made to attract attention for a smaller play with the same people. This is not a good plan as a rule. Unless people read clearly they are apt to feel that they have been fooled, even when the management can point to the added words. Often it reacts,

SEE THE BIRTH OF A NATION STARS
LIBERTY-To-Night
When D. W. Griffith made "THE BIRTH OF A NATION" he chose the best Actors in America, only those whose ability was worthy of a part in the world's greatest photo-play such as;
MAE MARSH RALPH LEWIS
MARY ALDEN ROBT. HARRON

and when some real feature is announced or a real star is called up the recipient will see the big name, suppose it another cheat, and drop the sheet. On this bill, for that matter, Gloria is announced, and many will question Miss Burke's appearance. Two other bills are better done, and these are probably more representative, but the printer should be talked to with a view to getting better results with type. For example one double line reads "Just think of it—Three brillian stars." Then below the three names are staggered in three lines. To get the proper alignment a smaller type is used than would be the case were all three set in a larger face one under the other and with proper space between, while "Three brilliant stars" should get a larger display face for it is the keynote of the program. It pays to study the value of the various lines, deciding just which will pull the hardest, and then talk it over with the printer and get him to play those lines up right. He is not a showman, but a printer. If he knows his business that is enough. You tell him the part you are supposed to contribute, or else you must be content with a job that is merely good typesetting. Don't fight him. Get him interested in seeing how well he can get your own ideas over.

Too Late!!

It's so seldom that we have the chance to do so, that we rejoice in this opportunity to throw a rock at H. W. Heiberger, of the Lehigh Orpheum, South Bethlehem, Pa. He writes to tell us of the Fashion Show. They worked with a local department store and models imported from New York, but George Editor Carpenter recently told about the scheme and we swiped it from him, and he said he got it from San Francisco. But no matter where it came from, it's a fine scheme to make your own headliner that costs nothing. You just show the local store's new styles on living models. They pay the models, and supply the styles, and then help you to advertise, as well.

Something else is a schedule of the football eleven of the Lehigh University and that is done on a small vest pocket card with no other advertising than the announcement that for the game with Yale a direct wire will be run to the theatre to give the progress of the game. All of the collegians and their friends will carry the cards and think of the theatre, and think all the more because they do not have to wade through a mass of advertising to find the dates.

With Pictures.

The Orpheum, Chambersburg, Pa., recently got out the clever idea here shown, though of course in the reproduction the front page shows on the right, which is wrong. Inside the house program is given on one page and house chat on the other. We would prefer to reverse the order shown and give the program on three and the chat on two. The program is four pages, 6 by 9 inches, light lemon stock and printed in red and green. The design is clever and well done. Orpheum Bill should become locally famous. We wonder if the Blanchards who run the house are our old friends from Sunbury? If it is, they've been away a long time.

An Invitation.

R. L. McLean, of the Capitol, Frankfort, Ky., did the wedding invitation stunt for a recent Fine Arts and writes that it paid. He went to no little trouble to get it out just right, with heavy stock, well printed shaded type that deceived for the moment and held attention until it gained interest in itself, then it was read through. The text runs:

> Mr. D. W. Griffith requests the honor of your presence at the marriage of Molly O (Mae Marsh), to Mr. Larry O'Dea (Robert Harron), on Saturday, the twenty-third of September, nineteen and sixteen, at two and seven p. m., at the Capitol Theatre, Frankfort, Ky. Admission 5 and 10 cents.

We do not know whether Mr. McLean carried cigars or a club, but he persuaded the printer to use a new and fashionable face instead of Old English. The invitations were all individually addressed and not merely sent out blind. He even did so well that he refrained from using some of the other three pages for other advertising because he wanted to make it look like an invitation and knew what invitations looked like.

No Retirement.

The Third Street, Easton, did not explain that sale offer we recently commented upon, but an Eastonian happened in the other day and explained that it was a move to meet a blue sky stock selling proposition that had been brought into town in the dark of the moon. They are keeping right on and are going to still further enlarge the house to seat about 2,000 people, which is going a bit. They did push back the rear wall once.

Stock.

The Highway theatre, Brooklyn, is using a ready-print program with the double middle for its own. The rest of the eight pager is all stock, including a page and a half of national advertising. Not far away is another house with its own four pager and it was doing so well with the advertising last spring that it ran all through the summer with local stuff instead of program, because the house was closed but the stores were open and wanted to advertise. This stock program is better than the average in that it gives the house two pages and those two of the best.

Simple But Good.

George W. Newsome of the Tilford, Murphysboro, Ill., sends in a souvenir card he gave out. It is a portrait card in color with the back blank and here he offers a simple appeal to the patron. There is no flourish, no fanfare, just a simple greeting that carries a lot more weight than would a more pretentious brag. It is written as a man speaks, and its sincerity is of far greater value than fine writing. People expect the circus agent to use all of the dictionary, but they do not believe what he says. It is when a man speaks honestly and naturally that he gains the most credence. This is a point that too few realize. It is not fine writing, but simple and direct writing that strikes closest to home. The cards also carried a list of coming attractions, but this is the essential part:

> We want the people of Murphysboro to know that we greatly appreciate and value their good will and patronage. We want them to feel that they have an interest in this theater, that it is theirs to use and enjoy, and that we are always glad to hear their suggestions and friendly criticisms.
> We endeavor to show only the best pictures obtainable. We have tried to make the theatre pleasant for everybody. We have a ladies' dressing room on the right as you walk out. It has every convenience, including sanitary paper towels, lavatory and mirrors. If you come in dirty or dustry from an auto ride, don't fail to take advantage of it.
> If you have company, entertain them here. Use our telephone. Make yourselves at home. This theatre and its conveniences are at your service.

That means something when you read it. Note particularly the emphasis given the conveniences afforded by the wash rooms to motorists and the general service idea in the past paragraph. That means as much if not more than a five reel feature, for it is something that is always at the disposal of the patron.

For the Program.

L. F. Guimond, of the Lyceum, Monticello, N. Y., had an extra good bill lately and he wrote a running story to cover the two weeks. His leader is decidedly clever and with a little alteration can be worked to fit any house with an exceptionally good program. It is set with a scare head and reads:

GUILTY!

CONVICTION SECURED AGAINST THE LYCEUM MANAGEMENT.

Accused of Having Booked a Program for the Forthcoming Two Weeks of Such Uniform Excellence That Theatregoers Cannot Afford to Miss a Single Evening—District Attorney Demands an Occasional Poor Feature.

Practically No Defense Is Offered and Defendant Is Sentenced to Capacity Business for Twelve Days.

Coincident with the publication of the program to be given at the Lyceum theater for the next two weeks comes the announcement that the management of that theater has been accused, tried, convicted and sentenced in the Court of General Public, Judge I. M. A. Fann presiding, for having secured a series of pictures for the next two weeks which will practically force Monticello residents to be away from home every evening. It was held that the Lyceum should book an occasional poor subject and thus afford an opportunity to its patrons to stay home and catch up with the fashion magazine and war news.

The well-known attorney I. C. M. Awl appeared as plaintiff and presented a strong case. As soon as the jury was empanelled Mr. Awl stated that he did not intend to call any witnesses as the facts in the case were general knowledge and indisputable evidence. The gist of his masterly indictment was as follows:

"While any normally constituted human in the average community expects to attend two or three motion picture shows each week and would consider it a direct deprivation were this privilege withheld, it has nevertheless been the custom for everyone to exercise the power of selection in the singling out of these nights of attendance. But we are now facing a condition where this prerogative is actually denied us because we are being confronted with twelve programs of such uniform excellence that the temptation to attend them all is irresistible.

"I have studied this case carefully and have decided that the best evidence I can offer to secure a conviction is a resume of the Lyceum program for the period named and after analyzing this program I shall be content to rest my case, feeling certain that the jury will have no difficulty in agreeing that the charge is well founded."

Continuing the fiction of a summing up, the supposed attorney takes up the program day by day to show the enormity of the offense, hammering home the fact that there is no let up for the entire two weeks. It is cleverly done because kept in character throughout.

A Good Starter.

S. A. Xippas, of the Tri-City Amusement Co., issued invitations to a musical when he launched the Marcello at Hopewell, W. Va., recently. The invitation is a still paper 6 by 10 inches folded two and a half; that is the third section comes but halfway over its opposite when the folder is closed. One page gives the invitation and the other shows a hand-tinted photograph in a printed frame, loose mounted. It would have been more effective had similar portraits of photo stars been used instead of an ideal face and the Kraus and other companies have these on sale. The invitation was accompanied by an admission card to give quite a swagger air to the function. It's a good way to give a house the proper start. It gets the right people in their first. The others will follow. This is particularly true of the south. It pays to spend a little extra time and money on the opening announcement, as Mr. Xippas seems to know.

Too General.

The Photoplay World, a publication printed in Chicago, is being gotten out apparently, for the use of house managers who cannot get out their own organ. The sample sent in gives the program of the Lyric, Delphos, Ind. The issue is a sixteen-page sheet, about 5 by 8 inches, white stock and blue ink. The house gets only the back page. This is useful for a management that wants to sidestep trouble, for it is a well edited sheet of photoplay news and press stuff, but in a six-day program, only one feature, a serial, is mentioned in the body of the sheet. It is a good thing to interest patrons in plays and players generally, but it is better still to get their interest in your house, its advantages and comforts and the films that will be seen on the house's screen. We like better that form of ready made program that has pick-up program pages to fit any house program, and we like even more the all home-edited organ that can be given an intimate touch that no strange editor can ever give. A general organ must, perforce, be general. The house organ is valuable only in that precise degree in which the editor is able to establish an intimacy with his reader. We never met George Editor Carpenter or Tom North, but we feel that we know them and we take a personal interest in their doings because their house organs are so well done. It is the same with L. J. Scott and others. And it works with the patron in the same way. Use your sheet to advertise your house, to get in touch with your patrons rather than to advertise some one else's films.

Two Programs.

W. E. L. Reeger, of Mt. Carmel, Pa., sends in two programs for comment. He runs three houses, but he sends programs from but two. One, for the Theatorium, is a Hennegan cover with the layout recently commented upon. The printer has used an ink that spreads a little and looks too black and forbidding. It is a veritable typographical frown. Blackness is a good quality in pasted paper, but not for program work and we think that some of the women patrons will fear to soil their light gloves handling the inky looking sheet. There is too much ink in the fountains and several days after it came from the press the job still smears under slight pressure. The printer should be scolded. Sometimes when they cannot get a good impression the printer will increase his ink and paint instead of print. It is a sloppy plan and it hurts the house—which is the innocent bystander—because people shun the programs.

In contrast the other job is a plain white paper well printed and well set for the greater part, with a neat border and small but distinct type. It is only a four by six, but it makes a better impression and, with a good average of patrons should draw more money because it is something that patrons will handle and read.

It may not wholly be the printer's fault. It may be that he was stuck for the right sort of ink to use in a hurry and had to do the best he could with what he had on hand, but he can, at least, be persuaded to use a lighter body type. It will be clearer, prettier and more legible. Mere blackness does not bring display and full face should be reserved for emphasis and not used as a body type. It pays to work in with the printer and even to try to educate him, if necessary. If Mr. Reeger will take the Valentine job over to the other man, he'll probably get the idea and save some ink.

George Editor, Manager.

It has taken a long time to coax George Editor Carpenter to show what he has been doing as the manager of the Paramount Empress, Salt Lake City. With Real Reels all are familiar, but he was almost secretive about his doings as house manager—for he has been living a double life for a long time now. One of his latest is the Children's Matinee. Of course he turned to the societies for help on this. He could run a kid matinee with one hand while he wrote editorials for Real Reels with the other, but he knows the value of getting others interested and he got the co-operation of the Home and School league. Two thousand tickets were sold in twenty minutes at the first of these and a lot of kiddies were turned away, with the result that seats will be sold in advance hereafter in the hope of avoiding the crush that required police control. The performances are given every Saturday morning and fifty members of the league serve as chaperones, scattering through the auditorium and preserving order.

A mail folder 2½ by 3½ is printed in red with "For Men Only." Inside the third page carries the Paramount trade-mark and the fourth urges:

Don't fail to take your wife, Mother, Sister or Children to the Paramount Empress theater. Safe, Sane and Satisfactory.

This is printed in heavy type, save for the concluding slogan, and with the rule border. It stands out so you cannot well overlook it. It is just a variant to the "I dare you to take this home to your wife," but it is a good piece of work.

We would be ashamed if we had to admit that after all the nice things we have said about him he did not do good newspaper work, but we do not have to be ashamed. The two advertisements shown in the reproduction do not show well what he is doing, but they will suggest something of his style. We like particularly the bordered advertisement, which fairly sticks up from the page. In the other the cut is depended upon to gain the attention. The former seems to be a stock Paramount frame. If it is, it should interest Paramount exhibitors, for although it is only three nines it gets a better display than would the average four tens. The larger advertisement is four nines. And wherever there is mention of pictures in the paper, the theater gets the best of it with well-written stuff. Now that we have induced George Editor to break his managerial silence, we hope he keeps on coming. He knows how and can help others than the Notable Features clients.

Patriotic.

The American, Idaho Falls, Idaho, gets out a 6 by 9 program with the front in red and blue, which makes the tri-color on the white stock. Inside the imprint is in blue on white. It is a monthly, and with three changes a week gives each change a full page, mostly original text. The foreign advertising is confined to three cover pages and does not intrude on the house matter; a good arrangement in a program of this size. It would be better to make the twelve-page insert a sixteen and run some house stuff, as well. This would help enough to pay for the extra cost, though one or two pages might be laid off in additional foreign advertising, if the town can stand it. Apart from this lack, it is neat and business-like clear through.

Hustling.

Either the Denver branch of the Kleine company is more alert than the rest or it is less stingy with its postage stamps. It was this exchange that recently contributed the hunting license, and now they offer a flyer for the Selig baseball picture of the World Series games. All exchanges probably advertise this feature, but the Denver end borrowed a cut from one of the local papers, a baseball cartoon that fits into the scheme of things, and gets a better display than the rest without the expense of having a drawing made. It does pay to stay awake.

A NEW HELP FOR MANAGERS

Picture Theatre Advertising

By EPES WINTHROP SARGENT (Conductor of Advertising for Exhibitors in the Moving Picture World)

A TEXT BOOK AND A HAND BOOK, a compendium and a guide. It tells all about advertising, about type and type-setting, printing and paper, how to run a house program, how to frame your newspaper advertisements, how to write form letters, posters or throwaways, how to make your house an advertisement, how to get matinee business, special schemes for hot weather and rainy days. All practical because it has helped others. It will help you. By mail, postpaid, $2.00. Order from nearest office.

INQUIRIES.

Questions concerning photoplay writing addressed to this department will be replied to by mail if a fully addressed and stamped envelope accompanies the letter, which should be addressed to this department. Questions should be stated clearly and should be typewritten or written with pen and ink. Under no circumstances will manuscripts or synopses be criticised, whether or not a fee is sent therefor.

A list of companies will be sent if the request is made to the paper direct and not to this department, and a return stamped envelope is inclosed.

Looks Bad, But—

SUPPOSE that you had sat in front of your typewriter and had thought and thought until you had an idea that looked something like this:

> Rose wants a diamond ring, and Harry swears that he is too poor to buy her one. Only the munitions makers are coining cash, and he is selling books gotten out by the peace society. Then Rose shows up with a ring and Harry gets jealous, but she assures him that it is only paste and that she paid three dollars for it. Harry falls for it, but one afternoon he sees her slip a man on the street some money. Another day she is seen pleading with him. Harry gets more suspicious than ever. The next morning he takes the ring from the dresser before she is up, and when she asks about it, he says he has not seen it. To quiet her he gets her another paste ring that costs only $2.50. He takes the ring to a jeweler and finds that it is worth about $150. Then he gets a gun and goes after the wrecker of his home. The wrecker pleads for his life and explains that he sells diamonds on the instalment plan and that Rose pays him $2 a week, and to avoid Harry seeing she meets him on the street corner every Friday afternoon. There is $68 to go. Harry feels pretty cheap—and business has been good lately. The next Friday afternoon Rose turns up with the $2, for she must keep up the instalments or be found out. Harry steps up and takes the $2, looks at the ring and throws it away. Then he hands her the real ring as a fine for his suspicions.

And then suppose that a couple of months later you picked up a copy of The Moving Picture World for October 14, and on page 289 saw a story like this:

> A GRAIN OF SUSPICION (Oct. 4)—Mrs. Love (Rosemary Theby) sees a bargain in real estate and decides to surprise her hubby (Harry Myers) by purchasing it and paying for it with her own money. The real estate man calls regularly to collect his payments and upon several of these occasions he is seen by hubby, who, not knowing who he is, gets jealous. He decides not to say anything about it to his wife, who decides to say nothing to her husband until the lot is paid for. The continued visits of the real estate man annoys hubby and he decides to put a detective on the case. The detective gets working; he goes to the office of the real estate man and obtains a good look at him; he then decides to spy around the house. He sees the collector call for his regular instalment and notifies hubby that the mouse is in the trap. He enters the house and arrests the real estate man, much to the surprise of his wife. Hubby comes in and when he is acquainted with the facts in the case he pleads for forgiveness. Wifey forgives him.

Wouldn't you think that there had been something happening, and wouldn't you look up your record to see if your script had been sent Harry Myers, and if you found it had not, wouldn't you think that someone you had sent it to had stolen the story and sent it for sale elsewhere? To be sure you would.

The first story was written by the editor of this department on August 15. The starting point was de Maupassant's "The Necklace." Reversing the original, gave a real stone supposed to be paste instead of paste taken for genuine. To motivate this the instalment scheme was developed. It made a fair synopsis, but it was not sent out, and so there was no possible way in which Mr. Myers or any other person could have had the slightest knowledge of the story. He never saw the story until his own release had been announced and we sent it to him asking for his data. There was in no way, shape, or fashion, the slightest chance for anyone to have stolen the idea, and yet the Myers story came remarkably close to our own. He used real estate instead of a ring, and had slightly less plot, but for all practical purposes the stories were identical, though there was not the slightest possibility that he could have had even an inkling of our story. Even the names are the same, but this is because we use those names for all our stories, following Lloyd Lonergan's scheme of always having the same names to avoid confusion.

It will be noted that this story was written August 15. The story made by Mr. Myers was received by him in June from a writer in Jacksonville, and was one of two stories by the same author taken by him. She had no possible chance of seeing the story we wrote, even if we let our unsold stuff lie around loose, and she wrote hers a couple of months before we got the idea.

Considerable space is given to this incident, not because it is in the least unusual, for not a week passes that there does not occur at least one case of duplication, but in this instant we can say with absolute positiveness that there was not the slightest chance for suspicion. Keep it in mind the next time you think your story was stolen and be less eager to charge theft.

Foredoomed.

Here is an extract from a recent letter to the New York Sun. The writer says:

> In the beginning I want to say that I am not a disappointed scenario writer. In my short literary career I have written two motion picture plays which I prophesied would be rejected. I mailed them to a few producers and my prophecy came true with amazing promptness.

No, he is not a disappointed scenario author He is merely a disappointed ass. He writes two—count 'em—two stories, "knowing" they will be rejected, and then they were. Surely they were. Two isn't a starter even for a real fiction writer, and moreover he went at his task listlessly because he "knew" they were going to be returned. Go at the sales end in the right spirit and after due examination.

From the Shelf.

In studying the market, remember that many companies are "saving" money by releasing stuff from the shelf; subjects made a year or so ago and put aside then as not being good enough to release. Now they are releasing them at the very time they should be putting out only the best and most modern stuff. It is their own funeral, but note the fact and do not accept the present releases as typical of present needs.

Keep Posted.

Knowing where to send stories is as much, if not more, as knowing what to send. You cannot market intelligently unless you keep in touch with affairs. And no one can keep in touch for you. One man may tell you that the Blank is not buying stuff. This may be because he sells them nothing, though he knows that he is sending in good stories. Another man may have the inside track because he sends just what is wanted, and he will declare that Blank is buying. He cannot tell just what it is that they are buying, but he has found that they buy his material, and he found it out by experimenting. The papers cannot give a list of wants, because these are so constantly changing. They can annouce new markets or tell of the closing of old ones, but they cannot say that the Blank now wants five-reel dramas with a seashore local, because the Blank editor may have bought a dozen the week before, and so be out of the market for these at the moment. On the other hand if it is repeatedly said that the Dash company has announced that it is not in the market, it is absurd to send them scripts, and yet just the other day a correspondent wrote of sending to a company that has not purchased a script in more than two years except by special arrangement.

Do It Anyhow.

Seeking the light, a correspondent asks if it is not a waste of time to prepare a continuity, knowing that the director will not follow the author's sequence of scenes. It is not a waste of time. It is a waste of opportunity not to. It is to be presumed that an author wants to stay around for a time. Even if the director does not use his continuity, the author needs to develop the story by scenes to gain his own knowledge of photoplay. Even where companies advertise that they will accept only the synopsis, it will pay to write the continuity for practise. It is the only way in which photoplay construction and development can be learned, and time is never wasted that is used to make you more proficient in your business. You cannot "see" your story in the synopsis. You must make a continuity before you can know yourself what you have in the plot. It is only a matter of time when the author's continuity will be demanded. Be prepared for the coming of that time.

Suiting the Crime.

Hell may be paved with good intentions, but the suite reserved for editors is carpeted with onion skin paper.

Manufacturer's Notice.

IT is an established rule of this department that no apparatus or other goods will be endorsed or recommended editorially until the excellence of such articles has been demonstrated to its editor.

Important Notice.

Owing to the mass of matter awaiting publication it is impossible to reply through the department in less than two or three weeks. In order to give prompt service, those sending four cents, stamps, (less than actual cost) will receive carbon copy of department reply, by mail, without delay. Special replies by mail on matters which cannot be replied to in the department, one dollar.

Both the first and second set of questions are now ready and printed in neat booklet form, the second half being seventy-six in number. Either booklet may be had by remitting 25 cents, money or stamps, to the editor, or both for 40 cents. Cannot use Canadian stamps. Every live, progressive operator should get a copy of these questions. You may be surprised at the number of them you cannot answer without a lot of study.

Question No. 164.

What advantage is there in the auto-transformer as against the straight two-coil transformer?

Roll of Honor on Question No. 154.

The Roll of Honor on Question 154 consists of the following: M. M. Moon, Sherman, Texas; Wilson Hays, Barton, Md.; W. B. Allen, Edmonton, Canada; F. F. Bell, Palestine, Texas; G. A. Yager, Anadarko, Okla.; J. H. Marchand, Baton Rouge, La.

I have selected the reply of Brother Moon for publication as being the most complete of any.

Reply to Question No. 154.

By M. M. Moon, Sherman, Texas.

The Question:

What is for and against a large picture—say above 17 feet?

The Answer:

There are, in my opinion, very few things to be said in favor of the large picture. The size of the picture, within certain limits, usually depends upon local conditions, such as the width, length and heighth of the auditorium.

A picture of goodly size is more desirable in a large auditorium, especially when the screen is located on a large stage, because a small picture seems to be out of proportion. Another advantage of the large picture is that those sitting in the rear seats will be able to clearly see the faces of the actors, which is important since in the silent drama very much often depends upon the facial expression, the glance of an eye or some movement of the feature, which may change the whole meaning of the story.

And now I will endeavor to set forth some things against a large picture. Every defect in the photography, every movement of the film and every scratch mark and jump is increased in size in direct proportion to that of the picture. The light strength must be rapidly increased if the brilliancy of the large picture is to equal that of the small one. You will therefore see that a large picture is either costly in current consumption, or there must be a sacrifice in brilliancy. A large picture will cause excessive eye strain to those seated near it, a short throw will cause elongation of the faces and figures and a distortion of the picture. A picture should always look natural, and when a large picture is used the action and actors are out of proportion, thus making for unnaturalness.

Change in Trip Itinerary.

It has finally been decided that the time of leaving on the southern western and northern trip will be delayed until March 1st, which date is now officially set.

The reason for the second delay lies in the fact that there have been so many demands for extra stops that the trip has lengthened beyond our expectations so far as the item of time be concerned. It has developed that it may be necessary to go as far north as Calgary and Edmonton Alberta and if departure is made in January as originally planned, I will arrive up in that country just at the very worst time of the year when there would more than likely be snow blockades or at least very disagreeable weather. I could stand the disagreeable end of it but the snow blockades would be very bad indeed as they would disarrange the whole remaining itinerary, and cause an endless amount of trouble.

For these reasons it has been finally decided that I will leave New York March 1st. This, so far as the south be concerned, will result about as follows, with the understanding that the dates given are not exact, because not all the stops are not yet definitely decided upon:

Richmond, Va., March 1st; Raleigh, N. C., March 2nd; Durham, N. C., March 3rd; Charlotte, N. C., March 4th, Charleston, S. C., March 5th; Savannah, Ga., March 6th; Miami, Fla., March 8th; Tampa, Fla., March 9th; Macon, Ga., March 11th; Atlanta, Ga., March 12th; Chattanooga, Tenn., March 13th; Knoxville, Tenn., March 14th; Cincinnati, O., March 15th; Louisville, Ky., March 16th; Evansville, Ind., March 17th; Nashville, Tenn., March 19th; Montgomery, Ala., March 20th; Mobile, Ala., March 21st; New Orleans, La., March 22nd, Jackson, Miss., March 23rd; Memphis, Tenn., March 24th; Little Rock, Ark., March 26th. This will put us into Fort Worth, Tex., about April 5th.

Now don't make the mistake of supposing these dates are final, because they are only approximate. The exact date will be given each city at least fifteen days in advance. That I will start on the trip March 1st, however, is definitely settled, and nothing will change that except things beyond human control.

From Illinois.

H. W. Burkitt, Morrison, Ill., sends in 40 cents for the two question booklets, answers "The Problem," August 12th issue, and says:

> I have the second and third editions of the Handbook; also I read the department. If it were not for them projection certainly would be up against a bad state of affairs. My hand books are not for sale at any price, and I don't see how I could get along without the department. The department and the Handbooks are what makes my job a real job. Recently I paid a visit to Freeport (Presumably Illinois. Ed.) where I found projection to be on the up-grade. The best theater, The Strand, puts on a good picture, though they have the keystone effect, with its inevitable accompaniment of distortion. The screen sets in a sort of frame, and the frame is light colored, which does not set off the picture properly, and makes it look out of frame at the top. The operator, I was told, receives $21.00 per week, and apparently he was on the job though he might correct these two faults. (Don't be too sure about that, Brother Burkitt, possibly, yes, even probably the manager would not allow him to do the things necessary to correct the two defects named. Ed.) The theater just across the street from the Strand, the Superba I think it is, puts on a good picture, but at least during the time I was in the theater the operator was decidedly careless about framing, and with regard to his light. The picture itself is steady and clear. I have just finished a month's job, making a "flasher" and "chaser" for our new sign. It works like a charm. Will send in a photograph of it later, as I would like to have your opinion with regard to it. Then too I have a feather in my cap, although I am still and always will be working for a better picture, in that visitors from the Tri-Cities tell the boss our picture is as good, or even better than any they have seen in Rock Island, Davenport, or Moline. Perhaps they are not good judges, but nevertheless it sounded good to me, particularly in view of the fact that I am using 60 cycle, single phase A. C., pulling 60 amperes through a Bell & Howell compensarc. And now right at the tail end of this communication I want to wish you all the success you deserve, which is a "heap," for your wonderful work in the Handbook and for the excellence and popularity of our department.

I have not published your reply to "The Problem, Brother Burkitt, because of the fact it was almost identical with one already published. I shall be glad to have the photographs and description of the "flasher" and "chaser." As to your remarks with regard to the theater across the street from the Strand in Freeport, they ought to be a lesson to the operator in that house. One cannot afford to be careless for a single moment, because we never can tell at what particular time some one is going to be among the audience whom it will not be well to have witness any faults in the projection.

Of course it may be that this particular operator is obliged to rewind film, thread the other machine and do other stunts while projecting the picture, and if he has, that to some extent would act as an excuse for the faults mentioned, and would put the matter up to the manager of the house.

With regard to your projection, if you are putting on that kind of picture with 60 amperes A. C., quite evidently you understand your business, because I am told there is some very good projection in Davenport, Rock Island, and Moline. I will visit those cities some time next spring—I hope at any rate, and perhaps at that time you may be able to come over and attend the lecture.

Chicago Again.

Word comes from the Windy City that theaters are being injured by explosions, and that this is probably due to the war which has for a long time past been waged between Local Union 110 and the I. B. E. W. Union of operators. We would be loth to credit any such report, but for the fact that this is not the first time Chicago theaters have been wrecked and there is no manner of question but that the outrages were committed by "strong arm" committees.

Now this department is absolutely and unalterably opposed to methods of this kind. In the first place as we have before pointed out, they are cowardly. It is not a very brave act to sneak around in the dead of night and wreck a theater, or place a dynamite bomb against its walls. The act, however, becomes peculiarly and particularly reprehensible when it is the result, as it is claimed is the case now, of a warfare between two unions, with which battle the manager is in no wise concerned, provided he pays the highest union scale for his class of work.

This department is, as its editor has literally hundreds of times said, a firm believer in organization. This department has been the direct means of forming quite a considerable number of locals, all of which, according to letters received and on file from the International officers, are doing well. More than this, union organizers have admitted, in writing, to the editor of this department that the organization of the operators has been made from 50 to 75 per cent. easier and more effective by reason of the work of this department. It favors the International Association of Theatrical Stage Employes because the operators are organized thereunder, and are, as a general proposition, doing perhaps as well, or perhaps even better than they would have done had they originally been taken under the wing of the I. B. E. W. More than that, inasmuch as the I. A. T. S. E. took up cudgels for the operator at a time when they were very weak, and at a time when the financial returns were far, far below the expenditures, and has brought the organization of the operator to a point where they are now financially self sustaining, it would be acting the part of rank ingratitude to even for one moment consider switching over to the I. B. E. W. at this late date. If, later on, after the I. A. T. S. E. has been repaid the money it has put into the organization of the operator, the operator thinks he will be better off in an independent international of his own, why that will be something else again. At this time, however, no such thing ought to be even considered, and most certainly the I. B. E. W. has absolutely no claim whatsoever to the operator, nor can the operator consistently change to that organization. Therefore such Chicago operators as have affiliated with the I. B. E. W. have done a thing which is distinctly and decidedly wrong, from any and every point of view.

I can, of course, smypathize to some extent with them, in view of the fact that the Chicago operators local leadership has been such as to bring distinct discredit upon the Chicago operators as a whole, and to bring about a feeling of resentment on the part of many Chicago men. I have never, however, believed in getting outside of a house in order to clean it's interior. I am a firm believer in cleaning house from the inside, and would earnestly advise those Chicago men who have affiliated with the I. B. E. W. to get into the I. A. where they belong, and conduct their warfare against the things they object to from the inside. But, however that may be, there certainly cannot be any possible excuse for dragging the Chicago manager into what amounts to a fight amongst Chicago operators themselves.

Not Good.

J. Hartzen, Minneapolis, Minn., gives the editor a good, warm roast with regard to the projection in one of our leading New York theaters. He says, in part: "I don't see where you get off at to brag about projection in New York, when one of your leading theaters gives projection which we up here would consider as being of no particular credit to a nickelodon."

Brother Hartzen you cannot look back through the projection department and find where I have ever bragged about New York projection or ever recommended the projection in the house you speak of, as a matter of fact I don't recommend it; more than that I consider it decidedly punk, even though the house be one of the finest in New York City.

You must remember that it requires something more than a fine orchestra, comfortable seats, and a fine building to put a good picture on the screen. For one thing the house in question races the film, and there are other faults as well. And anyhow you should not land on me. You should have taken the matter up with the manager of the theater, though according to my own experience that is all the good it would have done you. He would probably simply have told you that you didn't know anything, and that would be the sum and substance of your accomplishment.

Constant Reader.

South Carolina, says:

> Although this is my first letter I have been a constant reader of the department for years. My primary object in writing is to order one of the new Handbooks, for which find money order enclosed. I do, however, wish to say a few words with regard to speed. Why is it so many managers seem to think it necessary to shoot a reel through the machine in seven, eight, or nine minutes, thus absolutely ruining the screen result? I have visited other cities, and always try to drop in and see the pictures, for I feel if they have a better screen result than I, I may get some suggestion which will be of value to me in my work. On the other hand if my own picture is the best it makes me feel good. I am genuinely sorry to say, however, in the majority of cases I have always found fault with the speed. I thoroughly agree with you and the producers who say all their time and trouble go for naught when some operator shoots the picture through like a comet. Nothing makes me more angry than to see that particular performance, which I am glad to say is something which never occurs in my house. I have trained the operator myself, and the pictures here are projected correctly. We could not afford, in this small town, to employ a first class fan, therefore I was obliged to train one, and I am proud of my job, because I have had many sincere compliments from traveling film men, managers, and others who see pictures in larger cities and are therefore in position to judge. When I took charge of this house, The Temple, it was in bad shape, but I have rebuilt its reputation on the quality of my pictures and on the quality of projection. I have myself had something like four years' actual experience in operating, and am thoroughly acquainted with the fact that the picture is the real heart of the whole theater. In the year I have been here I have had but one complaint of over-speeding, and that from a lady who mistook a scene with fast tempo for over-speeding. I have derived a great deal of knowledge from the third edition of the Handbook and the department is a continual source of information. Just now I am having a little trouble in getting a clear screen, and want some advice. Projectors are Simplex with a 5½ inch objective, one 6½ and one 7½ inch condenser, projecting a 10 foot 6 inch picture at 70 feet, pulling 40 amperes of 110 volt current through a Fort Wayne compensarc. I get a dark line across the screen unless I freeze the carbons. Have consulted the table, and find my lens system to be correct; also have tried altering the distance of the condenser from the film. When I use 60 amperes and carry a large spot the line almost disappears, though you can detect it by adjusting the carbons a little. In closing, I would like to know what is the nearest point at which you will lecture on your southern trip, as I wish to be present unless the distance is prohibitive. I also wish to extend you a most cordial invitation to visit Hartsville and see "The Temple," although I know that is probably out of the question.

Brother Cobb I think your principal trouble lies in the fact that your lamp has not sufficient angle. The dark line across the screen probably shows the division between the light from the two craters. Try giving your lamp more angle, and if you are using 40 amperes, also after you have angled the lamp more, try using ½ inch cored carbon below with a ⅝ inch cored above. I am not going to say that will work well, but try it. If the angling of the lamp does not remedy your difficulty—but we will cross that stream when we come to it. I think it will. I have given your letter space because it is a chatty, interesting communication, and, coming from a small town man who is delivering the goods, it will or should be of interest to other small town men. As to why theater managers over-speed the picture—well it is a question I do not think any one can answer. Certainly the manager who does it could not give an intelligent reply himself, or rather could not give a reply which one could not tear to pieces by applying just a little argumentive reasoning to it. This department has always condemned over-speeding the film, and so long as I am at its head it will always continue to do so.

As the plans now are it is my expectation to lecture in Columbia, Charleston, and Savannah; also probably in Charlotte, N. C., though Charleston and Savannah are the only ones of the four places definitely settled upon as yet. From the map I should say that Charlotte and Columbia would be about the same distance from you, and I think it is practically certain I will lecture in one of those places, if not in both.

Adjusting the Powers Intermittent.

John Collins, St. Louis, Mo., writes:

> Will you kindly give me directions for adjusting the Powers intermittent movement? It seems to be a simple enough proposition, but I don't get the right results.

If you have the third edition of the Handbook, Brother Collins, turn to Plate 2, Page 496, and loosen screws 723 and 743, which hold the right and left hand eccentric bushings. In the face of the bushing next the oil well you will find a hole designed to receive the end of a small steel punch or a heavy wire nail. The right hand bushing is turned by means of a screw-driver slot in its end. The revolving of the bushings tightens or loosens the cross pins against the cam. Revolving clockwise as you face the fly wheel tightens; the opposite, of course, loosens, but bear in mind the fact that you must revolve each bushing precisely the same amount, or you will get your intermittent sprocket out of level, and thus throw the strain all on one side of the sprocket holes and sprocket teeth, which will be very bad for both film and sprocket teeth. Adjustment of the intermittent should only be made while the machine is in motion, but it should be done very carefully, because otherwise you are liable to bring it up with a jerk, locking the whole intermittent tightly, and do a great deal of damage, even to the possibility of breaking off one of the pins of the cross. The intermittent should preferably be adjusted while the machine is warm, that is to say, after it has projected a picture.

In this connection, let me warn operators not to fill the Powers intermittent oil casing with oil while the machine is running, because if you do, the intermittent is apt to suck the oil up so that you will fill the whole casing practically full, or at least get a great deal more in than you should, and when the machine stops the surplus oil will leak out around the bushings. The tendency of operators to put oil in the Powers intermittent while the machine is running is responsible for a great deal of oily film. Never put oil in the Powers intermittent casing except when the machine is standing still.

He is Kidding Me.

From Victoria, B. C., comes a letter attached to which is a clipping of an advertisement of "Richardson's Handbook of Complete Instructions in All Branches of Crochet, Tatting and Fillet Work." The good brother, who signs himself "An Old Grinder," says he is glad to see that we have won promotion. He wishes me success in my new line of endeavor.

No, Brother O. G., I have not gone into the crocheting business yet. The nearest I have come to it is trying to unravel some of the crocheted arguments put up by the various writers on light rays and the lens system.

Transformer Trouble.

R. E. Wicker, Pinehurst, N. C., says:

> We have been using 133 cycle, 220 volt current through a Fort Wayne compensator, but have had 60-cycle thrust upon us and now the compensator gives me more juice than I can handle. Am going to put some resistance in the primary and try that. We have a 5 K.W., 110-volt D.C. generator (Lincoln), which is part of a 550-volt-110-volt motor generator set, on the base of which I wish to place a 220-volt, 60-cycle motor direct connected. I am assured by one concern that I can cut in field resistance, step down the voltage to 60 volts and get 2.7 K.W. without danger of overheating the armature; also I am assured with equal sincerity by another concern that the armature would not only heat but burn up. What really would happen? If I cannot do this then I shall have to use the regular Powers rheostat, in which case would a 4-H.P. motor pull my arc alone?

I could not tell you exactly what would happen, since that might depend upon the type of construction of the generator, but if you cut in sufficient field resistance to compel any generator wound for 110 volts to operate at 60 volts I do not think there is any doubt but that you would have trouble. In any event you certainly would not get an efficient operation. In other words, the efficiency of the generator would be reduced to such a very low point that it would, in all human probability pay you better to get a new 60 or 70 volt generator. As to the 4-H.P. motor pulling your arc alone: assuming you run the generator at 110 volts and use 40 amperes, why that would be 4,400 watts, which, divided by 746, gives almost 6 H.P., not counting the loss in the machine itself, which would amount to probably 1½ H.P. Therefore you will readily see that a 4-H.P. motor would not do, unless you were going to use considerably less than 40 amperes. With regard to the transformer delivering too much juice, why put in ¾-inch carbons, and if the transformer does not heat to exceed 40 degrees C. or 72 degrees Fahr. above the surrounding air, you will be all right. As a matter of fact, after you get accustomed to it you won't have any trouble handling the arc, and while it will cost somewhat more you will get a much more brilliant picture. If you are projecting, say, a 16-foot picture in an auditorium illuminated in accordance with modern practice, you ought to have at least 70 amperes A.C. at the arc, and 80 would be still better.

An Old Timer.

H. S. Klink, Canton, Ohio, one of the old-time correspondents of the department, who has been back in the back end of his hole, with the entrance plugged up, for quite some considerable time, comes forward with the following:

> Well, friend, it is a long time since you have received anything from me, but at last here is one which might be of some value to some one. It certainly has helped me. It is a little signal designed to tell when the reel in the upper magazine is almost empty, and thus give the operator time to light his second machine and get his light steady for the next reel. I have been using it for approximately a year, and it is never necessary to open the top magazine while the machine is running, as it is set to ring a buzzer about 150 feet from the end of the film. I am using two of the latest models Motiograph machines, and certainly have a world of praise for them. They do just what the makers say they will do—produce a rock steady, flickerless picture.

> Tube A has a slot cut from notch F to contact screw D which forms a guide for pin C. When magazine is empty you raise the plunger to the top and fasten pin C in slot F, which holds it from falling down. Then when you put another reel in you release the plunger which allows the fibre roller to run on the film, and as the reel empties the plunger continues moving down until pin C makes contact on screw D, thereby closing the circuit and ringing a buzzer which is connected to it, one wire being connected to screw D, which is insulated from the tube, and the other wire you can ground to any part of the machine.
> Glad to hear from you again, Brother Klink. Devices of this kind have been illustrated in the department several times, though not lately; quite possibly yours is better than the others anyhow. And now don't forget that the latch string is hanging out, waving around in the breeze and inviting you to use the department any old time you feel like it. We don't care to have our friends absent for a couple of years at a clip. Nope, we don't like it at all.

All Signed Up.

C. M. Fox, chairman Press Committee, Local Union No 330, Fort Worth, Texas, says:

> All theaters in Fort Worth, with the exception of the 1st have signed our contract, and have also all the Chlumo theaters, and everything is going very harmoniously for Local 330, with the best wage scale in the state, and the eight-hour day in effect. All the men are working and there is some extra work occasionally. With the exception of the above named theater, we are 100 per cent strong, and we have hopes that the 1st will be with us in the not distant future. We have Sunday shows for the present, but it is a very feverish proposition, also it is very uncertain, as two of the proprietors have been fined pretty strong in the Tarrant County Criminal Court. Only one has thus far escaped, he having been acquitted by the jury. This is about all of any interest, except that all of the boys of 330 are a wide-awake, progressive bunch, who are trying to better themselves and their local union.

All of which is good. I am glad to know the Fort Worth men are progressive, and expect to have the pleasure of forming their acquaintance next winter. As to closing the Sunday shows, why it is an idiotic proposition. There are so many dear souls who want the laboring man to work like a slave all week and then deny him the privilege of going to a show on the one day he has to go. I am a firm believer in the Sunday show, with proper provision made, of course, for a six-day week for the theatrical employes, including the operator.

Prosperity for the South.

R. T. Megibben, Cleveland, Miss., has ordered a new Minusa screen for his theater, which latter he has enlarged so that the seating capacity will me 342. He says:

> Our people are getting good prices for cotton, which means business for everybody in the South. All I lacked in having an up-to-date house was the screen. I looked over one of the Minusas at the Princess while in Memphis recently, and it certainly is some screen. I won't be satisfied until I get one like it. The house is 38 feet wide, but is only 16 feet high; the throw is 75 feet. The screen frame measures 11x14 feet.

We are very glad to know that the Southland is to have her share of prosperity. Certainly good prices for cotton means good times in the South. I presume the gentleman's enthusiasm for the Minusa screen will cause deep anger and chagrin at the office of the Minusa Cine Products Company, St. Louis—not. But let me caution you to follow instructions of the manufacturer to the last detail in installing the screen.

Up for Manslaughter.

W. B. Allen, Edmonton, Canada, sends in reply to question 154, and writes:

> I never miss reading about your trips to different places. It is very interesting. I only wish you could get as far inland as Edmonton, but suppose that would be very expensive. Should you, however, manage to visit us, just let us know and we certainly will make you feel at home. The town is in very real need of a few "Richardson talks." It would wake up some of those "know-it-alls," and possibly show them their need for study. If, however, you have a weak heart, or anything like that, just let us know, for there are one or two "operating rooms" (?). I would not like to show any one who is subject to heart failure, lest they have me up for manslaughter. In closing I wish both yourself and the department all manner of success, also I trust the Handbook is enjoying a good sale.

Yes, Brother Allen, the sale of the Handbook is very satisfactory. But I would like to see the book in the hands of every operator and manager in the United States and Canada because there is not one of them who could not profit for more than four dollars' worth from its study. Why, it is no uncommon thing for me to refer to it myself when memory refuses to recall certain things in sufficient detail.

I wish Edmonton were not so far out of the way. I would like to visit your city, but, as you say, it would be pretty expensive, and I am afraid for that reason it is out of the question.

Two-Headed Idea.

From Missouri comes the following:

> In September, 16th inst., page 1828, I see an argument concerning the one and three thousand foot reel, in which it is said that in changing over from one machine to the other most theaters burn both arcs for a period of time, which consumes considerable additional current and carbon. Now it strikes me this can be obviated by mounting one lamphouse directly in front of the center of the screen, making the same stationary, then mounting two mechanisms on a sliding way so they can be shifted in front of the condenser, or shifted away from in front of it, the idea being to slide one machine out and the other in, in changing reels. This would save one lamphouse and one motor; also the shifting could be made with but slight flicker on the screen, which has the further advantage that the lens is always directly in line with the center of the screen. And now I would like to say a word with regard to question 145.

I think an operator who cannot stand for the four or five hours he works has but little ambition, and takes but very little interest in his business. No man working at any kind of a machine can do good work sitting down. I, myself, stand ten hours a day, and hope that some day I will be admitted to the St. Louis Union, get the chance to build my own operating room and show the best projection in that city.

I publish the brother's idea with regard to placing the mechanisms rather as a curiosity. It could, of course, be done provided the sliding ways be absolutely mechanically perfect, but on a long throw the least variation would cause trouble; also there would be something considerable more than a "slight flicker" on the screen when changing over. I do not regard the scheme as having practical value.

As to the brother's comment on standing up, why let me tell you, that I could not and would not stand up ten hours, or even six hours under any circumstances. Some men can stand up for even fifteen hours without seemingly experiencing any considerable fatigue, while other men are literally worn out if compelled to be on their feet continuously for even as much as four hours. I am one of the latter. At the end of four hours I would not be able to project a decent picture, or do anything else in a creditable manner.

If it is true that no man can do good work sitting down at a machine, then why do the operatives of high speed sewing machines work seated? Why do locomotive engineers work seated? Why do watchmakers when operating lathes, etc., always work seated, and so on through a long list of machine operatives who do their work sitting and do it well, too?

From New Brunswick.

A. J Mason St. John, N. B., says:

Regarding our trip to Halifax, N. S., September 16, 1916, the invitation to which you no doubt remember, as it was extended to all of us, including yourself and daughter, while we were being cradled on the broad bosom of the St. John (the staunch tug boat acting as the cradle), during your recent visit here. Well, we gathered a goodly number of exchange men, exhibitors, and operators, and, believe me, we did not sleep much going. The fun was too swift for Morpheus to even get a look in. At Turro, eighty miles from Halifax, A. A. Fielding, manager Princess theater, met your scribe, who left the bunch and took his first ride on a Go-Devil, which same was pointed in the direction of Brother Fielding's home. After breakfast I saw and covered more territory in the three hours I remained than I did on the train in the same length of time. I must admit that go-deviling is quite some considerable fun, and Fielding has a dandy Indian, of which he makes good use. After this experience, Fielding and I took the next train to Halifax, where we arrived in time to get to the Board of Trade's rooms for the meeting of exhibitors, exchange men and motion picture operators. Of course, it was really an exhibitors' meeting, and some very live and lively questions were thrashed out, operators and exchange men being excluded from a portion of the meeting. On Saturday evening we visited the theaters, and I must say, business was very good indeed, though some of the theaters have a new bill starting Saturday, which helped some. On the whole I think the Halifax theaters enjoy better business than we do in St. John (Saturday night is not a good night to judge by. You would have to see it on the off nights as well to form an intelligent opinion of that proposition. Ed.) Most of the Halifax theaters, however, carry more vaudeville program than do the St. John houses.

There is one thing in Halifax, however, with which I cannot agree, viz: the size of the picture. They seem to run to big screens over there. One theater in particular had a picture which I am sure must have been 18 feet, with a throw of not over 50 or 60. It looked very poor, and of course was not as sharp as it would have been had it been reduced to 12 or 14 feet; also it lacked brilliancy. I was told the people liked a big picture. In fact, that was the excuse given for the size. Now Brother Richardson I don't want the Halifax boys to think I am a knocker, but I am bound to say that projection in Halifax is not up to the standard. This was the almost universal consensus of opinion among exchange men, visiting operators and managers. I do not think, however, this is by any manner of means altogether the fault of Halifax operators. It seems to be at least partly due to the fact that not all the houses have up-to-date projection apparatus (though some have, to the very general use of A.C.), and to the large picture. No operator can produce first class results with alternating current [illegible] and antiquated or worn projection equipment.

Now they may come back at me and say Mason is himself projecting an 18-foot picture, which is true, but the screen is 20 or 25 feet from the front row of seats, and the back row is 130 feet away, whereas in Halifax these conditions do not exist.

The Nova Scotia operators were in Halifax to take their examination on the 15th, and most of the boys had to go home to allow the managers to attend the convention. The examination, I understand, consisted of about seventy questions, mostly electrical, all written, and I heard they were to be reviewed by the electrical engineer of some college or school, I forget which. I told Mr. Wall, the examiner, that this was not giving the operator a fair chance, since the electrical engineer is not a practical moving picture machine operator, and therefore not competent to judge the operator's ability. In response to this Mr. Wall told me that operators who displayed no knowledge at all would not secure a permit, but others who might improve with a little study would be given a permit and be re-examined later. Those who pass will, of course, receive their license. Well at any rate, I will give Nova Scotia credit for giving a better examination, so far as electrical work be concerned, than New Brunswick. The board in New Brunswick is in a position to go farther with examination, but they don't though I trust that will be changed before long.

On Sunday we enjoyed a fine sail on the North West Arm and in the Harbor, the day being seemingly made for the occasion. We had lots of fun on board, as well as some speeches, and I can tell you I am but expressing the sentiments of them all, when I say we missed your smiling countenance, as well as that of your charming daughter. We trust, however, to have the pleasure of a return visit from you in the not distant future. Every manager and operator who attended our gathering at St. John said the only disappointing part of the program was that your lecture was too short.

A. A. Fielding has a very fine theater in Turro, and has arranged a device for operating two motor-driven heads on one stand with one lamp-house. Fred Betts, of the Lyric, St. John, who is an expert mechanic, is building the attachment, and intends to forward a description to the department.

I will be glad to have it, Brother Mason, though I have discouraged that particular proposition within the two past weeks. I am, nevertheless, always willing to back water if it can be shown I am in the wrong. I am sorry indeed that I could not be with you in Halifax, but trust that some time in the future I may again have the pleasure of meeting the Maritime Province men, because it is but simply a statement of fact to say that they are a whole-souled bunch of men, whose friendship I value very highly. You failed to tell me, Friend Mason, what the operators did with regard to organization.

From the United States Navy.

J. O. Husband, U. S. S. Monocacy, writes from Chungking, China, as follows:

You no doubt will be surprised to hear from an old crank twister, if I can call myself that, away out in this God forsaken country. But I am getting my copy of the good old Moving Picture World now, and want to let you know how greatly I appreciate the department for the good it is doing. It sure is making the boys sit up and take notice. I was reading of your coming trip through the south, particularly to New Orleans. I certainly would like to hear you, as I know it would benefit me greatly. I would particularly like to see your light ray dope. However, I will be out of luck, as my enlistment don't expire until March, which I guess will be too late. I certainly hope the operators in New Orleans receive you in better spirit than some I have read of. I sent in a letter some weeks ago, which was for you, as I had lost my copy of the World. I stated in this letter my experience as an operator which was two years. That period gave me just enough to make me want to learn more. I am going to send for the "bible" (Handbook) when I arrive in Shanghai, which will be some time next month. One cannot secure a money order at this place. Well, pop, I will close. Here is luck to you, and may you have a long and happy life.

Yes, Brother Husband, I sympathize with you all right, all right. I certainly would not like to be penned up on a battle ship away out there. The good, old U. S. A. suits me pretty reasonably well. Sorry you cannot be in New Orleans, but I guess there is no question as to the cordiality of my reception in that city. I suppose from your letter you intend to get back into the game when your enlistment is out. Well the latch string is always out for good men. As to my reception, why it is usually most cordial and very enthusiastic. The unpleasant incidents you speak of are very few and far between. Yes, you will be too late as I will be in New Orleans in the latter part of January.

Conducted by CLARENCE E. SINN and S. M. BERG

Musical Suggestion for "The Devil's Double."

Released by Triangle Film Corp.

Compiled by S. M. Berg.

THIS Musical Suggestion Cue Sheet" is not designed to solve every possible musical requirement of the film, but is intended as a partial solution of the problem what to play for the picture. It has proven to be of great assistance to the leader not only by relieving to a degree the tedium of rehearsals, but by assisting materially in overcoming those conditions encountered when the film is not available until the hour of performance.

Musical Suggestion Cue Sheets can be obtained (free of charge) by managers from their local exchange in advance of the date of release. This will afford to the progressive leader an opportunity to acquaint himself with the general character of the film drama he is to portray with his orchestra.

Together with the suggested music at the title or descriptive cues where it is to be played, the tempo or characteristic is given so that the leader can select or substitute any or all of the numbers from his own library, thereby avoiding any financial outlay though still carrying out the interpretation.

The timing of the picture is based on a speed of 15 minutes to a thousand feet. The time indications will help the leader to anticipate the various cues which may consist of the printed sub-title (marked T) or a described action (marked D). For instance: 22½ T "Sir, my husband is very ill" is a sub-title and is printed reading matter on the screen. But 18½ D "At end of song" is a description of action.

Van Dyke Tarleton, an erratic artist, lacking a model with satanic qualities, leaves for the West with his beautiful wife Naomi. In Tophet, a "tough" border town, he meets "Bowie" Blake, a one-time outlaw, whom he recognizes as just the man for his painting. Through the persuasive efforts of Naomi, whom Blake has learned to love, he becomes her husband's model, but, taunted by the insulting words of Van Dyke to his wife, leaves them. Later, regretting his action, he returns in time to save Naomi from the hands of bandits who have already killed her husband, and the picture closes with the future uplifting of "Bowie" Blake.

The character of this picture is a strong dramatic offering, where heavy, subdued music will be found necessary for the interpretation.

The THEME selected, "Dramatic Tension No. 9"—Andino, will be found to have the characteristics depicting the regeneration of a bad man by the love of a good woman.

Note particularly: Horses' hoofs' effects throughout picture. Short flash of dancing in a Western border dance hall at 7½; organ only according to action (direct cue) of "Love's Old Sweet Song" at 15, shots at 26½, 40 and 57½, fire effects at 44½.

Music Must Be Subordinated to the Picture.

By S. M. Berg.

At the Broadway Theater on October 19, there was presented a special showing of the Metro Pictures Corporation's production of "Romeo and Juliet." Accompanying the picture was a Musical Setting of which I had the honor of synchronizing, and Irenee Berge co-operated with me in the arranging. For this occasion the Broadway Theatre Orchestra, under the direction of Mr. James (Jimmie) Bradford, was considerably augmented, and the film, together with its musical setting, was exhibited to the press and invited guests.

A few days elapsed and at a private showing of a feature picture I encountered a well-known press representative who when I asked him "what he thought of 'Romeoand Juliet'" replied, "a wonderful picture." My further interrogation was "what about the music," and brought forth the reply, "Really, I didn't notice it." As the words passed this jovial person's lips he suddenly realized he was talking to the man who had been responsible for the musical setting, and possibly some apologetic phrase was forming in his mind when I replied: "Many kind words of appreciation have been made upon the musical interpretation of 'Romeo and Juliet,' but it is left to you to unconsciously express the highest form of appreciation yet given it."

Music must and should be subordinated to the picture. Patrons go to a moving picture theater to see pictures. Music is the addition to the picture which turns "silent drama" into "speaking drama." It can and must interpret every emotion, just like the gifted orator plays upon the heartstrings of his audience and moves them from laughter to tears, so should the music intensify and brighten the changing emotions of the screen action. Musicians and managers must realize that the greatest compliment that can be paid a performance in a theater is to hear the departing audience express themselves on the beauties of the picture, entirely forgetting the merits of the music presented.

What percentage of an audience will speak of the projection if it is perfect? But if it is bad, they will complain. They justifiably demand service which covers every adjunct in the theatre presented with the film.

Visit an art gallery and you will possibly notice a crowd standing in silent admiration in front of some artist's masterpiece. Notice the frame which surrounds the picture. It is almost a certainty that much care and thought has been exhibited in the selection of a harmonious design to enshrine the masterpiece. It lends beauty and finish to the painting, but no one admirer gives thought to the purpose of the frame.

In the new wave that is spreading over the country for better musical interpretation for the motion picture, a great deal of care should be taken to sufficiently curb the enthusiasm and to judiciously restrain the music that shall appropriately interpret the film.

THREE EDUCATIONALS.

"Deschutes Driftwood," "Mazamas and the Three Sisters" and "Hans, Henri and the Neophyte" Are Highly Entertaining.

Reviewed by W. Stephen Bush.

THE latest releases of the Educational Films Corporation plainly show that the producer, Robert C. Bruce, has learned a good deal since he began taking scenic pictures. In the matter of direction and assembling his work had always commanded attention, the latest releases show distinct improvement in photography and cleverness in the choice and elaboration of the subjects. The two reels devoted to "Mazamas and the Three Sisters" show the adventures of the "Mazamus," a club of mountaineers which held its annual encampment in August, 1916, in Three Sisters Country in the Cascade Mountains in Oregon at an elevation of 6,200 feet. The reels are rich in lively incidents, humorous situations and scenic beauty.

"Mazamas and the Three Sisters" (Educational Film Corp.).

As in all his other work Mr. Bruce has been particularly happy in his titling, which shows a vein of subtle but striking humor that "gets" over in nine cases out of ten. Equally successful is the reel, "Hans, Henri and the Neophyte," which gives the producer a grand opportunity for daring ventures and funny titles. Hans and Henri, we are told, are two accredited Swiss guides who, owing to scarcity of tourists in their native land, have come over here to pursue their calling in the mountains of Oregon. This picture was taken at an elevation of over eleven thousand feet.

The comedy gem of the trio is "Deschutes Driftwood," which Mr. Bruce tells us is a "scenic picture from a hobo's point of view." The scenes were obtained in the Deschutes Canyon of Central Oregon, the leading man from the County Jail in Portland. It has many laughable incidents, adding life to the purely scenic parts.

THE "STEREO-VITA" LECTURE.

Beseler Educational Film Co. Supplying Manuscript Lecture with Combination Motion Picture and Lantern Slide Program.

THE Beseler Educational Film Co., which for the past six months has represented what in the past was the educational department of the General Film Co., and which is headed by N. R. Delorme, formerly in charge of that department with the General Film Co., is adopting a novel method of supplying illustrated lectures. These lectures on various subjects, such as "Modern New York," "San Francisco and the Yosemite Valley," "The United States Navy," "The Development of the U. S.," "Palestine," "Anthracite Coal," "Florence and Venice," are accompanied by from fifty to one hundred colored slides, and one or two reels of motion pictures, as the case may require, at a nominal rental fee.

This "Stereo-Vita" lecture service, as it is called, will no doubt meet with considerable favor, especially where the services of a regular lecturer are not easily procurable.

GAUMONT CONTRIBUTING TO EDUCATIONALS.

Mutual World Tours Makes Initial Appearance with Interesting Subject Matter.

DURING the past year and a half the Gaumont company has been one of the largest contributors to the educational film market. During that time it has placed before the public three valuable series of educational films. The first of these, commencing in September, 1915, was entitled "See America First," and has been released at weekly intervals since that time, covering the beauty spots and points of historic interest in America, including the chief manufactories, often with detailed illustrations common to those particular cities on which the camera was focused.

The second series, known as "Reel Life," the magazine in film, issued its opening number in May, 1916. This is also a weekly release, and discusses topics of general interest, such as "How Paris Sewers Are Cleaned and Purified," "How Gold Is Mined in Southern Oregon," "Our Grandmother's Method of Handling Wool," "Odd Animals of the Border," etc.

The third Gaumont series, similar to the first mentioned, is a travel series, which made its initial appearance on November 7. It plans to provide pictures of places and people under foreign flags, and is entitled "Mutual Tours Around the World." Its opening number, which is finely tinted throughout, contains views of unusual interest in the Assouan district of the River Nile, including the Assouan Dam, which was completed December 10, 1902. Characteristic Egyptian types at their various occupations of shoemaking, decorating pottery, barbering, water carrying, etc., add to the interest of the reel. Scenes in and about the Galician town of Kamenez-Podolsk form the central portion of the reel, while La Rochelle, France, with its wharves, fish market, fishing fleet and other scenes of interest about this picturesque town, occupy the closing footage of an entertaining and instructive reel.

The Gaumont company is to be congratulated on the valuable part it is playing in the weekly supply of educational film.

PRACTICAL METHODS

As Adopted by the Los Angeles County Bureau of Visual Education.

THE Los Angeles County Bureau of Visual Education is adopting a practical method of acquainting the schools in that vicinity with the best means of obtaining films suitable for purposes of visual instruction and entertainment. This method does not point to the free distribution course, which, by the way, acts much in the capacity of a nail in the coffin of a more extensive production of educational films. On the contrary, it aims at placing the schools in a position to help themselves by putting them in touch with moving picture exchanges in Los Angeles where films of the desired quality may be had.

For this and other purposes a bulletin is distributed among the Los Angeles schools which gives the necessary information as to the cost of installation of projection machines, operation of said machines, reference books and underwriters' regulations. Advice as to safety precautions for schools using moving pictures is also included, as well as a directory of firms handling projection machines, supplies and slides. In addition to this, lists of recommended films are given and the Los Angeles exchanges at which they may be procured, and in each case the address and telephone number of each firm or exchange is recorded. In this bulletin is reflected the "better films for young people" movement, for we find also listed a number of films referred to as being of special interest to children. The bulletin contains much material evidence of the time and thought that has been expended on its preparation by the bureau.

There is much to be commended in this method of procedure as an aid to the educator and a stimulus to the manufacturer. A copy of this bulletin may be had by application to the office of the County Superintendent of Schools, Suite 709, Hall of Records, Los Angeles, Cal.

Essanay Special Features

Will Produce a "Black Cat" Brand of Stories and a Twelve-Part Series for General Film.

GEORGE K. SPOOR, president of Essanay, has just announced two special lines of features to be produced by that company. One will be known by the brand name of the "Black Cat" features and the other will be a series of stories under the general title of "Is Marriage Sacred?"

Mr. Spoor has purchased the rights to 100 special stories which are being put into photoplay form and released through the General Film Company as "Black Cat" features. Each story is complete in itself, bearing no relation to the other stories on the program except that all will have the same distinctive style. Each one of these features will carry a thrilling plot and intense dramatic interest. The screen time of these features will be approximately 33 minutes each.

They will be released every Tuesday beginning with December 5. Mr. Spoor has announced the first four of these features to appear in December as follows: "The Egg," released December 5; "As In a Looking Glass," released December 12; "The Little Brown Mole," released December 19, and "The Girl God Made for Jones," released December 26.

There are two very strong reasons why Mr. Spoor decided to place a distinct brand on these photoplays. The first naturally evolves from the fact that the stories were purchased from the Black Cat magazine, which carries a distinctive style. His other reason is to aid both the salesmen and the exhibitors; the salesmen to present to the exhibitors a special brand of photoplays; the exhibitor to announce to his patrons every Tuesday, or whatever other day he chooses to elect, a special series of photoplays.

Mr. Spoor is planning and in fact has already started a special line of advertising on these features. The "Black Cat" will appear in all advertising; it will appear on the paper; and the exhibitor will be able to hang out a "Black Cat" cutout on the night the feature appears in his theater.

This will enable him to announce to his patrons when the "Black Cat" features are to be shown. It is believed by Essanay that these features possess exceptional merit and that when the first few are viewed by the public there will be constant demand for them. In this way the exhibitor is aided in securing patronage by the cumulative effect of his weekly announcements.

Outside of the fact that the series of stories on "Is Marriage Sacred?" appeal to Mr. Spoor as exceptionally attractive, the same ground of reasoning lead him to announce this series.

There are twelve photoplays in this series, each of these also complete in itself, carrying a separate title, but bearing on the subject "Is Marriage Sacred?" The first release will be December 16, through the General Film Company, and will be released each Saturday thereafter until completed. Another series of stories under a general title will be announced after these are finished. The screen time will be approximately 33 minutes.

This series touches the home of every individual and is of deep interest to every man, woman and child. They are not being produced as problem plays, but bear such an intimate relation to the home and to the present day marriage laws and customs that they will be of interest to all.

While dealing with this delicate subject, Essanay announces that every photoplay is clean and wholesome and morally uplifting. Their first object is to entertain, to give fascinating entertainment, but at the same time leaving the spectator with a feeling of the cleanliness and beauty of life rightly lived. Essanay stars will appear in all these productions.

Fox Men in Convention

District, Branch Managers and Department Heads Meet at Hotel Biltmore.

ANNOUNCEMENT of new policies in the production and release of photoplays by the Fox Film Corporation was the outstanding feature of the second annual convention of the William Fox district and branch managers and department representatives which was held at the Hotel Biltmore, New York, Saturday, Sunday and Monday, Oct. 28, 29 and 30.

William Fox, president of the Fox Film Corporation, was present at every session and in person announced the policies which will be inaugurated immediately after the first of the year; W. R. Sheehan, general manager of the corporation, presided.

An innovation which had been previously announced but which was definitely outlined by Mr. Fox was the release of comedies of which one two-reeler a week will be given to the public, beginning in January. To prove his contention that only the best in comedy will be released by the company, Mr. Fox took the entire convention to the Academy of Music Sunday afternoon where the first of the new pictures was shown to the audience without previous announcement. The manner in which it was received by the large house convinced the delegates that Mr. Fox was right.

A second Fox production that the delegates received enthusiastically was "A Daughter of the Gods," which they saw at the Lyric Theater Sunday night. Wednesday morning the delegates were shown the newest big Fox production, "The Honor System," at the Academy of Music. This picture has not yet been released.

Ernest Reed, of London, England, general representative for Mr. Fox in Europe, addressed the convention Tuesday. He told of the great success of Fox productions in the British Isles and declared that Britain offers a practically unlimited field for Fox features. Glowing reports were read from representatives in Continental Europe, Australasia and South America.

Following are those who were present at the convention: District managers—Harry Leonhardt, Western; Paul C. Mooney, Central; C. L. Worthington, Eastern. Branch managers—O. P. Hall, Atlanta; Harry P. Campbell, Boston; J. E. O'Toole, Chicago; Joseph Kaliski, Cleveland; Harvey B. Day, Cincinnati; George C. Reid, Dallas; N. D. Thompson, Detroit; Albert W. Eden, Denver; E. H. Wachter, Kansas City; Field Carmichael, Los Angeles; S. N. Robinson, Minneapolis; J. D. Evans, New Orleans; Jack Levy, New York; Lester Sturm, Omaha; George Dembow, Philadelphia; C. W. Eckhardt, Pittsburgh; W. J. Citron, San Francisco; E. R. Redlich, Seattle; Joe Levy, St. Louis; G. R. Jermain, Syracuse; C. F. Senning, Washington; Mitchell Granby, Toronto; Maurice West, Montreal; Richard Wernick, New Haven; Nat Beier, Newark.

Home Office—Herman Robbins, assistant to Mr. Sheehan; Lewis S. Levin, assistant to Mr. Sheehan; Edward Waldo, auditor; Ewan Justice, publicity department; H. J. Roberts, development department; M. J. Horn, assistant to Mr. Robbins; George Buck, requisition department; Fred W. Lange, foreign department; Morris Greenberger, contract department; Sam Shapin, booking department; Thomas W. Brady, New York exchange; G. A. Gray, publicity department; J. P. Durham, publicity department; A. B. Bernd, publicity department; G. B. Spiero, publicity department; Sol Wurtzel, secretary to Mr. Fox; Ernest Reed, London, England.

British Notes

THE announcement by Royal Proclamation last week that the importation of manufactures of bone, horn, ivory and celluloid into this country is to be prohibited occasioned certain uneasiness in the trade until a statement specifically excluding moving picture films from the scope of the order was issued by the Board of Trade.

Larry Trimble, Florence Turner's director, has returned from the U. S. A., as has Roscoe C. Spurin, of the new renting firm of Roscoe's Exclusives. Mr. Trimble intends to return almost immediately to the States with Miss Turner to make there during the winter a series of pictures especially suitable for the American market, but will return to England next spring. Mr. Spurin, who has secured the agencies in Great Britain for the output of the Frohman Corporation and the new Al Christie concern, has taken office premises in Motograph House, Upper St. Martin's Lane, London. Three well-known personalities in the London trade who are at present on their way to the United States are Frank Brockliss, the Lubin Company's agent; J. Taylor, of the Clarion Film Co., Manchester (agent for certain of the World Film Productions), and Mr. Davidson, who operates an exchange in Wardour street and mainly specializes in home-made subjects.

Readers of the "World" will regret to learn of the death in India through sunstroke of Gerald F. Mayd, who previous to his joining the British army acted for a time as Paris correspondent of the Moving Picture World under the nom-de-plume of "John Cher."

The British Association for the Advancement of Science at its recent annual conference formally recognized the moving picture as a scientific tutor. From observations made at the conference the association is evidently keen upon acquiring a complete list of all educational films in circulation, with the name of the manufacturer or renter, possibly with some idea in view of compiling a comprehensive catalogue for the use of educational institutions in the country of all scenic, industrial, scientific and natural history films available. From six exchanges only have such lists been obtained, but there must be many other sources from which educational subjects could be procured. Three years ago we were promised a boom in educational films, encouraged by the release by Pathe at that time of complete programs of educational subjects. The departure was, however, an extremely short-lived one, and from that day onward the educational film has been gradually elbowed clean out of the program. With rare exceptions the only new educational pictures—not including topicals—appearing on the market today are the short travelogues, and most of these have to be elaborately titled to tempt the purchaser. "With the exception of an occasional booking from high-class theaters you simply cannot give them away," said a Wardour street renter. "As an instance of the drug they are on the market, I might mention that I have turned down new unprinted negatives of educational subjects when offered at five cents per foot," he remarked.

The American Company and the Charles Urban Trading Company have effected an exchange in premises. The American Company with its own exchange is now housed in Urbanora House, adjoining the Selig building in Wardour street, while the Charles Urban Trading Company has moved to the old American premises at the Oxford street end of the same thoroughfare.

The Trans-Atlantic Film Co. (Universal) has this week made an important departure from its customary policy by disposing to the Gaumont exchange upon an exclusive basis the output of the L-KO, Nestor, Victor and Imp comedies. J. D. Tippett, the managing director of the Trans-Atlantic company, has hitherto been a most enthusiastic supporter of the open market sale to each and any renting exchange of his company's productions, multiple reel features alone being excepted. All the Universal serials have been disposed of on this basis in addition to the one, two and occasionally three reel subjects of the above-named brands. It is the Gaumont company's intention to book these two-reel comedies in series of twelve.

Amongst exhibitors a controversy is proceeding on the subject of booking exclusive films in numbers, or as it is termed over here "block booking." The following resolution unanimously passed by one of the district branches of the Exhibitors' Association reveals one local aspect of the question: "This association recommends its members to withhold from the system of block booking, such system being detrimental to the trade, as it foists upon the exhibitor goods not suitable to his house, probably resulting in loss of business, in addition to which it will lead to the controlling of the subjects to be exhibited by other than the exhibitor who is the real judge of what he wants." In fairness to the exchanges it should be stated that there is quite a large number of exhibitors in the country in favor of "block booking." I have one exhibitor in particular in mind who, of his own accord, booked sixty films of one make on a single contract.

EXPANDING UNIVERSAL UNDER SEA PICTURE PLANS.

Encouraged by the success of "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea," the new super feature picture filmed at the bottom of the ocean, now attracting capacity audiences to the Studebaker Theatre in Chicago, The Universal Film Manufacturing Company has decided to organize a number of companies to present the picture in the principal cities of the country. Arrangements have already been made to open at the Savoy Theatre in San Francisco, November 26, and at the Lyric Theatre in Minneapolis at about the same time. It is quite likely that by the first of the year at least a dozen companies will be operating in as many cities. The unusual character of this picture has created the widest interest.

KEENAN TO RETURN TO STAGE.

Frank Keenan, for two years on the Pacific coast, where he has appeared in Universal and Triangle pictures, has returned to New York to complete arrangements for a change in his plans. His contract with the Triangle company has expired, and he will not renew it. He has several dramatic plays which he has read and accepted during the past two years, and he plans first to arrange for the production of one of these, after which he will act again before the films, but only in the East.

"I am hungry for a sight of New York," Mr. Keenan telegraphed his New York representative, "and it will be a long while before I again sign a contract which will keep me away from the dramatic stage of New York for so long a period."

METRO STRENGTHENS SCENARIO STAFF.

Following out its policy of developing motion pictures to the highest artistic degree and at the same time meeting popular demands for photoplays, the Metro Pictures Corporation is taking steps to place on its staff the most brilliant scenario writers in the profession. Only recently three writers of prominence were added to the Metro forces, and negotiations are under way for securing several more. The three are Miss Katherine Kavanaugh, Charles A. Logue and Joseph F. Poland. They now are at work in the Rolfe studios.

"A QUIET AFTERNOON"—KID PICTURE.

"A Quiet Afternoon," a one-reel comedy, starring Elaine Ivans, and written and directed by James Beecroft, will soon be shown to the press. This picture was made with the idea of pleasing the kids, and is full of fun and wholesome humor. In this laughmaker the introduction of the Diplodocus, a creature of the paleozic era, gives one an insight into the habits of this creature, that has hitherto been overlooked.

Australian Notes

THE Federated Showman's Union at the last meeting decided unanimously to raise prices to a minimum of sixpence. This move has been caused by the increase in running expenses and also the big rental required for programs at present. Most of the suburban shows have at least two five-reelers on their programs.

Frederick Shipman is at present conducting a revival season of "Neptune's Daughter," and it is proving very successful. The film had a week's run at the Crystal Palace and is not being rented out to suburban shows by the Associated Exchanges. Mr. Shipman has been confining his efforts recently to the legitimate stage, and "Neptune's Daughter" is his first venture in the picture business for some time.

The new taxation has been made public by the Government. It includes an amusement tax of a half-penny on three-penny tickets, a penny on six-penny tickets and a penny on every additional sixpence.

By this means the Government hopes to raise the sum of £2,000,000 ($10,000,000) during the coming year.

It is rumored that a new exchange is to be opened in Sydney very soon, which, it is said, will offer a new brand of features that have not been seen in Australia before.

George Barnes, of Melbourne, has produced a multiple reel subject entitled "The Life of Adam Lindsay Gordon," which, as the name denotes, is the life story of the famous Australian poet. Hugh McCrae, author, artist, poet and actor, takes the part of Gordon very creditably.

Barnes is one of the latest theatrical men to break into the pictures. He only recently returned from the United States, where he became impressed with the opportunities of the business, and decided to have a cut at it as soon as he returned.

Now that he has given it a trial, he is confident of success

Melbourne claims to have the finest picture theater center of any Australian city. This is in Bourke street, where, within a two-hundred yards' radius, are Hoyts, Paramount, Melba, Brittania, Gaiety, Victoria, Empire and the Star, the latter being nearly a new house. There are rumors at present of no less than three sites having been secured in Bourke street for other picture theaters.

Having established their organization in Sydney, Crick and Jones are now stretching out to the field offered by New Zealand, and are sending a representative there to look after their interests.

"We are just starting to feel our way," said Mr. Jones, "and believe that the New Zealand showmen will give us their hearty support in connection with our endeavors to establish the manufacturing end of the business here."

Crick and Jones are handling the Australian production, "The Mutiny of the Bounty," which was nearly all taken in the Dominion.

Triangle Plays are still upholding the fine standard of excellence found in their first subjects.

The last program, including "The Little Schoolma'am" and "Hell's Hinges," is a very good combination.

The Australian Photoplay Magazine, which published its first issue last month, is the only moving picture trade publication in Australia. It is not wholly a trade paper, however, being also of interest to the public. At present the magazine is running a series of articles of great interest to exhibitors everywhere. These articles are entitled "Showmanship," and are written by T. H. Eslick, perhaps the greatest live-wire showman Australia has ever seen. He controls an amusement park known as the White City and also several other ventures.

The publication, which now is issued monthly, fills a great want in the picture business here.

The censorship bear has started to growl in Victoria again. In reply to a question in the House of Representatives last week, the Minister of Customs (Mr. Tudor) stated that the military censorship of films had only recently been assumed by the Navy Department, and it was necessarily carried out in each State capital.

Censors had been instructed that where the least doubt might exist as to whether a film was to be passed or not, the picture was to be sent to Melbourne for reference to the Chief Censor.

The possibilities of German influence being organized to produce films designed to weaken the solidarity of the Allies, and to be prejudicial to recruiting, had been considered, and the necessary steps taken to prevent the exhibition of such films.

RUTLEDGE SUCCEEDS BROCKELL AS PARAMOUNT MANAGER.

Frank Rutledge, a well known theatrical and motion picture man, one of the best known showmen in the middle west, has been appointed manager of the Famous Players Film Co., Inc., Chicago, Ill., to succeed F. M. Brockell. Mr. Rutledge entered the film industry three years ago as manager of the Playhouse at Oak Park, Ill. From there he joined Kleine as special representative in the larger cities in the middle west and was promoted to manager of their Detroit exchange and later became manager of the Artcraft Exchange in Detroit. The last position he held but a short while before joining the Paramount forces.

G. A. Ranshaw, formerly with the Casino Feature Film Company, has been appointed assistant to Mr. Leist, assistant manager of the Chicago exchange, and H. P. Zappe, also of the Casino Feature Film Company has been appointed special traveling representative of Paramount's Pittsburgh office.

JEWEL CARMEN JOINS WILLIAM FOX FORCES.

Jewel Carmen, one of the prettiest and most capable actresses in moving pictures, who has been playing opposite Douglas Fairbanks, has joined the William Fox forces.

Miss Carmen is probably remembered best for her excellent work in "Manhattan Madness," one of Mr. Fairbanks' most recent photo-plays. She made her debut in the silent drama only four years ago, when she was still in her 'teens.

Miss Carmen is a native of Danville, Kentucky—the state which has furnished so many of William Fox's best photo-players. She will appear in Pacific Coast productions.

TO BUILD CORSICAN VILLAGE FOR METRO PLAY.

On the shores of Long Island, not many miles from the heart of Manhattan, a Corsican village soon will appear. It is a setting for scenes in a vendetta play in which will appear Madame Petrova, the Metro star. Director Burton L. King of the Popular Plays and Players studios, accompanied by assistant director Edward James, has selected an ideal site which commands a wide sweep of sea.

Among the Picture Theaters

NEWS AND VIEWS OF PHOTOPLAY HOUSES EVERYWHERE

Regent Theater, Philadelphia, Pa.

Appointments and Furnishings of Renovated Photoplay House Are Striking—Ushers Dressed in Military Costumes—Has Bulletin Announcing Time Each Picture Is Shown—Managed by Lionel H. Keene, an Experienced Showman.

THAT a large seating capacity is not imperative in order to show the best pictures profitably has been forcibly demonstrated in the case of the Regent theater, at No. 1630-32 Market Street, Philadelphia, Pa. The house occupies a unique position among successful Philadelphia photoplay houses because of its small seating capacity and its aristocratic patronage. Everything about the house, appointments, furnishings, service, music and features shown, is designed to appeal especially to persons of cultivated taste who are accustomed to and can appreciate delicacy and distinction. Abundant proof of the merit of such a policy is evident in the success of this house.

It was built for Alexander R. Boyd and opened under the management of Frank Buhler, who first initiated the house to motion pictures. It is now controlled by the Stanley Company which operates many theaters in Philadelphia, notably the Stanley, a much larger and equally well appointed house, located a few doors from the Regent. Despite the presence of the larger house, the intimate appeal of the Regent has enabled it to create and hold a loyal and numerous clientele.

The building occupies a lot 60 feet in front by 140 feet in depth and is entirely fireproof in construction, thoroughly modern, and delightfully artistic in design. The front is of white tile brick and the marquee is finished in bronze green, making a highly effective contrast. A large electric sign, also in white and green, inscribed "Regent Photoplays," makes an attractive show at night and is so proportioned as to be graceful and readable by day.

An ultra-modern idea in billing is also in evidence in bronze frames at the entrance which have announcements of current attractions painted in oils on glass doors, which can be plainly seen in the daytime and become transparent by night when illuminated with electric lights and reflectors. Loose poster sheets are entirely done away with and only a few brass frames are called into play to advertise the showings.

The auditorium has a high ceiling, containing eight ventilator outlets. The lighting system is entirely indirect, a series of inverted lights hanging from the ceiling, permitting a tempered radiance when desired. The lights usually employed are concealed at the top of the walls and disseminate, either soft, amber, blue or red tints, which with the silver, blue and grey mural decorations make possible some very beautiful combinations. A rich blue carpet runs down the aisles and heavy velvet curtains screen all openings.

One of the chief uses of the curtains is to protect patrons from draughts, and a series of the draperies extends entirely across the rear of the house suspended from brass rods slightly above the level of the circassian walnut and cordovan leather opera chairs with which the house is equipped.

Rest and retiring rooms for men and women are provided and kept scrupulously neat. In the women's room a dressing table and writing desk are provided, a powder puff or any other little toilet accessory may be secured from the matron in attendance.

During the month of August the house was closed and extensive improvements were made at a cost of several thousand dollars. For beauty of decorations and lavishness of furnishings, the house since its reopening, September 4, has been an object lesson to more conservative exhibitors.

Lionel H. Keene, the manager of the house, is well fitted to control the destinies of a place of its character. Born in London, much of his life was spent in Baltimore, Maryland.

Interior of Regent Theater, Philadelphia, Pa.

He is a keen and experienced showman, whose activities have brought him in touch with many phases of the profession. In 1910 Mr. Keene was advance agent for Sothern and Marlowe in "Romeo and Juliet," and he successfully managed the Baltimore Auditorium and the Auditorium Stock Company in Baltimore.

Mr. Keene has been notably careful in the selection of his staff. He especially prides himself on the natty military costumes, of light blue with gold braid topped by jaunty polo caps, worn by the ushers. The fine discipline which he exacts and the courteous treatment extended to patrons by all the attaches of the house have been important factors in Mr. Keene's success. A bulletin announcing the exact time when each picture is shown, enables each employee to give this often requested information promptly, and this is only one of many schemes for efficient service inaugurated by Mr. Keene.

The matter of perfect projection has also been carefully thought out. The pictures are thrown on a gold-fibre screen, 12 by 16 feet, over which can be drawn a red velvet curtain. Two Simplex motor driven projection machines are operated by Rupert Scheiblein and George Gamble. The projection room is up-to-date and has automatic fire shutters, which were invented by Mr. Scheiblein.

Mr. Keene has a pre-release program of Metro and World productions which are run for three days each. Admission is 15 cents in the afternoon and 25 cents for evening performances. Performances begin at 11 A. M. and run continuously until 11 P. M.

Music is an important feature. The equipment includes not only an improved Kimball organ, but a seven piece orchestra. The musical programs are chosen especially to suit a band of this size, and are notably attractive, especially in avoiding elaborate orchestrations unsuited to a small orchestra. Orchestra and organ under Mr. Keene's plan have grown wonderously popular. The theater has, in short, an ideal atmosphere for a strictly first class house, and as to results, Mr. Keene reports capacity business every night.

Knickerbocker Theater, Washington, D. C.

Structure Which Will Contain Photoplay Palace Will Also Include a Concert Symphony and Lecture Hall—Institution Peculiarly Suited to Need of Neighborhood—H. M. Crandall, Local Picture Magnate, Associated with Enterprise.

GROUND has been broken at 18th street and Columbia road, Northwest, Washington. D. C., for a new motion picture theater, to be known as the Knickerbocker, which will represent an investment when completed of nearly $225,000. This house is to be built and operated along lines unique to Washington by the Knickerbocker Theater Company at the head of which are Harry M. Crandall, moving picture magnate of the District of Columbia, who already operates Crandall's, the Apollo, the Savoy and Avenue Grand theaters. Barry Bulkley, who is interested in a number of big deals in this city and is at the head of the Hy Art Masterplays Company; George T. Smallwood and Fred S. Swindell.

Architect's Wash Drawing of Knickerbocker Theater, Washington, D. C., Now in Course of Erection.

The new theater is to be erected on ground that represents one of the most valuable plots in the northwest section of the city. It is at the intersection of two main car lines and is right in the heart of the most fashionable part of Washington. It is the ultra fashionable neighborhood and there are many thousands of residents there who can be counted upon to patronize a place of amusement of this type. The deed transferring the tract upon which the theater is to stand was recorded last week in the name of Harry M. Crandall. There are three lots having an area of 16,277 square feet with frontages of 140 feet on Columbia Road and 173 feet on Eighteenth street. The price paid for this property is said to have been in the neighborhood of $60,000.

The plans for the structure were drawn by Reginald Wyckliffe Geare, architect, who has evolved some novel features which will make the Knickerbocker different from any other enterprise heretofore contemplated in the National capital. There is said to be great need for a structure such as this in the neighborhood in which it is to be erected, and to meet this need the plans have been extended to include, in addition to the motion picture theater, a concert symphony and lecture hall, luxurious parlors and lounges. Primarily it is to be a moving picture theater of the highest possible type, but those interested in this new project state that the construction of a building in this section which can be utilized for the many important events such as symphony concerts, lecture courses by well known travelers, vocal and instrumental concerts, and other entertainers, is the logical development of the trend of amusement in Washington.

It will take at least six months to complete the construction of this theater, and there will be expended in the construction work alone upwards of $150,000. The building is to be four stories high and of reinforced concrete construction, with a front of stone-trimmed brick.

The main foyer will cover practically the entire frontage on the Eighteenth Street side. The remaining space not so utilized will be given over to a store, which will have its entrance on the corner. There will be exits on both streets and a marquise will be placed over the main entrance. The lobbies and foyers are to be large enough to accommodate the entire seating capacity of the theater.

Seats are to be provided for 1,800 persons and these are to be of new design, being larger and more comfortable, according to the designer. The auditorium is to be in the shape of an elongated triangle, generally following the shape of the lot, which is to be entirely occupied. The stage is to be at the apex of this triangle, and the arrangement, according to the architect, lends itself admirably to the purpose for which it is designed, as an unobstructed view of the stage can be had from every part of the auditorium. The long balcony will have a vaulted ceiling at the end of the gallery, being a large circular room provided with a great fireplace. A number of mezzanine boxes are to be located across the front of the balcony, and loggias in the long gallery promenade will overhang the auditorium and give space for other boxes. In the rear of the auditorium will be a retiring and rest room for women and, on the opposite side, a smoking room for men. Directly above the retiring room will be a Japanese tea room and lounge. This latter is also to communicate with the auditorium. The tea rooms, lounges, promenades and other like places, are to be provided for teas, dances and receptions in the afternoons, and enough attendants are to be furnished by the management for all such affairs. Harry M. Crandall, who is to personally conduct the Knickerbocker, states that he is going to endeavor to secure the best travel lectures, the big symphony concerts, and star-course concerts for the afternoons. There will be an orchestra of fifteen pieces to furnish music during the two shows to be given each evening. This is to be made up of the most talented musicians obtainable, who will give a fifteen-minute concert preceding each show.

The auditorium is to be lighted by a new system of the semi-direct, self-diffusing type, said to be entirely new for threater lighting, by means of which any desired light effect can be obtained in an instant, varying from a full sunlight effect to subdued moonlight, or the darkness of dawn. The fixtures have been specially designed for the building, as have the seats, hangings, and other furnishings, all of which are to be carried out in a color scheme of gold, ivory, and old rose. The color scheme of the women's retiring room is to be blue and gold, and the balcony promenade is to be in lavender and ivory, with upholstery and hangings in lavender velour. The specially designed ventilating plant is calculated to change the air in the theater at least once in every fifteen minutes, and the fresh air is to be warmed in winter and ice-cooled in summer.

Arbor Theater, Albany, N. Y.

The Arbor Theater in North Swan street, Albany, N. Y., is one of the biggest theaters in that city devoted exclusively to high class motion picture plays. The building is the property of James A. Dolan and William F. Reilly. The interior of the theater is 110 feet long and 60 feet wide and has a seating capacity of 1,000 persons. The rows of seats have been placed thirty-two inches apart.

Arbor Theater, Albany, N. Y.

The interior of the theater is beautifully finished in light and dark brown. At each side of the screen is a beautifully painted arbor scene. A modern ventilating system is installed and fresh air is continuously pumped into the theater. The indirect lighting system has been installed. The building is built of brick and concrete. Nine exits have been provided for. A $5,000 Wurlitzer Electric Orchestra is used. The theater is under the management of William H. Buck.

Architectural Beauty of New Photoplay House Exquisite—Structure Fitted with "Royal Box" for Ceremonial Occasions or for Special Parties—Gives Successful Matinee for Children on Saturday Mornings.

FROM across the seas came the idea for the architectural beauty of the latest addition to Baltimore's picture playhouses, the Parkway theater. About three years ago an associate of H. W. Webb, president of the Parkway Theater Company, Baltimore, was visiting England. He was so impressed with the architecture of the West End Cinema theater, London, that he secured plans and photographs of the structure, which he forwarded to Mr. Webb, who incorporated the idea in the Parkway. The location of the Parkway, it is on North avenue, a door or so from Charles street, can be compared to Forty-second street and Broadway, New York City.

Within walking distance of the most exclusive residential sections, the Parkway has drawn for its clientele upon the cream of Baltimore's population. Its promoters intended that it should be a high-class theater. Starting with the physical appearance of the theater itself, no stone has been left unturned to maintain an air of dignity and exclusiveness. That is why there can be seen among the audiences men and women of prominence in the city's industrial activities. A distinctive feature of this picture playhouse, both from an interior and exterior point of view, is its chasteness of design. There is nothing garish, nothing to smite the senses with a feeling of the bizarre. Everything is in good taste, down to the smallest detail. The front of the house is after the Italian Renaissance design. It is in simple, dignified light gray terra cotta, with an admixture of light and dark texture brick, the whole giving a charming effect.

Inside the theater might be called egg-shaped, after the lines of its London contemporary, a plan which works out practically in that it presents the screen without distortion to the occupant of every seat in the house, no matter where located. The auditorium is reached through a handsome marble lobby, with marble stairs leading from each side to a large lounge and tea room. The lobby as well as the rest of the interior is designed after the fashion of the Louis XIV period. Hanging lamps, reproductions of chandeliers at Versailles and Fontainbleu, add to the charm of the tasteful decorations. The tea room is finished in a delicate French gray, with beautiful old rose hangings, much after the style of the cozy salle or lounge of the aristocratic theaters of Paris, Vienna and London.

On each side of the interior there is a commodious "royal box," for use on occasious of ceremony or for special parties. Below are a dozen roomy loges, from which the stage can be seen to excellent advantage. Besides these loges, the first floor contains 800 large, deep-cushioned chairs, upholstered in the prevailing old rose tint with a velour finish, making the seating capacity of the house 1,100 persons. A $15,000 organ and a large orchestra supply the necessary entertainment for the ear, while the eye is engrossed by the scenes projected from an invisible operating room to a screen of radium gold fibre.

One of the most elaborate features of the interior embellishments is the main ceiling. From the large, ornamental dome is suspended a strikingly ornamental sunburst. All of the lighting is indirect. There is no glare. The matter of ventilation has been taken care of with the skill and thoroughness that marks the other details. So "fresh" is the air at all times in every part of the theater that potted flowers and plants are kept growing around the orchestra pit, on the stage and at other points.

One of the most successful of the Parkway's innovations is the weekly matinee for children on Saturday mornings. Some said it couldn't be done, that the idea of a special performance for children only was impracticable and would prove unprofitable. But, shortly after the theater was opened the plan was tried out. Only carefully selected programs of travel, educational and comedy films were presented. With a suddenness that was surprising the idea took hold of the community, and mothers began sending their children to the performances in much the spirit that they sent them to school or to the music teacher's.

of the patrons. The programs are run on schedule, and this schedule is advertised so that one may time one's arrival at the theater to accord with the showing of the particular film or films which one desires to see. A weekly program heralding coming attractions is mailed to 5,000 selected names. If one wants information as to price of seats, time of performances and so on, there is a special telephone information department to answer such inquiries promptly and courteously. Automobiles of patrons are checked and guarded by a special officer. Ushers and attendants are well trained and polite. Prices range from 10 cents to 50 cents. All screen announcements are made in trick film. The theater's own camera man is ever on the alert for local happenings of interest, and within 24 hours after they have occurred big news events of local interest are shown in the screen's Topical Review.

Under the active management of Bernard Depkin, Jr., a young man with progressive ideas and the ability to put them into execution, the patronage is growing steadily. Mr. Depkin believes that there is something more to a motion picture playhouse than a projecting machine, a screen and tawdry color effects in decoration. To the men who made the Parkway possible the proper presentation of film productions is as aesthetic an undertaking as is the productions of the most expensive offering of the so-called legitimate stage. And that the public agrees with this professional point of view is evidenced by the steady clip-clip of the ticket machine in the box office out front at every performance.

OLINGER PURCHASES TOY THEATER.

G. B. Olinger, of Milwaukee, Wis., owner of the American Theater, Third street, that city, has taken over the Toy theater in Milwaukee. Mr. Olinger will spend $5,000 in remodeling the Toy. The admission price will be 10 cents. Walter Hildebrand is to be manager.

News of Los Angeles and Vicinity

By G. P. VON HARLEMAN and CLARKE IRVINE

INTERNATIONAL PLAYERS ON WAY TO COAST.

Mrs. Vernon Castle and Company Will Film Five Episodes of "Patria" in Vicinity of Los Angeles.

MRS. VERNON CASTLE, the famous dancer and star of the International Film Service, is on her way to Los Angeles to appear in five episodes of "Patria" to be filmed here.

Louis Joseph Vance, author of "Patria," accompanied by Mrs. Vance arrived here this week in advance of Mrs. Castle and her company to prepare for the filming of the "western stuff."

Five episodes of the photoplay will be made here. The other episodes have already been filmed at Ithaca, N. Y. But because of the varied scenery in and around Los Angeles, some of which is typical of Mexican border scenes, the International Film Service decided to transport the "Patria" company to this region.

Most of the scenes to be taken here will be exteriors, which will include a number of battle scenes to be taken in and around San Gabriel Canyon. The company also will be taken to the desert for some "locations."

Jacques Jaccard, formerly of Universal, and director of "The Diamond From the Sky," "Liberty," and other serials, has been engaged to direct the Western scenes for "Patria."

Mr. Vance, who has been associated with the International Film Service for several months, is in general charge of "Patria" here on the Coast.

Among those accompanying Mrs. Castle to Los Angeles are Milton Sills and Warner Oland. They expect to be here until nearly Christmas.

DIRECTORS' BALL.

Motion Picture Directors' Association Will Hold Second Annual Affair on Thanksgiving Night.

The Motion Picture Directors' Association will give its second annual ball in the Hotel Alexandria on Thanksgiving night. The affair will be in the form of a buffet-dansant. This event promises to outdo the one held last year, and that memorable affair was a huge success.

Already invitations are being prepared, and the outlook is favorable for a record attendance of those prominent in the industry.

At eight o'clock the concert will start in the ballroom. By nine o'clock the guests will arrive, and an hour later the ball commences. It will last until the merrymakers tire. Music will be by a concert band and an orchestra. There will be no "grand march" or showing off; no shop talk and every person will be merry.

ANOTHER NEW CLUB.

Los Angeles has been devoid of clubs for over a year. Now it has two thriving organizations. The newest is the Hollywood Photoplayers' Club.

Composed of other men than those who were in the other club, this organization has secured the Shrine Auditorium for Thanksgiving Eve and will give a Movie Ball for the public. There will be many actors and actresses present to greet their admirers.

Already studio people have signed application blanks and made out checks to cover initiation. The purpose of this ball, the executive committee reports, is to raise funds with which to rent a suitable club house, furnish it and get it into running order. It will be in Hollywood.

An executive meeting was held at the headquarters Thursday night at which were present, according to the report of Arthur Shirley and Harry Hoskins, Al Christie, Francis Ford, Neil Burns, Eddie Polo, Henry Bergman, Ralph Merollo, Charles P. Stallings and Rufus Bowden, an attorney.

Headquarters, we are informed, has been established at 6411 Hollywood Boulevard. Eighty per cent. of the ball profits will go for a clubhouse.

MORE SCHOOLS INSTALL PROJECTION MACHINES.

A motion picture projecting machine for use in the electrically equipped grammar schools of Orange county was purchased by County School Superintendent R. P. Mitchell.

Films and slides furnished by the State universities will be secured exclusively for the machine. These films and slides are said to be a great help in the study of geography, history and other studies of a like nature and they can be secured for a small sum.

All of the high schools of the county are equipped with machines of this kind and have proven to be a great success. Superintendent Mitchell reports that the use of such machines in Los Angeles has grown to such an extent that it was necessary for the board of education of that city to secure the services of a man who does nothing else but look after the machines.

HELEN HOLMES BUYS PULLMAN.

Helen Holmes is the first screen star we know of to own her own private car, with dressing room attached.

J. P. McGowan, of the Signal Film Corporation, this week purchased a modern Pullman sleeper, complete in every detail for use in the production of features. So many of the scenes are staged in passenger coaches that it was decided it would be a saving of time and money to own their own coach. The car was purchased and delivered early this week. It is now on the company's siding at Signal, where it is undergoing alterations to make it conform more closely to the demands of production.

The finish of the woodwork has been dulled to prevent all possibility of catching a reflection of the cameraman at work and permanent Winfield-Kerners have been installed in place of the customary incandescent lights. A drawing room is also being fitted for Miss Holmes' dressing room, to be used when the company is at work in the car away from the studio.

It is Mr. McGowan's intention to use the car not only for picture purposes but as a private car for the company when making trips to secure exteriors in other parts of the State. It can be coupled on to a train and dropped at any siding leaving the company comfortably housed during their stay.

Los Angeles Film Brevities.

Doris Schroeder, who for the past several years has been connected with the Vitagraph Company as scenario editor and publicity writer, has accepted a good position with the American Film Co. and has moved to the studios at Santa Barbara where she will be engaged in doing scenario writing. Los Angeles film people hate to see her go, but wish her well just the same.

We paid a visit this week to the Superior Film Company and had a little chat with General Manager Robert A. Brackett. The Superior Company has a studio occupying the entire tenth floor of the Knickerbocker Building, right in the heart of the downtown district. This is perhaps the finest indoor fireproof studio on the coast and is equipped with Winfield-Kerner lights. The Superior Film Company rents their studio by the day, week or month and a number of feature film companies are taking advantage of the unusual facilities and conveniences of a downtown studio. Mr. Brackett's concern also makes a specialty of developing and printing and the manufacturing of novel and attractive titles. Mr. Brackett also states that he is in the market for undeveloped negatives and will buy trick pictures, popular sciences, microscopical and other out of the ordinary subjects. The company is located at 643 Olive Street.

We are informed that Wray Physioc, the former Biograph director, has organized a feature film company with the backing of $100,000 and will take over the old Biograph studio in Los Angeles. He is to start production within a short time on two-reel comedy dramas and five-reel features.

We have also been told that Roscoe Arbuckle will leave Mack Sennett's organization when his contract expires on January 1, and start a comedy company of his own. According to rumors Mr. Arbuckle has secured as backing the theatrical brothers, Joseph and Nicholas Schenck, of New York City. Al St. John, another Keystone player, is also expected to join this company and other members of the cast including a leading woman is now being selected by Mr. Arbuckle. "Fatty" will play the male lead and direct the pictures.

Henry "Pathe" Lehrman is now filming comedies at the Christie studios for release under the Fox banner.

Louis J. Cody, leading man for Mabel Normand, has been borrowed by Mack Sennett for some comedy pictures. He will return to Mabel Normand's studio when his services are required.

Harry S. Kerr, for two years assistant to George Stout, business manager of the Keystone Film Company, has been appointed to take charge of the business end of the Mabel Normand Feature Film Company.

Donald Crisp has been appointed director for George Beban in his new Morosco picture. Frank E. Garbutt will be assistant director.

Paul G. Dowling has been appointed publicity representative of the Horsley studios. Mr. Dowling paid a visit to the office of the Moving Picture World this week, and stated that production had been started again at the Horsley studios. Two companies are now operating at the Horsley plant and within a short time other companies will start producing.

Thomas Ricketts, who produced "Damaged Goods" and "Purity" for the American Film Co., is now directing Crane Wilbur in a series of six feature plays of five reels each.

Captain Jack Bonavita is back from Coney Island, where he had charge of the Bostock animals in a summer engagement. During the summer the captain kept the animals in a system of training in preparation for their appearance in Horsley jungle pictures soon to be released. The first story is a five reeler dealing with life in London and South Africa and was written by Alvin J. Neitz, who has written and produced a number of pictures for the Horsley productions.

Art Acord, the former American cowboy, the hero of Charles E. Van Loan's Buck Parvin's stories, has joined the Fox Company and will soon appear in a Western picture to be made in New Jersey.

Polly Moran, the Keystone comedian, was painfully hurt when her horse fell with her in Griffith Park. Her right arm was broken and her side wrenched and she suffered injuries in ligaments in her ankle. It is feared that she will be confined to the hospital for several weeks.

In honor of the return of Thomas H. Ince from New York, E. A. Featherstone, Los Angeles clubman and sportsman, tendered a "duck dinner," this week, to the producer, his directors and several others, associated with the Ince Triangle studios. The banquet was served in the English Room of the Los Angeles Athletic Club and is declared to have been one of the liveliest gatherings ever held at that institution. Ince was called upon to speak, and he replied in a few words of thanks to Host Featherstone for his warm hospitality. These present in addition to Ince and Featherstone, were Business Manager E. H. Allen, Directors Raymond B. West, Reginald Barker, Charles Miller, Walter Edwards, William S. Hart, Actors William Desmond and Charles Ray, Employment Superintendent William Eley, Assistant Director Harry Elwell, Location Manager R. C. Moore, Albert Cowles, the author, David M. Hartford and Publicity Manager Kenneth A. O'Hara. Featherstone is remembered for having conducted an Ince excursion recently to Catalina Island, aboard his private yacht.

Alfred Vosburgh has been engaged by Thomas H. Ince to appear in support of Enid Bennett in the production in which she is now appearing under the direction of Charles Miller, at the Culver City studios. Vosburgh was a member of the Ince forces several years ago and scored a number of successes in two-reel productions. Since severing his first association with the organization, he has been playing the supporting roles in various other companies.

Director Reginald Barker has left for Pincrest with a company of thirty Ince players to film some scenes for the new detective drama by C. Gardner Sullivan featuring William Desmond. Those who are making the trip include Margaret Thompson, J. Barney Sherry, Robert McKim, Will H. Bray and Henry Belmar. The company will be away about a week.

Again has Myrtle Stedman, Pallas and Morosco star, obliged for charity. This time she sang for the Belgian Relief fund before a large gathering in Central Park, Los Angeles. The affair was termed "The Foreign Market" and was a success in every way.

News from Long Beach says that Ernest E. Gagnen, manager of the Empress theater there, will erect a $150,000 theater to seat 1,200 persons, and to equal the best theaters in the West for furnishings and equipment. He is now working steadily to complete arrangements for the building of this fine house, which he hopes to open shortly after the first of the year.

The Lasky firm has been granted a license to build a theater at 6248 Selma avenue at a cost of $3,000.

Fred Miller, a Fox exhibitor in this city, is rebuilding and adding to Miller's theater on Main street. The improvements will cost $5,000. Evidently he believes in plenty of room, and he surely needs it for his house is always crowded with satisfied patrons who come to see the products of the great Fox studios.

Messrs. Studebaker and Gates of San Dimas have leased the Work Building at Lordsburg and will remodel it for a new moving picture theater which will open some time in November.

The Dixon theater in Ventura has installed a new Power Six-A projector besides other new equipment. Theater men hereabouts are preparing for the winter season which commences this month.

John Green is building a fine structure at Fifty-fourth Street and Sixth Avenue. The total cost of the building is over seven thousand dollars. It will be opened as soon as completed, as a moving picture theater. It will be the finest in that district when opened.

Oscar C. Apfel, one of the directors for William Fox on the coast, has severed his connections with the firm. Mr. Apfel has completed his tenth picture and will take a long rest. Meanwhile he is considering several offers which have reached him from New York. One is a proposition to do South American pictures; while another would hold him in Los Angeles.

Ulysses S. Davis has been engaged by David Horsley to produce the first of a series of pictures in which the Bostock animals will be featured. Work on the first picture in the new series, a five-reeler, is to start at once. The story is one in which are introduced South African natives, wild animal catchers, diamond merchants and Scotland Yard detectives. Director Davis' last picture under the Horsley management was "The Soul Cycle," produced the first of this year. Davis is also well known as the director of various successful Vitagraph features.

Lottie Case, of Rolin Comedies, who was injured last week when she fell from a window at the studio, is now able to sit up. She is still in the hospital suffering from slight internal injuries.

Thomas Meighan is now on his way to New York. He left the Lasky studio this week accompanied by Alan Hale and wife. Another star to depart for the east coast was Frank Keenan, who finished his picture with Thomas H. Ince.

Dave Hartford has left the Ince studio and has been engaged by the Morosco Company to work in Pallas and Morosco features. William D. Taylor has closed a deal with William Fox whereby he will finish one more picture for the Morosco Company and then go to the Fox studio to produce features.

Dustin Farnum returned this week from a hunt up country. The happy Morosco star brought home the biggest bag of ducks made in the district where he shot. As a result he passed around enough game to make Thanksgiving dinner for the whole studio.

Marjory Ellison ran a rusty nail into the sole of her foot and is laid up for a few weeks.

A novel and realistic night scene was filmed by Fred J. Balshofer this week at the Yorke Metro Studios for the production of "Pidgin Island."

The picture was staged in the elaborate Chinatown set recently completed at the Yorke Studios.

Four hundred well trained supernumeries took part in the scenes which were "shot" by the light of fifty Kliegl lamps and a myriad of flares. Producer Balshofer was assisted in handling the mobs by his star, Harold Lockwood, Lester Cuneo, Jay Hunt and Charles P. Stallings.

The most recent addition to the Harold Lockwood May Allison supporting cast now engaged in the picturization of Harold MacGrath's "Pidgin Island" is Doc Pomeroy Cannon, who was last seen on the Paramount program with Dustin Farnum in "The Parson of Panamint." He played the part of Prince of Worstenburg in "The Fall of a Nation" and characterized the role of the heavy in the forthcoming ten-reel Fox production "The Honor System." A day previous to his starting at the Yorke-Metro Studio, Doc Cannon completed a prominent part with Constance Talmadge and Wilfred Lucas in "The Microscopic Mystery," staged at the Triangle Fine Arts Studio. In "Pidgin Island" he plays "Smead," father of Lester Cuneo, the brains of a smuggling outfit, that are causing secret service officer Cranford, (the part being portrayed by Harold Lockwood,) many sleepless nights.

Promise of a lively row between the property owners in Hollywood who claim that their property is being injured by the activities of the moving picture industries, and the film companies and their supporters developed again this week when the Western Avenue and Griffith Park Improvement Association filed with the council a protest signed by two thousand citizens.

The protestants ask that the film-makers be regulated to eliminate night noises and inflammable properties, high board fences and other objectionable features.

The picture officials were quick to resent the protest as an attack upon the greatest industry in Hollywood and, in fact, in the entire city and announced that they would fight.

The council referred the question to the Public Welfare Committee, which fixed the date of the public hearing of the protest for November 13.

Little Mary MacLaren, the young Bluebird star featured by Lois Weber, will appear one night in person at the Garrick theater this week to give the audience a little talk on "Idle Wives." Miss MacLaren gained considerable popularity here in her recent photoplays "Shoes" and "Home Wanted.

Director Otis Turner and his company of Fox players, including George Walsh, Laura Dean, Ann Luther, Herschel Mayall, William Burress, William Clifford and Hector Sarno, are at present in Balboa filming water stuff for a thrilling story of mystery and adventure. They will be gone for a number of weeks. Mr. Turner was a recent guest of honor at a South Coast Yacht Club dinner the night before the sailing of a race in which a William Fox silver loving cup was offered as a prize. The cameras the next day made some wonderful shots of the racing craft under full sail despite a heavy gale.

Director Richard Stanton and his company of players, after much delay owing to inclement weather, completed this week at the Hollywood studios, the final scenes of a feature play dealing with the Mexican situation. Seven troops of United States cavalry stationed on the border at El Paso took part in this picture and in one of the scenes three hundred people were used for a ballroom set. The cast includes Alan Hale, Gretchen Hartmann, Edwin Cecil, Frances Burnham and Willard Louis.

George Gebhart has joined the forces of the Universal Company at Universal City, and now is playing heavies in the company directed by Douglas Gerrard.

Gebhart is one of the pioneers of the motion picture industry, having started as early as 1900 and was with D. W. Griffith in the old Biograph days. Later he was associated with the Nestor Company, the Pathe Company, and at one time had charge of the Ramo Company in New York. He was sent to the Pacific Coast by the New York Motion Picture Company and played leads with the original Bison Company remaining with that concern for three years. Gebhart also for a time was with the Lasky Company. For a short period he returned to the legitimate stage, appearing in vaudeville.

Film stars participated this week in the Automobile and Flower Shows and Friday, November 3, was set aside as "Movie Day" at the Automobile Show. A great number of the film stars came in their own cars and made their headquarters in the booth of the car under whose banner they sailed. Several of the booths had been cleared for dancing and everything arranged to make the flicker artists feel at home.

A series of children's Saturday matinees is being inaugurated at various picture theaters in this city by Helen Kimball, secretary of the Children's Theater Society of Pasadena. The Alvarado Theater at the corner of Alvarado and Seventh Streets will house such a performance Saturday afternoon this week at 2 o'clock. The youngsters first at the theater, to the number of 100 will be awarded prizes. Wherefore, it is likely there won't be much tardiness.

The program includes the following pictures: "Rip Van Winkle," a comedy entitled "A Miniature Circus." "For the Love of Mary Ellen," a Civil War story entitled "The Seventh Son," and "The Deer Slayer," adapted from James Fenimore Cooper. As an added attraction the two trained bears, Bessie and Brownie, will be present and perform.

After having worked loyally and well at Universal City for many months the "big chance" has come to Betty Schade and she is playing the featured lead in "The Reward of the Faithless" under the direction of Rex Ingram.

This is a five-reel production and Miss Schade has a difficult part in a Russian atmosphere. She has been given a strong supporting cast, including Claire Du Brey and Wedgwood Nowell. It was originally intended that Cleo Madison play the leading role, but her services were transferred to another director before the commencement of the production.

Universal Engages New Directors

Captain Peacocke and Ruth Ann Baldwin, Both Scenario Writers, to Build Picture.

Two new directors have been added to the producing force at Universal City. Ruth Ann Baldwin, who came to the Universal as a scenario writer, and has successfully served as the writer of many of the Universal's productions, collaborator with E. Phillips Oppenheim in one of its serials, screen editor at Universal City, and assistant director to Lynn Reynolds, has been made a full director, and given charge of a company. Her first production is called "Mother," and is a two-reel story written by Lynn Reynolds. Her cast includes Dorothy Davenport, Charles Cummings, Mary Talbot and George Pearce. The second is "Bred in the Purple," story by John Fleming Wilson, with George Pearce and Elizabeth Janes.

The other is Captain Leslie T. Peacocke, a former scenario writer for the Universal, and for other large companies. It has always been Captain Peacocke's ambition to direct, and he has been given charge of a company at Universal City to write and produce his own comedies. His first production will be entitled "The Wonderful Tooth," with a cast including Alida Hayman, Peggy Custer, Al McKinnon, Eugene Walsh and Walter Belasco. His next production will be "Winning a Mother," and in it will appear Eugene Walsh, William Musgrave and Liane Carrera, daughter of Anna Held. He will then produce "Oh You Honeymoon."

JOHNNY HINES WITH WORLD FILM.

Johnny Hines, one of the youngest of the film comedians will appear in the principal male characters of the entire series of Marie Dressler comedies arranged for by the World Film Corporation.

Fox Entertains the Press

Enjoyable Affair in Jungle Room of Healy's to Celebrate Success of "A Daughter of the Gods."

ON THE night of November 8 in the jungle room of Healy's restaurant, about three score of newspapermen foregathered in response to an invitation issued to them by William Fox, the president of the Fox Film Corporation. In the justified exuberance of his job over the phenomenal success of the wondrous film play, "A Daughter of the Gods" Mr. Fox had invited the representatives of all the press—the motion picture journals and the daily newspapers—to sit around his hospitable board and celebrate. A very pleasant and enjoyable time resulted. As a host, Mr. Fox rivaled his reputations as a producer who does things in the best way possible regardless of expense. The dinner was voted an unqualified success, but no greater than the vaudeville entertainment which had been provided.

After the feast had been celebrated with prolonged enthusiasm Winfield R. Sheehan, general manager, who sat at Mr. Fox's right hand, acted as toastmaster and unloosed such oratory as could be found around the festive tables. The list of speakers was as follows: W. Stephen Bush, Martin Green, W. A. (Bill) Johnston of the New York World, W. A. Johnston, "Wurra-Wurra" McLoughlin, Tom Powers, George McManus, Stuart Holmes, Kenneth Court, Louis Poss, Harry Burke, Kelsey Allen, William Fox and Ernest Reed.

Among the notables present were: Messrs. Brock Pemberton, Victor Watson, Wesley Hamer, Lawrence Reamer, Louis V. De Foe, Frank T. Pope, Robert G. Welsh, Charles Sawyer, Bide Dudley, P. J. Smith, Ernst Schmitz, Leslie Mason, Otto Harrass, Fred Beecroft, W. A. Johnston, H. E. Gower, W. M. Oestreicher, Karl Kitchen, Tom Powers, Fire Commissioner Adamson, L. L. Palmer, Arthur Brown, Charles Brown, D. S. Perrin, Gerald C. Duffy, Eugene B. Brewster, W. W. McLoughlin, Ben Davis, Fred Austin, Ray Long, W. A. Johnston (N. Y. World), Martin Green, W. Stephen Bush, H. Weil, R. E. Lewis, K. C. Beaton, Herbert Roth, M. P. Krachi, Albert A. Sanders, Charles Condon, Arthur Ungar E. C. Ranck, F. F. Schrader, Charlie Sutherland, George McManus, Rudolph Block, Frank O'Malley, Harry Burke, E Kelcey Allen, H. C. Judson, James Milligan and James L. Hoff.

The Fox Company was represented by William Fox, W. R. Sheehan, E. Justice, Ernest Reed and others.

Ethel Grandin Scores

Petite Ingenue of "The Crimson Stain Mystery" Makes Hit of Her Career.

WITHOUT a doubt one of the big successes made in the motion picture field this year is that scored by Ethel Grandin, the diminutive ingenue featured with Maurice Costello, the star in "The Crimson Stain Mystery," by Consolidated Film Corporation. At any rate it is the biggest hit of Miss Grandin's entire film career. Besides being her first picture under the Consolidated's standard, it is also her first serial.

Ethel Grandin.

In this remarkable sixteen episode photoplay, Miss Grandin, in the role of Florence Montrose, daughter of the scientist whose discovery is responsible for the great city's chaotic conditions, has been accorded the greatest histrionic opportunity of her entire career. The role of the motherless daughter calls for some exceptionally fine acting, and it is only to the credit of Miss Grandin to say that she has risen ably to her part.

From all over the world Miss Grandin has received expressions of delight and appreciation of her work in "The Crimson Stain Mystery." Her remarkable interpretation of the heroine in this super-photoplay has won for her a great following of admirers, in addition to the enviable number that already worship at her shrine.

Art Dramas Combination Active

Its Several Producing Companies Engaging Directors and Leading Players—Some Good Names in the List.

PRONOUNCED activity is apparent at the studios of all of the producers of the Art Dramas Program, as that company is making ready for its first release, which is scheduled for the beginning of December. Although all of the producers have maintained suitable companies heretofore, the new Art Dramas arrangement, which calls for the release of one feature each week, has made it necessary for them to add considerably to their acting and directing forces. The field is being surveyed very carefully, and a number of people who have made good with other companies have already been engaged.

Frank Crane, who has produced many successful feature pictures for other companies, has been obtained by the U. S. Amusement Corporation. Mr. Crane has been with the World Film Corporation for the past two years. He will undertake the direction of Jean Sothern, who was discovered not long ago on the vaudeville stage by William Fox, who featured her in a number of his pictures. Perhaps her best remembered Fox Production is "The Two Orphans," in which she shared the stellar honors with Theda Bara.

The Van Dyke Film Production Company has engaged George Terwilliger, who has also made a number of highly successful pictures. Mr. Terwilliger's first active employment in the picture business was his engagement as scenario editor of the Reliance Company, where he remained for a year. He then went with the Lubin Company, where he both wrote and produced features for over three years. He is also the author of the picture which he is directing at the Van Dyke studios, which has not yet received its final name.

The star of the Van Dyke production which Mr. Terwilliger is directing is Gertrude McCoy. Miss McCoy, is, of course, one of the best-known screen actresses, and has a large following throughout the country. She started her motion picture career with the Edison Company, and soon achieved stardom by her marked ability. She remained with the Edison Company for five and a half years, through many changes of executive management.

Ralph Dean, who has been with the Frohman Amusement Corporation for the past two years, and who has had a great deal to do with the general excellence of that company's pictures, will direct the productions of the William L. Sherrill Feature Corporation. Mr. Dean is a pupil of the Frohman school, which has graduated so many notable artists to the screen. In addition to Mr. Dean, the Sherrill company has under consideration the services of Mabelle Trunnelle, Dorothy Bernard, Florence Deshar, Elinor Woodruff, Jack Sherrill, and many other notable performers, whose work has stood out in the past.

The Erbograph Company has not yet made an announcement of the people it has engaged for its Art Drama productions, but it is known that several prominent people are under consideration. A definite statement will probably be forthcoming in the course of the next few days.

Review Chiefs and Advertising Men Confer

Take Up Question of Objectionable Publicity—Committee Appointed to Consider Matter.

AT a recent meeting of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, Inc., a conference was held with a committee representing the National Board of Review for the purpose of discussing the present character of publicity matter being issued to exhibitors by the manufacturers. Addresses on behalf of the board were made by Dr. Cranston Brenton, chairman of the general committee of the board; Dr. Orlando F. Lewis, general secretary of the Prison Association of New York; Clarence A. Perry, associate director department of recreation, Russell Sage Foundation; W. Frank Persons, director of the Charity Organization Society, and W. D. McGuire, Jr., executive secretary of the board.

Mr. McGuire pointed out that the board was in receipt of many strong letters from all over the country protesting against the nature of the advertising that accompanies some of the pictures. He suggested that, in justice to the industry at large, these complaints should be taken up and given serious consideration by those who had authority to change conditions for the better. Mr. McGuire admitted that the question was one that might be considered as out of the ordinary jurisdiction of the board, but it had been decided to ask for the conference on account of the large interests involved.

Arthur James, chairman of the publicity men's organization, pointed out that possibly the cause of the complaints rested to a large extent in the choice by directors of the situations they saw fit to photograph with a still camera, thereby restricting the publicity men in their supply of material for posters.

The result of the conference was the appointment by Chairman James of a committee to take up the whole question with the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry and to make recommendations as to what they considered necessary in the way of changes in the type of publicity matter. The committee named was Paul Gulick, P. A. Parsons and E. Lanning Masters.

Soldiers Get Films by Aeroplane

J. E. Madsen, of El Paso, Describes How Uncle Sam's Boys in Mexico Get Quick Service.

HOW motion picture films are transported by airship across country a distance of 200 miles is described in a letter received from J. E. Madsen, manager of the Peerless Feature Film Company, of El Paso, Texas. The Peerless furnishes pictures for the soldiers of Uncle Sam

Chaplain Randolph's Audience.

"somewhere in Mexico," and what they mean to the men so far from home territory and so completely shut off from the amusements commonly available to most men and women may easily be imagined. From El Paso the films are shipped by express to Columbus, N. M. From there they are forwarded by auto truck train to the first post, situated at Colonia Dublan, Mexico. After being exhibited here they are sent on by aeroplane to El Valle, 200 miles away.

The exhibitions at Colonia Dublan are under the supervision of Chaplain John M. Moose, of the Seventh Cavalry. Here five thousand men are entertained. Chaplain John A. Randolph, of the Sixth Infantry, is the "exhibitor in chief" at El Valle and caters to 4,000 soldiers. Chaplain Randolph, in a letter to Mr. Madsen, says General Pershing and Colonel Allaire, the camp commander have expressed a willingness to do everything possible to further the comfort and entertainment of the men under their command.

Mr. Madsen says Simplex machines are used at each place and the soldiers generate their own electricity. The screen is hung on the wall of an adobe shack, and the men sit around on the ground to see the show. "Imagine three to five thousand men sitting around as shown in the inclosed post card," he adds. "At El Valle one day the operator, Corporal H. E. Prussner, broke the main driving gear in the machine, and next morning sent it by airship 200 miles to Colonia Dublan, where the army has an electric shop. There the part was welded and returned 200 miles the same day. That night he show was given and no loss of time was occasioned.

PROTEST AGAINST BONUS FOR SERIALS.

On November 3 the Theater Managers and Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association of St. Louis, held a regular meeting at the Assembly Rooms, 400 Benoist Building. The question of prepayment for serials came up for discussion. Several members dwelt on the injustice of compelling the exhibitor to tie himself up on a serial before he could know how the serial was going to take. A motion was made and carried unanimously, to the effect that hereafter the members of the Association will not pay for serials in advance or deposit any bonus money. The members, however, declared their willingness to pay C. O. D. if need be. The officers of the organizations are: Edward Pohlmann, President; Frederick Wehrenberg, Vice-President; Tilly Schwartz, Financial Secretary; Frank L. Root, Secretary; J. W. Price, Treasurer; C. Bermeitinger, Sergeant-at-Arms. The executive committee consists of Joseph Mogler, W. O. Reves, Christ Young, Al. Whitman, George Meyer, John Yockey, George Coloves, Frederick Hoelzer.

American Pictures in Japan

But Due to High Rate Few of Our Better Productions Are Shown—Tendency Developing to Exhibit Serials Popular in United States.

THE Kobe consular district has between fifty and sixty motion picture theaters, according to U. S. Vice Consul E. R. Dickover, Kobe, writing in "Commerce Reports." Their supplies are obtained from two exchanges—the Tennen Shoku Katsudo Shashin Kabushiki Kaisha (Natural Color Moving Picture Corporation), with the head office at Suyeyoshibashi 3 chrome, Shinsai-bashi, Nishi-iru, Osaka, and the Nippon Katsudo Shashin Kabushiki Kaisha (Japanese Moving Picture Corporation), with the head office at Kamimakicho, Nihonbashi-ku, Tokyo. These two firms import all the foreign films used in this district, and control the sale of films manufactured in Japan. They also import and sell the projectors and other instruments used in exhibiting moving pictures.

There are no low-price, continuous performance motion picture theaters in this district. Ordinarily only one performance of 6 to 8 reels, lasting about three hours, is given each day. The prices of admission vary from 5 to 30 cents, depending upon the seats taken. Some of the theaters show a complete program of Japanese films and other a complete program of foreign films, but the great majority of the houses combine the two classes in about equal proportions. The theaters which cater to the laboring class make a specialty of native films, while those patronized by the better class of Japanese and by foreigners exhibit either a combination of foreign and domestic films or only foreign films. The program is changed every week or ten days.

Most of the foreign photoplays are French, Italian, or English dramas or American comedies. Very few of the better grade of American plays have been seen here. The exchanges explain this fact by stating that European films are cheaper, and that they can not afford to pay the high rates charged for the Japanese rights to good American plays. A tendency to exhibit the serial adventure films so popular in America has developed recently, however.

Detective plays with plenty of hidden staircases, airships in action, "slap-stick" comedies, and plays of adventure with many "thrills" are demanded. The "sob plays" also are well patronized by the Japanese women. Society and problem plays are not in demand.

American exporters will not be likely to succeed in any attempts they may make to sell films direct to the theaters. The motion picture houses are usually controlled by the film exchanges, and they must take the films that are given them. The fact that titles, subtitles, leaders, and inserts in the foreign films are printed in English results in a demand for translations and explanations of the action. These are made by men in the exchanges, and are read by a sort of lecturer who, standing beside the screen, translates the action as the play proceeds. It would be impossible for each small theater to employ a man conversant with English and with foreign customs to interpret each play.

The films manufactured in this district are not likely to find appreciative audiences in America. The photography is often poor and the action is slow, on account of long intervals during which the actors converse. Films produced in Japan under foreign supervision, however, probably would prove acceptable, as the beautiful scenery and many charming costumes of the Japanese could be utilized to great advantage.

As the exchanges do not stick to any one film service, but buy their films all over the world, it would not pay to advertise heavily in the local papers for the sake of the one or two films that might be sold each month. Advertising posters for use in front of the theaters are of little value, as the exchanges furnish with the films hand-painted posters in the Japanese language. Photographs of the actors and of scenes in the play are used to some extent. No projectors or other supplies for the exhibition of motion pictures are produced in this district.

The import duty on developed film is $3.10 per pound, including the inner packing. The duty on moving picture projectors and on moving picture cameras is 50 per cent. ad valorem.

WORLD RELEASES "DOUBLING UP."

The two days' showing of Alice Brady in "Bought and Paid For" at the New York theater, where one day for each photoplay is the rarely broken rule, was so successful that Mr. Loew is in treaty with the World-Brady interests for several repetitions of the experiment. It is quite possible that all the World releases hereafter may "double up" in this manner at the New York.

To Exploit Our Industrial Resources

Commerce Bureau Planning to Show in South America Pictures of Economic Development of United States.

ARRANGEMENTS are being made by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce to exhibit in South America a number of selected films showing typical American manufacturing processes, welfare work in industrial institutions, and other details of economic life in this country. In recent years South Americans have become better and better acquainted with the facilities of the United States for furnishing them manufactured products, but it is felt that many of them are yet only slightly acquainted with the industrial development of this country. It is to further education along these lines that the Bureau proposes to make use of these motion picture films.

The commercial attaches in South America will have charge of the exhibition of these pictures, making arrangements to have them shown in the motion picture houses of their respective localities. The films will be obtained from the Bureau of Commercial Economics, an unofficial organization with headquarters in Washington, D. C., which has on hand a large number of films showing various phases of American industry. According to present arrangements between this Bureau and the Bureau of Commercial Economics, the latter is to supply the films which it thinks will be most educative and most interesting, and this Bureau will inspect them and perhaps make a further selection and send the films which it thinks most desirable to the commercial attaches.

It is hoped that the exhibition of these pictures will be introductory to a much more extended campaign by which American manufacturers may have their films displayed for advertising purposes. Plans for an arrangement by which this can be effected are being formed, but no definite announcement can be made until further advices are received from the commercial attaches.

Spain Films the Story of Columbus

A Great Feature Said to Possess Uncommon Spectacular and Historic Merit Soon to Be Seen Here.

THE latest news from the foreign film market is unique and exceptionally interesting. Spain has produced a big feature of exceptional merit and of uncommon historic value. The feature is one which Spain, of all countries in the world, has the best right and the best opportunity to make: The Story of Christopher Columbus.

This feature, from what we can learn from our Spanish edition, Cine-Mundial, possesses extraordinary points of interest. While the prime movers in the enterprise were private parties, it is said that the Government of Spain has lent its aid not only with a substantial subsidy, but with providing facilities for making the picture historically accurate in every detail. The owner of the film is Charles Jean Drossner and the director is Gerard Bourgeois. The project has from the start enlisted the enthusiastic co-operation of the best scholars and historians in Spain, who were all anxious to do their share toward making the production as fine as possible. In point of costumes the production, it is claimed, is without a flaw. Spain is a country which changes but little and which has preserved its medieval atmosphere. Hence the new production will make it possible for the student of history to follow the whole epochal event at the very places and in the very surroundings in which its various phases are first enacted.

The production will arrive in New York in the course of the next few weeks and a showing to the most prominent men in the film world will be given soon after its arrival.

DORIS KENYON ENGAGED FOR "THE TRAVELING SALESMAN."

The Famous Players Film Company has engaged Doris Kenyon to play opposite Frank McIntyre in an adaptation of the latter's celebrated stage success, "The Traveling Salesman," which is scheduled for appearance on the Paramount program on December 18. Miss Kenyon has been engaged before the motion picture camera at various studios, her work attracting the attention of the Famous Players and so impressing them that she was engaged for an important role in the McIntyre production despite her comparative inexperience.

KELSEY FILMING "BLOOD MONEY."

With Harry Carey and Louise Lovely as his featured players, Director F. A. Kelsey is filming a two-reel Western drama, "Blood Money," at Universal City, Carey enacts the role of a bad man.

General Film Suggestions

Offers a Series of Mighty Good Program Pictures for Week of November 20.

"THE Sheriff's Blunder," a two part drama produced in Selig's studios featuring Tom Mix and Victoria Forde will be the first picture screened on General Film Service program for the week November 20-25 inclusive. Tom Mix is the Simon pure cowboy actor and "The Sheriff's Blunder" it is said affords him an excellent vehicle for displaying his undoubted knowledge of Western life on the plains. This will be followed by a Vitagraph one reel comedy, with Mary Anderson in the titular role, entitled "The Fasters." Selig-Tribune will then feature pictorially all the big news of the world and the day's program will be brought to a close with "Fish," a one-act Biograph comedy in which Bert Williams, widely known as a top liner in vaudeville and also as a star of the Ziegfeld Follies, is featured.

An Essanay two-part drama, "Unto the Least of These," with Mary McAlister and John Cossar in the titular roles will be the first picture shown Tuesday, November 25. This will be succeeded by "Rival Fakers," a Kalem one-act comedy presenting "Ham," "Bud," Ethel Teare, and Henry Murdoch. "Oil and Water," a two-part Biograph drama in which Blanche Sweet and Henry Walthall are starred will be the final picture of that day.

Ben Turpin, Essanay's comedian, will be featured in the first picture shown Wednesday, November 22, a one-act comedy entitled "Some Bravery." Harry Myers and Rosemary Theby will get the lime light next in a Vim one part comedy, "The Good Stenographer." Then will come the 16th episode of Kalem's "The Girl from 'Frisco," entitled "The Fight for Paradise Valley." Marin Sais and True Boardman are featured in this two-act drama.

Selig-Tribune and a Vim comedy presenting Babe Hardy and Kate Price will be Thursday's offerings. The comedy is entitled "Mother's Child."

"Twin Souls," a Knickerbocker Star Feature drama in three parts will be the first picture shown Friday, November 24, with R. Henry Gray and Lillian West in the stellar roles. This will be followed by Kalem's "The House of Three Deuces," the sixth adventure of "Grant, Police Reporter," presenting George Larkin and Ollie Kirkby. Then will come a Vitagraph one-act comedy, "Justice a la Carte," with Huntley Gordon providing the fun. A Vim comedy in one act, "Money Maid Men," featuring "Pokes" and "Jabbs," will close the program for the day.

An Essanay three-part drama, "The Border Line," presenting Nell Craig and Edward Arnold, will be the first picture flashed on the screen Saturday, November 25. This will be followed by an episode of the "Hazards of Helen Series," "The Forgotten Train Order," in which Kalem's venturesome girl, Helen Gibson, supplies some daring feats. The week's program will be brought to a close with a Selig one-act drama, "Hedge of Heart's Desire," presenting Virginia Kirtley and Robyn Adair.

"The Crisis" is Selling Rapidly

Remarkable Record Made by the Sherman-Elliott Concern in the Disposition of Territory.

Forty-one state rights to William N. Selig's pretentious photodrama, "The Crisis," have been disposed of by Sherman-Elliott, Inc., which controls the selling rights for the entire United States and Canada. Practically all sections of the country have been sold and deals are pending for the disposal of New York and New England, which will complete the entire sale of "The Crisis." This is a remarkable record in the sale of territorial rights. No other big production has ever been sold in so short a space of time.

Among the buyers are: Warner Film Attractions, San Francisco, California, who have acquired the rights for California, Arizona and Nevada and are ready for booking. A syndicate of well known middle western film men have purchased Ohio, Indiana, West Virginia, Maryland, Delaware and District of Columbia; the name of the leasing firm to be announced later. The State Rights Company, of Jackson, Mississippi, have purchased Mississippi, Tennessee and Louisiana. The Master Photo Play Attractions of Newark for New Jersey. William Sievers, Grand Central Theater Co., of St. Louis and Missouri.

A big combination of exhibitors who control theaters over the East are negotiating for the rights for New York, and the same combination may include the New England territory. A well known film corporation of Atlanta, Ga., have contracted for a group of southern states which include Alabama, Georgia, Florida, North and South Carolina.

Arrangements have been made for a simultaneous showing of "The Crisis" on or about November 19 in St. Louis, Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago, as well as other principal cities of the East, possibly including New York City.

Mutual Promotes Sullivan

President Freuler Raises Serial Man to Position of Assistant General Manager.

RAPID developments and increasing volume of business has moved President John R. Freuler, of the Mutual Film Corporation to make important increases in his executive staff and a reassignment of the home office activities. D. J. Sullivan, who for the last two years has been in charge of the serials department, has been made assistant general manager of the Mutual. This means, in effect, that Mr. Sullivan will extend his supervision of the merchandising of serials to cover the entire Mutual output.

Dennis J. Sullivan.

J. C. Graham, assistant to the president, will be thus enabled to devote a larger portion of his time to the matters pertaining to production, the alignment and contracting of stars for special productions and related matters. This phase of the Mutual's activity has recently been making increasing demands upon the time and attention of the home office staff. Under the new arrangement Mr. Graham will divide his time between New York, Chicago and the Pacific Coast producing centers.

Incident to the readjustment to take care of the Mutual's greater business the publicity department, under Terry Ramsaye, is being assigned to larger quarters on the fifth floor of the Consumer's Building in Chicago, where the Mutual now occupies practically three floors. The staff of "Reel Life," the Mutual's magazine house organ, and the publicity staff have been considerably augmented to handle the increasing publicity load.

"The increases in the home office staff, including the reapportionment of duties incident to the promotion of Mr. Sullivan and reassignment of Mr. Graham," remarked Mr. Freuler, "come because the heavier demands upon us require more specialization, more sharply defined departmental lines.

"Both of my able lieutenants have their specialties and plenty to do. This is a part of our effort to do our utmost for our product and our customers.

"It is the distinct and special purpose of the Mutual Film Corporation to render to the exhibitor 'service beyond the films' all the time. As our industry progresses and competition increases the exhibitor more and more needs the fullest possible co-operation from the distributor.

"In the Mutual Film Corporation with all of its important connections and resources I am seeking to give the exhibitor all possible aid in realizing the utmost from the high earning power of the productions which we put into his house. Every move for Mutual efficiency is a move for theater efficiency."

HAL ROACH OF ROLIN MARRIED.

Director General Hal Roach of The Rolin Company has returned from his honeymoon trip with his bride who was Margaret Nichols, one of his players. Mrs. Roach was formerly featured in Balboa productions on the Pathe program and in going over to the Rolin forces is a Pathe player still. In addition to real talent she has youth and notably good looks.

DE HAVEN IN "HIS NIGHT OUT."

Carter De Haven is directing and playing the lead in "His Night Out" which is being made in one-reel at Universal City. Flora Parker De Haven plays opposite him in the comedy, the cast of which also includes Eileen Sedgwick, Jessie Arnold and Millard K. Wilson.

Metro Forecast

Announcement of Program for Fall and Early Winter—Many Productions Under Way.

FOLLOWING a final conference between Richard A. Rowland, president of Metro Pictures Corporation, B. A. Rolfe, general manager of Rolfe Photoplays, Inc.; Robert North, of the Popular Plays and Players; W. Christy Cabanne, of the Quality Studios, and Maxwell Karger, general manager of the Metro-Rolfe and Metro-Columbia studios, Metro's plans for the late Fall and early Winter season have just been announced.

These plans embrace the offering of a serial believed to be the most pretentious ever shown in motion pictures, with Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne as co-stars, and a long list of screen plays of the highest type.

Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne are at work, as co-stars, on the fourteen episode serial, which promises to be one of the greatest triumphs of their screen career. W. Christy Cabanné is directing the production, with the assistance of Eugene Thurston. The original story of the serial is from the pen of Mme. Fred. de Gresac, and has been adapted for the use of Mr. Bushman and Miss Bayne by Mr. Cabanné. Helen Dunbar will have a part of strength and sympathy. Others in the cast of the different episodes are Edward Connolly, Mrs. Balfour, Belle Bruce, Charles Ripley and Charles Fang. Fang plays the Chinese valet to Mr. Bushman.

Mme. Petrova has collaborated with Mrs. L. Case Russell, who wrote "The Black Butterfly," soon to be released, in a new five-act photoplay which presents the most striking contrast to any of the productions in which she has recently appeared. The scenes are laid in Corsica, and the title of the play will be a single Corsican word, which will be given on the screen both in the original and in the English translation. The play is frankly elemental in its appeal. The star chose it as a change from the feminist productions in which she has been seen. Burton L. King is directing the play at the Popular Plays and Players' studio, with Edward James assisting.

Edmund Lawrence is completing work on the Anna Steese Richardson play, "A Man's Woman." The star has finished her work in this production with Mr. Lawrence as director, and it only remains for him to take the scenes in which she is not required and cut and assemble the film. Mahlon Hamilton, J. W. Hartman, H. Cooper Cliffe and other well kown players are in her support.

Emmy Wehlen soon will begin work in a picturization of Ella Wheeler Wilcox's poem, "The Belle of the Season," under the direction of S. Rankin Drew, at the Rolfe studio. This will be Mr. Drew's first picture under the Metro banner, but with four members of his family in the same studio—Ethel Barrymore, Lionel Barrymore and Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew—he should feel at home. Miss Wehlen has completed her work at the Popular Plays and Players' studio in the Aaron Hoffman feature, "Vanity." The dainty star has a part exactly to her liking in "The Belle of the Season."

John W. Noble, having returned from a hunting trip, made after he had directed Ethel Barrymore in "The Awakening of Helena Richie," will commence the direction of the new Metro star, Frances Nelson, in a play based on another Ella Wheeler Wilcox poem, "A Reverie in a Station House." Miss Nelson is one of the most beautiful and popular of the younger screen stars.

Mabel Taliaferro is busy with a new production, "Jerry of the Emerald Isle," under the direction of John H. Collins. Mr. Collins is intensely interested in the quaint Irish atmosphere of the play, considering it especially suitable to Miss Taliaferro's personality, and the feature promises to be one of extraordinary interest, under his direction. Robert Walker plays opposite the star. Miss Taliaferro's next picture will be a five-part photoplay written by Katherine Kavanaugh, author of "The Wheel of the Law," Emily Stevens' great success.

Viola Dana is the star in "Threads of Fate" now in production. This is a Metro-Columbia feature. Eugene Newland is directing this picture, which, written by Richard Barry, has been adapted for the screen by June Mathis. Miss Dana is supported by Robert Whittier, Augustus Phillips, Helen Strickland, Richard Tucker, Nellie Grant, Fred Jones and other notable people. The play is said to be well suited to the talents of this favorite star, whose latest picture, "The Gates of Eden," is representative of the high order of work that can always be expected of her.

An early release will be "The Stolen Triumph," a Metro-Rolfe feature production starring Julius Steger. This star has not been seen on the Metro program since "The Blindness of Love." The present story has been arranged by Mr. Steger and by Maxwell Karger. An unusually strong supporting cast has been chosen to support Mr. Steger, including Clara Whipple, Clara Blandick, Harry Burkhardt, Marie Reichardt, Stanhope Wheatcroft and Master Maury Steurat.

Lionel Barrymore will next be seen in "The End of the Tour," a romance of the one-night-stands, written originally by Earle Mitchell, and dramatized for the screen by George D. Baker. Mr. Baker is the director of the production. "The End of the Tour" combines comedy and pathos, and its climax is a genuine sensation. In the story two stranded actors decide to recoup their fortunes by teaching the firemen of a Volunteer Hose Company how to act. Incidentally, they become well acquainted with the townspeople, prominent among whom are Col. Jessup and his fair daughter Grace. Lionel Barrymore plays "Buddy," ex-leading man and matinee idol. Frank Currier, Ethel Dayton, Kate Blancke, Charles Eldridge and other favorite players are in the cast, which includes a charming new discovery, Mary Taylor, no less a person than the wife of the playwright and film editor, Charles A. Taylor. Although she is known on the stage, this will be her advent in the screen drama.

Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew have been enjoying a well deserved rest. Out on the Pacific coast, Harold Lockwood and May Allison are working hard to complete the production of "Pidgin Island," a picturization of Harold MacGrath's famous novel. They are under the direction of Fred J. Balshofer, who has also made the screen version. Lillian Hayward, William Ephe, Lester Cuneo and other well-known favorites are included in the cast, which is of practically uniform excellence. The many lovers of MacGrath's masterpiece will be delighted to know that the book has been carefully followed in the screen version, and that picturesque spots along the Pacific coast have been chosen to form a setting for the photoplay. Jay Hunt is assisting Mr. Balshofer in the production.

Vosburgh Joins Ince Forces

ALFRED VOSBURGH has been engaged by Thomas H. Ince to play opposite Enid Bennett in Triangle-Kay-Bee productions. This is Mr. Vosburgh's second connection with the moving spirit of Inceville, having been a member of the old Kay-Bee and Broncho companies.

Alfred Vosburgh.

Before the formation of the triangle, he became associated with another studio, but has now returned to his first allegiance, to be featured in conjunction with little Miss Bennett.

Mr. Vosburgh gained his first knowledge of acting as a "super" in the company of Robert B. Mantell. Later on, while appearing as a butler in a stage production, the leading man failed to put in an appearance, and he was asked to do the part, which he continued in for the following four seasons. Although Mr. Vosburgh did creditable work in "Barriers Burned Away," "The Deep Purple," "The Idler," and other successes of the spoken drama, he says that his best work has been done for the screen under Mr. Ince's direction.

WILLIAM RUSSELL IS RE-SIGNED BY AMERICAN.

William Russell, the popular Mutual star, whose work in "The Diamond from the Sky" and in such five-reel productions as "Soul Mates," "The Man Who Would Not Die," "The Man from Manhattan" and "The Torch Bearer" have given him a unique place in the film world, has been put under new contract by S. S. Hutchinson, president of the American Film Company, for the ensuing year and will continue to be seen in Mutual Star productions.

Universal Screen Magazine

Will Make Its First Appearance With the Week of Nov. 20 —Novel Idea.

THE Universal program for the week of November 20 is noteworthy in that it contains the first issue of the "Universal Screen Magazine," which will be released on November 24. This magazine will treat of new inventions, microscopic and astronomical photography, phases of sociological and civic betterment work and in general of subjects which cannot be strictly classified as "news" for the Animated Weekly. In other words, the Universal Screen Magazine will be a supplement to the Animated Weekly just as the Sunday Magazine section of the daily newspaper supplements and elaborates upon the news of the day.

On November 20 the Universal will release "The Devil's Bondwoman," a five-reel Red Feather drama written by Willie Woods, scenarioized by Maie Havey and produced by Lloyd Carleton. Dorothy Davenport, Emory Johnson, Richard Morris, Adele Farrington, William Canfield and Miriam Shelby appear in the picture. On the same day Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran will offer to comic relief in the Nestor comedy, "How Do You Feel?" which was sceenarioized by Walter Newman from the story by Robert McGowan and produced by L. Chaudet. Fred Gamble and Priscilla Dean play the principal roles in the pictures.

"The Woman He Feared," a three reel society drama featuring Viola Smith, will be released on November 21 under the Gold Seal brand. This startling feature was produced by Harry Millarde from the story by E. M. Ingleton. Franklyn Farnum, William Canfield, Clarissa Selwyn and Adele Farrington play the principal roles. The Special Victor comedy, "Felix Gets In Wrong," featuring Edith Roberts, will be released on the same date. The story of the play by Frank Ormston was scenarioized by Calder Johnstone and produced by Frank Ormston. George Felix, Frank Staple, Margaret Whistler, George Odell, Viola Lind also play important parts. There will be no Victor release this week.

Betty Schade and Charles Cummings are featured on November 22 in the Imp drama, "When He Came Back," which was written by Joseph Le Brandt and produced by John McDermott. Malcolm Blevins appears in support of the principals. On the same day Billie Ritchie raises particular Ned in "Where Is My Wife?" an L-Ko two reel comedy and No. 47 of the Universal Animated Weekly will be released.

"The Emerald Pin," a Laemmle two-reel drama scenarioized by Maie Havey from the story by E. Magnus Ingleton and produced by Burton George will be released on November 23 with Roberta Wilson, Eileen Sedgwick, Gretchen Lederer, Charles Perley, Louise Owen and Myrtle Gillette in the principal roles. On the same date the Powers juvenile release, "Irma In Wonderland," written and produced by Lule Warrenton, will be released with Irma Sorter, Dorothy Clark, Linnie Gee, Bennie Suslow, Gerald Ward and George Hupp in the leading juvenile roles. On November 23 "Accusing Evidence," a Special Big U mountain drama featuring Lon Chaney, Pauline Bush and Murdock MacQuarrie also will be released.

On November 24 the Imp two-reel mystery drama, "Circumstantial Guilt," scenarioized by Maie Havey from the story by George Suprenant and produced by George Cochrane will be released. Jack Nelson and Burton Law will play the principal roles supported by Grace Bonyng, Charles Cummings, Fred Montague and Dan Duffy. On this date Number One of the Universal Screen Magazine will be issued, together with the Nestor comedy, "Married a Year," featuring Ed. Sedgwick and Betty Schade. "Married a Year" was written by Calder Johnstone and produced by John McDermott.

"The Lost Lode," a two-reel mining drama featuring Edith Johnstone and Edward Hearn will be released under the Bison brand on November 25. This thriller was scenarioized by William Parker from the story by J. B. Ricem and produced by Henry McRae. E. N. Wallack and L. C. Shumway also play important roles in it. On the same date Gale Henry and William Franey co-star in the Joker comedy, "A Janitor's Vendetta," written by Harry Wulze and produced by W. W. Beaudine. Lillian Peacock, Charles Conklin and Milburn Moranti also play important parts in the production. There will be no Laemmle release on this date.

On November 26 a split reel Powers containing "Sammy Johnson at the Sea Side," a comic cartoon, and "In and Around Ancient Japan as Seen by Dr. Dorsey," an educational split reel will be released. A Big U special, "The Heroine of San Juan," a two-reel military drama featuring Francis Ford and Grace Cunard also will be released on this date. This special release was written by Grace Cunard and produced by Francis Ford. There will be no Rex nor Imp release on this date.

During the week of November 20 "The Flag of Truce," the fifteenth episode of the Universal special serial, "Liberty," featuring Marie Walcamp, Jack Holt and Eddie Polo will be released. Neal Hart, Maud Emory, Bertram Grassby, L. M. Wells and G. Raymond Nye also play important parts in this most popular of Universal serials.

William Russell Leads in "Lone Star" on Program for Week of November 20.

WILLIAM RUSSELL in a strong tale of Indian life on the Nebraska reservation heads the releases of the Mutual Film Corporation for the week of November 20. The title of the five reel Mutual Star production in which Russell is starred is "Lone Star." Russell plays the title role, that of an uncivilized Indian, who becomes one of the country's most celebrated surgeons.

This production gives Russell a great opportunity to do some excellent work and it is quite remote from any type ever portrayed by him heretofore. His transition from an uncouth, hot-tempered and uncivilized savage to the highly polished surgeon is not one acquired in a day, but is steady and Russell is called upon to do some very clever work to show this transition.

The story of "Lone Star" is by Kenneth Clarke and this in itself speaks a lot for the success of the production. It was directed by Edward Sloman of the American Film Company

In this story the white man's civilization appeals to Lone Star, who becomes part of it. He becomes an outcast of the Indians for seeking the white man's civilization and is scorned by the whites because he is an Indian. Russell feeling that this role was one of the best opportunities of his career and that the character of Lone Star was well suited to his type has made the most of it.

Charlotte Burton as the millionaire's daughter, Harry Von Meter, Alfred Ferguson and Ashton Dearholt support Russell in "Lone Star."

"The False Clew," a two reel Mutual drama will be released on November 20. Dorothy Davenport is starred in this production. It is the story of the murder of a girl's father being placed at the door of her lover, who was not approved by the murdered man. The maid tells of a quarrel which had ensued between the two men and later the young man is arrested. He is cleared by the story told by the butler. The butler relates of how the girl had been brought up by him and his wife, after the death of her mother and they had been the only ones to know of the girl's secret marriage. He then tells who the real murdered was.

"The Detective's Head," the first chapter of the great Gaumont photonovel, "The Vampire," will be released on November 23. This is in three reels and contains thrills galore. "The Vampires," shown both in England and France, has been one of the most successful serials ever put out. It follows the "Fantomas" picture and bids fair for eclipsing their wide popularity.

This first chapter tells of the murder of Detective Durtal by the "vampires," a band of criminals operating in Paris. Durtal had sworn to run down the crime trust and this was their answer. The head of the murdered man is missing. No one knows who the Vampires are, but do know that they commit the most dastardly deeds. After the discovery of the dead man, Philip Guard, a young newspaper reporter starts out to find the clues which will lead to the arrest of the Vampires.

George Ovey, in a very clever one-reel comedy, "Jerry's Double Header," in which he not only captures a hold-up man, and gets a big reward, but is made the hero of the hour and wins the girl of his dreams, is released on November 24.

"An Artful Dodger," a one-reel comedy featuring Bill Parsons and containing a whole raft of laughs, is scheduled for November 25, in connection with a one-reel drama, title to be announced later.

For November 26, Rube Miller and Lillian Hamilton, famous for their comic actions with the Vogue Company, will appear in "Up the Flue," a two-reel Vogue production. A laugh a minute in store for everyone seeing this comedy, in which after many hair-raising incidents, a bomb is thrown out of a window, which lands on a big chimney, causing the chimney to fall to the earth. Everyone in the cast is rained upon with thousands of bricks.

There are four one-reel scenics to be released this week. The second of the "Tours Around the World," "Reel Life," "See America First," on the same reel with "Kartoon Komics" and the "Mutual Weekly."

Paramount Picture Plays

Marguerite Clark Makes Her First Appearance Under Her New Contract Week of November 20—Cleo Ridgely and Wallace Reid on the Program.

THE first straight farce in which Marguerite Clark, Famous Players star in Paramount Pictures, has appeared on the screen, will be "Miss George Washington," which in connection with the Lasky production of "The Yellow Pawn" in which Cleo Ridgely and Wallace Reid co-star, formulate the two features on the Paramount Program for the week of November 20. Both features are of an exceptionally high class quality, and surrounding the features for the week will be the forty-first edition of the magazine-on-the-screen, the Paramount Pictographs; the forty-second weekly "Trips Around the World" with Burton Holmes, which he has been conducting personally for Paramount, this week going to British Egypt, and the Paramount-Bray Cartoon from the pen of Earl Hurd, "Bobby Bumps at the Circus."

The appearance of Marguerite Clark on the program for this week marks her return to the screen for an indefinite period of time, the announcement of which dispels all doubt concerning this screen favorite's decision of remaining on the screen despite repeated rumors that she would return to the stage. "Miss George Washington" is a story of a girl who could not tell the truth, and is filled with a whirlwind of complications reaped by a single lie, and which will discourage anybody from hereafter departing from the truth. She is supported in this production by a cast of the following players: Frank Losee, Niles Welch, Florence Marten, Joseph Gleason, Maud Turner Gordon, "Billy" Watson and Herbert Prior.

"The Yellow Pawn" is conceded to be the most attractive photoplay that has ever been given to Cleo Ridgely and Wallace Reid for their portrayal on the Paramount Program. In an automobile accident the heroine is compelled to accept the hospitality of James Nelson, an artist, played by Wallace Reid, and which becomes a case of "love at first sight." The production is done in a high class, artistic style, for which all Lasky productions have become famous. There are a number of thrilling incidents and complications that surround the two leads, which show the inner workings in a new guise of the modern district attorney's offices. The stars are surrounded by the following cast of players: William Conklin, Tom Forman, Olive Golden, C. H. Geldert, George Webb and Mr. Kuja.

The magazine-on-the-screen, the Paramount Pictographs for this week, contain four feature subjects, all of which are unique and especially attractive in themselves. The first is the third installment of the pictures secured by Dr. George Burbank Shattuck, Professor of Geology in Vassar College, which show some unusually unique and interesting scenes along a number of waterways of Alaska, and takes a cruise along the "inside passage" of the water route from Vancouver to the Alaskan shipping district at Juneau. During this trip wonderful icebergs are seen and beautiful wild scenery is shown from the deck of the boat, which is always a source of wonder, visualizing what wonderful charm there is to be found in the great silence of the Arctic land.

Another section shows submarine gardens, which is one of the greatest novelties and most remarkable achievements in motion picture photography, a series of pictures made possible by the perfection of the submarine camera, and taken at the bottom of the sea, ten miles off the coast of Florida, picturing coral reefs and sea growths, and bringing into play a wonderful amount of action through the struggle which ensues between a diver and a huge "rattle snake of the deep." In the series of pictures, "Health First," the contribution for this week gives the latest cure for the fat, in which there is shown the various ingenious devices recently invented to eliminate excessive avoirdupois from people who are too lazy to walk or take exercise, while comedy is injected into the reel in the Plastique contribution of Ashley Miller, in which he shows how Sir Isaac Newton discovered the law of gravitation.

The Paramount-Burton Holmes Travel Pictures, which is the forty-second of the series of "Trips Around the World," conducted personally by Mr. Holmes, takes the travelers to British Egypt, and in doing so takes them back to the very beginning of human history, as British Egypt, of which Cairo is the center of governmental control, is the neutral ground between the up-to-date today and the far-remote mysterious yesterday of the human race. In this trip in Cairo there are to be seen citizens of every race under the sun. One hundred and one interesting sights are shown to the journeyers in their tour to the great Nile Bridge, where the novel traffic of this country is wonderfully interesting. Every little nook and corner of British Egypt is shown, together with all its intimate comparisons of thousands of years before.

The Paramount-Bray carton for this week comes from the pen of Earl Hurd, and takes Bobby Bumps, his clever character, to the circus. The antics through which Bobby is compelled to go until he excites sufficient interest in his father's mind to give him enough cash to get into the "tented city" are humorous in the extreme. This single reel is one of the funniest that has ever been released by Paramount.

Special attractive lithographs, cuts and other exhibitor's aids are distributed by Paramount with each of their feature pictures on the Program, and their "little features" in all the Paramount exchanges, the exhibitor's aids department are doing everything in their power to have all Paramount Pictures presented in a better manner for a better public in a better class theater. The distribution of the free accessories for exhibitors is being continued weekly through the exhibitor's aids department, and are having a marked effect upon the high calibre of their advertising and publicity.

Getting Ready for "Stingaree"

New Hornung Stories Will Be Directed by James Horne—Strong Cast Being Selected.

KALEM'S New York offices are humming with preparations for the new series of stories of "Stingaree," by E. W. Hornung, the famous creator of "Raffles." The first four stories for the new series arrived in the mails from England last week and already the work of preparing them for production is well under way.

The enthusiasm of Kalem's executives over the successor to one of their most popular series of productions has taken new bounds since the receipt of the initial stories. The plots of Mr. Hornung give every evidence that the second edition of the adventures of the Australian bushranger will have all the points of popular appeal that caused the original stories to score so pronounced a hit. "Stingaree" is once more the debonair, devil-may-care gentleman-outlaw, a Robin Hood in modern and picturesque settings. A reading of the first stories to be received would indicate that the new series will contain even more action and tense drama than the first edition.

The second edition of "Stingaree" is probably the first motion picture to pass a censor in story form, but in this case it is Great Britain's War Censor who has O.K'd the plots. That a sense of humor—or of appreciation of a good story—is not lacking in even a despotic mail censor is shown by a pencilled notation across the corner of the first story. It read: "Hope to see this story on the cinema screen soon—Censor." This approval by the august censor is taken as a good omen by Kalem.

As the first step in the production plans the company announced last week that James W. Horne will be in charge of the staging of the new "Stingaree." This is another assurance that the new series will be up to the mark of the original productions since Director Horne held the reins in staging those two reelers. The "Girl from Frisco" series from the pen of Robert Welles Ritchie is also an evidence of the ability of Director Horne to stage series productions that maintain the interest steadily week after week. It was found necessary to increase the latter series from fifteen to twenty-five episodes.

A strong supporting cast is being formed to appear with True Boardman, who will once more be seen in the title role of "Stingaree." The next few weeks will bring full announcement of the other players to be seen in the series and further plans for the productions. It has been definitely decided that the series will consist of fifteen episodes, each of two reel length. Following the plan that Kalem has developed in this special field, each of the two-reel releases will tell a separate story, with the central character carried throughout.

Within the past week two well known publishing houses have been in communication with Kalem to learn what arrangements had been made for the publication of Mr. Hornung's stories. The announcement that an author of Mr. Hornung's international reputation had consented to write a series of fifteen stories around one of his best known characters especially for the screen, seems to have created a flurry in literary circles.

CULLEN LANDIS, ASSISTANT DIRECTOR.

Cullen Landis, eighteen years old, has graduated from the actor clan at Balboa studio to be a full-fledged assistant director. He is attached to the staff of Director Sherwood MacDonald, who is directing Jackie Saunders.

Chicago Reel Fellows' Club

The Second Annual Reception and Ball, Held in the Gold Room of the Hotel La Salle, Friday, Nov. 10, a Notable Success.

THE second annual reception and ball of the Reel Fellows' Club of Chicago was held at the Hotel La Salle, in the Gold Room, on the nineteenth floor. The Red Room on the same floor served as an ante-room and an Italian garden, where cafe service was rendered until a late hour.

It was about 10 o'clock before the large dancing hall was fully filled, and new arrivals up to midnight continued to tax its capacity. It was about that hour when Richard C. Travers, vice-president of the club, introduced the moving picture stars who graced the occasion by their presence. Among these were Miss Marguerite Clayton and Miss June Walker, of the Essanay Company; Miss Dolores Casinelli, of the Emerald Motion Picture Co., and Patrick Calhoun, Harry Dunkinson and other members of the Essanay Company.

There was high expectation that Max Linder, who arrived in town early on Friday, Nov. 10, from France, would put in an appearance, but the following telegraphic message from George K. Spoor, president of Essanay, which was read by Mr. Travers, dissipated the hope:

Mr. Max Linder extends his best wishes and compliments to the Reel Fellows' Club. He desires me to say that his fourteen-day journey from Contreville, France, to our city, makes it necessary for him to go into immediate rest, and, therefore, regrets he cannot participate in the frolic of the Reel Fellows' Club this time. Please accept my regrets also.

It was well after midnight when the grand march took place. It was led by Miss Marguerite Clayton and Richard R. Nehls, president of the Reel Fellows' Club, who were followed in succession by Miss Dolores Casinelli and F. J. Flaherty, vice-president of the club; Miss June Walker and Patrick Calhoun, Mr. and Mrs. William J. Sweeney, Miss Eva Campbell and Wallace Carlson, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Dunkinson, etc.

After the grand march a bevy of nattily dressed young ladies served as newspaper girls, offering for sale a special photoplay edition of the Chicago Evening Post, gotten up by Mrs. Lawrence and Mr. B. C. Coffey, of the staff of that paper, in aid of the Reel Fellows' ball. It is needless to say that many sales were made, and that all prices were asked and received, pennies being scoffed at.

After this dancing was resumed and in the intervals a long, varied and exceptionally talented program of musical, vaudeville and other numbers was offered. Chief among the novelties was the Harry James Louisville Jug Band, the members of which played musical numbers on the mouths of stone whiskey jugs.

During the intervals the following dramatic celebrities were also introduced: John Barrymore and his leading lady, Bertha Mann, of "Justice," from Power's theater; Emily Stevens, of "The Unchastened Woman," from the Princess, and forty-five members of the "Alone at Last" company, from the Illinois theater.

Music was furnished by a tango orchestra of six pieces, furnished for the occasion by Carl Laemmle, of Universal and Bluebird, and the Hotel LaSalle orchestra of ten pieces.

The members of the club who were unremitting in their labors to make the event a great and worthy success were: Richard C. Travers and M. G. Watkins, of the executive committee; E. B. Lockwood, of the committee on arrangements, and G. V. Booth, of the committee on advertising. These men were well nigh exhausted when the ball came to an end about 4 o'clock Saturday morning.

Among those present in the large and fine assemblage were: Mr. and Mrs. John R. Freuler, Mrs. S. S. Hutchinson, Miss Loraine Freuler and Miss Anita Lasche; Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Hamburger, Mr. and Mrs. Donald J. Bell, Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Nehls, Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Flaherty, Mr. and Mrs. I. Lesserman, Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Miller, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Sweeney, Mr. and Mrs. M. G. Watkins, Mr. and Mrs. Eli Van Ronkel, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Noto, Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Hellinger, Mr. and Mrs. Ed. J. Mooney, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Aldous, Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Cohn, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Ziebarth, Mr. and Mrs. George Berg, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Hildreth, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Coon, Dr. and Mrs. Guy Churchill, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Watterman, Mr. and Mrs. John E. O'Toole, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Whelan, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Proctor, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Leaverton, Mr. and Mrs. William Hamm, Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Wild, F. Walter Wild and G. K. Wild, Mrs. W. Rautman and Miss Isabel Rautman, Misses Jeanette and Bessie Pohn, Miss R. Telser, Messrs. Watterson R. Rothacker, I. Van Ronkel, J. V. Ritchie, C. H. Miller, Herman Rosenblum, E. F. Lessner, Lee Mitchell, A. E. Curtis, Dr. J. J. McDermott, William L. Pohn, S. Simon and John Weiss.

Screen Club Gives House Warming

The Beautiful New Clubhouse on Forty-fifth Street Appropriately Dedicated to Good Fellowship and to Art.

ON Saturday evening, November 11, the Screen Club gave the first party in the splendid new quarters at 114 West Forty-fifth street. The beefsteak, chops and beer were good, but the occasion will be remembered for the flow of soul. We sat near the window of the grillroom, which is on the level with the street, and through the half-open window we heard a passer say: "Oh, no, that's the Screen Club." Perhaps the inquirer thought it was a football practice game. It doesn't matter. We were satisfied to be inside listening out. If at times there were rival songs and rival cheers, there was also a rivalry in good fellowship more and more till there was no other though but that it was good to be there.

Though at first those near the kitchen thought it fun to keep those near the windows from geting anything to eat or drink, it was taken in good spirit. The cheers, songs, good stories and especially the wise and helpful speech of Wilton Lackaye welded the party into a union of comrade spirits and made it good to be there.

To begin with, the meeting desolved itself into an ovation for President Billy Quirk. President Billy handled the gathering splendidly, steering it through pleasant places and sunlit coves where the waves rippled to cheering songs. Eugene Sanger was the first guest called upon to speak. He said among other things that the camera has made the actor express repose. After Mr. Sanger, Ed. Carew was called upon, and then J. J. Gleason. Wilton Lackaye was next and gave the best talk of an evening that had no flat places at all. He praised the Screen Club as a place where artists after dumb gesticulations could meet and talk. He thought that the club should be a sort of clearing house for ideas and said that if it was right for the manufacturer to combine, it was the part of wisdom for the actor to sit at the feet of business and take a page out of its wisdom. He called the club a place for mutual confidences, and said that a club should be better than its separate individuals.

Rockcliffe Fellowes was the next to respond and then Wilfred North. Following him Harry Benham sang—it was to order—"O Promise Me," and followed it by a selection of his own in which all joined in the chorus, "It Is Always Fair Weather." Paul Scardon had a few words and Alan Hale told several brand new and very amusing stories to which James Lackaye added two that were as fresh and good.

Albert Roccardi, who was in the hospital with a badly injured arm, was remembered by a rising toast and a telegram from "Silent Bill" Haddock was read and applauded. Harry McRae Webster gave a short talk and John Race spoke on the club's finances and the need to increase the dues from $12 a year to $20 and the initiation fee from $30 to $50. John Ramp in his speech said that unionism rationally done was just as essential to the performer as to the manager, but that nothing should be done impulsively, and concluded with the statement that whenever performers present grievances to the managers in the right way they will meet with consideration. Herbert Pryor recalled some of the old days six or seven years ago and President Quirk called for "Olde Lang Syne."

KLEVER COMEDIES TO PRESENT VICTOR MOORE.

The Klever Pictures, Inc., with offices in the Candler Building, New York, announces that it has made arrangements with Victor Moore by which the well-known player will appear in a series of one-reel comedies under that company's direction.

RELEASE DATE SET FOR LA BADIE PLAY.

December 3 has been set as the release date for "Divorce and the Daughter," Florence LaBadie's next Thanhouser-Made Pathe Gold Rooster play. The story is by Agnes C. Johnston. Frederic Sullivan is the director.

PICTURE MAN ELECTED A J. P.

Joseph Byron Totten, the local studio director, at one time with the Essanay, now with Nat Goodwin Co., was elected Justice of the Peace for the Town of Voluntown, Conn., at the last election, held November 7.

Paramount for Next Four Months

List Presents a Stellar and Dramatic Array, the Greatest in Paramount's and Feature History.

A TOTAL of thirty-four Paramount productions are given in the schedule which will be distributed during the months of November, December, January and February. Announcements such as these on prior occasions were made by Paramount for only one month in advance, but by reason of the consolidations that have been effected by Famous Players, Lasky, Morosco and Pallas, during the past two months, they are now enabled to offer their exhibitors the subjects of their forthcoming releases three and four months in advance.

During this period Marguerite Clark will make three screen appearances and Pauline Frederick two. These two stars recently renewed their contracts with the Famous Players. The other stars who will appear on the program during these four months are Mae Murray, Fannie Ward, Irene Fenwick, Louise Huff, Owen Moore, Jack Pickford, Blanche Sweet, Dustin Farnum, Cleo Ridgely, Wallace Reid, Lenore Ulrich, Marie Doro, Lou-Tellegen, Frank McIntyre, Vivian Martin, Kathlyn William, Thomas Holding, House Peters, Myrtle Stedman, George Beban, Sessue Hayakawa, and Theodore Roberts. Of these stars, those who will be added to the list and who make their debut in Paramount Pictures during the period are Irene Fenwick and Frank McIntyre.

Next to the long list of stars Paramount points to the exceptional list of productions that are to be presented during this period. Beginning with "Seventeen," Booth Tarkington's novel, the first week in November, and ending with "The Consul" by Paul West, the last week in February, the intervening weeks are filled with the best producing material that was obtainable.

Probably the most noteworthy offering to be presented will be that of "Oliver Twist," a particularly elaborate adaptation of Charles Dickens' immortal work, a Lasky production in which Marie Doro will play the title role supported by an all-star cast. A second stage success that will permit another popular Paramount star to repeat her oral triumph on the screen, will be "Snow White," in which Marguerite Clark appeared in the title role under the management of Winthrop Ames, before Miss Clark made her screen debut. "Miss George Washington," an original story and "Racketty Packetty House," by Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett, another famed dramatic success, are the two additional productions that will be contributed to this list with Marguerite Clark in the stellar parts. Pauline Frederick will be seen in "Nanette of the Wilds," an unusual character drama, and "The Painted Woman," from the pen of Frederick Arnold Kummer. The latter production is promised to be the most elaborate that Famous Players have ever made with Miss Frederick.

Among the other productions that are contained in the list are the "Martyrdom of Philip Strong," "Unprotected," "A Son of Erin," "The Plow Girl," "The Years of the Locust." "The Yellow Pawn," "Princess Zim-Zim," "The Road to Love," "The Victoria Cross," "The Traveling Salesman," "The Right Direction," "The Redeeming Love," "Betty to the Rescue," "The Evil Eye," "Great Expectations," "The Deliverance," "The Happiness of Three Women," "Lost and Won," "The Show Down," "His Sweetheart," "The Turning Point," "The Conflict," "Each to His Kind," "The Black Wolf," "The Wax Model," "Winning of Sally Temple," and "The Consul."

The writers, authors and playwrights who have contributed to this list of productions are among the foremost in the world and include such names as Booth Tarkington, Charles Dickens, Edward Sheldon, Blanche Dougan Cole, Paul Potter, James Forbes, Julia Crawford Ivers, L. V. Jefferson, Beatrice DeMille, Leighton Osmun, Hector Turnbull, Paul West, Albert Payson Terhune, Rennold Wolf, Owen Coyne, Frederick Arnold Kummer, Roswell Dague, Jean Barrymore, G. Vere Tyler, Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett, Rupert Sargent Holland, Rev. Charles M. Sheldon, and William Mack.

Elaborate and extensive exhibitors' aids have been planned for each of these productions by Paramount, and it is announced that it will be the endeavor of each of the exchanges distributing these features to have these productions presented in the manner appropriate with their merit and importance.

Paramount has established in each of its branch offices, Exhibitors' Aid Departments and recently distributed to these exchanges for their exhibitors, $200,000 worth of accessories to follow out the idea of presenting "better pictures in better theaters for a better public," and to link up the name of Paramount with every theater presenting the productions of Famous Players, Lasky, Morosco and Pallas. Special publicity, newspaper mat services, one, three, six and twenty-four sheets are also distributed in connection with these productions.

Kathryn Adams—Thanhouser Leading Woman

KATHRYN ADAMS, Thanhouser leading woman, who is an adventuring young widow in "Divorce and the Daughter," Florence La Badie's next Pathe Gold Rooster play, is an example of an actress who can play with equal facility sweet girls and vampires.

Miss Adams has specialized in parts where she was called upon to wreck men's lives, but so successful has she been in other characterizations that when Ernest Warde wanted an actress to play Olivia, the oldest daughter of "The Vicar of Wakefield" in the Thanhouser feature that Frederick Warde is now making, he chose Miss Adams for the part.

Kathryn Adams.

St. Louis was Kathryn Adam's birthplace. She showed talent for singing and after after several years of study, joined "Louisiana Lou," a musical comedy. This engagement was followed by one in "Hop o' My Thumb." She went to New York, determined upon an operatic career. Several of her friends were motion picture actresses and she decided to try the films. She was immediately successful. She was with Tom Terris in "The Pursuing Shadow" and went to Metro to play "The Lady That's Known as Lou" in "The Shooting of Dan McGrew." After engagements with World, Fox and Famous Players she became a member of the Thanhouser Stock Company and has been at the New Rochelle studios for more than a year.

Miss Adams was the wife who almost went astray in "The Shine Girl" and has a strong vampire role in "Divorce and the Daughter." Mr. Thanhouser believes that Miss Adams' "Olivia" in "The Vicar of Wakefield" will be the finest thing she has ever done.

Fourteenth "Fairfax" Episode

Latest Episode of International's Newspaper Series Is Titled "The Hidden Menace."

Reviewed by Ben H. Grimm

A MURDER mystery and its solution by Jimmie Barton and Beatrice Fairfax furnish the theme of "The Hidden Menace," fourteenth two-reel episode in the Beatrice Fairfax series, released by the International Film Service. In this number the element of mystery has been injected into the story with interesting result. Harry Fox is seen as Jimmie Barton, the reporter, and Grace Darling as Beatrice Fairfax. The cast also includes Alice Masters and Nigel Barrie.

As usual, a letter to Beatrice Fairfax is the means by which things start. Jimmie gets an assignment to cover the mysterious death of a broker, and Beatrice shows him a letter she has received from a girl. The dead man was one of the girl's legal guardians. By clever detective work and daring resources the reporter learns that the girl's other guardian has been trying to make her believe she is insane. Jimmie finds that the broker was killed by the fumes of poison gas emanating from a little black bag which the second guardian caused to be placed in the office of the murdered man. The fourteenth episode of the newspaper series is an interesting one—almost several minor illogicalities are found.

"Extravagance"

Mme. Petrova, the Star of a Five-Reel Screendrama, Produced by Popular Plays and Players.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel

THE five-reel screendrama "Extravagance," written by Aaron Hoffman and released on the Metro program, might well be expected to point a moral, when the title is taken into consideration. The theme is an excellent one, and the story opens with every promise of being carried out in an interesting manner. The plot is too loosely woven, however, and moves with too slow a pace. The big scenes are retarded by an over-supply of incidents, and the tense moments are not handled with skill. The setting of the scenes and the individual efforts of the company, on the other hand, are all that could be desired.

Norma Russell, the part played by Mme. Petrova, is the daughter of a man whose motto is "Give me the luxuries of life and I can get along without the necessities." Norma has not been brought up to deny herself anything, and her extravagance forces her father to borrow money from Howard Dundore, a banker, who is in love with the girl. Franklin Hall, a young business man, is also an admirer of hers, and Norma returns his affection. Dundore is not an honorable man and he attempts to secure Norma by means of a note that her father has forged. Franklin Hall saves Mr. Russell from this situation and Norma and he are united. Later on Dundore gets Hall in his power and has him convicted of false entries in the books of the bank. While Hall is serving his sentence his wife is forced to earn her own living. She takes to writing moving picture scenarios, is well paid for her efforts, and invents a picture plot which is the means of establishing her husband's innocence.

The scenes of social life in "Extravagance" are well done, and have the proper air of good breeding. Mme. Petrova has not the slightest difficulty in making the most of her opportunities as Norma. She looks beautiful and wears a number of stunning gowns. H. Cooper Cliffe, Mahlon Hamilton and Arthur Hoops comprise her principal support. The picture was directed by Burton F. King.

"The Madness of Helen"

In Five-Reel Mystery Play Produced by Paragon, Ethel Clayton Does Skillful Work in Dual Role.

EMMETT CAMPBELL HALL is the author of "The Madness of Helen," a five-reel Paragon picture released by the World Film Corporation. The story is fantastic, in all of mystery pervading it that is a strong reminder of the "Jane Eyre" school of fiction. The realistic trait is thought essential to the modern drama finds no place in Mr. Hall's screen play, but the interest of his romantic plot keeps a firm hold on the spectator right up to the last foot of film. All the elements of the high-pressure love story, helped out by an engaging mystery and an unrestricted use of the laws of chance, have been utilized in the making of the picture. To the lovers of this class of scenario writing "The Madness of Helen" will prove an unalloyed delight. They will readily forgive the free hand with which the "happy ending" is used, including the ease with which all the sinners make their peace with their wives after attempting to break the Seventh Commandment.

Travers Vale directed the production. The locations and the strongly contrasting types to be found in the picture are consistent with the demands of the plot. The seashore views are particularly effective, except in one set, where a painted backing is used. Ethel Clayton in the dual role of Virginia and Helen Carlton acts with her customary earnestness and easy command of her art. Miss Clayton keeps the personalities of the two sisters distinct, and invests them both with the grace of refined and beautiful womanhood. Carlyle Blackwell is an excellent representative of the novelist, and Earl Schenck, Jack Drumier, Charles Duncan, Stanhope Wheatcroft and Mildred Cheshire are well-chosen members of the cast.

"Sins of Her Parent"

Gladys Brockwell Gives Exceptional Impersonations in Double Role in Five-Part Fox Production.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald

WHILE this production, based on a story by Thomas Forman, of Alaskan setting, may not be one that might be placed on a selected list for exhibition before children, still it is an excellent one of its kind. Stories that savor of the abandonment and lawlessness of the Alaskan dance hall of pioneer days have more or less of a fascination for the ordinary individual; and in the one in question the pictured contrast between the mother, a prostitute of the mining camp, and the pure and beautiful daughter who had in ignorance of the fact that her mother lived, been educated and supported by her illy gotten wages is most effective.

The story of the play is a cleverly constructed one. It pictures an artist in quest of local color stumbling across the dance hall favorite and paying her to pose for his picture of "The Madonna of the North." The exhibition of the painting in a Boston art gallery awakens the idea in the mind of the daughter that perhaps after all her mother may be alive. The further development of the story sends her Southern lover to Alaska to search for the mother of his sweetheart, from which a situation arises in which the young man is shot by the keeper of the dance hall. The appearance of the daughter on the scene about the same time affords an intensely dramatic situation which ends in shooting of both the mother and keeper of the dance hall.

The production has been cleverly directed by Frank Lloyd, and Gladys Brockwell is to be especially commended for her interpretation of the characters of the two women exactly similar in face, form and feature, but each the result of the conditions and environment into which it has been her lot to be cast.

Some good photographic and illuminative effects are present in the picture. The supporting cast, which is an excellent one, consists of William Clifford, Carl von Schiller, who plays opposite to Gladys Brockwell; George Webb, Herschell Mayall and Jim Farley.

Director W. W. Beaudine is directing the Universal Joker company in a one-reel comedy, "Two Doors and a Nut." The leads are played by Gale Henry and William Franey supported by C. Conklin and M. Moranti.

"The Chaperon"

The Play by Marion Fairfax, Filmed by Essanay, with Edna Mayo, Eugene O'Brien and Sydney Ainsworth in the Cast—Directed by Arthur Berthelet.

Reviewed by James S. McQuade.

IN "THE CHAPERON" we have an interesting story of American life, with incidents that whet the interest of the spectators up to the close. And the atmosphere is clean, notwithstanding that the heroine is the victim of a brief, unhappy marriage, due largely to the ambition of her mother, who has an especial fondness for foreign titles.

Scene from "The Chaperon" (Essanay).

It is almost needless to state that the mother, Mrs. Hemingway, is a wealthy widow or that Madge, her daughter, has a dowry that attracts the devoted attention of Count Van Tuyle, a gentleman and an officer from across the water, who sues for the hand of Madge through the propitious mediumship (if I may coin the word) of her mother. It is, however, more interesting to write that a handsome young American, Jim Ogden, loves Madge for her beautiful self alone, and that he leaves a clear way for the Count by giving up his suit for her hand and heart, because he is a penniless American who fears that he may be considered a fortune hunter. All of this fine, lofty pride of young Ogden is shattered in the end when Madge, after a brief six months of married life in Europe, flees her husband and returns alone to the maternal roof. Her titled husband, who pursues her to America, makes the way easy for his rival by declaring that he will not contest his wife's divorce suit if sufficiently provided with balm from the Hemingway gold chest. This is gladly and generously done by the now disillusionized mother of Madge.

The entrance of the Coombs family in the story furnishes considerable mirth to the spectator. Here, through a network of circumstances, Madge becomes the chaperon of the four pretty Coombs girls, during an enforced absence of their parents. When Mr. and Mrs. Coombs return they find that each of their daughters has become engaged, while Madge herself is under a cloud through an innocent escapade, in which no less a personage than young Jim Ogden figures prominently.

Edna Mayo's Madge is a typical American girl at all times. The scene on Hog Island, where Madge and Jim Ogden are marooned for a night by the wrecking of their canoe, will amuse without offending the nicest sense of propriety. Eugene O'Brien is a most worthy opposite, in the part of Jim Ogden, and the Count Van Tuyle of Sydney Ainsworth will impress everyone as a fine creation.

Frankie Raymond makes a strong character part of Mrs. Hemingway, while John Cossar and Marion Skinner cannot fail to win favor as Mr. and Mrs. Coombs.

The release date is Nov. 20, through the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay service.

"Without a Soul"

Clara Kimball Young Picture in Five Reels Reissued by the World Film Company—New Illuminated Subtitles Help It Much.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

AN actress could hardly ask for a better chance for picturing contrasted characters than Clara Kimball Young has in this World Film reissue, "Without a Soul." This story is in itself a sensation. In it we are shown the death of a young woman who had been of the most charitable and lovable disposition. Her father, a scientist, has discovered an electric ray that will recall the departed life and, after an accident, he applies it on her. As she lies on the operating table we see the shadow of misty Death hovering over her, and as she gathers back into her body the tide of life her soul departs. She is alive, but as she had been wholly unselfish before, she is wholly a selfish voluptuary now. She has become a woman without a soul.

This second part is the real picture. The portion of her life that was saintly was made little of. The spectator doesn't believe in it, he sees it as artificial and unconvincing. But it is soon past, and the convincing part of the story is being enacted before him with astonishing realism. She now takes up with the lover who in her former life she had despised. She leads him a merry dance for his money, but she fools him. Her eye has looked upon the shapely figure of a lifesaver at Atlantic City and she slips out of her room to meet him at night, her face subtilly changing to show that her mind looks forward to the meeting. We catch a glimpse of the two standing on the dark sands with lips pressed tightly together.

The other lover suspects, but as he has been cut off by his rich father on account of his fast life, she is through with him and has another rich man to elope with already chosen. Her heart is not strong and a doctor has told her she will soon die. She comes back to her father to have her life recalled a second time and dies in his office; but he will not again use the new discovery to bring her back; he destroys his machinery. This picture will almost surely make a tremendous hit. It is unusual and very artistic. It was formerly called "Lola."

On the Pathe Program

"Arms and the Woman," a Five-Reel Gold Rooster Feature, and "The Haunting Hand," Eighth Episode of "The Shielding Shadow" Serial.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

"Arms and the Woman."

THE scenario of "Arms and the Woman," the Pathe five-reel Gold Rooster photoplay, was written by Ouida Bergere, and ranks among the most effective of her contributions to the screen. The story is dramatic, and deals with a subject that is of vital importance at the present time—the manufacture in this country of war munitions for the Allies. Added to this, it has variety of scene, a strong human interest, vigorous action and a wide diversity of skilfully drawn characters. Rozika, a young Hungarian girl who comes to this country, is the heroine. She eventually becomes the wife of a wealthy manufacturer, the president of a great steel works, and the Scene from "Arms and the Woman" (Pathe).

"clash" between the pair is caused by the woman's horror of the death and destruction wrought by the products of her husband's plant. Her brother is instrumental in the burning of the buildings, after wounding the manufacturer. As the husband and wife watch the flames destroy the plant, the wounded man gives utterance to a sentiment that does more credit to his love for his wife than to his political convictions and love for humanity: realizing that the one barrier between them has been destroyed, he smiles, contented, and remarks, "It is better so."

The production demands a special paragraph of praise. Starting with the opening scenes on shipboard and embracing the views of the steel works, the European battlefields and the flashes of life at the two extremes of the social ladder, the settings are always impressive, a number of them being actual reproductions of the present war, and the making of great guns.

Mary Nash is featured in the cast as the young Hungarian girl. She acts with fervor and deep feeling, and succeeds in indicating the Slav temperament with much skill. Lumsden Hare gives a well-rounded impersonation of David Fravoe, and H. Cooper Cliffe is excellent as Capt. Halliday. Robert Broderick contributes a powerful characterization of the brutal Marcus, and Rosalind Ivan is beautifully human and sympathetic as his wife. The actor who plays the brother of Rozika also deserves unqualified commendation. The picture was directed by George Fitzmaurice.

"The Haunting Hand."

Episode Eighth of "The Shielding Shadow" follows the experiences of Leontine and Ravenger after their escape from the burning balloon. The incidents in this installment of the serial include the destruction of a light-house by lightning, and a hair-raising struggle on a lofty girder, in which One Lamp Louie is hurled to his death by Sebastian. Quick movement of events is maintained throughout the two reels, and Grace Dormond, Ralph Kellard and Leon Bary do their customary good work.

"Jimmy Dale—Alias The Grey Seal"

New Serial Presented by Unicorn Film Service Corporation Contains Rapid and Interesting Action.

THE first three episodes of another new serial made by the Monmouth Film Co. have all the ear-marks of commercial success. The story of the film, based on "The Adventures of Jimmy Dale," by Frank L. Packard, appearing in The People's Magazine, has that thrilling, impossible quality, with the morbidness attendant on crime themes that the public seem to like. It will be released in sixteen two-part episodes, and features four well-known and popular players, namely, E. K. Lincoln, Edna Hunter, Paul Panzer, and Doris Mitchell. Its first episode is entitled "The Grey Seal," and undertakes to present the characters of the story first in importance, clearly outlining that of Jimmy Dale, who is the son of a millionaire, and who, under some mysterious, unknown influence, follows the profession of breaking safes, leaving behind him an identification in the shape of a diamond-shaped gray seal. The proceeds of his escapades are always donated anonymously to some charitable purpose. A parallel thread of the story brings to light the plot of one Henry La Salle who with a party of organized criminals plans to murder his neice, Marie La Salle, in order to obtain possession of her fortune.

"The Stolen Rubies," which is the title of the second episode, finds a means of bringing Marie and Jimmy Dale together, when Marie takes refuge from her pursuers in the home of a wealthy society matron. Jimmy is further urged by the mysterious influence which signs itself "Toscin," and later finds himself aiding a victim of one Perly, a gambler whose double personality is revealed when he is brought to bay in his own den, and the rubies stolen by Perly's victim are mailed back to their rightful owners by Jimmy.

"The Counterfeit Five," the third episode in which Jimmy, now in love with Marie, is about to depart from his old methods of life for the second time, when he again receives a summons from "Tocsin." This time he is enjoined to go to the aid of one Sammy Mathews, an employee of the United States Currency Engraving Bureau, who is in the clutches of the "Crime Gang" of which Henry La Salle is the head. A thrilling fight with the police is the result, when Jimmy barely escapes capture.

"The Dollar and the Law"

In Co-operation With American Bankers' Association Vitagraph Produces Thrift Picture That Is Good.

Reviewed by George Blaisdell.

THE Vitagraph company in its five-part feature "The Dollar and the Woman" proves that a subject may take on the characteristics of a propaganda and at the same time be a most interesting subject. In order to accomplish this, however, it has selected a topic which with varying frequency enters the thoughts of nearly every man and woman that of thrift. To make stronger the lesson heavy emphasis has been laid upon the dangers of investing in schemes which promise more than 6 per cent. returns on the outlay. So deftly has the subject been treated that the story runs and holds of itself and by itself. You may have a feeling the picture ought to aid in increasing the deposits in savings banks, but until you see a trailer to the effect that the story was produced in co-operation with the savings banks section of the American Bankers' Association that phase of it does not obviously obtrude.

Lillian Walker has a good role and plays it well—that of a daughter of a miser. Believing her father to be as poor as he claims to be, she becomes an apostle of thrift sensibly so, not extravagantly. We are given an opportunity to see Miss Walker in a role outside of comedy—one of drama and of tragedy. For tragedy enters into "The Dollar and the Law" grewsome, realistic. There is a long cast employed in the portrayal of the story, which is Irvin Cobb's. Wilfred North directed. Among the principals are Edward Elkas, Thomas R. Mills, Walter McGrail, Arnold Storrer and Mrs. Maurice.

One of the interesting features of the picture is the showing of the "making of the dollar." Miss Walker as Lola Brandt is taken through the Treasury Department and to her is explained the process of manufacture and the distribution to the banks. Probably this is the first time a banknote has been shown on the screen without the exhibition being considered as coming within the prohibitions of the statute. This phase of the story well may be denominated educational.

The picture is well acted and contains strong situations, some of the more notable being those connected with the murder of the miser and the uncovering of the man guilty of the crime.

"The Vampires"

New Gaumont Serial Now Ready for Release—Shifting of Release from Earlier Date Caused by Delay in Obtaining the Films from France.

Appearing in our issue of September 16th page 1870, is a review of the first two episodes of this excellent serial which was made at the Paris Gaumont studios. This review, which appeared much earlier than was necessary, is none the less complimentary to the splendid results accomplished by both players and director. "The Vampires" is based on a weird, thrilling, and altogether absorbing story, and will find a large popularity among lovers of well-produced melodrama. The unanticipated delay in its date of release was caused by difficulties attending its transportation to America from France.

Universal Director Paton is working on the third episode of The Voice on the Wire, a mystery photoplay prepared especially for Ben Wilson. Neva Gerber plays opposite. The [illegible] version was prepared by Grubb Alexander.

"The Measure of a Man"

Five-Part Bluebird Features Louise Lovely and J. Warren Kerrigan in Pleasing Western Subject.

By Margaret I. MacDonald.

With [illegible] a few trivial faults, "The Measure of a Man" will pass muster as a production that can be recommended to the exhibitor and to the public as a production of wholesome quality. There is evident considerable padding, and a tendency toward revelation through sub-title, all of which is more or less compensated for by the excellent moral of the story, and the charming setting of the picture among the California redwoods.

The story treats of circumstances relating to the expulsion from a school of divinity of a young student, John Fairmeadow by name, whose indiscreet actions have saddened and horrified the professors and directors of the school. Fate brings him to California, where in spite of his efforts to break away from the "parson" idea, circumstances drag him ever back to the vocation for which he was evidently intended. On his arrival he appears on the scene of a funeral of the drunken father of a beautiful young girl with whom he afterward falls in love, and is persuaded to handle the funeral ceremony. His unconscious influence over the lumbermen forces him into the position of pastor of the flock, his first sermon being preached from an improvised pulpit in the shape of an old tree stump.

entrobed with power to do their "marryin'," a double wedding takes place, one of which is the parson's own.

A fine selection of types has been found for this production, in support of a cast consisting of Katherine Campbell, Ivor MacFadden, Marion Emmons, Harry Carter, and Marc Robins, in addition to J. Warren Kerrigan, and Louise Lovely.

"The Mystery of the Brass Bound Chest."

THE fifteenth episode of Kalem's "The Girl From 'Frisco" series, by Robert Welles Ritchie, titled "The Mystery of the Brass Bound Chest," compels interest throughout its two reels by means of a well-sustained element of mystery. Audiences who like melodrama will like this number especially.

Scene from "The Mystery of the Brass Bound Chest" (Kalem)

Several exciting fights are seen during the running of the film. The inspiration for the scenario was taken by the author from the actual existence some time ago of a secret society of Armenians, who were banded together to fight for freedom from Turkish persecution.

In the picture the author has elaborated upon the idea and blended it with the West of today. The plot hinges on the mysterious contents of a brass-bound chest purchased by Barbara Brent (Marin Sais). Possession of the chest leads to the murder of the dealer who sold it and to the capture by the band of John Wallace (True Boardman). Barbara, by clever work, is able to get into the secret order's rooms just in time to save Wallace from death in a dagger duel. It develops that the chest contained the names of the "Sacred Hundred" who were banded together to fight for freedom.

Besides the two mentioned, there are in the cast Frank Jonasson, Ronald Bradbury, Edward Clisbee and Karl Formes, Jr. Directed by James W. Horne. Released November 15.

"The Rogue's Pawn."

George Larkin performs two unusually daring feats in "The Rogue's Pawn," an episode of the "Grant, Police Reporter," series. During the screen telling of the story he swings from a broken telephone wire into the window of a burning building and later jumps from the fourth floor of the building into a life net. Excitement is kept at a high pitch by fast action during the course of a fire in a gambling house, which the reporter has entered after climbing up the back of the building in order to rescue the daughter of the police commissioner, who has been lured to the house by a ruse.

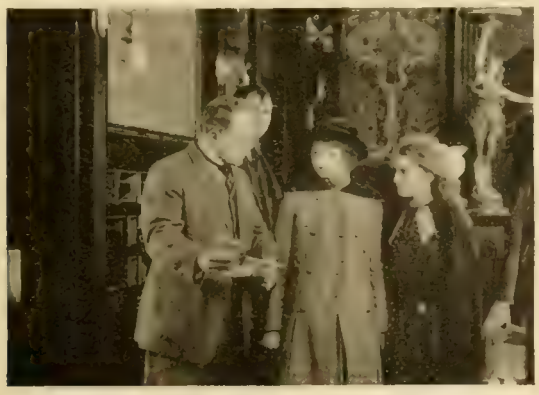
There seem to be no limits to the daring of Mr. Larkin, and in this number he takes chances on his life or limb several times. None of the power to excite through these stunts has been lost in the photographing of them. In the cast with Mr. Larkin are Ollie Kirkby, Director Robert Ellis, G. Chire, Arthur Albertson, William McKey and Mary Taylor Ross. For release November 17.

Two Triangle Features

"The Children Pay," Five-Reel Fine-Arts by Frank E. Woods, Featuring Lillian Gish and "Bawbs O'Blue Ridge," Five-Reel Ince by Monte M. Katterjohn, Starring Bessie Barriscale.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

FRANK E. WOODS has given us a new and attractive kind of judge in "The Children Pay," a personality so mercifully just as to be in advance of his profession, not of his time. Woods writes a true screen story and writes it as most editors of magazines prefer, "from the fullness of experience," with a Rupert Hughes tendency to score the little domestic hypocricies of provincial society life. He has seen what he is writing about, is picturing from actual experience and personal observation, all quite as consistently and cleverly as Rupert Hughes does in print. There is a refreshing relief in the characterization of Mr. Woods, his people are people we seem to know, and his love of children, his deep sympathy with their heart aches, makes him pre-eminently their representative in screen story.



Scene from "The Children Pay" (Triangle).

I share his love of children and appreciate his tender conception of what is due them from parents, but the subject is one to be considered from many viewpoints, according to the peculiarities of each individual case. "The Children Pay" relates to the mental sufferings of two little girls of loveless parents. It is first solved by the old judicial method, giving one child to each parent, only intensifying the misery of the girls by separation. It is eventually solved by giving the eldest to a live young man in marriage with custody of the younger, a novel ending of an unusual story. Lillian Gish is attractive in a new comedy role and her support is flawless. The entire play is fresh, original and consistent in treatment.

Bawbs of Blue Ridge.

Bessie Barriscale loves to climb a tree and let us know that she is one of those rare members of her sex who can boast of a symmetrical figure, nicely proportioned in every detail. We all knew that she was a charming actress some time ago without any tree-climbing, leg-splashing episodes, but, just as every young girl wants to wear a black velvet gown with a Princess train, so every attractive young actress longs to play a Cinderella role, wherein she may rise from the depths through the intervention of a passing Prince Charming. Given a poor young girl in love and a less persecuted, and a city chap of impressionable nature, the scene and incidents are of small consideration. The story is always a sweet one, only that brand of marmalade needs a tang of bitter originality to give it flavor.

Oh, those theatrical rags! Tatters beyond the wildest stretch of good-natured tolerance are they. Miss Barriscale wears them low-necked, short-sleeved, with a skirt brief enough to make even callous Broadway stop and look. Though continually exposed to the fury of the elements, she manages to keep as snow-white as any mountain girl ever shown on the screen. Scorching winds and blazing sun have no effect on her skin of lily and apple-blossoms. She is of the particular brand of cave girl now being shown at the Century Theater by Dillingham and Ziegfeld, to music by Victor Herbert and Irving Berlin. By the aid of a dozen or two "you-alls" in the sub-titles and some Los Angeles wildwood, we are given a vivid impression that we are really seeing a Cinderella of the Blue Ridge mountains of Virginia, some such vivid impression as we get of a forest from a theater back drop and wings. Still, Bessie manages to be very winning, and the story will please.

"Immediate Lee"

An Interesting Five-Reel American Featuring Anna Little and Frank Borzage.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

THE personality of Frank Borzage is strong enough to make the role of a gunman interesting whether he be hero or villain, an intense personality, quite capable of asserting itself in minor roles. It carries the story of "Immediate Lee" by main force, but there is a lack of other characterization in contrast and relief. Anna Little is a screen actress capable of carrying the lead herself, but she is here given small opportunity, to the disadvantage of the story. The audience is not very deeply concerned about what sort of revenge Immediate Lee intends to take on the man who has disfigured him for life. That is an issue, to be sure, but sympathy has been enlisted for the dance hall girl who has made a brave attempt to go straight.

In such a tremendous conversion of character, such as Miss Little is called upon to enact, there should be shown a dramatic inner struggle, a clash between impulse to return to the life she has been living and aspiration to improve. A weak girl too suddenly becomes a strong and pure one, not altogether consistent with human nature, and there is lost opportunity to picture her brave struggle without distracting from the movements of the vengeful hero. The director depends too much upon motion and not enough upon emotion. The situations are strongly and naturally pictured from an exterior point of view, with scarcely a glimpse of what is passing in the mind and hearts of the principal characters. The story is well handled so far as the scenes and action are concerned, but such plays in the future would be benefited with more striking contrast and deeper analysis of human nature.

"Crosby's Rest Cure"

The Drews Entertain in Wholesome Comedy with Amusing Plot—An Excellent Sample of Metro-Drew Comedies.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald

IT IS indeed refreshing after the myriads of farce and slapstick comedies to come across one brand at least that makes for fun without vulgarity. Legitimate comedy, well presented, is always a delight. On the other hand, one becomes nauseated with that low type of comedy that too frequently appears on the screen.

The story of "Crosby's Rest Cure" which features Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew, well groomed and nicely environed, proceeds to show us how Mr. Crosby, in the face of a startling situation, managed to surround his wife with perfect quiet in order that she might rest. The Crosby's, favorites in society, decide to sail for South America to escape trying social duties. A remark politely dropped by Mrs. Crosby brings a hurried decision on the part of her numerous friends to accompany them; whereupon on the day of departure Mr. Crosby bribes the chauffeur to see that they miss the boat, insuring them at least a month of quiet in their own home.

Five Christie Comedies

A Quartet of One-Reel Subjects and One Two-Reel Laugh-Producer Directed by Al E. Christie.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

THE names of the four one-reel comedies produced by the Christie Film Company, and directed by Al E. Christie, are "Some Kid," "Tramp! Tramp! Tramp!" "The Sea Nymphs," and "A Brass Button Romance," the two-reel picture having been given the title of "Bride and Gloom." Two companies are employed in the making of these comedies, Billie Rhodes, Eddie Barry and Harry Ham heading one of the casts, and Betty Compson, Neal Burns and Dave Morris the other. In "Bride and Gloom" Billie Rhodes, Harry Ham, Eddie Barry, Ethel Lynne, Jane Waller and Stella Adams play the parts. The chief merit of these comedies is the spirit of youth that pervades them. The plots are in no way remarkable for their humor or cleverness, "Some Kid" being founded upon the mistake of a book-loving young wife, who carries off a colored baby in mistake for her own while engrossed in the latest novel; "Tramp! Tramp! Tramp!" explains the adventures of two hoboes who are mistaken for college boys in disguise; "The Sea Nymphs" tells of the pleasant dream of an elderly gentleman, who imagines he has drunk of the fountain of youth and made a deep impression on a group of Pacific coast bathing girls; "A Brass Button Romance" is a burlesque on the familiar criminal drama, and "Bride and Gloom" relates to a pair of Newlyweds who are separated on their wedding night. None of this material is strikingly original, but it has been handled skillfully by the producer. Brisk action is to be found all through the five comedies, and the casts work with unabated zeal. The exterior and indoor settings are also well chosen, but the chief asset of the pictures is the youth and comeliness of Betty Compson and Billie Rhodes and the other young women employed in the Christie products.

"Liberty"

Universal Serial Is Proving Itself a Startlingly Realistic Drama of Warfare Along Mexican Border.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

INSTEAD of a slackening interest, which is sometimes felt in a long serial photoplay, "Liberty" has exceeded all promises and is now sweeping its way into the hearts of observers. Nothing has been done in the way of thrilling warfare and adventure to overshadow this production. Its thrills are the genuine outgrowth of a well-sustained plot, and each instalment, with its vivid pictures of conditions on the Mexican border, raises rather than lowers the high standard of the serial. The thirteenth, fourteenth and fifteenth episodes are wonderful, indeed.

Wm. B. Pearson, the author, has turned out a story that grows in fascination and affords the producing company a legitimate basis for fresh action as events proceed. The director, Jacques Jaccard, is entitled to great credit for the splendid manner in which he has staged the various instalments, and Fred L. Granville, the photographer, has obtained brilliant pictorial effects throughout. Marie Walcamp and Eddie Polo, who head the cast, have exceeded the daring performances for which they were already noted.

The instalments cited about picture a clash between American and Mexican troops. The invaders are seen digging trenches, behind which they are surrounded by a host of armed Mexicans. It is a battle to the death and practically all of the American command is wiped out before the appearance of the "Gray Ghost," an armored automobile, which eventually routs the foe. The commanding officer, Major Winston, suffers a wound and is buried alive by his men, with proper provision for air. He recovers later and makes his way out of his premature grave.

While the story of "Liberty" is full of exciting thrills, it at no time greatly strains the credulity of the observer. So strong is the general atmosphere of the production that it continually impresses one as an accurate picture of life along the border. It lends a real understanding to unfortunate conditions existing there and the numbers may be followed with profit by citizens of this country.

Thanhouser's Tenth Gold Rooster

New Releasing Plan at New Rochelle Studios Has Proved to Be Great Success.

WHEN Frederick Warde in "King Lear" is released through the Pathe exchanges on December 17, Edwin Thanhouser will have issued his tenth Thanhouser-Made Pathe Gold Rooster play under the Thanhouser Film Corporation's new arrangement with Pathe whereby Thanhouser releases two features a month.

Mr. Thanhouser is highly gratified with the success of the new plan whereby he concentrates his whole organization upon the manufacture of only ten reels a month. He has found that the market never is bad for a good picture, and the big demand for Thanhouser features, which increases with every release, has proved that he is delivering what the public seeks.

Florence La Badie's popularity is such that in order to meet the demands made by exhibitors, Mr. Thanhouser has seen to it that five of his first ten release were Florence La Badie features. The first Thanhouser-Pathe release was "The Fugitive," by Philip Lonergan, one of the most successful of the ten. The others of the Florence La Badie series were "The Fear of Poverty," by Agnes C. Johnston, "Saint, Devil and Woman," and "The Pillory," both by Philip Lonergan, and "Divorce and the Daughter," a December release, by Miss Johnston. All of Miss La Badie's features are directed by Frederic Sullivan.

Gladys Hulette's two plays, "The Shine Girl" and "Prudence, the Pirate," by Agnes C. Johnston, met with immediate success, placing Miss Hulette promptly among the few fully entitled to the biggest letters the electric signs can carry. Both plays have been highly praised for their ingeniousness and for their wholesomeness. Miss Hulette's personality has distant charm and no other actress has been so successful as she in portraying lovable little girls.

The Thanhouser-Pathe program has been as varied in subject as it has been even in quality. Besides the Florence La Badie and Gladys Hulette features, Mr. Thanhouser has presented Valkyrien (Baroness Dewitz) in "Hidden Valley," directed by Ernest Warde, a story of a white goddess and a tribe of South African idol worshippers, and Jeanne Eagels in "The World and the Woman," directed by Eugene Moore, a powerful drama with faith healing as its theme.

These two stories, far out of the beaten track, have been hailed with delight by grateful exhibtors, who always are looking for something new.

Frederick Warde's "King Lear" is the most pretentious offering of the first ten Thanhouser-Made Pathe Gold Rooster plays. The production is a massive one, and the adaptation clings consistently to Shakespeare's play. The cast has been carefully chosen, and every detail was watched by both the star and Ernest Warde, his son, who directed the feature.

Frederick Warde is a Shakespearian authority, and he took infinite pains so that the production would satisfy the most critical admirers of the immortal bard, as well as entertain with its wonderfully human story the moving picture patron who knows little of Shakespeare.

Argosy Films' Frost Picture.

An interesting picture will be released by the Argosy Films, Inc., very shortly, when it introduces its first production, a high-class five-reel comedy-burlesque, entitled "Where D'ye Get That Stuff, or Sallie's Blighted Career," featuring Edna Aug in the title role.

The Argosy Films, Inc., was recently formed for the purpose of making and releasing on a State rights basis high-class feature comedies and dramas, and H. J. Shepard has been appointed general manager of the company, whose executive offices are at 1600 Broadway, New York City.

"Where D'ye Get That Stuff? or Sallie's Blighted Career" is a highly amusing melange. Its dialog was written by H. C. Witwer, one of the most famous humorists in the country, many of his stories appearing in the Saturday Evening Post, and by C. H. Van Loan, who is recognized as one of the most prolific writers in the film world.

Selig Strives for Quality

Incurs an Expense of Fifty Thousand Dollars to Bring a Production Up to the Mark.

FIGURATIVELY speaking, I tossed fifty thousand dollars out of the window recently," stated William N. Selig in the course of a recent interview. "A seven-reel production had been in the course of making. I had received flattering reports as to the merits of the drama, reports that gave me very high hopes. The film was completed and I viewed it. I was disappointed. The story was a good one, the photography was good, there was a very capable cast of players, several stars, in fact—but there was something missing which, to my mind, put this production below the par of Selig Red Seal Plays. I ordered the picture remade. That order cost me fifty thousand dollars in cash.

"As I stated when the formation of the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay service was announced, I propose to release only dramas of the highest class in that organization. I propose to observe no special release date. The author of the proposed play, the director and the players are to have all the time necessary. There will be no hurry, no rush to complete a picture in time for a certain release date. And, above all, the production must be unusual, must have merit like, for instance, "The Country That God Forgot," "The Rosary," or "Into the Primitive," or "Thou Shalt Not Covet." No matter what the expense incurred, or the time incurred on a production, if it does not measure up to the standard I have set, that production goes into the discard.

"And there can be no more excuses on the part of authors and directors that they 'were hurried.' I am giving all the time wished for, and if, in plenty of time and with plenty of money, my producers cannot turn out high-class comedies and dramas, well, others will be summoned.

"The Selig company is now releasing a number of Red Seal Plays through Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay Service, and all of them are proving popular. These productions include 'The Carpet from Bagdad,' with Kathlyn Williams; 'The Millionaire Baby,' with Grace Darmond; 'The Circular Staircase,' with Eugenie Besserer; 'A Black Sheep,' with Otis Harlan; 'The Prince Chap,' with Marshall Neilan; 'The Country That God Forgot,' with Tom Santschi and George Fawcett. These and other Selig Red Seal Plays are, according to reports, increasing in popularity.

"There has been a cry to raise the standard in motion picture production. I believe that all the film manufacturers, those of responsibility, are doing their utmost to raise and maintain the art. Productions totaling hundreds of thousands of dollars are being discarded yearly by a number of manufacturers who have believed these productions are not up to the standard of their regular releases. The Selig company is not releasing features by routine. There may be one release yearly or two dozen; it all depends on the quality."

What's in a Name?

Harper Film Corporation Now Means Much—Often Confused With Harper Publishing Co.

TRUE greatness is sometimes slow in manifesting itself. Nobody had ever heard of the Harper Film Corporation a hundred days ago. Now it looms large in the eye of the motion picture business of the entire world, for the Harper Film Corporation is the body controlling the great Ince film spectacle, "Civilization." Of this corporation Thos. H. Ince is the president, and his associates are some of the best known men in the motion picture business.

"Harper" is Ince's middle name, it is the "H" of Thos. H. Ince. The reasons for its selection as the distinguishing title of the company controlling the primary rights and destinies of "Civilization" are therefore plain.

Confusion sometimes arises in the public mind between the names of the Harper Film Corporation, and the Harper Publishing Company, identified with the well known and old-time magazines, but of course, there is no connection, business or otherwise, between the two enterprises.

"A BATHTUB ELOPEMENT" (Unity).

"A Bath Tub Elopement" is the title of the next Tweedledum release to come from the Unity Sales Corporation this week. In this amusing one-reel comedy Tweedledum decides to go on a lark with another man's wife, leaving his own to sit lonesomely at home. But like many another adventurer, who plans to stray away from his own fireside, Tweedledum proceeds to get into trouble.

The wife goes out on a still hunt for her erring partner and catches him with the third member of the triangle. Tweedledum and the woman naturally try to elude the pursuing wife, and finally take refuge in a bath tub which they find floating on the water, and the last we see of them they are in mid-ocean. Just how long Tweedledum can dodge the wrath of the wife in this manner is left entirely to our imagination.

"THE EASIEST WAY" FOR MISS YOUNG.

Following his policy of backing the popularity of his stars with pictures adapted from the most successful novels and plays obtainable at any price, Lewis J. Selznick this week bought for Clara Kimball Young the motion picture rights to "The Easiest Way," the drama by Eugene Walter, originally produced by David Belasco with Frances Starr. This play was generally conceded to be the strongest American drama of the century, and as originally presented ran eighteen months continuously on Broadway. "The Easiest Way" will be presented as Miss Young's fourth Selznick picture. Albert Capellani, director general of the Clara Kimball Young Film Corporation, and producer of "The Common Law" and "The Foolish Virgin," will take charge of the production.

Still Winging High

Bluebird's Program Continues to Show Class and Attractiveness.

BLUEBIRD is piling up good things for the exhibitor and there is promise that the closing weeks of the program's first year will disclose a series of releases that will surpass in attractiveness any of the very popular productions that so early established Bluebird in favor with the exhibitor and his public. Three December releases are ready for announcement, two of them scheduled and the third only awaiting a definite caption.

"The Price of Silence" will introduce Dorothy Phillips to the Bluebird flock on Dec. 11. Frank Whitson, Jay Belasco, Lon Chaney and Jack Mulhall will all have roles of prominence in her support. Joseph De Grasse (the director who brought out Louise Lovely) worked from Ida May Park's scenerio in producing W. Carey Wonderly's story, originally printed in a popular magazine. "The Price of Silence" is a problem play, ingenuously worked out and climaxing in a thrilling surprise.

"The Sign of the Poppy" on Dec. 4th will introduce Hobart Henley to the program with Gertrude Selby as his leading lady. In this feature Henley plays a dual role, the two characters keeping him on the screen almost unintermittently. The plot deals with a baffling mystery that remains undisclosed until the final scene. J. Grubb Alexander wrote the scenario and Charles Swickard, new among Bluebird's stage managers, directed the production.

Cleo Madison will be the leading player in what will probably be Bluebird's Dec. 18 release, the working title of which is now "Black Orchids." Rex Ingram wrote and directed the feature, his second presentation, with Miss Madison, in the Bluebird series, "The Chalice of Sorrow," the first Ingram-Madison production, recalled by exhibitors as among the best of recent Bluebirds. Francis McDonald and Wedgewood Nowell will be Miss Madison's chief supporters in "Black Orchids."

"The Eagle's Wings" must be considered among coming Bluebirds, although it is not be be associated with the program. This will be made a special release, distributed by Bluebird exchanges along State right lines. Industrial preparedness is the theme of "The Eagle's Wings," and, as its title would imply, it is a patriotic, all-American release inspiring loyalty and love of Old Glory.

Rufus Steele, who created "Hop, the Devil's Brew," for Bluebird, provided this new and important feature, and in taking many of the scenes in munition plants and Government preserves had the co-operation of the authorities. The Naval Consulting Board, through its organization for industrial preparedness, is now collecting data from manufacturers seeking definite information on what Uncle Sam may expect in the way of co-operation in time of need. "The Eagle's Wings" illustrates the results that may be attained along these lines.

UNICORN GETS "JIMMY DALE."

President Ike Schlank, of the Unicorn Film Service Corporation, announces that his concern has acquired the rights of "Jimmy Dale, Alias 'The Gray Seal,'" by Frank Packard, the celebrated author of the "Miracle Man," which in dramatic form was one of the biggest successes ever seen on Broadway, and which is still playing to crowded houses all over the country. This serial, which was produced by the Monmouth Film Company, is in sixteen chapters, and will be backed up by an extensive newspaper campaign, this story appearing in twelve hundred of the most prominent newspapers of the country.

GOOD BUSINESS FOR IVAN AT BOSTON.

Frank Willis, manager of the Ivan Exchange, 23 Piedmont street, Boston, Mass., reports a wonderful increase in business in the city of culture and throughout New England generally. He writes that the latest releases of Ivan Film Productions, Inc., such as "Her Surrender," "Forbidden Fruit," "The Faded Flower" and "The Sex Lure" have taxed the working force of his office and it is contemplated by the home office to increase the space by seeking larger quarters within the near future. "I am satisfied," writes Willis, "that Ivan films have become vogue and the by-word in every home throughout New England.

NEW EXCHANGE FOR TEXAS.

D. J. Byars, formerly interested in the Central Feature Company of Waco, and W. H. McCullough, president of the Central Exchange Texas National Bank, have organized a new film exchange, which will be known as the Central Film Service Corporation. This company will operate in the states of Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana and Arkansas, with headquarters at the Preatorian Building in Waco. The Central Feature Service will become the exclusive distributors of all Moss productions in the states of Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana and Arkansas.

Brady on Preparedness

Points Out the Advantages of Producing Pictures Far Ahead of Release Date.

WILLIAM A. BRADY, director general of the World Film Corporation, was questioned a day or so ago regarding the advantages derived by his company from having its photoplays in readiness a full half year in advance.

"The benefits are many and of great importance," said Mr. Brady. "Some of these have been mentioned already, but one of the most vital is that the plan enables us to eliminate possible defects in a picture before its release.

"For example, some time ago at a private view I found that one of our pictures dated for release four or five weeks ahead could be materially improved by certain changes which suggested themselves during the run-off, and I immediately set it back for two months, moving another play up to take its place. Then one evening I went to work with the director of the imperfect picture, and by three o'clock in the morning we had it in such shape that when it was finally issued the success was very great.

"If we had not been in a position to hold this play back, it might have been received with disfavor, or at least severely criticized, whereas the comments were very cordial indeed. You see, we are in a position to go over our pictures again and again, examining them from every conceivable angle, and not alone that but to let enough time elapse between these examinations to give us clear minds.

"The late Dion Boucicault, who was both proficient and prolific in writing for the stage, once told me that as soon as he finished a manuscript he locked it in a drawer and busied himself with something else for a full month, so that when he took up his play again he was able to perceive defects which he almost surely would have overlooked while in the spirit of his work.

"The Boucicault system applies perfectly to the preparation of motion pictures, for one carelessly made or unsatisfactory production does more damage to its sponsors than can be undone by three or four exceptionally good ones.

"The improvement which has been very generally noted in World pictures and which is responsible for the great increase in our business, is not due to the overshadowing genius of any individual, but to the constant, patient, and intelligent application of those who make the pictures and the others who sell them. Regarded from all points of view, I believe the World concern at this time is as close to one hundred per cent efficient as any other organization of its magnitude can be.

"I will add that the policy of completing our productions months in advance has worked out so well that it will be continued and probably amplified in the future. We are already working on no less than six additions to the list that was published about a month ago."

"Grant" Runs Indefinitely

Overwhelming Success of Newspaper Series Causes Announcement from Kalem Company.

EXHIBITORS who have been inquiring as to the number of episodes that would be seen in the "Grant, Police Reporter," series are answered this week by the announcement of the Kalem Company that the dare-devil series featuring George Larkin and Ollie Kirkby will be run indefinitely. This decision follows the complete tabulation of reports from all over the country on the first five episodes. These reports from exchange managers show that the one-reel series is running neck and neck with "The Girl From 'Frisco" in the race for popularity and indicate an overwhelming success.

"We know that it is a revolutionary step to announce that a series will be released indefinitely," declared Mr. Wright, of the Kalem Company, "but the record of bookings is so phenomenal and the reports from exhibitors showing the series so enthusiastic that it is the only move left us. I would hesitate in the face of this success to set a limit on the life of 'Grant.' Much as we expected when we announced that we would present stars like George Larkin and Ollie Kirkby and an author of the prominence of Robert Welles Ritchie in a one-reel series, we have been literally swept off our feet."

While the Kalem executives were announcing their plans for the indefinite continuance of the once-a-week series, Dare-devil George Larkin, star of the newspaper series, was busily making his own plans at the Jacksonville studio. In the second week of the work on the "Grant" series Larkin was injured in making a leap from a window to a speeding automobile and found it necessary to lay idle for several days while his ankles were recovering. On his return to the studio Larkin stated that he was out to make a record of not missing a day of work on the rest of the series. With the bruises and sprains that come with each thrill this is by no means an easy task, as is shown by the following letter received from the star last week.

"The ankles are still weak," he said, "and even ordinary walking is far from a pleasant pastime. But we went through with the ship stunts for 'The Wizard's Plot' today as per schedule. I believe you will agree with us that we got some very sensational scenes on the ship. The leap from the moving sailboat to the rope ladder of the liner was very tricky and should show up well. When I jumped from the liner to the boat I missed the latter by a few inches and got a fine drenching. The wind was also blowing about forty-five miles an hour up in the rigging, making it difficult to gauge the distances properly."

Warwick in "The Argyle Case"

Famous Detective Drama Bought by Harry Rapf for Popular Star's Initial Offering.

ROBERT WARWICK, the latest of the Selznick-Pictures stars, began work this week on the first of his productions under the new management, an adaptation of "The Argyle Case," the play by Harvey J. O'Higgins and Harriet Ford in which Robert Hilliard starred so successfully in New York and throughout the country a few seasons ago. The rights were purchased by Harry Rapf, president of the Robert Warwick Film Corporation. The play was one of the most successful detective romances ever staged and unquestionably offers the athletic and talented Mr. Warwick the greatest opportunity of his screen career. Ralph Ince is directing the production.

"The Argyle Case" is a real detective story. The authors had the advantage of the services of no less an authority on the science of modern detection than William J. Burns, the internationally famous investigator. The story involves counterfeiters and the use of the dictagraph and has a strong love interest as well. As Asche Kayton, the role in which Mr. Hilliard appeared, Mr. Warwick will be called upon to perform many feats of daring and physical strength of the sort that has made Douglas Fairbanks such a successful film star, as well as to display an uncanny cleverness in outwitting the most skillful band of counterfeiters in America.

UNUSUAL TITLES ADORN "WITCHING HOUR."

Through an arrangement entered into this week, whereby William L. Sherrill, head of the Frohman Amusement Corporation, is to have the distinction of presenting for the first time a number of highly elaborate titles will be inserted into the film production of that concern's latest production, "The Witching Hour," and will be seen shortly when that film is given its trade display.

The titles are unlike, in a great many ways, anything heretofore displayed in a screen production and serve well their purpose in this instance of maintaining the dignity of the story throughout.

"The Witching Hour," therefore, will serve two purposes. It will bring to light, according to all reports, the first powerful seven-reel dramatic feature in which there is absolutely no resort to the extra-sensational.

Throughout the seven parts, dramatic action is the entire theme. Not in any one instance does the sensational obtain. But there is not an instant where the spectator will not be refreshed by a powerful dramatic situation, a tremendous emotional climax or series of counter plots, so closely interwoven as to make the play more than a strong story—a mighty dramatic document.

"The Witching Hour" is being assembled now and will be ready for display about November 14th. A trade showing will be held, in all probability at the Strand Theater during one morning of that week.

MARGUERITE CLARK AGAIN TO STAR IN "SNOW WHITE."

One of the film events of the year will be the presentation by the Famous Players Film Company of Marguerite Clark in an adaptation of "Snow White," the Grimm fairy tale in the dramatization of which she created a veritable sensation on the stage. In accordance with its annual custom of making some special recognition of the Christmas holiday season in its release schedule, the Famous Players Company has set Christmas Day as the date for the appearance of the picture on the Paramount Program.

It was under the personal direction of Winthrop Ames that Miss Clark starred in the stage version of "Snow White," and it is therefore of particular interest to note that Mr. Ames has consented to give his personal assistance and advice in the converting of the play into a motion picture. Mr. Ames is going to supply the Famous Players with the original costumes which were used in the stage presentation. As these costumes were especially commended for their appropriateness and beauty at the time, they will undoubtedly form an effective part in the beauty of the production. When "Snow White" was produced at the Little theater, Marguerite Clark was declared by critics to have been an ideal Princess, her personal charm making her immeasurably attractive in addition to the delightfully useful little character which she portrayed with such vivacity.

MUTUAL SUBJECTS LOST.

C. M. Brown, Mutual Exchange Manager, of Memphis, Tenn., writes: "On Oct. 19th we shipped four reels to a party giving us the name of R. A. Jackson at McRea, Ark. On Oct. 20th we shipped four more reels. Neither shipment has been returned to us, nor can we ascertain the present whereabouts of R. A. Jackson. The titles and numbers of the reels are: 4593-4-5—Mustang, 'Snow Stuff'; 4413-14—Mustang, 'Wild Jim's Reformer'; 4491—Beauty, 'Battle of Cupidovitch'; 4412—Vogue, 'Sammy's Doughful Romance'; 4451—Beauty, 'Cats, Cash and Cook Book.'

"If you can find space in your publication to mention this together with request that any exchange or exhibitor hearing of R. A. Jackson communicate with us by wire, we will appreciate the favor."

General Film Company

TWIN FLATS (Vim), Nov. 2.—Portly Babe Hardy and Kate Price also blessed with avoirdupois are the chief funmakers in this reel. It is a good knockabout comedy number. The hearse Plum and his pal take to get out of their flat to the club are funny. Only Raymond gets away and he brings several of his pals around to Plumps flat. They are routed by Kate the wife but hubby gets away and comes home with a bank roll, won at poker.

IN THE RANKS (Vim), Nov. 3.—Pokes and Jabbs (Robert Burns and Walter Stull) are seen in this comedy reel. The reel is not as lively as some of the recent Pokes and Jabbs numbers but embraces a number of laughs. Pokes and Jabbs both take a chance at soldiering this time, and a little knockabout work gets over. To cap the climax Pokes is shot from a cannon and is seen catapulting through the air. Others than Pokes and Jabbs in the cast are Ethel Burton and Frank Hanson.

THE GAME THAT FAILED (Vitagraph), Nov. 3.—True love never runs smooth, and it runs humorously rough in this reel. The comedy is lacking in slapstick and the trials and tribulations of the four sweethearts lead to numerous funny situations. This reel is up to average.

TOM'S SACRIFICE (Selig), Nov. 4.—Exciting feats of horsemanship on the part of Tom Mix and his supporting cast make this an acceptable Western. Cowboy stunts, rather than story, are relied upon to hold interest in the reel. Tom Miller, an easterner, makes good as a cowboy, and wins the love of the ranch owner's daughter over a rival. Tom Mix, Victoria Forde, Sid Jordan, Joe Ryan, Joe Simpkins and Howard Farrell are in the cast.

THE NEW YORK HAT (Biograph), Nov. 6.—Mary Pickford is featured in this one-reel reissue. The film was directed by David W. Griffith, and is one of the best one-reelers that the old Biograph company turned out. It is a film that will please any audience. A full review was printed in the issue of October 14, page 220.

THE SELIG-TRIBUNE, NO. 89, 1916 (Selig), Nov. 6.—First rivet driven into keel of U. S. S. California at San Francisco; Mrs. Belva Lockwood, suffragist, celebrates 68th birthday; Monmouth County society turns out for drag hunt, Red Bank, N. J.; difficult road building in mountains, Walker Valley, Tenn.; Harvard beats Cornell at football, Cambridge; fashions in furs; Deutschland arrives at New London; society flocks to "Denishawn," Los Angeles; thousands hear President Wilson at Shadow Lawn.

NEW YORK RAPID TRANSIT (Vitagraph), Nov. 6.—An interesting reel showing the construction of the New York subway. A human interest story is cleverly worked into the reel. The film will prove especially interesting to those who wonder how New York's five million people get about the city.

A DESPERATE DUEL (Kalem), Nov. 7.—An average number of the Ham and Bud comedies. Ham and Bud, rivals for the hand of Ethel, are both incensed at the arrival of a new suitor—a Frenchman. Insults lead to a duel between Ham and the Frenchman, and it is here that a certain amount of fast knockabout work gets over. There is also some comedy when Ham goes to the hospital. Ham and Bud are assisted by Ethel Teare.

A SAFE PROPOSITION (Essanay), Nov. 8.—Ben Turpin and Victor Potel make this number quite a good comedy. A lot of humorous trouble is met with in getting a safe into a household and when a burglar comes to burgle he finds the safe empty. He fills it so that it will be worth stealing. Ben Turpin is the burglar; Victor Potel the policeman.

MARKED "NO FUNDS" (Vim), Nov. 8.—This number of the Vim Feature Comedies, featuring Harry Myers and Rosemary Theby, is an improvement over several of their recent releases. There is a more humorous story, well worked out by Mr. Myers and Miss Theby, and the usual novel settings. Friend wife wants a new coat and Harry believes he can get it when a stranger enters his brokerage office and buys a large amount of stock. His check is worthless, though, and Harry thinks it is all off, when he finds that the stock is going up by leaps and bounds.

THE SELIG-TRIBUNE, NO. 90, 1916 (Selig), Nov. 9.—San Francisco's old Hall of Records torn down; Pekinese dogs; thousands of letters in Dead Letter Office, Washington; militiamen on border kept in condition by hikes and exercises; celebrate 250th annoversary of St. Paul's Chapel, New York; Catherine Stimson, 18, teaches aviation, Mobile, Ala.; High School girls in whaleboat race, Oakland, Cal.; German prisoners in prison camps, France; million-dollar dam at Lake Keecherlees, Washington, nearing completion.

A WARM RECEPTION (Vim), Nov. 9.—The old comedy idea of the mother who wants her daughter to marry a count is used in this reel. Babe Hardy is seen as the favored suitor of the daughter. Kate Price is the mother and Raymond McKee the count. It is the fast knockabout work of these three that lend what comedy there is to the film. It is the Count who gets the warm reception, being received by Babe masquerading as the mother.

THE MAN FROM YUKON (Kalem), Nov. 10.—The fourth episode in the Grant Police Reporter series by Robert Welles Ritchie. George Larkin barricades a window in the third floor when he decides to the pavement from the sixth floor of a building by means of a rope used to hoist a tar bucket to the roof. The picture was reviewed in the issue of November 11, page 842. In the cast are George Larkin, Ollie Kirkby, Director Robert Ellis and William McKey.

HOT DOGS (Vim), Nov. 10.—Pokes and Jabbs (Robert Burns and Walter Stull) get across considerable knockabout comedy in this reel. Pokes is taught the gentle art of dog catching by Jabs. Pokes gets into trouble over some of his catches. The action is quite fast.

THE LONE POINT MYSTERY (Kalem), Nov. 11.—Helen Gibson does an extra number of daredevil stunts in this number of the "Hazards of Helen." We see her dragged under the truck of a freight car, jumping from the pilot of a locomotive into a speeding automobile and doing several other stunts. A review was printed in the issue of November 18, page 999.

General Film Company Specials

JESS OF THE HILL COUNTRY (Knickerbocker Star Feature), Nov. 2.—Margaret Nicholas is featured in this two-reel drama. The film is an acceptable short-length subject, and embraces plenty of heart interest. It tells the story of a girl of the hill country who marries a wealthy man from the city. He deserts her, but later returns, and is met by her brother. The girl and the man are reconciled. The picture holds interest.

THE HEART OF VIRGINIA KEEP (Essanay), Nov. 4.—A three-reel drama whose saving grace is its element of romance. The story is fairly strong and is well interpreted by Marguerite Clayton, John Cossar, Edward Arnold and Thomas Commerford. A girl determines to obtain evidence to clear her father, who is accused of a murder committed twenty-five years ago. Her work brings her in touch with a reporter, who is a millionaire's son. A strong attachment develops between the two, and after they have proven the father innocent they find that he has been pardoned. The romance is culminated.

THE HEART OF A FOOL (Vitagraph), Nov. 4.—A rather impossible three-reel motion picture drama telling of a mentally weak man. Details of production are not all that they might be. The man holds a baby for a woman and she meets with an accident. He brings the baby home. The baby is found by its father and detectives, as is the mother. The man's memory is restored through an operation paid for by the baby's father.

SO SHALL YE REAP (Selig), Nov. 6.—A two-reel drama of ordinary worth, with one or two rather appealing situations. The film tells on the screen of a man who becomes addicted to the use of morphine and who, through a vision, battles with and overcomes the habit. The cast is composed of E. J. Brady, Lillian Hamilton, Robyn Adair, Virginia Kirtley and Eugene Forde. Produced by Burton L. King.

THE SCIENCE OF CRIME (Biograph), Nov. 7.—A two-reel reissue that, according to a review printed on page 378 of the issue of October 21, "although it has for its basic idea a rather old theme, compares favorably with some of the short-length subjects of more modern production." The film tells a story of the underworld. In the cast are William Jefferson, Franklin Ritchie, Louise Vail and George Morgan.

EASY ED (Essanay), Nov. 7.—A two-reel comedy with several lively spots. Harry Dunkinson is featured in the role of a tramp. There is nothing much to the story—all the comedy in the film is gotten over through well-known knockabout methods. The number is a fairly good comedy. In the cast are Harry Dunkinson, Florence Oberle and Virginia Bowker.

THE WITCH OF THE DARK HOUSE (Kalem), Nov. 8.—No. 14 of Robert Welles Ritchie's "The Girl from 'Frisco" series. Marin Sais furnishes several thrills in this number, and Hart Hoxie does some exceptional horseback riding. The release is fully up to standard. The story tells of the solution of the mystery of a "haunted" house which proves to be a counterfeiters' den. A review was printed in the issue of November 18, page 999.

WHAT I SAID I'D DO (Essanay), Nov. 11.—A three-reel drama with several pleasing touches of comedy. Richard C. Travers and Gertrude Glover are featured. The story has several good situations, although at times it seems rather improbable. It tells of a girl who, posing as a worker learns something about the man she is engaged to. Everything ends happily, however, when the fathers of the two young people are brought together, and when what the youth said, goes. In the cast are also seen John Cossar, Thomas Commerford and Fred Malatesta.

Bluebird Photoplays, Inc.

THE MEASURE OF A MAN, Nov. 20.—A five-part production featuring J. Warren Kerrigan and Louise Lovely. The story of the picture is set among the California redwoods, which adds a special charm. The picture deals with the career of a young man who, for his profligate habits, is expelled from the school of divinity at which he is a student. Fate leads him to the West, where he is forced, by circumstances, to adopt the very vocation from which he has striven to break away. An entertaining picture, whose faults lie principally in the fact that it is slightly padded, and is inclined to illustrate by sub-titles. A review will be found elsewhere.

Fox Film Corporation

SINS OF HER PARENT, Nov. 6.—An unusually interesting story of Alaskan dance hall life has been used as a basis of this five-part production in which Gladys Brockwell has been starred in a double role. The story of the film was written by Thomas Forman and directed by Frank Lloyd, with a supporting cast consisting of Carl von Schiller, Hershel Mayall, George Webb, Jim Farley and William Clifford. A full review of the production will be found elsewhere.

THE MEDIATOR (Fox), Nov. 13.—George Walsh is featured in this five-reel picturization of the book by Roy Norton. Mr. Walsh portrays the character of a man who wants peace and who is willing to fight for it. Plenty of gun play and fist fighting are seen in the film. There is an amount of subtle humor running through the picture. A review will be printed next week.

Greater Vitagraph V-L-S-E, Inc.

WALLS AND WALLOPS (Vitagraph), Nov. 13.—Hughie Mack, William Shea and Patsy De Forrest keep the comedy ball rolling through this one-reel farce. Lawrence Semon is the author and producer of the picture, which is full of strenuous action and a burlesque police force. Aside from a humorous impersonation, Miss De Forrest throws in breakneck stunts that would do credit to the two Helens—Gibson and Holmes.

THE GLOVE AND THE RING (Vitagraph), Nov. 20.—Episode 8 of the "Scarlet Runner." It is an Italian adventure and the hero rescues a Russian political fugetive from the hands of a group of political bandits. For longer notice see issue of October 7, 1916, of this paper.

International Film Service, Inc.

HEARST-INTERNATIONAL NEWS PICTORIAL, NO. 88, 1916, Nov. 3.—Keel of U. S. S. California laid at Mare Island Navy Yard; submarine built here for Spain tested, Provincetown, Mass.; machine lifts whole coal car, Hoboken, N. J.; youth makes daring slide into water, Los Angeles, Cal.; fashions de luxe; work of the American Ambulance Corps, near Neuilly, France; motorcycle squad at preparedness camp, Pittsburgh; Roosevelt cheered on western trip, Denver; wealthy men donate automobiles, London; eight girls in swimming contest, San Francisco; merchant submarine Deutschland arrives at New London.

HEARST-INTERNATIONAL NEWS PICTORIAL, NO. 89, 1916.—President Wilson given ovation in New York; Aviator Victor Carlstrom leaves Chicago; William Penn Highway is dedicated, Bethlehem, Pa.; footlights and fashions; four thousand freight cars loaded on steamer for France, Philadelphia; wheat harvest near Spokane, Wash.; Hall of Records, San Francisco, wrecked; Alaskan dogs used in ambulance work in Vosges mountains.

HEARST-INTERNATIONAL NEWS PICTORIAL, NO. 90, 1916, Nov. 10.—Ten-ton telescope base moved up Mount Wilson, Pasadena, Cal.; Miss Cecelia Wright makes aero flight at Mineola; incendiary fire destroys railroad bridge, Del Rio, Texas; Catholic University students hold tug of war, Washington, D. C.; footlights and fashions; with the French army; Sir Earnest Shackleton arrives at New Orleans; police drag river for bodies of victims of Boston's trolley car tragedy; President Wilson casts vote at Princeton; Chicago women vote—other election pictures.

Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay.

THE COSSACK WHIP (Edison), Nov. 13.—Viola Dana is featured in this five-reel Russian Revolutionist picture. Good entertainment is furnished by the production, whose story is a little different than usual Nihilist plots. Details of production are excellent, and many artistic and novel settings are embraced in the five reels. The supporting cast to Miss Dana work well. A full review was printed on page 1002 of the issue of November 18.

THE CHAPERON (Essanay), Nov. 20.—Reviewed by James S. McQuade in the issue of Nov. 25. A very interesting photodrama of American life, in which Edna Mayo and Eugene O'Brien appear to excellent advantage. Other fine roles are well sustained by Sydney Ainsworth, John Cossar, Frankie Raymond and Marion Skinner. Photography and settings are admirable.

Metro Pictures Corporation.

EXTRAVAGANCE (Popular Plays and Players) Nov. 6.—Mme. Petrova is the star of this five-reel picture, which deals largely with social life. The reproduction of well-bred society is one of the best features of the screen play, and Mme. Petrova and her support give it the benefit of excellent acting. The plot is only fair. The picture is reviewed at length on another page of this issue.

CROSBY'S REST CURE (Drew), Nov. 13.—An excellent number of the Metro-Drew comedies, featuring Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew, in which Mr. Crosby decides to take Mrs. Crosby on a trip to South America for a rest from her society duties. Following a remark dropped by Mrs. Drew in an unguarded moment, all of her friends believe that she wants them to accompany her, and straight way proceed to do so. Mr. Crosby, summing up the situation, bribes the chauffeur to see that they miss the boat, and so they stay at home to rest, while their troublesome friends journey to South America.

Mutual Film Corporation

MUTUAL WEEKLY, NO. 97 (Mutual), Nov. 8.—Interesting items of this number are scenes showing the Allies firing big guns at the Turkish fortifications, Mrs. Belva Lockwood, the only woman ever nominated for President of the United States, celebrating her 86th birthday; auto races at Sheepshead Bay, and New York's handcuff king bursting his shackles in mid air.

REEL LIFE, NO. 28 (Gaumont), Nov. 12.—Several subjects are entertainingly and instructively pictured in this number. The U. S. Coast Guard is seen in action; animated drawings show something of the tremendous raise in the price of food stuffs. Vivid scenes are also shown from the recent aerial flight from Chicago to New York.

HER SUN-KISSED HERO (Cub), Nov. 17.—A comedy number, featuring Betty Compson, Neal Burns, Harry Ham and Dave Morris. The latter plays the part of a life guard. He cannot swim and is the father of a large family, yet the girls think him a hero. In the end he is exposed as a base deceiver. This plot has been rendered conventional by frequent use. It is fairly entertaining as presented in this number.

MUTUAL TOURS AROUND THE WORLD (Gaumont), Nov. 14.—This number takes the visitor on an entertaining screen trip to Archangel, Russia's arctic seaport, to Amsterdam, capital of the Netherlands and to Rouen, a city in Normandy. The views are splendidly pictured and give some interesting contrasts in architecture. A good scenic number.

REEL LIFE, NO. 27 (Gaumont), Nov. 5.—Excellent views of the coffee industry in Brazil, showing the planting and rearing of trees, crop gathering, washing, drying and various other processes, lead this entertaining number. Clearing land of stumps by machinery and dynamite follows. Illustrations of the new safety suit for persons forced to leave vessels at sea, and trench warfare against mosquitoes in New Jersey follow. The reels closes with pictures of the new pushmobiles in action.

Mutual Film Corporation Specials.

THE ETERNAL CHALLENGE (Eclair), Nov. 4.—A two-reel number, by Rev. C. J. Harris, featuring Helen Aubrey, Edna Payne and Norbert A. Myles. The story concerns a wealthy young man who insists upon marrying an actress when his mother has social aspirations for him. After the marriage the mother practically disowns him, but her heart softens when he presents her with a grandchild. In spite of the familiar plot material, this runs along entertainingly and has quite an effective close.

EAST IS EAST (Mutual Masterpicture de Luxe—Turner), Nov. 9.—A very enjoyable number, in five reels, featuring Florence Turner and Henry Edwards. They start out as two English street waifs and each rises in the world. The girl inherits a fortune and the youth uses a loan from her as a means of building up a business. In the end the girl leaves her fine social life and goes back to her old pal, who has made himself quite her equal in every way. The upward striving of these two, from their early days in the hopfields, is full of human interest. The scenes are pleasing throughout. This is not a dramatic subject, but none the less interesting because of that. The character work is natural and convincing.

A MOUNTAIN DAISY (Mutual), Nov. 9.—A moderately entertaining two-part production in which a mountain girl, jilted by a trifler from the city, marries a man who has been true to her, and borrows a five-year-old child upon hearing that the former is coming through that territory with his bride. The girl and her husband succeed in exposing to the man's wife his former actions, adding to the shame of it by pretending that she was married at the time that he flirted with her.

PICTURE PIRATES (Vogue), Nov. 12.—A two-reel subject, featuring Rube Miller and Ben Turpin as two indigent married men of crooked tendencies. They enter into a scheme to steal some paintings and meet with numerous adventures. The action is in burlesque style and does not get up much humor. Some of the knockabout scenes are fairly amusing, but as a whole the number is not strong.

BEHIND THE SCREEN (Mutual Chaplin), Nov. 13.—While this Chaplin effort will doubtless evoke much laughter from a certain class of audience, it is not one to be strongly recommended. There is throughout a distinct vein of vulgarity which is unnecessary, even in slapstick comedy. A great deal of comedy is intended to be extracted from a pie slinging episode which occurs during the rehearsal of a couple of scenes in a moving picture studio. The funniest part of the comedy occurs during the manipulation of a trap door in one of the scenes by Chaplin. All of the action takes place in a moving picture studio.

IMMEDIATE LEE (Mutual Masterpicture de Luxe—American), Nov. 16.—A pleasing five-part western number featuring Anna Little and Frank Borzage. Jack Richardson also appears in the cast as the villain of the play. One very unpleasant incident that would have been better to have been omitted is the slashing open both sides of Immediate Lee's mouth with a knife. The deed done in revenge by one, Hurley, of the "Bar L" ranch, forms one of the main lines of action in the story. The scene of the wedding, when Immediate Lee marries the reformed dance hall girl in the saloon which has been fitted up in the guise of a chapel for the occasion, is very amusing.

THE VAMPIRES, NO. 1 (Gaumont), Nov. 23.—The first of the nine episodes of this interesting seriol is entitled "The Detective's Head," and is brimming with mystery and thrill. The serial is based on the effort of the star reporter of a Paris newspaper to solve the mystery of the dreadful vampires of the streets of Paris. A view of this number will be found elsewhere.

Pathe Exchange, Inc.

A CITY'S MILK SUPPLY (Pathe), Nov. 19.—An [illegible] account of how [illegible] milk is delivered to consumers. Views of the cows [illegible] owned by the milk [illegible] preceded by the cleaning of the [illegible] bottling of the milk, the bottling, etc., is merely illustrated. [illegible] the [illegible] and Where to Find Them in Spain.

HERE AND THERE IN SPAIN (Pathe), Nov. 19.—On the [illegible] reel with A City's Milk Supply. This reel consists of many interesting views and [illegible] of old Spain. The film is colored but not always [illegible] the views of the [illegible] in the plaza in view of the [illegible]

LUKE PATENT PROMOTER (Rolin), Nov. 19.—One of the most amusing of the Lonesome Luke comedies. The situation which indirectly brings about the comedy is the misfortune of a certain doctor, who, because he has had no patients for months, is obliged to dismiss his pretty nurse. Luke then steps into the breach and volunteers, with the aid of his flivver, to supply patients. Children as well as adults will enjoy this comedy.

Pathe Exchange, Inc., Specials

THE SHIELDING SHADOW, NO. 8 (Astra), Nov. 19.—"The Haunting Hand" is the title of this episode. Some interesting action takes place in this number. The scenes in the home of Sebastian, where One-Lamp Louie, from fear of the haunting hand, prevents the marriage of Bianca and Sebastian, are intense. Leontine, who, with Ravengar, has been shipwrecked and thrown on the lighthouse island, and is believed by Sebastian to be dead, suddenly reappears in her home, terrorizing Sebastian and upsetting all his plans. The destruction of the lighthouse by lightning is not altogether convincing, but is, at the same time, rather a clever piece of miniature work.

THE WORLD AND THE WOMAN (Gold Rooster Play), Nov. 19.—A five-part production, featuring Jeanne Eagels. The story of the picture was written by Philip Lonergan, and treats of the difficulty of the path of the young woman alone in the world, with a peculiar development which presents the woman at a later date in the guise of a faith healer. The story is not altogether convincing, but is pleasing in many respects. The production has been beautifully set, and has been enacted by a competent cast. A full review will be found in our issue of Nov. 18.

THE WARNING (Pathe), Nov. 19.—A three-part drama with Creighton Hale in the masculine lead. The warning takes the form of a dream in which the wayward son of a clergyman lives through a series of crimes committed by him in his dreams, and the punishment sin must surely bring. The dream is rather long, but the moral taught is an excellent one. The production was made by the Whartons.

Signal Film Corporation

A LASS OF THE LUMBERLANDS, NO. 4, Nov. 13.—"A Deed of Daring" is the title of this thrilling chapter of the serial in which Helen makes a daring jump from a moving train into an automobile, and finally gains her purpose of replacing a stolen box back on the train where it rides to its destination, thereby winning a point at issue with regard to the shipping of logs over the railroad controlled by Holmes.

Triangle Film Corporation.

HAYSTACKS AND STEEPLES (Triangle-Keystone), Oct. 1.—An amusing comedy of a little higher class in some respects than the regular Keystone farce.

THE MICROSCOPE MYSTERY (Fine-Arts), Nov. 19.—A detective story of the higher class, containing some delightful characterization and a truly scientific detection of an unsuspected criminal. Wilfred Lucas in an attractive role.

THE HONORABLE ALGY (Ince), Nov. 19.—An entertaining story of great ingenuity and bright characterization. Well suited to Christmas presentation.

Universal Film Mfg. Company

LOST IN BAYLON (Rex), Nov. 19.—The story of a simple country girl, who comes to New York, by Harvey Gates. She meets a reporter and, wishing him to think her a city girl, makes up and smokes a cigarette. He soon convinces her that it is her simplicity he admires. Edith Roberts, Malcolm Blevins and Millard K. Wilson appear. This has a good idea in it and holds the interest well.

HOW DO YOU FEEL? (Nestor), Nov. 20.—A comedy number, by Robert T. Gowan, featuring Lee Moran, Eddie Lyons and others. A doctor mixes up letters to two patients and the young man is mistakingly informed that he has only six days to live. The undertaker, portrayed by Lee Moran, furnishes much of the amusement. Although slightly grewsome, this is well handled and gets a number of laughs.

IRMA IN WONDERLAND (Powers), Nov. 23.—A juvenile number, written and produced by Lule Warrenton. The school scenes are well put on and amusing. There is hardly enough story to hold the interest strongly, though the appeal is good in the settings.

MARRIED A YEAR (Nestor), Nov. 24.—A domestic comedy, by Calder Johnstone, featuring Ed. Sedgwick and Betty Schade. The husband worries over his wife's extravagances and she thinks he is flirtatious. Their dreams result in bringing about a better understanding. This is not entirely clear in construction, which detracts from the story value somewhat. It makes a fair offering.

JANITOR'S VENDETTA (Joker), Nov. 25.—A character comedy, featuring Wm. Franey, Gale Henry, Chas. Conklin and Lillian Peacock. The plot concerns a jealous wife who discharges her husband's girl [illegible] photographer. The latter discovers a [illegible] for his wife. Amusing complications follow, the action being of the rapid-fire, burlesque type. This is well up to the Joker standard of comedies.

Universal Film Mfg. Co. Specials

STRIFE AND SORROW (Special Universal), Nov. 6.—No. 13 of the "Liberty" series. An exciting number in which the [illegible] reaches a high climax of interest. Liberty goes to the cabin of Manuel and offers herself to him, if he will release the man under siege in the desert ruins. Manuel plans to trick her, and she battles with him in hand-to-hand fashion. Theresa, jealous, shoots Manuel and then herself. Trenches are being dug by the American troops for open warfare as the number closes.

A MODERN JOAN OF ARC (Special Universal), Nov. 13.—No. 14 of the "Liberty" series. The first reel opens with Liberty and Pedro being taken as prisoners to Chihauhau. A battle scene of intense interest has been staged by Director Jaccard. Major Winston is wounded and buried alive by his men, with proper ventilation. The whole command is then wiped out before an armored auto comes and routs the foe. Major Winston in time digs out of his premature grave and views the dead bodies of his command, a dramatic moment indeed. All of this action is highly commendable and brilliantly pictured.

LIBERTY'S HONOR (Special Universal), Nov. 14.—No. 15 of the "Liberty" series. This deals almost entirely with the dramatic experiences of Liberty and Pedro as prisoners in Chihauhau. The latter escapes from his cell after some vigorous hand-to-hand conflicts with the guard and others. He finds Lopez trying to profit by the death of Manuel. Liberty is released from prison, with a promise of freedom. She goes with Lopez to a large restaurant. Here Pedro finds Lopez in the act of attacking Liberty. Their escape is a thrilling one.

THE THREAD OF LIFE (Imp), Nov. 19.—A two-reel number of fair strength. The two operation scenes at the beginning have a rather depressing effect. Later the story becomes more interesting, showing the restoration of the thief's sister, her jealousy of the nurse and subsequent effort to have the latter put out of the way. The hero doctor, portrayed by Ben Wilson, saves the girl from the burning house in which she lies helplessly bound. The story would be more entertaining if it had a less sordid note. The cast and photography are pleasing.

THE DEVIL'S BONDSWOMAN (Red Feather), Nov. 20.—This five-reel subject, written by Willis Woods and Fred Myton, features Emory Johnson, Dorothy Davenport, Adele Farrington, Richard Morris and Wm. Canfield. It has an allegorical opening, showing the conflicting attributes of the hero and his mate as they arrive on earth for their mortal career. There is a good deal of over-acting all through this subject and too many visions and close-ups are shown, the latter giving artificial effect. The story itself is interesting and might have been stronger if given a strictly modern setting. The device of having the devil appear in the guise of an ordinary man has been frequently employed before. The number combines weakness and strength.

THE WOMAN HE FEARED (Gold Seal), Nov. 21.—A three-reel number, by E. M. Ingleton, featuring Franklyn Farnum, Clarissa Selwynne, Vola Smith and others. This is a strong subject, with several dramatic moments. The hero is a young newspaper man, who recovers from the drink habit by a strong effort. His aunt is a woman who has been cast off by the father of the girl he loves. The aunt encourages the match, as a matter of revenge, and at the wedding feast pours wine into the hero's glass. He catches himself a second time on the downward path. The subject is unusual and well handled throughout.

WHERE IS MY WIFE? (L.K.), Nov. 22.—A comic number, featuring Billy Ritchie as proprietor of the St. Vitus Hotel. This is full of funny antics, some of them of the rougher sort, but none extremely offensive. Billy flirts with a man's wife and endeavors to assist her in obtaining her bath. There is a general mix-up, a chase and considerable shooting.

THE EMERALD PIN (Laemmle), Nov. 23.—A pleasing two-reel offering, written by E. M. Singleton, featuring Roberta Wilson, Gretchen Lederer, Eileen Sedgwick, Chas. Perley and Louise Owen. A grandmother, seeing her granddaughter is being enticed into a fast social set, with bridge as its chief recreation, tells the girl the story of her own experiences, which center about an emerald brooch. The characterizations are pleasing and the construction good. The production is well above the average.

CIRCUMSTANTIAL GUILT (Imp), Nov. 24.—A two-reel number, written by George Suprenenant, featuring Jack Nelson and Burton Law. This opens with a court scene, in which an Italian fruit peddler is being tried for murder. One man on the jury hangs out for acquittal. His story to the other jurors is followed by a dramatic confession that he himself committed the crime. This situation has been employed so often that the denouement will be obvious to many observers. At the same time the story is well constructed, has good suspense and is strongly presented.

THE LOST LODE (Bison), Nov. 25.—A two-reel mining story, featuring E. N. Wallack, Edith Johnson, Edward A. Hearn and L. C. Shumway. This has unusually picturesque and attractive locations. It tells of the rivalry of two men over the daughter of a mine owner. There is an effort at villainy, which is frustrated by the girl. This makes a first rate mining story. There is good suspense in the closing scenes.

World Pictures.

THE MADNESS OF HELEN (Paragon), Nov. 20.—This five-reel screen play is a highly romantic mystery story in which twin sisters, played by Ethel Clayton, are the principal characters. Scenes along the seashore and in a fishing village are well produced. The scenario was written by Emmett Campbell Hall, and directed by Travers Vale. A longer review is printed on another page of this issue.

Manufacturers' Advance Notes

INTRODUCING "THE VAMPIRES."

Serial advertising having become somewhat stereotyped, it has remained for the Mutual Film Corporation to blaze a new trail for the new French detective photo-novel, "The Vampires," produced by the Gaumont Company. Novelty is always a valuable aid in advertising a motion picture, and the possibilities for unusual methods are found in every episode of "The Vampires." The story deals with the arch criminals of Paris who commit many of their depredations while dressed in sinister costumes of black tights, black shirts and black hoods. The effectiveness of the costume for advertising purposes has led the Mutual to stock all its branches with such suits, which the exhibitor may obtain for advertising purposes.

Another novel manner by which the exhibitor can advertise the series to his patrons is with "The Vampire" newspaper. Since the relentless foe of the arch criminals is a newspaper reporter, it was decided to publish a newspaper of their nefarious activities. These are of four pages, illustrated with pictures of powerful scenes from the photo-novel, and destined for distribution by the exhibitor either in the lobby of the theater or else in the territory from which he draws his patronage. It is the plan of the advertising department of the Mutual to have these tabloid newspapers distributed by men wearing the Vampire costume.

BEULAH BURNS, A CHIP OF OLD BLOCK.

Triangle's famous band of child players at the Fine Arts studio have many and varied accomplishments. In fact, it is rare that any demand comes up that one or other of the octette cannot fill. The brothers Franklin, directors for the band, claim it has never been stumped yet, and are especially proud of the latest feat.

The scene was for "Sister of Six," which stars Bessie Love. One of the children had to ride at breakneak speed to catch the "Pony Express." It had to be the real thing, that ride, with a wiry and fiery little western pony, and the directors were worried. Would they dare trust any of the children in so dangerous an enterprise?

Of course every one of the eight begged to do it. What was danger to these adventurous tots? But there was one candidate who really qualified. That was Beulah Burns, aged six.

Perhaps it is a case of heredity. Beulah's father is Fred Burns, who is one of the famous Burns brothers, who grew up in the cow countries of the West—real cowboys since they were old enough to handle a lariat. Fred Burns is in charge of the stock at the Fine Arts studios, and between times he plays cowboy parts quite modestly and unofficially. He is one of the most conspicuous members of the band of sure-enough plainsmen who have drifted to Los Angeles since most of the hard riding of the West began to be done for the screen.

And small Beulah is a chip from the old block. She has been in the saddle since she was old enough to sit up without having a hand at her back, and she can ride almost anything that is live horseflesh. She is fearless, like her father, and this wild ride is an event of the picture, thrilling as the latter is throughout.

"HER NEW YORK" FOLLOWS "LEAR."

Gladys Hulette's Thanhouser-Pathe feature, "The Shine Girl" and "Prudence, the Pirate," have met with such unqualified praise that exhibitors are clamoring for more of the same. Miss Hulette's next release will be "Her New York," a play by Agnes C. Johnston, author of Miss Hulette's other Gold Rooster plays.

"Her New York" probably will be the next Thanhouser-Pathe release after Frederick Warde in "King Lear." Supporting Miss Hulette in "Her New York" are Riley Chamberlin, Carey Hastings, Williams Parke, Jr., Robert Vaughn and Ethyle Cooke.

IVAN'S COMING PRODUCTION.

Ivan Abramson, the energetic director-general of the Ivan Film Productions, has for some time been secretly negotiating for the construction of a big, new, special release, which will create a sensation in filmdom. The name of the new photo-drama is "Enlighten Thy Daughter," and it will be produced at a cost equal to the expense of several former releases. To this end he has engaged a selected cast of star screen players, such as Katherine Kaelred, Marie Shotwell, Zena Keefe, Louise Horner, Frank Sheridan, James Morrison, Arthur Donaldson, and others.

"THE SCAPEGRACE" (Universal).

"The Scapegrace" is the title of a two-reel Southern drama being filmed at Universal City under the direction of George Cochrane. The leading roles are played by Molly Malone and Jack Nelson with a strong cast of players in their support. Harvey Gates of the Universal staff wrote the story.

METRO'S "BIG TREMAINE" RELEASED NOV. 20.

The Metro-Yorke adaptation of Marie Van Vorst's stirring novel, "Big Tremaine," will be released on Nov. 20. This great drama, with Harold Lockwood and May Allison as the stars, and which was picturized and directed by Henry Otto, is one of the strongest film offerings of the season.

It is a play that is filled with powerful situations. Through it run the elements of love, money and politics. In the love element there are two divisions. The chief of these portrays the tender emotions of a strong and honorable man who is deceived by a fickle woman and is betrayed by his own brother. The other element reveals a tremendous struggle of mother love.

Mr. Lockwood takes the part of "Big Tremaine" and Miss Allison is Isobel Malvern. Supporting them are Lester Cuneo as Redmond Malvern; Albert Ellis as Judge Tremaine; Lillian Hayward as Mrs. Tremaine; William Ephe as David Tremaine; Andrew Arbuckle as Samuel Leavitt; Josephine Rice as Mammy; Virginia Southern as Julia Cameron, and William De Vaull as John Nolan.

DICKENS' "GREAT EXPECTATIONS" BY FAMOUS PLAYERS.

The late Charles Dickens seems destined to enjoy as great a popularity upon the screen as he did in type. Following the announcement that the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company would make an adaptation of "Oliver Twist," with Marie Doro as the stellar lady, there comes the news that Lasky's all-on the Paramount Program, the Famous Players Film Company, with Hazel Dawn, Louise Huff and Jack Pickford in an adaptation of "Great Expectations." The latter novel has like "Oliver Twist," been dramatized and presented on the stage. W. S. Gilbert having taken it from the novel, the play being presented for the first time at the Court theater in 1871.

"THE ROAD TO LOVE" (Morosco).

As its next Lenore Ulrich subject on the Paramount Program, the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company announces "The Road to Love," a story of Algeria, by Blanche Dougan Cole, adapted to the screen by Gardner Hunting. In this production the popular star of the screen and stage appears as Hafsa, the daughter of an Arabian chief, who loves a young American against the wishes of her father. Her love is reciprocated, but her sweetheart is captured by her angry father and sent away to be sold as a slave. The unfolding of the story displays many dramatic situations in which Miss Ulrich is called upon to put forth her best histrionic efforts.

Various artistic effects have been secured in the elaborate Arabian settings of the story and sunset desert scenes. Both in points of dramatic effort and stagecraft "The Road to Love" is undoubtedly the greatest production in which Lenore Ulrich has been seen on the screen to date.

Scott Sidney, whose success as a director of prominence needs no retelling, produced "The Road to Love" with the assistance of an expert technical force including James Van Trees, who supervised the photography. The majority of the scenes were taken in the desert and one of the thrills of the subject is a severe sandstorm in which the players were caught while the photoplay was being produced. The storm was photographed and embodied in the story. Street scenes of Algerian towns have been carefully duplicated and a small fortune was expended in the staging of Sidi Malik's garden.

In the chief supporting character to Miss Ulrich is Colin Chase, whose splendid work in recent Pallas productions prompted the producers to secure his future services under a long term contract. Lucile Ward, whose notable characterization of the old colored mammy in Vivian Martin's recent Pallas release, "Her Father's Son," will be remembered, appears in the role of Lella Sadiya. Others in the large cast include Estelle Allen, Alfred Vosburgh, Henschel Mayall, Joe Massey and Alfred Longworth. The photoplay will be released on the Paramount Program early next month.

"A MESSAGE TO GARCIA" FILMED.

George Kleine announces the coming of Edison's film version of "A Message to Garcia" through the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay Service week of December 11th. The photoplay is based on the preachment of that name by Elbert Hubbard, the famous American writer and philosopher, who lost his life in the sinking of the Lusitania. The picture story is said to have adhered closely to the spirit of the widely read bit of literature upon which it was founded.

The exterior scenes of "A Message to Garcia" were made in Cuba, where a company of Edison players, headed by Mabel Trunnelle and Robert Conness, spent several months under the direction of Richard Ridgeley.

"THE BORDER LINE" (Essanay).

Gorgeous gowns and elaborate settings of the "Great Lights" are essentially prominent in this feature, for it has to do with the mulcting of millionaires by a very clever coterie of blackmailers. Nell Craig, as "the lure" to lead the victims into the clutches of the crooks, has spent hours with her dressmakers in the selection of her beautiful costumes, and appears at her best. In the finale she falls in love with one of her victims, repudiates her associates and gets splattered with the lead paid by detectives on the crooks' den. Edward Arnold gives a vivid portrayal of the masculine role. Screen time, forty-eight minutes.

Santschi on Vacation.

Thomas Santschi, who played the male lead in "The Garden of Allah," is enjoying a brief vacation before beginning work in a new Selig feature.

"THE SHERIFF'S BLUNDER" (Selig).

"The Sheriff's Blunder" is an unusual Western drama exploiting Tox Mix, the cowboy star, and released by the Selig Company in General Film regular service on Monday, November 20. The story has to do with a bank messenger who is given a large sum of money. Mexican bandits stop the stage, but Whitcomb, the bank messenger, escapes with the money. When the messenger fails to appear in town, the sheriff and posse go in search of him. A man answering to the identity of the bank messenger is captured by the sheriff. About to be executed as a thief he is given an opportunity to tell his story.

Briefly he claims that it was his twin brother who was the bank messenger, and that he, the man who was captured, was en route to the deathbed of his sweetheart. His story stirs the sympathies of the sheriff and the man is released. Later the kind-hearted officer finds that the man he permitted to escape was the notorious cattle rustler and crook, who capitalized on the story of a twin brother and a dying sweetheart.

Tom Mix provides thrills in this picture, and there are some beautiful scenic effects.

"THE VICTORIA CROSS" (LASKY).

The Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company's Paramount release for December 14th will come to the screen flanked by a remarkable array of names. The picture itself is an adaptation of Paul Potter's celebrated play, "The Victoria Cross,' which has been tremendously successful on the stage and represents only one of many well-known plays by this distinguished author.

The great Lou-Tellegen is the star, and among the supporting cast there appear the names of at least two players who are stars in their own right—Cleo Ridgely, who has been costarring successfully with Wallace Reid, and Sessue Hayakawa, the celebrated Japanese star who recently appeared in "The Soul of Kura-San." Mabel Van Buren and Ernest Joy are two other well-known names that appear in the cast. The production was staged under the direction of Edward J. Le Saint.

The events of the story are based largely upon actual historic occurrences during the famous Indian Mutiny of 1857. It is a thrilling tale, full of action, and has been very effectively staged in the hill country of California which is so ideally suited to serve as an "Indian" background.

"JEALOUSY" (Fox).

Valeska Suratt, the screen's supreme siren, literally scintillates in "Jealousy," her latest starring vehicle, which William Fox will release on November 20. Miss Suratt herself is authority for the statement that her costumes in this new photodrama exceed in number and in splendor even the gorgeous creations which helped make notable "A Soul of Broadway" and "The Straight Way," her two previous Fox pictures.

There are many beautiful interior settings. The drawing-room in the home of Anna Baxter (Miss Suratt), which is fitted out with luxurious Oriental furnishings, and is done throughout in a rich black and white, cost several thousands of dollars to erect.

Walter Law, the recently acquired William Fox actor, gains new prestige by his excellent portrayal of the character which he impersonates. Other members of the supporting cast are Charline Mayfield (Lincoln's grandniece), Curtis Benton, Joseph Granby and George M. Adams. Seven years ago Granby and Benton acted together in a sketch written by the latter.

Director Will S. Davis screened the photoplay, his eighth for Fox Films. Mr. Davis is also the author of the scenario.

Miss Suratt plays the role of Anne Baxter, a woman without heart or emotions, who wrecks the lives of two men. She marries Peter Martin (Walter Law), whom she does not love. Roland Carney (Curtis Benton), the man she really loves, could not support her in the luxury to which she was accustomed.

MARGARITA FISCHER IN BIRTH CONTROL PICTURE.

Harry Pollard, head of the Pollard Picture Plays Company, which was organized to produce photodramas starring Margarita Fischer for the Mutual Film Corporation, has purchased what he considers the greatest scenario ever written on the theme of birth control, and will produce it with Miss Fischer in the leading role. The name of the new picture which Mr. Pollard will produce is "The Devil's Assistant." It was written by J. Edward Hungerford, the well-known writer, whose name is a guarantee of excellence in the literary as well as the photodrama world, and is pronounced by Director Pollard as the most startling and most convincing plot he has ever read.

"The Devil's Assistant" will take the place of "The Light of Heaven" in the releasing schedule of the six Fischer pictures already announced and is dated for appearance in December.

STANDARD EXCHANGE TO HANDLE MOSS PICTURES.

The Standard Film Service Company, the largest independent exchange operating in the states of Ohio, Michigan and Kentucky, has contracted with the B. S. Moss Motion Picture Corporation whereby they will become exclusive distributors in their territory of the Moss program.

Moss films will be distributed from the Cincinnati, Cleveland and Detroit offices of the Standard to the exhibitors in the three states in which this company operates.

"The Salamander," the sensational adaptation of the famous novel of the same name by Owen Johnson, which has never been exploited in Ohio, Michigan and Kentucky, will inaugurate the advent of the Moss program in this territory and will be followed in Ohio and Kentucky by "The Power of Evil" and "Boots and Saddles." In Michigan "One Day" has never showed at any theater and will be released simultaneously with "The Salamander" and then will be followed by the regular program of one feature each month.

KATHLYN WILLIAMS IN "REDEEMING LOVE."

The production of Kathlyn Williams' initial subject for the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company, "Redeeming Love," is now rapidly nearing completion and will be released on the Paramount Program the end of next month. It is confidently expected by both the producers and the star that this subject will disclose her greatest work upon the screen. It is also stated that the thrilling automobile accident recently staged for the Kathlyn Williams film has turned out to be one of the most spectacular scenes ever portrayed on the screen. Work on Miss Williams' second Morosco production will commence November 18.

PATHE NEWS SCORES AGAIN.

On November 1st the German submarine merchantman "Deutschland" surprised the country by slipping into New London harbor and tieing up to a pier. At six o'clock the same day the Pathe News was showing in Broadway theaters genuine pictures of the event, a Pathe cameraman having had the enterprise to overcome all difficulty and film the vessel and her captain. Special messengers and the greatest speed in manufacture enabled the News to make a clean "beat."

EDISON'S "THE COSSACK WHIP."

Russia, the land of mystery and intrigue, furnishes the background for Edison's latest feature success, "The Cossack Whip," in which Viola Dana is starred. As the first scene flashes on the screen a long line of prisoners is seen winding across the snow-covered Russian steppes toward Siberia. A band of Revolutionists attacks the Cossack guard, and in the confusion a number of prisoners escape. Turov, Prefect of Police, orders the whole district raided that he may capture and punish the perpetrators of the attack.

Among the victims is Katerina Sasha, but her young sister Darya escapes the raiders. Over her dead sister's body, Darya swears revenge, and then follows a story of unusual gripping force, telling how Darya, having become a favorite dancer of the Imperial Ballet, brings the brutal Turov to her feet and accomplishes her revenge; and how, a little later, she flees Russia and makes her way to America with the man she loves. The course of the story, which is released November 13th through the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay Service, is replete with exciting and beautiful scenes, picturing vividly the plottings of the Revolutionists, the voluptuous life of the Imperial Ballet behind the scenes, the luxury of the ruling classes in Russia and furious Cossack raids.

"A LASS OF THE LUMBERLANDS" V. (Signal).

Helen Holmes' new serial story and her most pretentious and sensational "A Lass of the Lumberlands" being filmed by the Signal for distribution by the Mutual Film Corporation, in its fifth chapter released November 13 develops a speed of number that at moments takes the breath away. As a background to the thrills is the picturesque beautiful big woods forest and contrasting the scenes of rough Western life in a lumber camp town. Through the chapter leap incidents of [illegible] and physical daring.

Scene from "A Lass of the Lumberlands" (Mutual).

The Interstate Commerce Commission has declared "Dollar" Holmes' Railroad a common carrier, and he has to transport his rival's logs to mill. He blows up the boilers of the mill to prevent the milling of his rival's timber, pulls off a crooked mayoralty election to make his plot good—and gets up against the daring and resource of Helen Holmes, whom he has tried to have murdered, when she calls in a troop of cavalry to stop a rifle and pistol battle.

The action of the lieutenant of the cavalry, after the battle has been stopped by his troopers, leaves the audience in suspense until Chapter VI as to whether Holmes or Helen and her friends have won out for the moment.

"A MESSAGE FROM THE SKY" (Unity).

The Unity Sales Corporation will release this week the Tenth episode of "The Yellow Menace," under the title of "A Message From the Sky." In this episode we see introduced some very striking aviation scenes which not only add an impressive novelty to the picture but stamps it as being thoroughly up-to-date in every particular.

Sato, one of Ali Singh's Japanese helpers, applies for lessons in the Government aviation corps and, while presumably a novice, is really an expert in the handling of the machines. He manages to arrange a flight alone to prove the progress he is making in his lessons and succeeds in stealing a fine new monoplane. In his flight he passes over Errol Manning's garden and drops a message, stating that Margaret Bronson and May Manning have been captured and are held by Ali Singh. Their release from torture is promised if Manning will give himself up to Ali Singh.

In this episode also Hong Kong Harry is lashed almost to death for his disloyalty in interfering with the torture meted out to the beautiful Najla. As a balm to his tortured body and wounded spirits Najla again braves the wrath of the Arch-Demon and takes care of Hong Kong Harry, dressing his wounds and ministering to his comforts. These scenes depicting the torture of Hong Kong Harry are in striking contrast with the attractiveness of the aviation scenes and are so reeled as to surely make the audience forget that after all it is only a picture and not real life.

PATHE FASHION FILMS INTEREST WOMEN.

The eighth release of Pathe's Florence Rose Fashion Films, which are proving very popular, is entitled "A Day in New York With Betty." It is released on November 12. In it, Betty's out-of-town guest sees the great metropolis from the viewpoint of a dyed-in-the-wool New Yorker. And where is the girl, young or old, who does not long to visit New York?

The best theaters everywhere report great success with these pictures, and it is clear that audiences will be very much interested in this release, showing as it does, a morning musical, a luncheon at the Ritz a trip to a specialty shop and a dinner party for six, followed by a box at the theater. The clothes are beautiful and each character wears the absolutely correct costume for the particular scene in which he or she appears. Florence Reutti is as charming as ever in the role of Betty, the heroine.

"THE BUGLER OF ALGIERS" (Bluebird).

Bluebird promises an exceptionally good feature in the release for Nov. 27, captioned "The Bugler of Algiers." There are many points of interest to exhibitors in this feature, with a promise of better than usual box-office results. In the first place Ella Hall, one of the most popular of Bluebird's featured players, returns to the series after three months rest. Miss Hall will be featured with Rupert Julian, who directed the production, and Kingsley Benedict. These three players will divide the honors in the first act with little Zoe Rae, who was lately featured in "Gloriana," a Bluebird that won favor from the critics, when recently reviewed. Robert H. Davis, editor of Munsey's Magazine, in collaboration with Perley Pore Sheehan, wrote the story, "We Are French," from which "The Bugler of Algiers" was created. An incident of vital import to the plot gives the screen version its title. Add to these advertising features the fact that patriotism and loyalty to flag and country is the inspiration, "The Bugler of Algiers" will carry uncommon interest to the public that makes for the welfare of the exhibitor. In these martial times, any subject that deals in a neutral way with the European conflict holds abiding interest with the masses, and "The Bugler of Algiers" fills all these requirements.

FAIRBANKS TO DO "BLAZE DERRINGER."

The Douglas Fairbanks feature to follow the Triangle production of "The Matrimaniac," which is nearing completion, will be a screen version of Eugene P. Lyle's novel, "Blaze Derringer," to be done under the direction of John Emerson.

Miss Anita Loos and Mr. Emerson are now putting the finishing touches on the scenario of the story, which should make an unusually strong Fairbanks plot. It is said that "Doug" will be given full opportunity to utilize his well-known strength and agility amid remarkably picturesque settings.

The tale is that of a young American who goes to a Central American republic of imaginary location in the company of a couple of notorious jail-breakers to get the deposed president out of jail.

"Blaze" is the son of a wealthy father who has sent him out into the world with a certain allowance which he has succeeded in scattering on the four winds of irresponsibility—hence his eagerness to join forces with the jail-birds to get the reward of $100,000 which the incarcerated president has offered any one who will effect his release.

The manner in which this ambitious undertaking is carried out furnishes the novel thrills in what is said to be a sure-fire Fairbanks drama.

POLICE ANNALS FURNISH KALEM PLOT.

Director Robert Ellis, of the Kalem staff, is at work on a story that finds its basis in a page from the annals of the New York police department. Because of the number of crimes committed at a house on the East Side, the street number of which was 222, it became known to the police reporters and detectives as "The House of Three Deuces." Robert Welles Ritchie has taken this title for an episode of "Grant, Police Reporter," which tells the story of one of the mysterious crimes occuring there.

George Larkin, the dare-devil star of this series, in "The House of Three Deuces," engages in a struggle on a fire escape with Robert Ellis, and at the height of the fight the rickety landing suddenly collapses. Ollie Kirkby contributes a remarkable bit of acting as an Italian girl. The cast also includes Arthur Albertson, William McKey, G. Chira and Mary Taylor Ross.

"The House of Three Deuces" is scheduled for release by Kalem on the General Film program on Friday, November 24th.

"THE END OF THE TRAIL" TO BE NOVELIZED.

Last Friday afternoon, Wm. Fox, President of the Fox Film Corporation, gave a private showing, in the firms' projection rooms, of Maibelle Heikes Justice's successful photodrama, "The End of the Trail," featuring William Farnum and Gladys Rockwell. Reversing the usual order of things, one of the Fifth Avenue Publishers has selected Miss Justice's strong drama of the northwest for novelization and has approached her for the book rights. Barbara Yechton, the well-known novelist and author of many popular successes is writing the book version, as Miss Justice is unable to write the story owing to press of dramatic work, so that the special running of the film was made for Miss Yechton who saw the screen portrayal for the first time. Miss Yechton, Miss Justice and several invited friends were present. Miss Yechton was enthusiastic over the story and the splendid cast in their work on the screen, and pronounced the whole most inspiring to the touch of her pen.

IVAN ENTERS NEW TERRITORY.

Harry Samwick, of the New York and New Jersey Exchange of the Merit Film Corporation, 126 West 16th street, New York City, announces that the latest Ivan special, "The Sex Lure," has tended to install the Ivan Productions in favor with other high class releases by the fact that he has just booked this photoplay de luxe on the B. F. Keith's Circuit, the Proctor's Circuit, the Marcus Loew Circuit, the B. S. Moss Circuit, and all the other leading theaters throughout the two states, the opening date of which is November 13.

Robinson Crusoe for Grown-Ups.

Henry W. Savage Produces a Five-Part Photoplay on Famous Adventures for Adult Minds—Will Be State-righted.

AN announcement of unusual interest to states-rights buyers has been made by Henry W. Savage, the famous play producer, who recently completed the five-part photoplay, "Robinson Crusoe." States rights to "Robinson Crusoe" are now available and in this picture that carries with it a universal appeal, Mr. Savage has enriched the motion picture art greatly.

Scene from "Robinson Crusoe" (Savage).

Selecting a hero centuries old, one that is known to millions of all nations and ages, Mr. Savage has, through the masterly direction of George Marion, given the story a treatment that takes it out of the distinctly juvenile realm and has made it a story for the old as well as the young.

The only deviations made from the book were made where greater strength and picturesqueness were added to the story. The picture has been given a lavish expenditure of money and brains and the results brand it distinctly another Savage success. Mr. Marion's superb direction is evident throughout and his screen adaptation of Robinson Crusoe will make some of our latter day heroes look to their laurels.

The release of Robinson Crusoe is being handled as a states-rights proposition solely. This must be of interest to buyers of this class, as pictures with universal appeal, wherein the stories have not been mutilated by censors, are still rare. Little need be said about the story, as all of us know it.

But some of the scenes that have been but word pictures to us are screened with a richness and a charm that taxes one to describe. The picturesque tropics are here in all their richness and lure. The daring and bloodthirsty pirates that charmed us in our youth now do deeds of violence that thrill us in our maturity.

The cannibal feast, the slave market, the tropical storms and the wreck of the sailing vessel all stand out so vividly that the success of Robinson Crusoe is assured. The scenes mentioned and many others approach the colossal and give to this picture play a distinction that is rare.

To have selected a hero that is known to millions and yet has been seen before by none shows the judgment that has made the name of Henry W. Savage a synonym of success. The grownups will thank him as ardently as the youngsters. It is a family picture in the real sense of the word.

No stint was shown in the production. A ship was built especially for the story and its destruction accomplished with all the terror that one can imagine. Juan Fernandez Island, on the sands of which Robinson Crusoe finds the footprint, was never more alluring and fearful than the locations selected by Mr. Marion for his scenes.

The cannibal feasts and the haunts of these bloodthirsty beings are superbly pictured. The photography is so perfect that it does not occur to the viewer that these are pictures and not life itself. The motion picture art and motion picture morals are much richer for Mr. Savage's selection.

The states-rights will be marketed by A. & H. M. Warner, of No. 729 Seventh Avenue, New York, an arrangement having been made by them and Mr. Savage.

STANDARD EXCHANGE GETS MOSS FILMS.

The Standard Film Service Company, the largest independent exchange operating in the states of Ohio, Michigan and Kentucky, has contracted with the B. S. Moss Motion Picture Corporation whereby they will become exclusive distributors in their territory of the Moss program. Moss films will be distributed from the Cincinnati, Cleveland and Detroit offices of the Standard to exhibitors in the three states in which this company operates.

CARLSTROM BRINGS FILM FOR GAUMONT.

The remarkable flight of Victor Carlstrom from Chicago to New York had one interesting sidelight that brings the motion picture industry into the record. Pictures of the aviator were taken at the Chicago aviation field, then sealed in a container and marked for delivery to the Gaumont Motion Picture Company, New York. The pictures were taken by the Chicago cameraman of this company for its news reel, the Mutual Weekly.

Carlstrom made the small package fast to his 200 horsepower military biplane. In this fashion the film picturing the scenes attendant upon his departure were brought to New York. At the terminus of the flight a Mutual cameraman waited. He caught all the ceremonies attendant upon the arrival of the airman, received the film taken in Chicago, and hurried with his precious records to the Gaumont Laboratories at Flushing. Here they were developed for immediate showing on Broadway.

Inasmuch as the Weekly will be able to handle only part of the pictures recording the flight of Victor Carlstrom from Chicago to New York, the Gaumont Company has decided to show the flight in greater detail in its film magazine, "Reel Life." Under the title of "Aero-Mail Service" it will be released in "Reel Life" No. 28, November 12.

IVAN MAKES FURTHER STRIDES.

The Western Film Exchange, of 180 Golden Gate avenue, San Francisco, Cal., has just signed contracts with the Ivan Film Productions, Inc., to distribute the photoplays manufactured by this concern throughout the States of California, Nevada and Arizona. The exhibitors of these states, who have been clamoring in the past for Ivan films, will now have the opportunity of obtaining promptly the release of these pictures.

"SOMEWHERE IN GEORGIA" (Sunbeam).

After four solid weeks of consistent day and night work, Ty Cobb, the famous baseball player, has completed his six-part "mellerdrammer," "Somewhere in Georgia," for the Sunbeam Motion Picture Corporation, and has departed for his home in Georgia. The great Ty, when he arrives home, will see for the first time a little stranger, whom Mrs. Ty has been teaching the word "papa" to, and who arrived at the Cobb home two months ago.

Before leaving, Ty made it known that he would tell the new arrival all about studio work, with a view to presenting her to President Wilbur Dunham about the year 1930 to play a leading part for Sunbeam.

But to get back to the picture. Little Elsie MacLeod plays the lead with Cobb, as the daughter of a banker "Somewhere in Georgia." She finds herself in love with the great ball player, who is employed by her father as a bank clerk. But the cashier of the bank also has designs on Elsie's heart and Cobb finds himself a competitor for the girl's hand.

Being well known for his ball playing with the home team, Ty is watched by a scout from the Detroit Baseball Club, and is finally offered a chance in the big league. He accepts, and while away learns that the cashier is to marry his sweetheart. He starts for home, but is detained by a gang of thugs employed by the cashier to intercept his trip home. After a real fight and one that cost the participants many a bruise, Cobb finally gets started for home.

Scene from "Somewhere in Georgia" (Sunbeam).

He arrives in time to play in the last game with the home team and his wonderful work wins the championship. A little more love-making and the great Ty wins back his sweetheart.

Commenting on the battle with the thugs, Cobb stated that he wished President Dunham had engaged some American League umpires to battle with him. He stated that he would have felt more at home, and probably could have made the battle even more realistic than it was.

GAUMONT RELEASES FOR WEEK OF NOV. 19.

The outstanding announcement of the week of November 19 upon the Gaumont program of releases through Mutual is the first episode of "The Vampires, or the Arch Criminals of Paris." This is a complete story in itself, as are the eight which follow, entitled "The Detective's Head." Each episode is complete in three reels. The photo-novel is a high class example of the best style of French detective screen fiction.

"Reel Life," No. 29, released Nov. 19, has "Catching Fish for Market," taken on the Massachusetts coast; "How Zinc is Produced," pictures of a great Franco-Belgian plant before the war; "Growing Tea in the United States," an infant industry of South California, and "Up-to-date Fashions," illustrating how a gown is made by draping it upon a model in its successive stages of manufacture. This is a new screen departure.

"Tours Around the World," Number 3, released Nov. 21, takes spectators to the picturesque capital of Egypt, Cairo and to Antwerp, the great port of Belgium, showing it as it looked before it came temporarily under German rule. The third picture is one crowded out of the previous issue, the gorges of the Vesuble river, a mountain torrent of the Maritime Alps.

"See America First," No. 63, released Nov. 22, has beautiful pictures of the locks and rapids at Sault Ste. Marie, Mich. Dividing the reel with it is an animated Gaumont Kartoon Komic, "What's a Home Without a Dog?" by Harry Palmer.

The fourth single-reel of the week is The Mutual Weekly.

PHAX COMPANY TO HANDLE "RACE SUICIDE."

Phax Pictures Company, with offices at suite 903, Candler Building, 220 West 42d street, is a newcomer of note to the motion picture field during the past week. Presided over by motion picture men with practical experience, the company has been organized for the express purpose of exploiting the better grade motion picture productions along advanced ideas of presentation. The field of operations of the Phax Company for the present will be confined to the Middle Atlantic Coast states.

For the initial presentation of the company, the exclusive rights to the six-part photo-problem play, "Race Suicide," have been purchased for the territory of Greater New York, New York State and New Jersey, from Joseph W. Farnham. Samuel Cummings, a newspaper man of wide experience and a film man, par excellence, who has been remarkably successful in the presentation of "Wars' Women" and a number of other features, is to be in direct charge of the booking of "Race Suicide," and with him will be associated Nat Spitzer and Charlie Feature Abrams.

"FOLLOWING THE FLAG" (Selig.)

The Selig company on Monday, November 27, will release a very unusual subject through General Film Service. The production will be entitled "Following the Flag." This feature consists of three reels of exciting and instructive army activities.

"Following the Flag" presents Pershing's column crossing the border into Mexico in pursuit of Villa. It shows the transportation of troops from the various States to the Mexican borderland; it tells the story of the gravitation of National Guardsmen into real for-sure soldiers of Uncle Sam; it presents the soldiers at mess; while engaged on long "hikes"; in fact, the production shows almost every detail of the making of Uncle Sam's soldiers.

While "Following the Flag" is in every respect a feature picture-play, it will be released in regular service. The production will add class to any program, for it is not only timely, but educational.

COST MONEY TO REVAMP "MASQUE OF LIFE."

J. L. Kempner, of Signet Films, who is releasing "The Masque of Life," the big seven-reel spectacular novelty which has made such a sensational box office success at the Park Theater, first saw the picture when he was in London last summer and realized what tremendous possibilities it had in the American market after it was remade to suit conditions over here. At that time the film was named "The Circus of Death," and it made, in its original Italian form, an unparalleled success all through the United Kingdom. At that time it was ten reels in length, but Mr. Kempner, realizing what drastic changes would have to be made in it before release here, made arrangements for so improving it that it would stand the criticism of the most exacting audiences in America.

Mr. Kempner says that it has cost several thousand dollars to fix up the film for the American presentation and his views on the Italian producing situation in relation to the American market are interesting and worthy of noting to those concerned in the importation of foreign films.

SEQUEL TO "DIAMOND FROM THE SKY."

A four chapter sequel to "The Diamond from the Sky," the big sixty-reel photonovel of 1914-15, is announced by the Mutual Film Corporation. The first chapter of the sequel will be available to exhibitors on and after November 27. Each chapter is in two parts. The sequel, a most spectacular continuation and culmination of "The Diamond," contains a promise of attaining the same remarkable distribution.

The cast of the sequel includes William Russell, Charlotte Burton and William Tedmarsh, in work which rivals their admittedly important successes in "The Diamond from the Sky."

A carefully planned advertising campaign is about to be launched by the Mutual both for the purpose of calling the motion picture exhibitors' attention to the production, and for the purpose of aiding him in realizing in profits on its box office value.

UNICORN'S "BILLY WEST" COMEDIES POPULAR.

The Billy West series of comedy pictures which is being produced by the Unicorn Film Service Corporation has, according to Ike Schlank, president of the concern, taken the entire country by storm. It is stated by Mr. Schlank that the Marcus Loew's circuit has booked the entire series of 16 episodes following the premier showing at the New York theater on the 16th of November. Mr. Loew was so much impressed with the merits of the Billy West series that he decided to make it the feature attraction in the opening of his new theater, "The York," at 116th street and Seventh avenue. The first of the Billy West series, which were directed by Edwin McKim, is entitled "His Married Life," and shows this newest of comedians enduring the trials and tribulations of a newly-wed. Billy West, the star of the series, who is famous from his achievements in vaudeville, is supported by Ethelyn Gibson, Howard Messmore and a company of equally well-known players.

TRIUMPH PRODUCTION SELLS READILY.

Julius Steger, president of the Triumph Film Corporation, announces the sale of the six-part photoplay entitled "The Libertine," with John Mason and Alma Hanlon to the Masterpiece Film Attractions and the All Star Features Distributors (Sol L. Lesser and Leon D. Netter, managers), for the following territories: Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky, Virginia, West Virginia, Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia, Illinois, California, Nevada, Arizona, Colorado, Utah, Wyoming, New Mexico, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Montana and Indiana: to the Mommoth Film Corporation (F. E. Backer, president), for the territories of New York, New Jersey and New England; to the Favorite Feature Film Corporation (M. Gottlieb, manager), for Minnesota, Wisconsin, North and South Dakota and Iowa.

The southern territories and Missouri, Kansas and Nebraska will be exploited for the Triumph Film Corporation by N. R. Greathouse, which leaves only Michigan unsold. Negotiations are now pending for the last named territories as well as Canada and the foreign rights. The prices paid for the above mentioned territories have established records in the film trade.

"THE LIGHT THAT FAILED" DOING FINE BUSINESS.

The managers of the various Pathe exchanges report heavy bookings on "The Light That Failed," the first Kipling book to be filmed. Exhibitors have readily recognized the advertising value of the picture not only because of the Kippling name, but also because of the splendid cast, which includes Robert Edeson, Jose Collins, Claude Fleming and Lillian Tucker.

JEANNE EAGELS GIVES FINE PEFORMANCE.

"The World and the Woman," the Pathe Gold Rooster release for November 19, is a message of hope to those crushed by the burdens of life, an inspiration to the discouraged. Jeanne Eagels as the fallen woman who finds redemption through the love of a little child, gains self-respect and accomplished much good among those around her, is always convincing and plays her part with proper balance and judgment.

GAITES NEGOTIATING FOR SOUTHERN TERRITORY.

Joseph M. Gaites, managing director of the A. G. Fontana Productions, Inc., owners of the rights to Thos. H. Ince's "Civilization" in Ohio, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware and West Virginia, is negotiating with J. Parker Read, Jr., for the rights to the solid South, including Texas. Mr. Gaites has planned a sweeping publicity campaign for the States his company controls, and expects to reap a veritable harvest with the great spectacle.

FASHIONS IN GAUMONT'S "REEL LIFE."

Recognizing the women spectators at motion picture theaters are adept enough to copy fashions from the screen when the model is built up step by step, the Gaumont Company begins in "Reel Life," No. 29 released Nov. 19, a series of pictures of how a fashionable gown is made. The method is to place a model on a stand and have the designer build a gown upon her. In this manner the spectators will be able to see every part of the gown from the formation to the final touch of ornamentation.

Trade News of the Week

GATHERED BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS

William Fox's New Newark Venture

Terminal Theater at Park Place, Near the Public Service Terminal, Is Ready to Open—Second Fox Theater in Newark.

By Jacob J. Kalter, Newark Correspondent.

NEWARK, N. J.—Everything is in readiness for the opening of the new Fox theater in this city. The house has gone through extensive alterations and improvements, and will probably be opened to the public on November 13. The new Fox house will be named the Terminal theater, due to its proximity to the new public service terminal on Park Place. The theater was formerly known as the Park Place theater, and was for many years the home of Proctor vaudeville.

William Fox leased the theater from the Lawyers' Building Company. The property has a frontage on Park Place of twenty-five feet, and a depth of approximately 165 feet, coming out on the Canal street side where it has a frontage of 100 feet. It is in a section of the city which has recently had many developments. The new terminal, the Hudson tubes, and the Robert Treat hotel have done much to bring this section of Newark into prominence.

Although it was originally intended to utilize the house for a vaudeville and moving picture house, only high-class photoplays will be shown according to the billboards. This is the second theater in Newark operated by Mr. Fox. The other is the Carlton theater, situated at Market and Halsey streets, under the management of Louis P. DeWolfe. The new Terminal theater will in all probability follow the style of the Carlton and exhibit first-class pictures. The program will be changed three times a week.

American Commercial Incorporated.

Newark, N. J.—The American Commercial Film Company has been incorporated here for the purpose of presenting moving picture films. The resident agent is David Lesnik, 738 Broad street. The company has an authorized capital of $25,000. The incorporators are Lynn S. Card, Samuel Bratter and Louis Lyon.

Urges New Montclair Theater.

Monclair, N. J.—By the close verdict of 17 to 16, following an informal debate, the Montclair Heights Community Club went on record as favoring the establishment of a proposed moving picture theater in Upper Montclair. If the town commissioners decide to grant a new license, the theater will be built at Valley road and Lorraine avenue. The application has been made by a New York concern, which intends erecting a building to house the proposed theater and ten stores. The cost will be $140,000.

New Red Bank Theater.

Red Bank, N. J.—A company of Asbury Park men has leased the property at the northeast corner of Broad street and Linden place as a site for a theater. The names of the lessees and the terms of the lease have not yet been made public. The new theater will take up all of the lot, and will be a story and a half high. The building will be constructed of tile and stucco, at a cost of between $20,000 and $25,000. The theater will have a seating capacity of 1,000 persons, all on one floor.

First Pickford Picture.

Newark, N. J.—Under the contract made between Frank A. Keeney and the Artcraft Pictures Corporation, the first of the new Mary Pickford pictures, "Less Than the Dust," was shown at Keeney's Newark house during the week of November 6.

Olympic Theater Reopened.

Newark, N. J.—The Olympia theater, at South Orange avenue and Norfolk street, has been reopened by I. Itzkowitz, who also operates the New Amsterdam theater on Sixteenth avenue. The initial attraction was Olga Petrova in the "Soul Market."

"Dot" Contest at Loew's.

Newark, N. J.—Loew's Newark theater, 99 Springfield avenue, has just finished a very successful "Who Will Be Dot?" contest. Much interest was manifested by the patrons of the house, which is under the management of Eugene Meyers. The picture was exhibited during the week of November 6, and on November 9 the entire company appeared in person on the stage.

Plaza Theater Improved.

Newark, N. J.—A permit has been filed with the building department for the alterations to the brick theater, known as the Plaza theater, at 400 Springfield avenue. The Metropolitan Realty Company, owners of the building, expect to spend $2,000 in the process of improvements and alterations.

"Romeo and Juliet" Here.

Newark, N. J.—Messrs. George W. Jacobs and William B. Putnam, managers of the Paramount theater, have leased the Lyceum, atop the Proctor's Palace, for the purpose of presenting Metro's version of "Romeo and Juliet." Francis X. Bushman and Miss Beverly Bayne, who star in the production, appeared personally at the theater November 1.

New Lincoln Changes Hands.

Newark, N. J.—The New Lincoln theater, 402 Belleville avenue, has been brought under control of Samuel Singer and Charles Jamison. The house has been undergoing various improvements, and has been re-christened "The Little Strand." Samuel Singer, who has had considerable experience in the exhibiting ranks, will be the active manager of the house, while the projection department will be under the supervision of David McCracken.

State League Ball in January.

Newark, N. J.—Secretary Bornstein of the State League of Motion Picture Exhibitors, announces that the first annual ball of the association will be held during January at the Armory. Many stars of filmdom have already signified their intention of appearing, and prospects are exceedingly bright for a most successful affair.

Incorporation in Sussex.

Sussex, N. J.—The Crescent Theater Company, with registered office at this place, has been incorporated with an authorized capital of $50,000. The concern will operate amusement enterprises. The incorporators are D. S. Goble, C. Smith and E. T. Goble

Pickford Film Appoints Agent.

Newark, N. J.—The Pickford Film Corporation of New York has appointed William Dowd as resident agent, with offices in the Essex building, Beaver and Clinton streets.

"Civilization" at City.

Newark, N. J.—After making a run of three consecutive weeks at the Strand theater here, Ince's spectacle "Civilization" returned to the city for a two days' run at the City theater, Seventh and Orange streets. This picture has had an exceedingly successful run in this city.

Pine Tree State Letter

From John P. Flanagan, 147 Park View Ave., Bangor, Maine.

Metro May Open Bangor Branch.

BANGOR, Me.—Bangor now has four moving picture exchanges, General, Universal, Mutual and Pathe. The Unicorn agency has been withdrawn, and business of that company is now handled from its Boston office. It is understood that Metro is contemplating opening a branch in Bangor.

Ernest LeBlanc, shipper in the office of the Mutual Film Co. in Bangor, has returned from Larede, Texas, where he has been on duty all summer with the Second Maine regiment. His office associates are glad that he didn't have to face Mexican bullets, and that he lives to resume his work with the exchange.

Maine Theater Notes and Changes.

Troy, Me.—The Dream theater has just been opened here.

Presque Isle, Me.—B. Nadeau, who recently bought the Strand theater, has closed it, and has just opened up the Golden Horseshoe moving picture house, using Mutual service. Mr. Nadeau has been engaged in the plumbing business. The Golden Horseshoe will seat about 500, and is a brand new building, erected by and for Mr. Nadeau.

Bangor, Me.—The Park theater is now using V-L-S-E, World and Metro service.

Recruits for Open Booking.

Baltimore, Md.—The managers of the New Lexington, the Great Western and New and Palace Garden theaters, located on North Howard and West Lexington streets, have now entered the open booking pool and have so stated. It is understood that a notable source that has stood out against booking all pictures will also be shown at their theaters.

Plague Ban Lifted.

Baltimore, Md.—Managers and patrons of the Baltimore exhibitors waited for the right of way which from the Health Department in regard to the infantile paralysis ban, so that they could proceed as usual. So they were gratified to learn on Tuesday, October 31st, that Dr. John D. Blake, the Health Commissioner, had sent out an order removing the quarantine against children under 13 and later placed at 5 years of age congregating in theaters and other places. The ban was lifted at 6 p. m. on the above date, and in issuing the proclamation Dr. Blake said that great care should be exercised by the parents of children to prevent them from courting danger.

Regarding Sign Privilege.

Baltimore, Md.—A blanket revocation of all minor privileges which are now held in the City of Baltimore will be issued by the Board of Estimates to become effective December 31st, and new permits will be granted only by the making of applications by those enjoying special privileges. Mayor Preston made this announcement on Wednesday, October 25th, and said that for every sign and other obstruction beyond the building line an annual charge would be fixed. A corps of 12 men is now making a survey of the city, and it is estimated that between $200,000 and $300,000 will be added to the City Treasury.

Harry Woods at Strand Helm.

Baltimore, Md.—Harry Woods, formerly resident manager of the Hippodrome theater, has now taken over the management of the Strand, 404-6 N. Howard street, and with his coming, many changes have taken place in this house. Edward Rosenstein, formerly at the Strand and Helm, who was operated on at a hospital on Monday, October 30th, will when he recovers, resume his theatrical business in Philadelphia. Fisher's symphony orchestra will render selections. New lighting effect has been installed, and the exterior as well as the interior present a refreshing appearance with the potted plants testefully arranged.

Oakland Theaters Entertain.

Oakland, Md.—Through the courtesy of Thos. J. C. Little, owner and manager of the Maryland theater in this city, a reception was tendered to the Corn and Potato prize winners, who reached here on Monday afternoon, November 6. The affair was heartily enjoyed by all and later in the day they enjoyed the moving picture performance at the Empire theater, where they had been invited by the management, which had also arranged other features for their enjoyment.

J. J. Hartlove Gets State Rights in "Unwritten Law."

Baltimore, Md.—The state rights in Maryland for "The Unwritten Law," a picture in seven reels featuring Beatriz Michelena, has been secured by J. J. Hartlove, who formerly managed the Crescent theater, 1110-12 South Charles street. He is now very busy hustling around.

New Honor for G. L. Wonders.

Baltimore, Md.—As a new honor which has been conferred upon him, Guy L. Wonders, manager of the Wilson theater, 416 East Baltimore street, has been appointed a member of the fire prevention regulation committee of which Jesse L. Lasky is at the head.

Operators at the Federation Convention

Baltimore's Annual Operators' Ball to Take Place on November 15 at the Lyric Theater—I. A. T. S. A. at the Convention.

[illegible] 1002 Mt. Royal Ter., Baltimore, Md.

BALTIMORE, Md.—The meeting of November 13th will see the opening here in the roof garden of the Garden theater on West Lexington street of the American Federation of Labor. The convention will continue for two weeks. N. B. Morgan an operator at the New theater, and a prominent member of the I. A. T. S. E. has been rushed these days, as he is on the arrangement committee of the Baltimore Federation of Labor, and will attend the convention as a delegate from the Operators' Union, Local 181 from Baltimore.

This committee has in charge all the arrangements for the big convention, which is a gathering of the supreme labor body of the country. Moving picture machine operators from all over the country will attend as delegates from their various Locals. It is expected that the event will be particularly interesting as there will probably be some legislating enacted which will affect that branch of the organization.

The annual Operator's ball will take place at the Lyric theater on Wednesday night, November 15th, to which all the visiting delegates to the convention will be invited. For this 3,000 invitations have been sent out. Several screen stars have been invited. As a feature a cabaret show will be given, and players from the vaudeville houses will be borrowed for the occasion. Among the big men who will attend the affair from the I. A. T. S. E. will be Charles C. Shea, president; Oscar Scheck, 1st vice-president; Michael Carney, secretary, and Messrs. Canavan and Series.

Private View of "Romeo and Juliet."

Baltimore, Md.—One of the biggest events which has lately taken place in Baltimore in the way of private screenings, was arranged for by Manager L. A. DeHoff, of the New theater, 210 West Lexington street, and held at this house on Sunday night, November 5th, when the wonderful Metro production of "Romeo and Juliet" was shown. The big feature of the event was the presence of Miss Bayne and Mr. Bushman at the theater during the performance. The admittance was by card only, and Manager DeHoff extended 2,000 invitations to the most prominent people, and the officials of universities and colleges of the city to attend the event. A full symphony orchestra under the direction of Prof. Cupero furnished the music. The invitations were printed in Old English and a Shakespearean atmosphere pervaded all. Arrangements were also made with Miss Bayne and Mr. Bushman by Mr. DeHoff to allow him to present them in their Romeo and Juliet costumes to the audience one night during the week of November 6th while this picture is being shown.

L. A. DeHoff.

The house was packed to standing room only. National airs were rendered and a soloist rendered two beautiful airs. Then at 8.45 there appeared in the foyer, framed with the marble soft lights, beautiful Beverly Bayne, escorted by her co-star Mr. Bushman. Wm. Lucas escorted Miss Bayne to the box, which was beautifully decorated with palms, chrysanthemums, roses and carnations, while the orchestra played Maryland, My Maryland,' and the audience gave them a mighty sendoff.

Then, on Monday afternoon and evening, November 6, Mr. Bushman and Miss Bayne were present at the theater again and addressed the patrons of the house.

W. F. Ballinger Leaves General.

Baltimore, Md.—W. F. Ballinger, who for five years has been associated with the General Film in this city, gradually worked his way from a minor capacity to the position as manager of the exchange, has resigned to go with the International. He will work from the Washington office

W. F. Ballinger.

J. J. Payette.

probably handling the North Carolina territory. The loss of Mr. Ballinger will be felt keenly in Baltimore as he is generally liked and esteemed by all exhibitors, who wish him success. There is a rumor current that J. J. Payette, who has recently been connected with the Hy-Art Film Company of Washington, and who about a year ago was associated with the General Film in this city, will take charge of the Baltimore exchange. Mr. Payette is well known in this territory. A. J. Nelson, manager of the Washington General Film exchange, comes over to this city on special business on Wednesday, Nov. 1st, the import of which was not made public.

Hippodrome Entertains.

Baltimore, Md.—Last week, on Wednesday and Thursday nights, Geo. A. McDermitt, manager of Loew's Hippodrome theater, on Eutaw street, at Baltimore, played the host in a very commendable way. He had as his guests the members of the Grand Army of the Republic from all over the state of Maryland and the inmates of the Confederate Home at Pikesville. The inmates of the home were brought to the theater in automobiles.

Trend Toward Higher Admissions

Philadelphia Theaters Begin to Feel the Inevitable Necessity and Ask Higher Prices for Seats—Stanley, Overbrook, Belmont and Jumbo Theaters Have Made a Beginning and May Continue.

By F. V. Armato, 144 North Salford St., Philadelphia, Pa.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.—A noticeable tendency toward higher admission prices in this locality has been exemplified by four Philadelphia theaters this past week. To begin with, the Stanley management took occasion to increase the prices of admission to 35 cents, during the engagement of "Less Than the Dust," and it is understood that these prices will prevail hereafter at the house. It has never been the policy of Stanley V. Masterbaum to raise prices, no matter how unusual the attraction, so it may be taken for granted that the increase will be permanent.

The spectacular popularity of "Less Than the Dust" at the Stanley has made easy the task of P. Cunningham, who is booking it for the local territory. He reports that it has already been booked by practically all the first class Philadelphia theaters.

The Belmont theater, at 52d and Market street, has raised its top price of admission to 20 cents. The new scale was established with the showing of Metro's elaborate production of "Romeo and Juliet," which played to enormous business. Walter Jacobs, the manager of the house, plans to book only productions of the best grade and to offer them for one week stands.

The Overbrook theater, which is under the management of Albert Brown, is another local house which has also increased its prices, in this instance from five to ten cents. A handsome Unit Orchestra recently installed has, in Mr. Brown's opinion, been effective in helping to reconcile patrons to the added charge.

R. Boyd, of the Jumbo theater, Front and Girard avenue, has also increased prices from five to ten cents.

J. A. Koerpel Makes Good With Brady Films.

Philadelphia, Pa.—J. A. Koerpel, since his arrival from New York, as the new manager of the new Brady productions, has proven himself the master of the situation by the excellent results he has achieved during his few months in Philadelphia. The proof of it has been in the large collection of contracts which have been signed up.

Mr. Koerpel is a thorough film man, having had a considerable amount of experience in the motion picture business. His motto for the trade is service; not the regular service which is usually offered, but that real honest-to-goodness kind which usually associates itself with the word success.

Great Northern to Reopen.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Many improvements are being made at the Great Northern theater, Broad street and Erie avenue. The house, which has been closed all summer, will reopen on November 20th. It will be under the management of the Stanley Company. Stanley V. Mastbaum thinks so well of the appearance of the rejuvenated house that he recently entertained the dramatic editors of the local newspapers at luncheon and afterwards took them on a tour of inspection to look at the house.

Stanley Exhibitors' Association Formed

Object Is Mutual Benefit and to Encourage Social Spirit of Its Members—J. P. McCready Is President—Other Officers.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.—The Stanley Exhibitors' Association was duly formed and an election of officers made, at a special meeting held on Wednesday, November 8, at the Stanley Booking Company's offices.

It is reported that the purpose of the new organization is for the mutual benefit and protection of its 80 odd members.

Besides the fraternal and social spirit, which is to be a prominent feature at the special gatherings, an interchange of ideas which will be of value to the owners and managers of the high class theaters represented, is intended and a topic of discussion will be the uplift of the motion picture business in general.

At a meeting held the nomination of officers for the first term resulted in the following: President, Jos. McCready; vice-president, Frank Buehler; secretary, Chas. Segal; treasurer, Jack Delmar.

Meetings for the transaction of business will be held every first Wednesday of the month, at which matters of vital interest to the exhibitors and film distributors will be discussed at length and some invaluable advice proffered which will go a long way towards cementing the interests of all concerned.

The membership of the organization is limited to the theaters securing their productions through the Stanley Booking Company.

The election of officers will take place on the morning of Wednesday, December 6, and in the evening of the same day Mr. Stanley V. Mastbaum will tender a banquet to the members of the association at the Bellevue Stratford, which will be attended not only by the representatives of the trade in this city, but by some of the most prominent film producers in the country. Among the latter will be Lewis J. Selznick, Adolph Zukor, Jesse L. Lasky, Daniel Frohman, William A. Brady, Herbert Brenon, Richard A. Rowland and others of prominence.

Representatives of the dramatic and motion picture departments of the various newspapers and trade journals of this and other cities will also be round the festive board and the feast of good things. There will also be a most interesting and educational dissertation on the needs and demands of the industry presented by men who are qualified to speak with a degree of wisdom on the subject. It is confidently expected that the outcome of this banquet will be reflected in the future development of the motion picture enterprise throughout the country and that the deductions to be made from the suggestions by the speakers will prove of inestimable benefit to both the producer and the exhibitor.

Two Leagues and Two Booking Offices.

Philadelphia can now boast of having two exhibitors' organizations, the Stanley Exhibitors' Association and the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Philadelphia. The first at present have a membership of 85 theaters, all of which are charging 10 cents admission or more, and the latter report a membership of 90 theaters which include the 5 and 10-cent houses. The league also announce that they also possess a booking office in charge of C. Goodwin, who is the secretary and treasurer of the organization. Apparently we have two organized minds with but a single thought.

"American Aristocracy" Scores.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"American Aristocracy," Douglas Fairbanks' latest Triangle production, played to excellent business at the Arcadia last week. At times a line half a block long was seen in front of the theater. Herbert Givens, the local Triangle representative, announces the booking of "American Aristocracy," at the Alhambra, Leader, Cedar, Coliseum and Park.

To Build $100,000 Theater.

Bethlehem, Pa.—A new $100,000 theater will shortly be added to the attractions of this place. Plans have already been drawn and it is asserted that the new house will cost fully the amount named. It will be under the management of H. W. and H. L. Heilberger, who operate the Lehigh Orpheum theater of South Bethlehem.

Operator Disappears.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Ike Porguess, one of the motion picture operators of the Franklin theater, 3d and Fitzwater street, was located last week in the Philadelphia hospital by his mother, who has been making frantic efforts to gain some trace of him since his mysterious disappearance more than a week ago. Porguess, who is nineteen years of age, has been in poor health and it is stated that he is suffering from a nervous breakdown.

S. Spiers a Daddy.

Philadelphia, Pa.—S. Spiers, of the Century theater, is receiving congratulations on the birth of a little daughter. He has been an exhibitor for ten years, but considers the baby the best feature he has ever produced, for human interest.

Building New 1,800 Seat House.

Pottsville, Pa.—E. D. Brown, who is meeting with considerable success with his Victor theater, has a new 1,800-seat house undergoing construction here. This theater will be the finest and most up-to-date picture theater in Pottsville.

Jack Delmar Takes Park Theater.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Jack Delmar, the progressive manager of the Jefferson, has taken over the Park theater at 33d and Dauphin street, which will come under his direct supervision.

Carl Hess's New Organ.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Carl Hess has recently installed a beautiful Kimball organ at the Lehigh Palace. The new organ has been the means of inaugurating a ten cents admission.

APITAL CITY NOTES.

Masonic Auditorium Improvements.

Washington, D. C.—The contractors in seeking to remodel the Masonic Auditorium, struck several snags, and the completion of the work has necessarily been greatly delayed. But when the last stonesmith, tinsmith, and decorator gets out of the way, Manager Stine will have a very attractive lobby, a large entrance, and a stage decoration that will set off his screen to better advantage. The size of the entrance will be doubled as a result of the various changes being made, and this same can be said of the lobby. The feature of the latter will be the panels set in the walls for poster board purposes. It is the intention of the management to do away with the use of frames or forms of loose paper advertising.

The screen has been moved back nearly four feet to a point beyond the proscenium arch so that better projection may be obtained. The lighting system is being changed to a new direct-indirect type, and on the front of the building a twenty-foot flasher is to be placed. The Auditorium has a total seating capacity of 1,100, but of these 400 seats are available for use only for lectures and other like entertainment purposes. There are, however, 700 all-vision seats.

Made a Rewinder from Old Fan.

Washington, D. C.—A novel use has been made of an obsolete electric fan at the Board of Local Film Exchange where John Hammond, who is in charge of the shipping department, has utilized it to operate a rewinder. He took the fan, removed the blades and cleaned up the motor. The motor is an enclosed one and so was passed by the fire marshal's office to be used. He then took a two-inch wheel which he attached to the motor and a five-inch wheel from a sewing machine was attached to the rewinder, and a belt was slipped over the two. The connection with the motor is from the socket in the inspection board. This is a double socket and the light used by the inspector is still available. This is a very ingenious way to use a worn-out fan, and it saves a great deal of arm work when reels are being cleaned.

Frank Spurrier and Friends Take Trip.

Washington, D. C.—Frank B. Spurrier, manager of the Vitagraph V-L-S-E exchange, accompanied by Samuel Blumenthal, S. J. Mayer, and Lester E. Gooding, employees of the exchange, went to Philadelphia last week in his automobile for a joint meeting with the members of the Vitagraph exchange in that city.

The trip was a very delightful one and anything but monotonous, being punctuated here and there by punctures and engine trouble. The automobile is a perfectly good Mitchell; something must have been wrong with the chauffer. Just a few miles the other side of Baltimore they had to get out and push the car up a hill, for the engine refused to work. On the return trip they were delayed for an hour because of the extent of Mr. Blumenthal's appetite. He is about six feet two in his stocking feet, and requires an enormous amount of fodder in order to keep going. They had telegraphed ahead to Havre de Gras and a miniature banquet was held in lieu of breakfast. This is the first time the car has been run for any distance without Mr. Spurrier having to pay a fine.

Washington Exchanges Organize

Exchange Managers' Association Has Been Formed in Capital City—All But Four Local Distributors Have Joined—J. H. Butner Is President and E. G. Evans Is Secretary—Other Officers.

By Clarence L. Lintz, 622 Riggs Building, Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—A permanent organization of the managers of the moving picture film exchanges in Washington was completed last week at the second dinner-meeting held in the private dining room of the National Press Club. The Exchange Managers' Association, as it is to be known, starts out with a membership that includes all but four of the heads of the film exchanges here. J. H. Butner was selected as president, L. M. Day has been chosen vice-president; E. G. Evans will be the secretary and treasurer, Sidney B. Lust has been chosen as the redoubtable sergeant-at-arms, while Fritz B. Wathne will head the executive committee.

Appoint Committee on the Fire Regulations.

Aside from the time required in perfecting the organization of this association the evening was pretty well devoted to a discussion of the proposed fire regulations which were subjected to a considerable amount of criticism on the part of those present by reason of the requirements with respect to the handling, examining and repairing of films. There are many things in the regulations that will prove very burdensome to the exchange managers and are highly unnecessary in their opinion.

There was no comment made as to the physical requirements of the building which the regulations proscribe as being in conformity with the ideas of the fire marshal, the exchange managers believing that such as this was entirely up to the architect, builder, and owner of the proposed building. A committee consisting of Frank B. Spurrier, chairman; D. F. O'Donnell, L. M. Day, E. G. Evans, and George R. Mayo, was appointed to take up the matter with the fire marshal and other District officials interested with a view to securing the extension of the effective date of the regulations and also to confer with the builders and architects whom it has been reported contemplate erecting a film exchange building in this city.

Some little attention was also given to the subject of suppression of certain photoplays in the District of Columbia and also to the plans fostered by the Federation of Women's Clubs for free matinees for the children.

The Washington correspondent of the Moving Picture World was elected an honorary member of the association, and given thanks for having brought the exchange managers together, he being credited with the formation of the new organization.

Among those present were J. H. Butner, Carl F. Senning, Frank B. Spurrier, R. Berger, George R. Mayo, N. H. Spitzer, Fritz B. Wathne, Sidney B. Lust, D. F. O'Donnell, L. M. Day, E. G. Evans, C. R. Milliman, and Nelson.

Changes at Empire Theater.

Washington, D. C.—H. E. Tracey, for two years manager of the Lyric theater, on Fourteenth street, northwest, and who assumed the management of the Savoy when it was erected, and retaining that position for two years until the house changed hands, is now in charge of the destinies of the Empire theater, on H street, northeast, operated by the Federal Amusement Company, of which Charles Linkins is the leading spirit. Mr. Tracey contemplates making a large number of changes including the installation of an entirely new and modern system of lighting, the placing of runners in the aisles, and providing the attaches of the house with tuxedos.

Manager Henry Martin Dies.

Washington, D. C.—There was a hush along Ninth street last week when the attaches of the theaters and exchanges learned of the death of one, Henry Martin, Friday night, Nov. 3, from a complication of diseases.

It was on the preceding Friday night that Mr. Martin was stricken while on duty at the Strand theater. He had not been in the best of health for some time, and was unable to successfully fight against the fatal illness and he lingered only a week.

Mr. Martin was a native of Washington and is thirty-five years old. For the past five years he has been in the employ of his brother-in-law, Fayette Tom Moore, owner of a string of theaters in this city. He worked his way up to the position of assistant manager at the Garden theater, and last January he was transferred to a similar position at the Strand, although being used as utility manager when the occasion arose.

His death is made all the more sad, it is said, because of the near approach of what was to have been his wedding day; he was to have been married to a Washington young lady soon after the first of the coming year.

Mr. Martin was a very pleasant chap and well liked by all who knew him.

N. H. Spitzer Joins Hy-Art Company Farces.

Washington, D. C.—N. H. Spitzer is the latest addition to the moving picture forces of the National Capital, for Mr. Spitzer has allied himself with the Hy-Art Masterplays Company, which is located in the Barrister building. Mr. Spitzer got his start some four or more years ago in Kansas City, Mo., when he secured a position with Warner Bros. as a salesman.

Tom Moore Wants to Build New Exchange

Must Find Eight Exchanges to Take Leases for Three Years—States His Arguments —There Are Three Other Concerns in the Field.

Washington, D. C.—Tom Moore, motion picture theater magnate of Washington, has agreed to put up a six story exchange building to conform with the new fire regulations. It will have a frontage of fifty-one feet and a depth of one hundred feet, each floor to be divided in two parts with a space of 2,550 square feet. The average rental price for each floor would be about $250. This arrangement would accomodate twelve tenants, but there are three companies known to want but a third of a floor each. To bring about such a distribution of space on one or more floors would require a change in the proposed regulations because of the difference in the placing of the vaults.

Plans for the building, which would be located at 418-410 8th street, northwest, have been prepared by B. Stanley Simmons, architect, and show space in the basement for two large lockers and two toilets. On the left of the entrance is to be a large exhibiting room, and opposite is the library. In the center is the stairway leading to the upper floors and the elevators. The left front of the basement is to be occupied by the boiler room, in the center there will be a lift, and on the right side will be the express office and another lift. On the first floor will be space for two exchanges, a long corridor, and telephone and telegraph offices.

In stating his position to the Moving Picture World correspondent, Mr. Moore said that he simply wants eight of the exchanges to sign leases for a three-year term, and he will take his chances with the others, and that he already has promises from six exchanges. "I am ready with the money and have the ground on which to erect a film exchange building," said Mr. Moore, "and I will start operations as soon as the necessary number of exchanges are willing to comply with my requirements of a three-year lease. There are one or two willing to take a five-year lease, but the others prefer and seem to be holding out for a one or two-year lease. This would not be possible for the reason that I would only be able to get $20,000 out of the proposition which will cost me $120,000, and I would then have on my hands a building only good for the one purpose. There are no real estate men who would be willing to take so great a chance as this, in fact, they would probably demand a five-year lease. I believe it would be to the advantage of the different companies if they would take the longer lease for the reason that the property value is increasing each year, and this would mean at the expiration of their lease they would have to pay a higher rental."

There are three other individuals and concerns having similar plans in mind, and it is said that one of these is going to erect such a building and have it ready for occupancy within three months without demanding any agreement from the exchangemen other than a promise to use all possible influence to have their companies take space therein. These various conferences will continue for some time until a definite arrangement can be entered into.

Selznick Takes Pittsburgh Lease

Head of Selznick-Pictures Leases Grand Opera House on Fifth Avenue for Number of Years—Will Be Devoted to Big Productions—Charles F. Schwerin, Local Selznick Manager, Will Be in Charge.

From Pittsburgh News Service, 6016 Jen kins Arcade, Pittsburgh, Pa.

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—One of the most important deals in the local exhibiting field for some time has just been consummated whereby Lewis J. Selznick, head of the producing and distributing company bearing his name, leases for a term of years the Grand opera house, on Fifth avenue, Pittsburgh. This theater is among the largest and finest in the entire country devoted to pictures and is owned by the Harry Davis interests. It was for many years the leading house of legitimate productions and vaudeville, but was converted into a moving picture theater about two years ago, and since that time has set a high standard in this field.

Mr. Selznick visited Pittsburgh several weeks ago to open negotiations for the house. Later Mr. Davis, accompanied by Mr. Harris, also of the Harry Davis interests, went to New York City to close the deal, which it is said has been pending for some time. The new management announces that the Grand will be devoted exclusively to big productions capable of holding the public interest for long indefinite runs and at prices advanced somewhat over those now the rule.

All the big Selznick pictures, as well as certain important productions of other companies, are to be presented. Among the first attractions at the Grand will be the two Clara Kimball Young features, "The Common Law" and "The Foolish Virgin." These will be followed by Nazimova in "War Brides"; "The Price She Paid," from the novel of David Graham Phillips; "The Easiest Way," by Eugene Walters, and "Panthea," featuring Norma Talmage.

While all arrangements have been completed for taking over the Grand, it is likely that the actual change will not take place for about two weeks or ten days. According to present plans, the theater will be under the able management of the local manager of the Selznick interests, Charles F. Schwerin, who is also head of the Pittsburgh office of the Clara Kimball Young pictures. The entrance of Mr. Selznick into the exhibiting business in this city is of particular interest, in that he began his business career here and is well and favorably known among Pittsburghers.

Local Artcraft Offices Open.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The Artcraft Pictures Corporation recently has opened its Pittsburgh office on the sixth floor of the handsome new Seltzer film building, 12th street and Liberty avenue, Pittsburgh, in charge of Samuel Plame, one of the best-known of the younger film men of this city. Mr. Plame was formerly a member of the Paramount organization for several years, recently being connected with the Pittsburgh branch of that company. While only one release, the Mary Pickford feature, "Less Than the Dust," is being handled thus far by the exchange, the initial triumph of that production augurs well for its permanent success.

The Regent theater, the finest of the Rowland & Clark chain of houses, started a two weeks' run November 6 on "Less Than the Dust," at 25 cents admission, and is drawing capacity audiences daily. Next the picture will be shown at the Garden theater, Northside, for an entire week.

The Pittsburgh branch of the Artcraft covers western Pennsylvania, eastern Ohio and West Virginia. L. W. Kniskern, formerly press agent with the Famous Players, has become assistant manager of the new office. H. S. Lighter, formerly publicity manager for the Chicago office of the Paramount, is at present representing the Pittsburgh Artcraft in Cleveland, O., making his headquarters at the Hotel Statler.

Geo. W. Fuller Heads Local Pathe.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Manager George W. Fuller was recently appointed to head the Pittsburgh Pathe Exchange and is rapidly putting into effect his ideas of service and is rounding into shape a selling force of which he may well feel proud. Mr. Fuller was formerly manager of the World Film Exchange at St. Louis, Mo., where he earned an enviable reputation in the trade. Prior to his connection with the World Film, Mr. Fuller was for about four years general agency manager for the Review of Reviews. He came to Pittsburgh several weeks ago to take charge of the Pathe office, succeeding Thomas S. Bradley, who has been transferred to one of the Western offices of the company. Mr. Fuller has already made numerous friends here and the results being obtained indicate that his success is assured.

Geo. W. Fuller.

Fred Salinger Succeeds Levison.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Fred Salinger has been appointed manager of the Pittsburgh offices of the World Film, succeeding Leo F. Levison, whose resignation took effect November 4. Mr. Levison has accepted the managership of the Philadelphia and Newark offices of the Supreme Feature Film Service. He is followed by the best wishes of his host of friends in Pittsburgh. Mr. Salinger has been connected with the World Film for some time, coming here from New York, and is recognized as a film man of wide experience.

J. Howard Morgan Goes to General.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The General Film Company has added to its road staff J. Howard Morgan, a widely-known exhibitor and film man, who will travel out of the Pittsburgh office. Mr. Morgan owns the Cornell and Morgan Grand theaters, at Auburn, N. Y., and his experience in the exhibiting end of the business partly accounts for his big success as salesman.

The Doris to Be Remodeled.

Wilkinsburg, Pa.—The Doris theater, Wilkinsburg, Pa., is to be remodeled and enlarged in the early Spring. A plot of ground has been purchased adjoining the Doris and plans for the improvement are being prepared by a local architect. The capacity of the house will be doubled.

To Improve the Olympic Theater.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The Olympic theater, 318 Fifth avenue, Pittsburgh, is about to undergo an improvement that will add greatly to the appearance and capacity of the house. The Olympic is one of the leading downtown theaters and does a thrivng business at all times. The proprietor is Peter Antonopolis, a prominent exhibitor and a well-known figure in local organization work, being a director of the Pittsburgh Screen Club. Mr. Antonopolis states that he will embody the latest and best ideas in the changes he is about to make and intends to set a high mark in every respect. Architect Charles Bickel has been retained to draw up plans for the addition.

Federal Theater Goes.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The Federal theater, at the corner of Lacock and Federal streets, Northside, Pittsburgh, is being razed to make way for a new building to be used as a store. The Federal was one of the oldest houses on the Northside. Within the past few years it has changed hands several times and recently has been dark. The passing of the Federal was due to the sharp competition of three other up-to-date picture theaters within the same block.

West Park's New Theater.

West Park, Pa.—Keller & Artritt have recently opened an attractive new picture house at West Park, a thrivng suburb of Pittsburgh, Pa. It is known as the Palace theater and is the first to invade the district with high-class photoplays. The house is modern throughout, having a nicely arranged auditorium with 300 seats. Red Feather and other features are shown daily and the admission price is 10 cents.

Exhibitors are invited to send news items to our nearest correspondent.

Enterprise Amusement House Named Rialto

Rowland & Clark Suit to Restrain the Use of the Name "New Regent" Gets Favorable Decision—House Had Been Called the Camereaphone.

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—An opinion has been handed down in the Pittsburgh courts restraining the Enterprise Amusement Company from using the name "New Regent" theater to designate its house at 1600 Fifth avenue, formerly the Camereaphone. The Rowland & Clark Theaters is thereby rendered a favorable verdict in their injunction suit, which has been watched with much interest by moving picture exhibitors of this city. Judge Carnahan's decision is regarded as most important by the trade and is expected to result in eliminating the duplication of names of picture houses in large centers.

When the Enterprise Amusement Company purchased the Cameraphone several months ago they changed the name to the New Regent. The Rowland & Clark Theatres objected to the use of the title, as it was regarded as an infringement on that of their handsome house at Penn and Highland avenues, the Regent. Failing in their request to the Enterprise Amusement Company to secure another name, they took the matter to court.

The case was contested bitterly, with the result that a permanent injunction has been granted, prohibiting the defendant from using the name "New Regent," and also placing the costs on the defendant. The name of the theater has been changed by the Enterprise Amusement Company to the Rialto.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Manager Peter Demas of the Minerva theater, 319 Fifth avenue, Pittsburgh, has installed a handsome $12,000 pipe organ, one of the largest in the city. The Famous Players special production, "The Alien," featuring George Beban, was booked for the occasion and is to be shown several days. The Minerva is a first-run Paramount house and enjoys much popularity.

Peter Barnowski Buys Luna.

Breckenridge, Pa., J. A. Harmon has sold his Luna theater at Breckenridge, Pa., to Peter Barnowski, well-known exhibitor of that section. The Luna is an attractive house seating about 300 and is the only one in the town. Mr. Barnowski was in Pittsburgh recently.

Takes Over Cooper Opera House.

Union City, Pa.—The Cooper opera house, Union City, Pa., was recently taken over by D. W. Richardson, a prominent business man, who has instituted a policy of feature pictures and road shows. The theater was remodeled and considerable up-to-date equipment installed by the new owner, who has made it one of the most attractive houses in its locality.

Tragic Accident in Olean

Exhibitor John Barnes and Mrs. Barnes, of Olean, N. Y., Are Killed When Train Crashes Over Their Automobile—Strong Personality of Mr. Barnes Had Made Many Friends for Him—His Clean Theater.

By Joseph A. McGuire, 5 Lewis Block, Buffalo, N. Y.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—Buffalo film men received with profound regret the news that Mr. and Mrs. John Barnes, of Olean, N. Y., were instantly killed in an automobile accident Friday evening. Mr. Barnes was manager of the Grand moving picture theater of Olean. The accident occurred at 8 o'clock in the evening a mile west of Friendship, N. Y. Their motor car was struck by Erie train No. 8. They did not see the train approaching and their machine was wrecked. Their bodies were impaled on the pilot of the engine.

Mr. and Mrs. Barnes attended the last ball of the Buffalo Screen Club, and had signified their intention to be present at the next function of that organization. Mr. Barnes always aimed at perfection in the management of his house, and very rarely fell short of this mark.

"If you rub your handkerchief over any seat in my theater and pick up the slightest bit of dirt, I will give you $10."

This was a statement that Mr. Barnes frequently repeated to his patrons. On account of the perfect cleanliness of his house he never had to pay over the money. This was one of the many instances that proved his thoroughness as a manager. He was also a stickler for good order, and years ago rowdies had learned that they would have to leave all their boisterous conduct outside his theater. He was a man of powerful physique and although his nature was gentle, he always had the will and the way to prevent the infraction of any of his rules. Checks and letter, mailed by Mr. Barnes a few hours before the accident, were received at a local film exchange shortly after the tragedy.

At the Cozy Corner Theater.

Buffalo, N. Y.—August Aichinger has a thriving moving picture theater, the Cosy Corner, at Genesee street and Fillmore avenue, Buffalo. This is a five and ten cent house, which he has conducted for the past five months.

"I give my patrons plenty of serials and features, and they get a good run for their money," said Mr. Aichinger.

The proprietor is ably assisted by his son, John Aichinger, and his daughter, Miss Frances Aichinger. The young woman is booker at the Cozy Corner. They have a good line on the moving picture wants of their patrons.

Buffalo Exchange Men Busy.

Basil Brady, Buffalo manager of the International, recently visited Ithaca, N. Y., where he booked the first run of "Patria" at the Star theater, that city. This serial, in which Mrs. Vernon Castle is starring, was produced by Wharton Bros., of Ithaca. Mr. Brady also visited McVoy and Hanning, of Auburn, with whom he booked "The Flower of Faith," and "The Ocean Waif." This firm conducts the Cornell and Morgan moving picture theaters of Auburn.

Al Becker, of the Becker Film Exchange, Buffalo, was so busy election night that he didn't have time for shouting or horn-blowing. He supplied appropriate films for the crowds in front of local newspaper offices, and at clubs and other amusement places where many assembled to hear the election returns.

Rochester's Picadilly to Open.

Rochester, N. Y.—The new Picadilly of Rochester, one of the largest and finest moving picture theaters in the country, will open its doors to the public for the first time on November 25th. Many leaders in the film industry, newspaper men, prominent city officials and others will be Manager Seeley's guests at the initial performance.

Regent Theater Changes Hands.

Elmira, N. Y.—The Regent Entertainment Co., of which G. H. Tooker is resident manager, has taken over the Regent theater, Elmira.

Good Business in St. John

Many Soldiers Present in the City Keep Theaters Well Filled—Filming Local Athletic Events—New Shows Opened and New Houses Building in the Province—Other Items of Local Interest.

By F. F. Sully, 68 Lansdowne Avenue, St. John, N. B.

ST JOHN, N. B.—The record-breaking business that the St. John picture houses are now enjoying is accounted for in no small measure by the presence of three battalions of the King's troops, quartered in the city indefinitely. At present the 165th French Arcadians, from Montreal, the 180th Sportsmen's Battalion from Toronto, and the 222nd Battalion from Winnipeg, give 3,000 additional patrons to the St. John exhibitors. It is easily seen at any of the performances that the men in khaki make up a good percentage of the audiences. Box parties by the officers lend a distinctly military air to the picture houses. St. John might well be called a garrisoned city with the three battalions and the 9th Siege Battery to protect it. A hearty spirit of co-operation prevails between the military men and the exhibitors. Theaters are thrown open to the public for recruiting meetings and other patriotic purposes. The management of the Imperial gave the 180th Battalion the free use of the auditorium after the regular show one evening recently, and over $750 was realized from the exhibtion given by the 169 champion athletes who are members of the unit. Tom Longboat and others almost as prominent are wearing the uniforms of the 180th. The opera house was given over to a Sunday mass meeting for men, at which Rev. J. D. Morrow, chaplain of the 180th, was the speaker. The fact that St. John is a winter port, and one of the most easily accessible cities on the Canadian coast is partly responsible for the large number of troops being quartered in the city. Needless to say, that other industries besides the moving pictures have been benefited thereby.

Local Camera Gets Athletic Events.

St. John, N. B.—Manager Charles Kerr, of the Mutual exchange, was alive to the possibilities offered by the presence of the famous Sportsmen's Battalion in the city, and at a recent athletic meet, in which one of the St. John exchange managers ran against the fleetest of the soldiers, Mr. Kerr had his camera man film a few hundred feet. The next day other pictures were taken of the unit on its way to church in a body. These exposures, together with some that were taken before the battalion left Toronto, will be combined to make a "180th Special" that is sure to prove popular in the provinces of Ontario and New Brunswick, and even other sections of Canada.

C. H. Seymour Leaves Bijou Theater.

Woodstock, N. B.—Charles H. Seymour, who has been affiliated with George Gibson in the Bijou theater, has withdrawn his interests and is now devoting his sole attention to his theater in Houlton, Maine. Mr. Gibson has taken over the Bijou, with C. A. Seymour as manager, and is newly equipping the interior. Both were recent visitors in St. John, where they purchased a rotary converter.

Torrie & Winters Open the Grand.

Moncton, N. B.—Torrie and Winters, formerly proprietors of the Grand opera house, have re-opened it, contracting for a mixed feature program and vaudeville. The same firm is also running the Empress, showing Paramount and Fox features.

Will Withhold Some Big Features.

St. John, N. B.—On account of the resolution recently passed by the Maritime Provinces Exhibitors' League against the deposit system, the Monarch and Artcraft Film Companies have decided not to bring the Clara Kimball Young and the Mary Pickford subjects into the provinces. The companies claim they cannot do business unless their goods are sold with a deposit. Some of the Clara Kimball Young subjects, including "The Common Law," had been advertised in this territory.

Open Theater in Sydney.

Sydney, N. S.—After a period of several months, during which the doors of Alexandria Hall were closed, R. J. McAdam and Ed. Lynn have again opened the auditorium and have booked some of the leading Paramount features for the early weeks.

New Theater to Open in Mid-Winter.

New Glasgow, N. S.—Announcement has been made here that the new $100,000 moving picture theater, owned by Warren Smith, and in the process of construction for the past several months, will be ready for business by the middle of January. The theater, when completed, will be one of the largest and most up-to-date houses in the provinces.

Famous Players Changes.

St. John, N. B.—Bert Silverstein, formerly of the Toronto office of the Famous Players, has been placed on the staff of the St. John exchange and will go on the road from here. Mitchell Bernstein, also a former member of the Toronto staff, has been placed in charge as resident manager, succeeding Lewis Rosenfeld, who will go to Toronto to take charge of the Monarch and Artcraft distribution.

May Lease Local Theater.

St. John, N. B.—J. M. Franklin, manager of the Strand theater in Halifax, was a recent visitor in St. John, negotiating with R. H. Dockrill relative to taking a five-year lease on the St. John opera house, succeeding Fred G. Spencer, who is to build a large house here in the spring. Mr. Franklin intends to run vaudeville and a few feature pictures.

Memphis Has "Cleaner Film" Movement

Civic Organizations Hold Joint Meeting and Discuss Advantages of Better Pictures—Appoint Committee to Look Into Matter.

By J. L. Ray, 1014 Stahlman Building, Nashville, Tenn.

MEMPHIS, Tenn.—A decided impetus was accorded the movement for cleaner and more uplifting pictures in Memphis at the meeting held last week under the auspices of the Ninteenth Century Club. Representatives of the Retail Merchants' Association, Y. M. I., Y. M. C. A., and other leading organizations were present and expressed their approval of the proposed reform. The committee appointed by the Nineteenth Century Club to advance the movement, of which Mrs. M. G. Lieberman is chairman, emphasized the fact that the club was striving not only for the display of children's films in Memphis, but pictures in which the elements of morbidness and uncleanliness are eliminated.

Bishop Thos. F. Gailer, of the Episcopal Church, attended the conference, and admitted that he had not attended more than half a dozen picture shows in his life. He remarked that their interpretation of life, in some instances, was fantastic, and that while trashy films tend to corrupt the minds of an audience, he likewise expressed his opinion that a very high educational value was contained in moving pictures. Henry C. Loeb, president of the Retail Dealers' Association, extended invitations to the committee to send speakers to future meetings.

One motion picture theater in the city has offered to show saturday afternoons and nights a program selected by the Nineteenth Century Club committee as long as the patronage justifies it.

Queen Advances Prices.

Knoxville, Tenn.—With the advent of the so-called super-attractions, produced at a cost greatly in excess of that incident to the production of ordinary motion pictures, the management of the Queen theater, in order to maintain the high standard which has so long been identified with this leading Knoxville house, has increased the schedule of admission prices to the evening performances. The new prices are, adults 15 cents, children 10 cents; matinees, 10 and 15 cents, respectively. The new rates more nearly conform to the average admission prices charge in other Tennessee cities, and the public has responded readily to the increase.

New Nashville Film Company.

Nashville, Tenn.—The Dixie Film Company has been organized and chartered to manufacture and sell moving pictures. Its offices are located at 217 Fifth avenue, north. The incorporators are James Calnay, Halsey H. Tower, B. Forrest Uhl, and Laura Page Uhl. Mr. Calnay, a New York man, is president of the company, and states that one five-part subject will be released each month. Work on the first picture is well under way, and will be ready for release on December 1st, under the title of "God's Greatest Creation." Arrangements have been made with a New York distributing company to handle the output of the Dixie studios.

Hartman's Lincoln Closes.

Nashville, Tenn.—The Lincoln theater, William Hartman's negro picture house, has again closed its doors. This house has made several valiant attempts to stay in the running, but competition has been largely responsible for the fact that it cannot be operated on a paying basis, and it may remain closed permanently.

Loew to Open Memphis House.

Memphis, Tenn.—Marcus Loew, theatrical magnate, has been in the South for a number of days looking over plans for opening a number of vaudeville and picture houses. According to Mr. Loew's intention, a new theater will be erected at once in Memphis to handle his attractions, at an estimated cost of $700,000. The new house will be constructed along pretentious lines, and will embody all the latest improvements known in modern theatrical architecture. Full details will be given out at a later date.

Knickerbocker's Interior Ads.

Nashville, Tenn.—To advertise the coming production featuring Clara Kimball Young, Manager Wassman, of the Knickerbocker, has placed over all the interior side-wall lights a number of glass cases, lighted from within, with the wording "See Clara Kimball Young in the Common Law." The publicity thus afforded has already aroused considerable interest in the Selznick picture.

The Bijou Entertains.

Knoxville, Tenn.—Dick Tant, ex-newspaper boy, but now a successful theatrical manager, recently entertained the carriers of the Knoxville papers with a theater party at the Bijou, local vaudeville and picture house. Seven reels of Triangle service were shown, in addition to the usual vaudeville program.

Birmingham Sunday Case.

Birmingham, Ala.—The city moving picture ordinance, regulating the Sunday opening of photoplay houses, went out of existence with the injunction, according to the authorities, and a new ordinance will be necessary before any referendum election can be held. October 1st was the date set by the old ordinance for the election, and it being impossible to change the date in the old ordinance, a new petition and ordinance will be required.

Something New for Birmingham.

Birmingham, Ala.—The presentation of a first run feature simultaneously at two theaters in the uptown district is an innovation for this city, but such was the case with Metro's Shakespearian subject, "Romeo and Juliet." This picture was first booked at the Trianon theater, but, owing to the unlooked-for patronage, and the inability to fulfil the public demand for seats, the management promptly secured another copy of the print and placed it on exhibition at the Rialto, one of the largest houses in the city. Hundreds were turned away at the Trianon before it was decided to lease an additional house. Few pictures anywhere have received the reception accorded this production by the Birmingham public. Noted educators, ministers and citizens in all walks of life have declared it one of the screen's best and most pretentious offerings.

Insurance Controversy — Theater Had Been Enlarged.

LEXINGTON, Ky.—The Berryman Realty Co., and the Security Trust Co., acting for the J. B. Haggin estate, has filed suit against thirteen insurance companies for a balance of $4,279 alleged to be due on appraised damages in connection with the fire at the Ben Ali theater last January. The controversy grew out of the claim of some of the Delaware companies that their policies covered only the building on Main street, which is now the entrance to the theater. The court is asked to require an adjustment between these and the other defendant companies, and a reapportionment of the loss, if necessary, to make up the deficit. The suit grew entirely out of the fact that the theater was enlarged after the original policies in some instances were written, and while the company was fully insured on the entire building it is a court matter to figure out the pro rata loss among the various underwriters.

Had 'Em Page Charlie Chaplin.

Louisville.—An unusual publicity affair for Charles Chaplin was handled in Louisville, Saturday, November 11, when Chaplin was paged through all of the hotel lobbies, cabarets, etc. Manager Percy L. Smith, of the Louisville Mutual office, gave out information to the press that Chaplin was expected in Louisville, he having an affair of the heart with a Kentucky belle, and the newspapers fell for the publicity in great shape. While the whole thing was a hoax it drew a great deal of attention to the performer, not only through the hotels and cabarets, but through the thousands who were reached through the press which carried the articles.

"Lass of Lumberlands" Screened.

Louisville.—J. G. Conner, a representative of the Mutual, was recently in Louisville, where he made a special screening at the Strand of the serial, "Lass of the Lumberland." The picture was later booked for the Mary Anderson theater, where it is to start on November 19. Incidentally the lumber interests are taking interest in this picture, some of the lumber trade journals having run items to the effect that the film, produced on the California coast, was well worth their attention.

E. W. Dozier Gets the Princess Theater.

Madisonville, Ky.—E. W. Dozier, manager of the Garrick, has closed a deal whereby he becomes owner of the Princess theater, which will be operated as "The Garrick II." The new house will be used for matinees only during the week, but with features on Saturday night.

Maysville, Ky.—Attorneys representing the creditors of the bankrupt Gem theater, have arranged to resume operations on Thanksgiving, and to run until sold. The house will be under the direction of Trustee Walsh.

NOTES FROM WISCONSIN.

G. B. Olinger Takes Over Toy Theater.

Milwaukee, Wis.—G. B. Olinger, owner of the American theater, has taken over the Toy theater which he will operate as a straight ten cent moving picture house. He plans to expend $5,000 in remodeling the front and lobby, and redecorating the interior.

Walter Hildebrand, who has been manager at the Butterfly theater for the last year, has resigned, and will take charge of the Toy.

Thomas A. Lee, who until recently has been manager of the Toy, has gone to Fon-du-Lac where he becomes manager of the Henry Boyle theater, succeeding Frank G. Raymond, who has become manager of the Hippodrome at Peoria, Ill. The policy under Lee's management will be vaudeville Thursday, Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, with feature photoplays the rest of the time. Among the film attractions will be the Artcraft's service—"Where Are My Children," and "Purity."

B. C. Johnson to Represent General.

Milwaukee, Wis.—B. C. Johnson has accepted a position as state representative for th General Film Company.

New Picture Theater in Wheeler.

Wheeler, Wis.—The Woodman hall here has been remodeled, and will be used as a moving picture theater, giving shows once a week. Glen Hensel is local manager.

NOTES FROM ATLANTA, GA.

By A. M. Beatty, 42 Capehill Ave., Atlanta, Ga.

Wallace Walthall Goes to K. E. S. E.

ATLANTA, Ga.—Wallace Walthall, brother of Henry Walthall the screen star, has severed his connections as representative of the V-L-S-E (Atlanta office), and become special representative for the newly formed Kent-Edison Sales Exchange in this city.

Mr. Walthall is a film expert of wide experience and has been a prominent factor in Atlanta film activities for years. His territory will embrace Georgia, Alabama, and Tennessee.

Manager Groening Full Week.

Atlanta, Ga.—Manager Groening of the Grand, Atlanta, which opened Monday under its policy of Loew vaudeville and pictures, handled the opening week's announcement so splendidly that the theater played to capacity all the week.

J. R. MacEachron Made Assistant.

J. R. MacEachron, Jr., has been made assistant manager of the Colonial Film Corporation, Atlanta.

Notes of Interest.

O. P. Hall, Fox Film manager, is in New York on a business trip.

Charles Kessler, manager of Mutual Film Company, is on a business trip through the Carolinas.

H. W. Lamb, of the Colonial Film Corporation, left for New York and Chicago the last of this week.

C. R. Seelye, Sales Manager for Pathe Company, was an Atlanta visitor this week.

Visitors from Macon.

Atlanta, Ga.—Troup Howard, owner, and Ralph DeBruler, manager of Capitol theater, in Macon, Ga., were Atlanta visitors on Saturday, October 28. While here contracts were signed for film service at the new Capitol.

Cleveland's Film Ball on November 15

Johnny Ray and Others Are Preparing for the Big Annual Dance in Gray's Armory —Prizes Have Been Offered.

By Herbert Persons, Standard Theater Building, Cleveland, Ohio.

CLEVELAND, O.—The second annual motion picture ball to be held in Cleveland was at Gray's Armory on November 15. The program included a mas querade, with prizes for the best costumes, the best dancers, and the best scenario writers. Motion picture stars from New York and Chicago were in attendance.

Director John Harvey and his three recently picked Cleveland beauties, who are to appear in the Florida production of "Carma," were present. Carmen Sylva, the girl who won a local newspaper contest as Theda Bara in "Carmen," postponed her trip to Chicago to act in a scene at the ball showing how motion pictures are made. Miss Sylva is another Cleveland girl who is making progress on the screen.

The ball was planned by Johnny Ray, the comedian, who has been appearing in several productions here; M. J. McGinty, former city director of sports; and Charles Paige and Charles Allen, the latter a local automobile man, motion picture actor, and late player with Johnny Ray. Ray has given a prize of $100 for the best two-reel scenario submitted at the ball, and a prize of $50 for the best costume.

Five East End Houses Raise Admission.

Cleveland, O.—By mutual agreement the owners of five motion picture theaters in the East End of this city raised their admission prices November 4. The prices are now fifteen and twenty-five cents, instead of ten and twenty cents, and are charged on Sundays only. The houses which took action are the Doan, Savoy, Crown, Home, and Manhattan.

Dolls Represent Film Stars.

Cleveland, O.—Practically all the favorites of the motion picture world have been represented by dolls for the annual Christmas sale at St. Joseph's orphanage, November 14, 15, 17 and 18. They were donated by motion picture theaters throughout the city at the request of the committee in charge of the novelty and doll booth. The dolls are being sold for the benefit of the orphans.

Alan Forrest Takes His Bride Home.

Cleveland, O.—Alan Forrest, not long ago a bank clerk in Cleveland, has come back home to "confess" to his parents that he not only has found success in the motion picture field, but also found a wife there. Forrest, who used to be plain Alan Fisher, came here on his honeymoon with Mrs. Fisher, who was Miss Anna Little, of the American Film Studio in California.

They are visiting Mr. Fisher's—that is to say Mr. Forrest's—parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Fisher, of Lakewood, a suburb of Cleveland. He is twenty-six years old, and has been playing leading roles with Mary Miles Minter.

Court May Yet View "Nation" Film.

Columbus, O.—The final entry of the Ohio Supreme Court in the case of "The Birth of a Nation," which was filed October 26, makes no reference as in the original statement given out that there was no law in Ohio under which the record in the case could be certified to the court for observation.

The decision of the court, upholding the Ohio Board of Censors' banning of the photoplay in this state, therefore does not prevent exhibitors in the future from appealing to the court from the decision of the censors. The question as to whether the court should view the photoplay is still unsettled.

The producers of "The Birth of a Nation," acting on this fact, filed a motion for a rehearing of the case, November 1, on the grounds that the record was insufficient.

Midnight Matinees at the Mall.

Cleveland, O.—Midnight matinees will be among the novelties which Cleveland motion picture patrons will be introduced to with the opening this month of the new Mall Duplex theater, in the downtown section. There will be a midnight show every Saturday night, starting at 11 o'clock and ending at 12:15 o'clock.

The Mall is said to be one of the few duplex theaters in the world, and the only one with one auditorium above the other, each with an entrance on a different street. The entrance to the lower auditorium will be from Superior avenue, while the upper one will be accessible from Euclid avenue, which is fifteen feet higher than Superior.

New Jennings Theater Opens.

Cleveland, O.—Another new motion picture theater opened in Cleveland on October 25. It is the Jennings, the newest and largest house in the South Side section. Its owner, Thomas Urbansky, erected a costly building of pressed brick, with a front of Colonial pillars, with unusually attrative decorations. The theater is set thirty feet back from the sidewalk on a residential street, and will be improved next spring with a lawn and a summer theater effect. A large crowd attended the opening.

Theaters Showing Children's Matinees.

Cleveland, O.—Children's matinees are being featured at several local theaters. Among others, the Alhambra, the Wind-A-Meer, and the Monarch theaters have been arranging weekly matinees, showing pictures that have a particular appeal to the little folk.

Two Avondale, O., Picture Theaters Combine

F. Joseph Lamping, I. W. McMahan and Charles Schaengold Form Company to Run the Arcade and the Forest Theaters for Five Years.

By Kenneth C. Crain, 610 First National Bank Building, Cincinnati, Ohio.

CINCINNATI, O.—A big deal involving two of the principal houses in the Avondale section has been announced, including the interests of Messrs. F. Joseph Lamping, I. W. McMahan and Charles Schaengold. These gentlemen, for some years well known in the moving picture business, control the Arcade and Forest theatres, Mr. Lamping owning the Arcade, while Messrs. Schaengold and McMahan lease the Forest from him. Under the arrangement just perfected a new company is to be formed for the operation of the two houses, of which Mr. Schaengold will be president, Mr. McMahan, vice-president and general manager, and Mr. Lamping, secretary and treasurer. The deal is for five years, under the contract. As a matter of fact, the past has proved that there is plenty of business for both houses in the section where they are located, and the new company should have considerable prosperity.

Midnight Shows on Election Night.

Cincinnati, O.—An innovation which proved to be a signal success, and which indicates the strides which have been made by the moving picture theater in the past four years, was the holding of midnight shows on election night at the Strand, Walnut, and Family theaters. Manager Libson decided that the crowds which are always on the streets late on election night, interested in hearing the outcome of the contests before going to bed, warranted the move, and the success of the venture proved that he was right. Such performances held on nights when crowds are out late are by no means a novelty.

Organize Film Publicity Bureau.

Cincinnati, O.—An organized publicity campaign on behalf of moving pictures will be conducted by exchange men in this territory, it was decided at a meeting held at the Hotel Gibson by the film men, and H. Serkowich, secretary of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, has been placed in charge of the work. This, by the way, indicates sufficiently that it is not to be a matter of controversy as between exchanges and exhibitors, as Mr. Serkowich's fine work on behalf of the League is well known. It is rather intended to see that the public is kept informed on the subject of the progress of pictures from an impartial angle.

League May Help Local Zoo.

Cincinnati, O.—As representative of a large and important body of business men, whose influence is earnestly desired, F. L. Emmert, president of the Cincinnati Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, has been made a member of the Commission on the Preservation of the Zoological Gardens. A movement is under foot to raise a fund to make the famous Cincinnati Zoo a public institution, large conditional subscriptions for that purpose having been offered, and Mr. Emmert declares that the exhibitors will do their share. Assisting him in the work on behalf of the League are, Secretary H. L. Serkowich, Attorney A. P. Foster, I. W. McMahan, and Charles Weigel.

May Amend Amusement Tax Law

Present Toronto Method of Collecting the Tax on Amusement Patrons Is Too Cumbersome and Exhibitors Understand That the Provincial Governmenet Is About to Make Important Changes in the Law.

By W. M. Gladish, 1263 Gerrard Street, E. Toronto, Ontario.

TORONTO, Ont.—Announcement was made in the daily press recently that the Provincial authorities had decided to exempt soldiers in uniform from paying the amusement war tax when patronizing picture theaters. Immediately after the publication of this report, however, Hon. T. W. McGarry, provincial treasurer, made a denial in which he intimated that the Government had not considered such a move, although requests had been received from various people.

Toronto theater managers have been given to understand, at the same time, that the Government is arranging to amend the Amusement Tax Law to enable the theaters to avoid the use of special tax tickets in collecting the levy from patrons. The work involved in the sale and distribution of the tax tickets is gigantic, and the theaters will probably be required, some time in the future, to pay a percentage of box office receipts each day for this tax in place of handling tickets. This alternative is allowed under certain conditions under the present statute, but the arrangement is more or less cumbersome, it is declared.

Changed Appearance of "U" Bulletin.

Toronto, Ont.—W. A. Bach, advertising and publicity manager for the Canadian Universal, has brought out his "Bulletin" in a new and attractive dress. Several new departments have been added to the house organ and trade reports from all sections of the Dominion are now printed in its columns as well as advance notices of all Bluebird, Red Feather, and other releases. The circulation of the Bulletin has reached the 2,000 mark, which means that nearly every theater in Canada is on the mailing list.

Managers' Second Annual Ball.

Toronto, Ont.—The Ontario Moving Picture Exhibitors' Protective Association is polishing the floor, figuratively speaking, for its second annual film ball which will be held early during the coming winter. The officers are already at work on the details. This time every exchange will lend a hand, and each will be encouraged to bring a star to Toronto for the eventful occasion. Arrangements may be made for a film ball in Montreal either the night before or after the Toronto shine, so that the players can appear at the Eastern city as well.

The local film interests have ceased to worry about the bi-lingual sub-title question in Quebec.

Regent Theater Staff Reorganized.

Toronto, Ont.—There has been a reorganization in the management of Toronto's new half-million dollar film house, the Regent theater. Leon Brick, originally on the cards as the house manager, resigned to accept a similar post in Philadelphia. He has been succeeded by Roland Roberts of Toronto. The backstage manager is John Henderson, while the new musical director is John Arthur, formerly orchestra leader of Loew's Winter Garden, Toronto. The concert organ is now being played by Dr. Harvey Robb, a Toronto musician of considerable renown. V. T. Pegg has also become treasurer of the theater. There are now sixty employes in the Regent, of whom thirteen are members of the symphony orchestra.

One of the recent moves at the Regent was the adoption of the plan for a change in pictures twice each week instead of tri-weekly. The programs are made up of features from Famous Players, Metro, Clara Kimball Young, and Artcraft, while the comedies are chosen from Christie, Sidney Drew, Vogue or Vim. The news weeklies are Pathe News, English Gazette, English Topical or Gaumont.

The Regent was opened on Friday night, August 25th.

L. E. Ouimet Begins Extensive Tour.

Toronto, Ont.—After conferring with James Travis, manager of the Toronto Pathe branch, for a couple of days, L. E. Ouimet, Canadian general manager for the Pathe, left this city on November 4th for an extensive tour of the Canadian West. Ouimet left with the intention of combing the prairie and Pacific Provinces for ideas which would help Pathe extension in the West. This is practically the first transcontinental trip for Ouimet and he will be on the rails for six weeks.

Jules Levine Goes to Winnipeg.

Toronto, Ont.—Jules Levine, who has been occupying a roost in the Canadian Bluebird headquarters in Toronto for the past few months, has been shifted to Winnipeg, where he will have charge of Bluebird arrangements.

Managers to Enjoy Social Evenings.

Toronto, Ont.—The members of the Toronto Exchange Managers' Association have decided that even a manager can take a night off. The organization has, therefore, hit upon the plan of holding a social evening which will include an eating feature, and a few comedies.

Film Men Benefit by Good Roads

Easy Access to Villages and Towns Makes Good Patrons of the Farmers—A Good Roads Campaign in Michigan.

By Frank H. Madison, 623 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago.

BATTLE CREEK, Mich.—With the advent of the popular priced automobile, the rural resident has become more and more a factor in the business of the moving picture exhibitor. There are few farmers who are not within a short run of some picture house, provided the roads are good. Therefore the wise exhibitor allies himself with any movement for the improvement of highways. A campaign for good roads in this locality is now under way. It is being encouraged by local show men who are running slides and lending support. The theaters interested are the Bijou, Garden, Strand, Majestic, and Rex.

Lansing (Mich.) Theater to Be Rebuilt.

Lansing, Mich.—Manager J. M. Neal, of the Theatorium, on North Washington avenue, has let the contract for $40,000 worth of improvements. This means a practically new theater. The frame work will be of steel and the front of tile and terra cotta. The Theatorium was able to operate for some time after construction had been started.

New House in Owosso.

Owosso, Mich.—The Temple theater is being dismantled and the material is being used in the new theater which Fred Patterson is erecting just east of the Temple.

IN ILLINOIS.

Peoria Operators' Ball a Success.

PEORIA, ILL.—Charles Davidson, George Pape, and Henry Woodrow were members of the committee on arrangement that successfully conducted the annual ball of the local operators' union.

New Companies Incorporated.

Springfield, Ill.—Articles of incorporation have been issued to the following:

Oceanic Film Corporation, Chicago; capital, $20,000; incorporators, Samuel M. Field, John R. Freuler, N. M. Donnelly.

Fort Dearborn Photoplays, Inc., Chicago; capital stock increased from $5,000 to $150,000.

Jarrett Amusement Company, Alton; capital, $7,500; incorporators, Harry E. Jarrett, Clement A. Jarrett, John T. Slugett, Jr.

Labor Troubles Cause Dropping of Films.

Peoria, Ill.—Following labor troubles at the Hippodrome theater in this city, Vernon C. Seaver of Chicago, head of the company which operates the house, issued a statement that he contemplated discontinuing the use of pictures and using seven acts of vaudeville instead of five, using a policy similar to that of the Great Northern Hippodrome in Chicago.

R. W. Riggs Buys Theater.

Quincy, Ill.—Rudolph W. Riggs, son of Harvey Riggs of the Mercantile Bank, which held the mortgage on the Princess theater, purchased that house at a sheriff's sale. Affairs have been somewhat complicated, it being necessary to hold three sales in a single day. One mortgage was held by the Universal Film Service for rental due from John Spanople, former owner of the theater. Another mortgage was on an extra machine. The third against the theater equipment, was held by the bank. All of these have been secured, and Riggs will be personally in charge.

Pullman Theater Sold.

Springfield, Ill.—The property of the Jones Bros. railroad moving picture shows here, sold at a forced sale at the court house, was purchased by Frank McGowar, a wool and hide dealer of this city, for about $1,000. Several valuable film were among the assets.

New Theaters and Changes in Illinois.

Bloomington, Ill.—John Daley has sold the Colonial theater on North Main street to Harry Stewart of Heyworth, and will go to St. Louis where he will devote his time to an automobile insurance company which he recently organized.

Kansas, Ill.—Jess Osborne, of Brockton, has purchased a moving picture theater here.

Normal, Ill.—A Mr. David, of Kankakee, has been making arrangements to open a moving picture theater in the building formerly occupied by the Amusu theater.

Mattoon, Ill.—Joseph A. Custer has purchased the Majestic theater and will make a number of improvements to that house.

Wayne City, Ill.—Dr. Pitner, of Fairfields, has opened a moving picture theater in Schumann's hall in this city.

Casey, Ill.—Phil Peters has purchased the Orpheum theater.

Vandalia, Ill.—Bert Myers has purchased the interest of his brother, Harry Myers, in the Dixie theater, the latter now being sole owner. The brothers have successfully operated this house since the death of their father a year ago.

DAKOTA NOTES.

Milnor, N. D.—The Shubert theater has been closed because of lack of business.

Sioux Falls, S. D.—A film fire at the Princess theater destroyed the machine and badly damaged the operating room.

Escanaba a Film Center.

Escanaba, Mich., is rapidly being put on the map by the film exchanges, the advantage of this small town being that it is the terminal for taking care of exhibitors in the northern part of the state. For the past year the Mutual, Universal and Metro have handled the upper peninsula from exchanges located at Escanaba. Last week the Standard Film Service opened offices at the Strand Theater building, with George R. Kepple in charge, and Alfred Lebensberger, of Cleveland, as his assistant. The four exchanges there have formed an organization known as the "The Film Exchange Co-operative Association." It is formed to eliminate many flagrant abuses which are not only nuisances, but obstacles, in the path of promoting a better, closer and higher business understanding between the exhibitor and the exchange. H. W. Bracket, manager of the Escanaba Universal exchange, was elected secretary of the organization.

A Friend Drops in On Us.

Detroit, Mich.—"The Moving Picture World is my Bible," said L. G. Peltier, proprietor of the Bijou theater, Mt. Clemens, who was a visitor at the World office last week. "I would not think of booking a picture until I had looked through the World and read the criticism. I always find them fair and of great assistance to me in making up my schedule. I just would not think of being in business unless I got my World." Call again, Brother Peltier.

Detroit Needs Central Exchange

Reel Club, of Detroit, An Exchange Man's Organization, Discusses Present City Ordinance on Film Exchange Buildings—Hope Expressed that an Adequate Film Building Can Be Erected.

DETROIT, Mich.—The Reel Club of Detroit, comprising exchange managers, held meetings on Nov. 1 and 3 and most important matters were taken up. Most important of all was further discussion regarding a proposition to have erected in Detroit a building devoted exclusively to film exchanges. Several realty companies have gone so far as to guarantee the erection of a film building, providing they can be assured of leasing the space. Almost to a member, the exchange managers are in hearty accord with the plan, because it would greatly facilitate business with the exhibitors. As it is now, an exhibitor is running to all sections of the city to take up matters with the different exchanges. The new way would save much time and prove better all around. We hope to see the film building a reality before another six months.

One of the reasons why a film building is necessary is due to the present city ordinance, which is very drastic in its requirements for film exchanges. Most of the exchanges will be compelled to leave their present quarters should the city authorities decide to rigidly enforce the ordinance.

Here's hoping the film building goes up soon.

Low Prices for Features in Detroit

Visiting Exhibitor Astonished at the Low Cost of Film in This Locality as Compared with Chicago—Peculiarities of the Business.

DETROIT, MICH.—The writer was very much interested in an interview he had last week with a moving picture exhibitor of Chicago who had stopped off at Detroit en route to eastern points. The World correspondent accompanied him to some of our leading playhouses, and he received correct information as to what some of them were paying for their feature films.

This Chicago exhibitor expressed great surprise when he heard the figures and stated that the prices for first-run features were considerably more in Chicago and in other large cities that he had been investigating. For instance, he said, no exchange would think of leasing a feature of consequence to a downtown theater or a large theater in the outskirts, first run, for less than $100 per day, and that it was not an uncommon thing to get as high as $1,000 for a first-run, and $100 per day for second and third runs in the outskirts.

It is not the first time that an out-of-town exhibitor has remarked that Detroit was paying little for its first-run features. Of course, conditions vary in different cities, and often what one theater can afford to pay in a big city another cannot. There are certain towns in Michigan that to the outsider would seem like excellent moving picture cities, but some of the very best features even at cut prices have failed to be box-office attractions. There is no reason available as to why the condition exists—but it does nevertheless. The city of Detroit is extremely prosperous in the moving picture industry. There have been few changes in the ownership of theaters during the past six months; most of the houses are making good money on the investment.

It is being proven more and more that showmanship counts for something in the moving picture business, and that no man can make his theater successful unless he stays right with it and watches every angle.

Michigan Will Soon Be a Dry State

Saloons Will Close by May, 1917—It Is Expected that the Lack of Saloons Will Be of Material Help to the Picture Business.

DETROIT, MICH.—Michigan has gone dry by a big majority, according to the vote on Tuesday, November 7. It means that saloons will pass out of business after May 1, 1917, and that the breweries will shut down absolutely by May, 1918. It is not the desire of the writer to discuss the wet and dry situation, but insofar as it will affect the moving picture business, a few remarks may be worth while. For the past four Sundays the saloons have been shut tight, owing to the order of the new police commissioner in Detroit and the administration. The result has been that the moving picture theaters did more business than ever on Sunday.

The writer asked one of the leading outskirt exhibitors what he thought the effect of "no saloons" would mean to the picture industry and he said: "While I voted the wet ticket and urged it among my friends, I am inclined to believe that it will operate advantageously to the picture industry. Naturally, it will keep more money at home and more money and men out of saloons. These same people will have to find recreation elsewhere, and some of them are sure to find it in the motion picture theaters. Then, again, hundreds of women will have a little more spending money, and this will mean additional business for motion picture theaters. The dry situation will help the suburban theaters, but it may hurt the business of the downtown theaters, as not as many people will be going to the cafes and cabaret places, and there will be less "night life" in Detroit. For the smaller theaters it unquestionably will be a trade stimulant."

Big "U" Closes Saginaw Office.

Saginaw, Mich.—The Saginaw, Mich., office of the Universal has been closed and hereafter all film for that section will be shipped from Detroit. However, F. A. Coleman, former manager of this office, will continue to look after the exhibitors in that particular territory, and will spend more time personally with them than ever before.

F. D. Beardsley Takes Over the Star.

Sault, Mich.—F. D. Beardsley has taken over the Star theater at Sault Ste. Marie, Mich. He now operates the Temple in that city. This gives him two houses to manage and book.

Local Notes of Interest.

Dennis Vaines has taken back the Venetian theater at Coldwater, Mich. He formerly owned it.

Col. W. S. Butterfield, of Battle Creek, Lipp & Cross of that city, and Lew Barnes of Kalamazoo, were recent visitors in Detroit.

Detroit Notes.

The Duplex theater, Detroit, has once more changed managements. This time George W. Weeks is the "man behind." He plans a new policy for the Duplex and a new organization.

James M. Menter is now the manager and lessee of the Forest theater, Forest and Woodward avenues.

Bert Graham is now assistant to M. S. Bailey, manager of the Detroit Universal exchange. Bert has been in the film business for the past ten years, and for many years was an exhibitor.

Robert Cotton, of New York, is now special representative at Detroit for the World.

Joe Woods has left the John H. Kunsky organization, after ten years. He has managed the Empress and Garden theaters during that time. He plans to engage in another line of business. L. H. Gardner will in the future direct the policy of both houses, while Al Smith will be his assistant.

Lew W. Foster, formerly special representative out of the Triangle office in Detroit, has been transferred to Cincinnati.

D. N. Miller, of the Muskegon-Garden theater, is planning to enlarge his house to 1,200 seats. In this same town of Muskegon Paul Schlossman is erecting two new moving picture theaters.

Detroit now has a real F-I-L-M Club and meetings are being held weekly. The officers are George Trask, president; M. S. Bailey, vice-president, and J. O. Brooks, secretary. It will be conducted along the same lines as similar clubs in Chicago and New York.

D. Leo Dennison, general manager of the Famous Players Film Service, Inc., who spent Nov. 6 and 7 in Detroit, announced that George Renshaw and H. V. Zapp, formerly with the Casino Feature Film Co. at Detroit, were now workinf out of the Chicago office of Paramount; that Norman Shields has been transferred from Chicago to Detroit and that Neil Kingsley, manager of the Pittsburgh exchange, was suffering from blood poisoning of one foot. Mr. Dennison left Nov. 11 for New York, to attend an important conference.

W. C. Mellinson, of the Princess theater, Benton Harbor, Mich., is planning to leave about December 1 for Florida, where he will spend the winter. Upon his return in the spring he will enlarge the Princess to 1,000 seats.

Jerome Abrams in St. Louis.

St. Louis, Mo.—Jerome Abrams, special representative of Bluebird Photoplays, Inc., is in St. Louis for a two weeks' stay. Mr. Abrams is a kind-hearted man. Several months ago, when he visited the city, we reported the matter, and for some unknown reason said that "Ambrose" Abrams was in town. We don't know why we did it. There is no earthly reason why a man named Jerome should be called Ambrose. Did he get his saints mixed?) On the other hand, there is of course no particular harm in calling a man Ambrose; it's a pretty good name, and the combination of Ambrose Abrams does not sound bad when considered from a standpoint of alliteration, but it wasn't the gentleman's name, and we expected to get an awful "bawling out" from Jerry, but he's a good scout, and merely said "It's all right." Mrs. Abrams is accompanying her husband on his trip. The couple are stopping at the Plaza hotel, and Mrs. Abrams, who was once a resident of St. Louis, is renewing many old-time associations and acquaintances. Mr. Abrams said he is very much pleased with the record Bluebirds are making in the St. Louis territory, but it is only a duplication of what is going on all over the country.

Big "U" Sales Representatives Meet.

A meeting of the sales representatives of the Universal was held last week in the exchange at 2116 Locust street. H. C. Cropper, special representative, presided at the meeting. According to Barney Rosenthal, the business of films from all standpoints was talked over and discussed with the view of improving the service and bringing the exhibitor in closer touch with Universal products. H. W. Talbot, manager of the Cairo branch of the Universal, also attended the meeting.

Sievers Planning for "Crisis."

St. Louis, Mo.—William Sievers, manager of the New Grand Central theatre, who owns the Missouri rights to "The Crisis," is having films made of the many historical points in and about St. Louis that are described in the novel. Great local interest is being taken in "The Crisis" because of the fact that all of the principal action of the story occurred in this city, and additional interest is felt because of the fact that St. Louis is the home town of the author, Winston Churchill.

Minusa Screen Gives World Man a Feed

He Calls for a News Item and Is Taken into the Dining Room at the Factory—Two Kinds of Bread, Pumpernickel and Oh, Lots of Things.

By A. H. Giebler, 236 Vanol Building, St. Louis, Mo.

ST. LOUIS, MO.—When a correspondent girds a pencil behind his ear and slips a pad of paper in his pocket and starts out on a hunt for news, he never knows what he is going to run into. It may be a big story, and it may not. Most often it is not. But we'll bet that few of the correspondents on the staff of the World often run into what we did this week. A dinner.

Of course correspondents do get fed now and then, but we don't mean the ordinary "scoffing," we mean dinner with a capital D-I-N and a loud accent on the n-e-r.

We can go up on Film Row any day, stand around Thompson's One-arm restaurant and look hungry and tighten our belt a few times, and somebody either Joe Levy or Harry Wolfberg or Sid Baker will come along and say "Come on in, I'll stake you to the beans."

We don't mean that at all. Any live correspondent that knows the business of corresponding can put that over any time; if he couldn't he wouldn't last very long. What we mean is a bang, red-hot dinner with the "fixin's."

That is what we run into this week, and of all places—in a screen factory!"

Here's how it came about. We called up Nat Brown of the Minusa screens, and was talking to him about the Screen Club and he says:

"When are you coming up here to see our new factory?" And we said, "Oh, I'm awful busy," and he come back with, "We'll feed you——" and we interrupted with, "Oh, I ain't got nothing to do, I'll come right away."

When we got up on 29th and Morgan street we looked over the landscape and didn't locate anything very promising in the restaurant line. It began to look like the expected feast was going to be ham-and, country style, in some little neighborhood "eats" house.

But wait! When we got in the office and talked to Ed Anderson a while and was conducted through the factory, which is about the last word in factories, equipped with every little thing and every big thing for the manufacture of screens, and we had expressed our admiration and wonder at it all, Brown came up, took our trusting hand and led us to the culinary department, and from thence to the dining room!

Sure! A real dining room right there in the factory, where the employees and office force have their lunch every day.

There was a big table—and—well to get down to cases—it looked like a barbecue!

The factory hands were excluded (we suspect it was because the "bosses" didn't want to set them the bad example of seeing us eat).

There was baked ham, two kinds of bread, olives of a deep purplish cast in color and asparagus cooked in butter sauce that we sopped our bread in, and could almost have made a meal on alone, and pumpernickel, which really makes three kinds of bread, doesn't it, if you call pumpernickel the staff of life, and potato salad, and—but what's the use?

It was all there, and Nat and Ed and Bill and ourself, gorged and filled our systems with about the finest little feed ever cooked up, and finished up with good old-fashioned molasses cake, baked right there in the factory kitchen, and a wedge of pie that had been cut four ways to the plate.

After the feast we went over the factory some more and saw screens in the making, enough of them, it seemed, to equip every theater in the country, but Ed Anderson said they were only a few rush orders they were getting our.

A Minusa screen is fearfully and wonderfully made. We had no idea there was so much of it. It has to go through five or six processes before it even begins to look like a screen, and then it is swung up to the ceiling and fixed some more and then flopped down on rollers and rolled and pounded and goodness knows what all done to it, and given a bath to see if it is officially waterproof—and even then it is not done; but when the final fixings are put to it it looks like a big glistening sheet of dull silver. It is some screen factory, that Minusa plant is!

B. F. Lyon Pleased With St. Louis Office.

St. Louis, Mo.—B. F. Lyon, district manager of the International, making a coast to coast tour of the exchanges, is in St. Louis this week, instructing the sales force and completing plans for the coming release of the new patriotic serial "Patria," featuring Mrs. Vernon Castle. Mr. Lyon expressed himself as being well pleased with the work the St. Louis branch is doing, especially on Golden Eagle features, which have become popular to the extent that Manager E. W. Dustin has been compelled to order an extra print of each release to take care of the bookings. Mr. Lyon will go to Kansas City from St. Louis, to superintend the opening of a new branch there.

Joe Levy Back at His Desk.

St. Louis, Mo.—Joe Levy, manager of the Fox exchange, 3632 Olive street, has just returned from a business trip to New York, where he was in consultation with the Fox interests. Joe, who is noted for his exuberent and effervescent spirit, which has earned him the nickname of "Live Wire Levy," came back charged to the gills with enthusiasm.

E. E. Erickson Resigns.

St. Louis, Mo.—E. E. Erickson, city salesman for the World Film in St. Louis, has resigned his position and has gone to Detroit, where he will join the Pathe forces under the management of George W. Fuller.

New Castle, Ind., Alcazar Theater Sold

Peter Kaler, Who Has Managed the Royal, Takes Over the Theater of the W. H. Elliott Estate—Will Follow Vigorous Picture Policy.

NEW CASTLE, Ind.—Business negotiations were completed last week by which the ownership of the Alcazar theater has been transferred from the W. H. Elliott estate to Peter Kaler, who for the last five years has successfully managed the Royal motion picture theater on East Broad street.

The deal is the most important theater transaction in New Castle for several years, and means a new era for the New Castle theater. The theater will be thoroughly rejuvenated, and partly refurnished and redecorated. A glass canopy will be built in front of the house extending to the edge of the sidewalk. With a view of giving the entrance a more cheerful appearance, myriads of lights will be hung along the edge of the canopy. A large pipe organ will be installed inside the theater.

Mr. Kaler says that in addition to the motion pictures he expects to have vaudeville about three times a week. He added that he intends to continue operating the Royal, showing the same brand of high class pictures that he has shown since starting here five years ago. Mr. Kaler was the owner of the first real up-to-date motion picture house in the city, and his business methods have always been calculated to make patrons satisfied with his show.

New Fort Wayne Amusement Co.

Fort Wayne, Ind.—The Rialto Amusement Company has filed incorporation papers with the secretary of state to engage in the motion picture business. The capital stock is announced as $10,000. The incorporators are A. H. Nokes, F. L. Nokes, and M. C. Nokes.

Jacob Schmitt Buys the Calhoun.

Fort Wayne, Ind.—Jacob Schmitt has bought the Calhoun theater, a motion picture house, at Leith and Calhoun streets.

Star in Van Buren Reopens.

Van Buren, Ind.—After having been closed for the last few weeks while repairs were being made, the Star theater was opened again last Saturday night. Earl Calvin, the proprietor, announces that he has booked several large feature films.

South Bend, Ind.—Installation of a motion picture machine and celebration of the seventh anniversary of the building of its present home on South Main street, marked the services in the First Christian church.

Artcraft Opens Office in Kansas City

Moriarty Building Chosen for the New Headquarters—C. P. Wreath Is the Manager, Assisted by G. W. Tinsley.

[illegible] Special to The News Service, 200 Cast [illegible], Kansas City, Mo.

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—Artcraft, one of the Artcraft [illegible] corporation, has become [illegible] in Kansas City, Mo. Headquarters for the new exchange are in the Moriarty building at Twelfth and Grand avenue, and the company will occupy the entire second floor. The Kansas City company will handle Mary Pickford releases and George M. Cohan productions, and the manager is to be P. C. Wreath, who formerly in the picture business in Kansas City, eight years ago, [illegible] Film Exchange. He was connected with the General Film later, and then spent two years with the Kansas City Feature Film Co.

It would be hard to name a single exhibitor in the Kansas City territory whom Mr. Wreath does not know, and has not had dealings with. The company will have a very large territory which covers a group of states including Kansas, Missouri, Oklahoma, Iowa, and Nebraska. Mr. Wreath says that he has been surprised at the good start the new company is having. G. W. Tinsley, who formerly sold Paramount pictures in the Kansas City territory, is the assistant manager of the company. The company is located just two blocks from the Union Station, and Mr. Wreath expects to catch the exhibitors coming and going.

Two High Trump Cards.

suit; he's a live one if there ever was one—a thing jolly, enthusiastic, full of ginger, and capable of imparting that quality always solicitous that everybody is pushing hard and getting the best service, willing to work his head off to make things go better and smoother for everybody concerned. Howard Jameyson is a youth after his own heart. Howard was formerly a correspondent for the World, he used to camp in Mr. Edwards' office insisting on a job, until finally his perseverance was rewarded. The job just had to drop. And he has made good. He was recently appointed assistant manager.

J. E. Storey Walking With Mrs. Storey.

Kansas City, Mo.—J. E. Storey, manager of the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay office at Kansas City, is one of the solid, consistent, advancing type of exchange manager. He hasn't been a manager very long, but his experience as a traveler and assistant in the V-L-S-E office under E. R. Pearson revealed his capability. He was there two years, and when a man was sought to succeed A. C. Melvin, who had managed the Kleine office at Kansas City, Mr. Storey was picked, for reasons that may easily be imagined — even though Mr. Pearson may have been sorry to see him go. The picture shows a very characteristic pose of Mr. Storey. And it is here publicly proclaimed that the lady he is walking with and whose identity is excluded is Mr. Storey's wife. Not being a moving picture actor, it is obvious that he would not have his picture taken with a lady not his wife.

Fine New Theater at Kearney.

Kearney, Neb.—A strictly modern $25,000 dollar theater is being built at Kearney, Nebraska. The new theater will have a seating capacity of five hundred, and will be finished about the fifteenth of November. Paul H. Hopper, proprietor of the theater will install a $3,000 equipment, and will open with a Paramount feature.

Kansas City, Mo.—S. G. Sladdin, general representative of the Consolidated Film Corporation, was in Kansas City recently

New Centre Theater May Open by Dec. 2

Samuel Zucker Chosen to Run the New House on Troost Avenue and Fifteenth Street, Kansas City—Admission Will Be Ten Cents.

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—A new $25,000 motion picture theater is under construction at Fifteenth and Troost avenue, Kansas City, Mo., which is to be called the New Centre theater. It will be managed by Samuel Zucker, who is thoroughly acquainted with the business. The New Centre theater is one of several houses operated by the New Centre Theatre Co. It will have a seating capacity of 1,600. The admission will be ten cents, and the best productions will be shown. A pipe organ and an orchestra will add to the attraction of the theater, and the grand opening is expected to be the second of December.

"The Unity News."

Kansas City, Mo.—G. B. Howe, manager of the Unity Film Corporation, of Kansas City, recently published the first issue of a four page sheet to be called "The Unity News." The object of the sheet is to keep the exhibitors in the territory in touch with the released policies, players, etc.

B. W. Blowitz Joins Unity Film.

Kansas City, Mo.—B. W. Blowitz, formerly owner of the Electric theater in Kansas City, Kansas, and more recently traveler for the Kansas City Feature Film Co., has been added to the forces of the Unity Film Corporation of Kansas City.

C. O. Baker Buys Gem Theater.

Erie, Kan.—C. O. Baker recently bought the Gem theater, of Erie, and has just assumed the management of it. The former owners of the Gem have bought the Gordon theater, of Kansas City, Kansas, and recntly began operating it.

Minneapolis News Letter

[illegible] Special to The News Service, 1300 Metropolitan Building, Minneapolis, Minn.

Features of Note Hereabouts.

ST. PAUL, Minn.—The two "Romeo and Juliet" features held the boards at the Strand and New Majestic theaters here last week. The Strand showed the Metro feature the entire week for a dime and the Majestic ran the Fox film the first half of the week for a dime. Both theaters did a big business.

St. Paul, Minn.—Manager Morton Nathan, of the Starland theater here, put on a special show for the benefit of delegates to the state educational convention here, last Saturday morning. "The Light That Failed," Pathe feature, was the attraction, and it was well received by the large audience of teachers.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Both the Strand, Minneapolis, and Strand, St. Paul, theaters that will run "Less Than the Dust," Mary Pickford's first Artcraft release, have posted many elaborate twenty-four and sixteen sheets to advertise the feature.

L. O. Moss Is Pathe Roadman.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Manager H. E. Friedman, of the Pathe exchange here, has secured L. O. Moss, a roadman from the Chicago Pathe offices, to cover the Dakota territory for the Mill City exchange.

E. E. Levin Managing Kayancee Film.

E. E. Levin, former manager of the Commercial Film Co. here, has become manager of the Kayancee Film Corp. in the Jewelers' Exchange building.

Has Features to Sell.

M. R. Dick, desiring to devote his entire time to his "End of the World" road shows, is offering several two, three and five-reel features for sale.

Frederickson With Elliott-Sherman.

F. C. Frederickson, late of the Vitagraph, has joined the Elliott-Sherman forces, and is looking after bookings for "Ramona."

William Koenig, Fighter.

Minneapolis, Minn.—The present year has been the most successful the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association, Inc., of the Northwest has ever had. Co-operation is one reason for this, but one big reason also is that the secretary, William Koenig, manager of the Gayety and Bijou theaters, Minneapolis, is a fighter. Mr. Koenig took hold of the reins last May, and every day since has been "on the job," devising new ways to get new members, convincing exhibitors as to the merit of such an organization as the Northwest body and "plugging" — always. With the return of cold weather Mr. Koenig's untiring efforts are beginning to bear fruit and it is expected that by spring the Northwest association will be one of the strongest divisions of the national league. Mr. Koenig has been in the theatrical business in Minneapolis for eight years, is secretary for the Twin City theatrical managers' association, and northwestern manager for the Northwest Theater Co. He has been very successful as an arbitrator, doing much to bring to termination squabbles between stage employees and operators and theater owners.

Texas Court Upholds Censor Law

Case Against Xydias Amusement Company Unfavorably Decided—Right of the City of Houston to Censor Pictures Is Upheld—Case Has Been Watched for Over a Year—A Test Case.

By C. A. Walker, 624 Milam St., Houston, Texas.

HOUSTON, Tex.—The long-fought legal controversy carried on against the City of Houston by A. J. Xydias of the Xydias Amusement Company, Houston, Texas, has at last been settled; and the final decision is widespread and sweeping.

On October 4th, the Supreme Court of the State of Texas refused a writ of error in the case of Xydias Amusement Co. against The City of Houston et al. The plaintiffs sued out a writ of error of injunction on November 4th, 1915, in the Fifty-Fifth District Court, to enjoin the City of Houston, its commissioners, the members of the censor board, and its secretary, Mrs. Frank Vaughn, from prosecuting the plaintiffs for exhibiting motion pictures at their places of business in Houston without first obtaining a permit from the board of censors.

A temporary restraining order was granted by Judge Masterson, but on final hearing the restraining order was dissolved and the injunction was denied. The case was taken to the Court of Civil Appeals at Galveston, and the judgement of the district court was affirmed, and by their recent action the Supreme Court affirms these judgements.

This hard-fought case has been brought before meetings of exhibitors in Texas, and at one time was taken before the New York Film Board of Trade. All motion picturedom was interested in the outcome of the legal tangle, for if the decision had been otherwise, it would have brought about sweeping changes in the censorship question in other Texas cities—notably, Dallas, Fort Worth, Waco, etc.

The legal right of censorship was not so strongly attacked as was the right for a censor body to say "You must have a permit before you can show any picture, no matter whether it will be passed or not."

Exhibitors commenting upon the Supreme Court decision seem to think that they may now expect a much more rigid censorship than previously, and are accordingly "laying in wait" for the trouble makers.

Exhibitors Who Attended T. A. M. Association Meeting.

Among those present at the meeting in Dallas of the Texas Amusement Managers' Association on Oct. 25 were E. J. Lamkin, of the Savoy and Colonial theaters, Greenville; E. V. Richards, Jr., Saenger Amusement Co., Shreveport, La.; L. M. Ridout, Star theater, Denison; Andrew Zuccaro, Hippodrome theater, Fort Worth; Wm. Batsell, Jr., King and Queen theaters, Sherman; J. E. Patrick, Star theater, Winnsboro; Peter Jecker, Princess theater, Victoria; J. S. Phillips, Odeon theater, Fort Worth; Henry Oscar, Calvert; Jack Lilly, Hippodrome theater, Commerce; Jno. Snively, Princess theater, Paris; Tom Binion, Hoo Hoo theater, Lufkin; J. E. Martin, Lyric theater, Mt. Pleasant; A. O. Hamilton, Dalhart; Grant & Sheppard, Ruby theater, Plainview; Mack Murphy, Opera House, Sweetwater; J. B. Clayton, Monogram theater, Childress; J. Dillon, Healy theater, Fort Worth; J. E. Newman, Crystal theater, Greenville; B. C. Bell, Dixie theater, Galveston; P. C. Crown, Crown theater, Houston; J. E. Wallace, Majestic theater, Austin; R. C. Brown, Van Alstyne; J. J. Hegman, Crescent theater, Temple; J. M. Robb, Lyric theater, Big Springs; B. Bell, Gem theater, Palestine; J. A. Lemke, Crystal theater, Waco; LeRoy Bickel, Rex theater, Waco; J. B. Powell, Elk theater, Marshall; J. I. Carter, Crystal theater, Pittsburg. An account of this important meeting was printed last week, see page 992.

Film News Over Texas.

John D. Jones, formerly of the Crystal theater, Greenville, and latterly with the Grand opera house, Amarillo, is now road man for the Mutual Film Corporation of Dallas.

During the Amusement Managers' meeting in Dallas, J. A. Lemke, of Waco, and B. C. Bell, Palestine, met for the first time. There's nothing singular about two exhibitors meeting for the first time; but in this case there's something unusual. Both men are the two oldest customers of the Universal—Mr. Bell just one day ahead of Mr. Lemke in running Universal film. They have used the "Big U" product for the past six years, and have many tales to relate.

H. N. Jorgenson has had his Best theater of Dallas, repaired and is back behind the money-box with his smiling countenance. The Best was recently damaged by fire to quite an extent.

Jackson Meeting That Failed

Mississippi Exhibitors Dissatisfied But Fail to Get Together with New Orleans Exchange Managers at a Recent Meeting.

By N. E. Thatcher, 3801 Canal St., New Orleans, La.

JACKSON, MISS.—For a long time the exhibitors of Mississippi have strenuously objected to the prevailing system of requiring, on the part of film exchange managers, a cash deposit upon program film service. The exhibitors hold that it is just a subterfuge to secure working capital for the producers and that in the aggregate it ties up a large amount of money without interest, which they could use in their own business as well as the manufacturer can use it in his own. To the charge that the small exhibitor cannot be trusted they point out that there is not much dependence to be put in the practices of the exchanges. Their service can be and frequently is canceled at the whim of the exchanges; methods of carriage are arbitrary; excessive charges are imposed and a few other things against the peace and dignity of the patient exhibitor are among the enumerations set down as the basis of a vigorous complaint.

The Mississippi exhibitors have for a long time been considering the advisability of taking concerted action against the alleged iniquities that have been practiced against them and this attitude resulted in the calling of a state meeting to be held at Jackson on Thursday, Oct. 26. At the head of the movement were such prominent exhibitors as Gene Clark, of the Baker-Grand theater, Natchez, Miss.; Manager Eisenberg, of the Greenville Amusement Co., Greenville, Miss.; P. E. Schilling, of the Greenwood theater, of Greenwood; S. D. Wooten, of the Remo theater, Coldwater, Miss., and others. They were all at Jackson for the meeting. Manager Eisenberg had a large number of proxies in his pocket, each one of them to be used as a protest against the system that contemplated the reliable exhibitor being held responsible against the loss which the exchanges might incur through the fly-by-night exhibitor. That the importance of the meeting was in no wise underestimated by the New Orleans exchange men, who serve the Mississippi exhibitors, was evidenced by the fact that every available representative of the New Orleans film exchanges was enlisted to go to Jackson to be prepared for any eventuality if a real battle should develop. The New Orleans contingent included Mrs. Anna H. Sessions, manager of the World Exchange; Al G. Shear, of the Consolidated; Karl E. Bugbee, of the Metro; H. F. Wilkes, Paramount; J. E. Ragland, K. E. S. E.; Mrs. Al G. Shear, Thomas F. McTyer, of Atlanta, representing the Artcrafts Picture Corporation; M. F. Barr, Bluebird representative; R. E. Barron, road man for the K. E. S. E., and others. In point of numbers the exchange contingent had the best of it. From the standpoint of courage they were fortunate in escaping a showdown. Both sides as a matter of fact were timid, if not to say apprehensive. The meeting was called in the Majestic theater and the exchange men adopted the force of numbers tactics in the threatened warfare. It worked and once again Napoleon's well-known assertion about victory being with the man who had the heaviest artillery failed to secure a practical demonstration. The exhibitors were afraid to press their claims, so far as the evidence goes, and the exchange men are thanking their lucky stars that the exhibitors did not force the fight. The situation remains unchanged.

ON PACIFIC COAST.

Walter Stern Makes Trip North.

San Francisco, Cal.—Walter L. Stern, with G. A. Metcalfe, left a short time ago for Seattle, Wash., where he will remain for two or three months. A branch was established there a few months ago and he will make a stay there to become acquainted with conditions in the Northwest.

New Owner for Oakland House.

Oakland, Cal.—The Oakland Photoplay, on Broadway, conducted for several years by the Turner & Dahnken circuit, is opened late in November. The house is to be renovated throughout, new seats installed, a fine organ added and other changes and betterments made. It will be opened about the middle of December as a family motion picture house, with fine music strongly featured. Mr. Kehrlein conducts the Kinema theater at Fresno, one of the finest houses in the interior of the state, and is recognized as being a highly successful exhibitor.

C. R. Seelye Expected Soon.

San Francisco, Cal.—C. R. Seelye, business manager of the Pathe Exchange, Inc., is expected to visit the Pacific Coast at an early date, probably in December. H. C. Drum, traveling representative of the firm, arrived recently on a trip of inspection and will remain for some time. The staff has been enlarged lately by the addition of O. B. Smith, a well-known business man of this city.

Sol L. Lesser, of the Golden Gate exchange and the All Star Feature, is at present making another short trip to New York.

The Ocean View theater has been repaired and redecorated and is being conducted again under the management of Vivian Preston.

M. J. Samuels, vice-president of the American Photo Player Co., with headquarters at New York, recently spent two weeks at the local factory.

The De Luxe Film Lasky Corporation has been incorporated with a capital stock of $75,000 by M. C. Hickey, J. Brownstone and L. H. Brownstone.

California Briefs.

Los Gatos, Cal.—Marshall Black has taken a lease on a new theater and will open the house some time in November. George A. Metcalfe of San Francisco is installing the equipment.

Red Bluff, Cal.—The High School has purchased a moving picture machine and will show films regularly.

Belmont, Cal.—The Belmont Military Academy has purchased moving picture equipment.

Hanford, Cal.—The Universal theater is being enlarged and the seating capacity will be increased by 200 seats.

Corcoran, Cal.—R. A. Neeb is erecting a moving picture theater 50 by 80 feet in size.

Richmond, Cal.—The Western Carbon Company has been reorganized and will resume the manufacture of carbons at an early date.

The Film Week in California

San Francisco Office of the Mutual Will Move to New Building—International to Open Another Branch—Items About Notable People—Notes About the Local Film Business and Personals.

By T. A. Church, 1507 North Street, Berkeley, California.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal.—The Mutual Film Corporation has completed arrangements for securing space in a splendid one-story fireproof building now in course of erection at Golden Gate avenue and Leavenworth street and plans to be in the new home some time in February. The present quarters on Turk street have proved to be inadequate for some time, but until recently it was impossible for Manager X. K. Stout to secure better ones. The new exchange will be 30 by 100 feet in size, with a full basement, and will be equipped in the most approved manner, with a projection room and the latest devices for the handling of films.

S. S. Hutchinson, of the American Film Company, and J. R. Crone, studio manager of the Vogue Film Company, were recent visitors here and inspected plans for the new exchange. Thomas R. Smith, auditor of the Mutual corporation, was also here a short time ago on a tour of inspection. Mr. and Mrs. Stout made a short trip to Los Angeles recently, where Mr. Stout attended a meeting of Mutual managers. Business is described as being excellent and the first of the Margarita Fischer series, "The Pearl of Paradise," has been booked for the Empress theater. The Portola theater has booked the first of the releases featuring Richard Bennett.

Error About "A Trip Thru' China."

San Francisco, Calif.—A paragraph in the November 4 issue of this paper credited Mr. Sol Lesser with buying the California state rights to "A Trip Through China." We find that this was an error, and that Mr. Lesser's film was "A Trip Through the Flowery Kingdom," a six-reel production. On the other hand, the ten-reel picture, "A Trip Thru China," we are informed by Mr. H. H. McPike, is owned by China Cinema Company and Mr. B. Brodsky, of 332 Pine street, San Francisco, who have still retained the California rights and all other rights. Mr. Brodsky is now booking to play in the principal cities of America and Canada.

International Branching Out.

San Francisco, Cal.—Fred Locher, of Los Angeles, spent several days at the local offices of the International Film Service recently, getting details preliminary to opening an office at Seattle, Wash. The branch to be opened shortly will be the eleventh in the United States and will serve Washington, Oregon, Montana and Northern Idaho. Agencies will be established at Portland, Spokane and Butte. L. M. Hyslop, formerly shipper at the local office, will be booker at the new branch, the place made vacant here being filled by Fred Blote, formerly with the Pathe Exchange.

Manager H. L. Knappen of the local branch states that the serial "Patria" has been booked for the Imperial theater, commencing December 1. This will be the first serial ever shown at this house, which has hitherto confined its bookings almost exclusively to the Paramount program. The San Francisco branch is making an enviable record in the volume of business being turned in, being third out of ten exchanges, almost all of which serve a much more populous territory, and Manager Knappen states that in his opinion effective publicity is what is turning the trick.

Marion H. Kohn Back.

San Francisco, Cal.—After a stay of several weeks in New York, Marion H. Kohn, manager of the Consolidated corporation, has returned with a number of feature productions. He has already succeeded in booking "The Ordeal" over the entire Hippodrome circuit in California and the Northwest. Plans are being made to open a new branch at 818 South Olive street, Los Angeles, within a short time, and other parts of the Coast will be given attention later. Morris Epstein is in charge of the local branch.

To Buy State Rights.

San Francisco, Cal.—Charles Klopot, formerly of Los Angeles, but who opened an exchange at 120 Golden Gate avenue a short time ago, now has this in good working order and is arranging for the purchase of California rights for a number of features. Mr. Klopot was one of the first to engage in the film business in the southern part of the state and has an enviable acquaintance among the trade.

Supply Business Good.

San Francisco, Cal.—The Breck company reports an excellent demand for machines and supplies, the shipping department having been very busy of late.

Denver Women Sponsor Morning Matinee

Nine Hundred Attend Nine O'Clock Picture Show With Program Specially Chosen for Women and Children.

By E. C. Day, Denver Times, Denver, Colorado.

DENVER'S first picture morning matinee was staged by Charles R. Gilmour, manager of the Pathe exchange, with the co-operation of Brown and Megahan, owners of the Rialto. It was held as a result of the agitation by clubwoman, mothers, teaches, and others for special programs that would be of interest to women and children.

"Shadows and Sunshine," a recent Pathe feature release, was the attraction, and Manager Gilmour sent out invitations to the Denver Womans' Club, the mothers' congress, and the parent teachers' association as bodies as well as to individual members of these and other woman's organizations. Close to 1,000 responded, and each was unstinted in her praise of the picture and the plan.

The leaders in the movement for special morning matinees cited the experiment as proof conclusive that it would be a whooping success for any exhibitor who took it up. They argue that if upwards of 900 women turn out at 9 o'clock in the morning, the attraction must be one that is associated with a matter that is very close to their hearts. They declare that the outpouring of women to the Pathe entertainment, indicates that the number that would attend the regular Saturday morning matinee would be three or four times as large with the children, and little brothers and sisters of these women also present.

Manager Marquard's Midnight Matinees.

Longmont, Colo.—C. E. Marquard, owner of the Isis theater at Longmount, put on a midnight matinee on Hallowe'en night. It "went over" so well that the innovation was repeated on election night with even greater success. Now its an institution that has come to stay in Longmont for special occasions.

Screen Club Goes on a Skate.

Denver, Colo.—Denver's moving picture men and their wives and sweethearts went on a big "Skate" last Friday night. It was not the first that some of the boys have been on, and decidedly it is not the last, but all voted it the best.

Denver being a prohibition state, it probably is not necessary to mention that the moving picture skate was not one of the ordinary kind conducted by John Barleycorn. The skate of ye olden days may have been alright in its place, but in its palmiest days it never had anything on the Rocky Mountain Screen Club skate, which was conducted by John R. Crabb, owner of the Broadway roller skating rink, last Friday.

The skate was the first of a series of winter stunts planned by the Screen Club for the entertainment of its mebers and their families and friends. Several hundred men, women, and children attended the event, and each had the time of his life.

In addition to roller skating, the guests danced and made merry in other ways, while professional entertainers supplied music and songs. Refreshments were served by the wives of the members of the club.

Important Theater Changes.

Denver, Colo.—Frank Frewen, former owner of the Rex and the 17th Avenue theaters, has taken over the Royal theater in South Denver.

Whitewood, Colo.—Coen and Weltz have opened a new theater at Whitewood South Dakota. It is called the Comet, and is said to be one of the prettiest in the district.

Torrington, Wyo.—J. C. McDonald has opened a new theater at Torrington, Wyo. The show house has accommodations for 500 people, and will be known as the Lyric.

C. E. Carpenter Joins Pathe.

C. E. Carpenter has been added to the list of road men working out of the Denver office of Pathe. He has been engaged in commercial lines for several years in this territory.

State Rights Pictures Are Many

Oregon Theaters Being Worked with Independent Features—State Rights Men Travel and Play on Percentage Basis—Too Many Percentage Shows Hurt Business, Say the Established Exchanges.

By Abraham Nelson, Journal Building, Portland, Oregon.

PORTLAND, Ore.—This state and the entire Pacific Northwest is playing more independent features than ever before. Companies of "Civilization," "Ramona," "The Birth of a Nation," "Purity," and others are playing in Oregon's theaters sometimes on percentage of fifty-fifty or forty-sixty.

While the established exchanges admit that the state rights pictures are a small competition, they are not worrying about those shows that play percentage. They claim that the percentage craze will soon be overdone and that the exhibitors will realize that it does not pay in the long run to play pictures on that basis unless they are sure the product is a real superfeature.

Dopesters claim the percentage-playing hurts the exhibitor in this way: It is somewhat of a gambling proposition, and the exhibitors nearly always raise their prices to 25 cents for percentage playing pictures. The present inflow of percentage-playing pictures has caused a constant rise and fall in the admission price, which, some theater men claim, has dissatisfied many patrons who are reluctant to pay the increase. The business is hurt as a consequence.

Very few of Portland's theaters play shows on percentage. It is the out of town houses that "fall," so to speak. A picture man from the interior of the state visiting Portland recently told of the condition. He said the fault lay with the exhibitors who would rather take a chance on a percentage than pay a flat rate.

Also said a well known valley exhibitor on the subject: "I am always in the market for state rights features just as I am in the market for features handled by established exchanges, but I always pay a flat rental and never play percentage. I know my patronage well enough to realize how much I can pay for a film. I do not raise my admission price unless the feature is extraordinary and that is not a half a dozen times a year. That is fair to my patrons who know my house to give a staple show at a staple price. I tell the man who owns a film the price I can afford to pay, and he can take it or leave it. I make the playing of a picture a straight business proposition and not a gamble, and I find that system gets me the most money in the long run."

Chapter of Serial Condemned.

Portland, Ore.—Chapter seven of "The Crimson Stain" was condemned by a viewer of the Portland censor board, Monday morning, Oct. 30. The picture was to go on at Pantages theater that afternoon. The censor board's official record showed the condemnation to have been made by a viewer and that no appeal was taken to the censor board of seven members.

The official record failed to disclose the reason for the condemnation, but it is said that the showing of snakes in some of the scenes was objectionable to the viewer and caused the rejection. Pantages theater had shown the six preceeding episodes as a prelude to its regular vaudeville shows.

One City Council Is Fair.

Washougal, Wash.—Differing from the usual run of city councils in small towns, the commissioners here have "shot square" with the picture showman in the Sunday amusement issue. The overly zealous reformers first tried to close the picture show on Sunday nights. They failed to accomplish this so they went as far as to book acts in the churches to compete with the show. A negro act was one of the amusements booked. The admission charged was 35 cents, and they did business.

Now the city theater license is $25 a year, which the churches did not pay. The council demanded this fee of them as well as of the picture show, and now the churches have laid off on theatricals and gone back to pie socials and suppers. J. S. Short owns the theater here. (One sometimes wonders how far some business-like churches will fall.)

Popularity of Single Reels Forecasted.

Portland, Ore.—The owner of one of Portland's foremost theaters invited the writer to sit with him to view a recent single reel release. When the viewing was over, the exhibitor said, "There's a lot to that little one-reeler." Although the picture was a drama, he said there was as much difference between it and the usual five-reel subject as between a five-reeler and a comedy. It was just one reel of straight action without close-ups, fades or padding, and it was as refreshing as a comedy. The exhibitor booked the picture.

This was the first local indication that the one reel drama is coming back to its own that has come to the attention of the writer.

Congratulations, Whitey.

Portland, Ore.—C. P. Merwin, representative in Oregon territory for Greater Vitagraph, has the greatest feature in the world. "Whitey" admits it and no one dares deny. He recently became the father of a ten pound baby girl. He has named her Virginia Ruth, has mapped out a career for her as a moving picture star, and this is her first press notice.

Mr. Merwin reports a successful business getting trip through Eastern and Central Oregon, and states that the show business in that territory is looking up.

Pathe Prepares for Fall Business.

Portland, Ore.—Things are lively around the local Pathe exchange these days. Manager B. J. Sperry is busy exploiting the new standard Gold Rooster features, and is getting ready for the new serial, "Pearl of the Army." "The Shine Girl" opened recently at the Hippodrome.

This Tale Is True.

Portland, Ore.—Across the street from the Pickford theater is one of the city's largest jewelry stores. The Pickford has been remodeled, putting in a new ventilating system and doing a lot of painting. The outside of the building was to have been painted a bright orange. The first coat was applied and the jeweler across the street complained that the bright orange color reflected to the diamonds in the show windows, killing the luster, and was altogether harmful to the business. So the Pickford changed its color to a pleasing blue.

The Pickford is offering a cash prize for a new name since the Artcraft releases of the little star are to play in another theater, and hundreds of suggestions have been received.

A Baby Contest.

Portland, Ore.—The People's theater is conducting a baby contest as a part of its exploitation of "Where Are My Children?" to show Nov. 12. The contest is being conducted in conjunction with the Evening Telegram, and $50 in prizes are up.

Close to Pick Apples.

Portland, Ore.—Word has come from Hood river and The Dalles that help has been scarce at the famous orchards to harvest the apple crop, and that the theater managers and operators of the two towns have joined the other business men in working on the crop to get it picked on time. The theaters have consequently been closed during the daytime.

C. A. Dakin, of the Gem theater, Hood river, put in all his time for several weeks superintending the packing and shipping of apples, leaving Mrs. Dakin to manage the theater, which she did ably.

Davenport, Ia., Ad Club and Lurid Posters

Sensational and Glaring Posters Discussed at a Recent Meeting—The Matter Turned Over to a Vigilance Committee.

By Frank H. Madison, 623 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago.

DAVENPORT, Ia.—An attack upon the sensational moving picture poster has been made from a new quarter. The Davenport Advertising Club believes that regulations of this sort of publicity is within its province. More than that, the club has interested itself in the indecent motion picture. At a recent meeting of the advertising organization, the subject of sensational pictures and glaring posters were discussed at length. The matter was turned over to the vigilance committee with power to act. Every well organized advertising club in America has a vigilance committee, which works to prevent all untruthful and injurious classes of publicity.

The Davenport committee also has been given instructions to co-operate with the officers of the Davenport Women's club and other local organizations that have openly protested against the sensational manner in which motion pictures purporting to be something of questionable taste have been exploited.

Saturday Matinees in Des Moines.

Des Moines, Ia.—The regular output of some of the well known companies has been drawn upon by the City Union of Mothers' Clubs in arranging its Saturday morning program for children at the Garden theater beginning November 11. A commendable plan is that of alternating single reel programs with entertainments made up of multiple reel subjects. Each of these variety programs is to contain a Burton Holmes travelog, a Paramount-Bray cartoon, and a subject from the General Film program.

New Film Company in Sioux City.

Sioux City, Ia.—The Globe Film Corporation has filed articles of incorporation in the county recorder's office. The firm will do a general film business. The officers are J. C. Duncan, president; M. W. Duncan, vice-president, and E. A. Burgess, secretary.

Benefit Shows for Worthy Objects.

Lone Tree, Ia.—"The Spoilers" was shown at Fisher's opera house for the benefit of the high school athletic association.

Cedar Falls, Ia.—The playground association did not meet the expenses this summer, and Manager Erickson of the Empress theater secured "Silks and Satins," with Marguerite Clark, for a benefit performance.

Theater Notes of Interest.

Strawberry Point, Ia.—A. A. Begohn, new proprietor of the Lyric, closed that house for ten days for remodeling and redecorating, and the installation of a new ventilating system and a new screen.

Davenport, Ia.—Morton Eastman, formerly connected with the Orpheum theater in Grand Rapids, Mich., and the Grand theater in Lebanon, Ind., has taken over the management of the Strand theater at Fourth and Brady streets.

Early, Ia.—Contract for the erection of an opera house here has been awarded to W. J. Gordon of Sac City, Ia.

IN BRITISH COLUMBIA.

Kelowna Opera House Burns.

Kelowna, B. C.—A disastrous fire which broke out shortly before daylight here destroyed many buildings, including the Kelowna opera house. Mrs. Raymer, the owner and family had a narrow escape, being forced to flee over adjoining roofs. The loss on the theater, which includes much scenery and moving picture equipment, was quite heavy.

"The Common Law" Does Well.

Winnipeg, Man.—The first pre-release showing in Canada of the Selznick production of "The Common Law," with Clara Kimball Young, which is being distributed by the Monarch Film Co., Ltd., a subsidiary of the Famous Players service, took place recently at the Dominion theater, where the film ran for an entire week. Instead of the customary four shows a day, with an intermission during the dinner hour, the Dominion ran the picture continuously.

Manager Hazza's Patriotic Benefit.

Edmonton, Alberta.—During the whole of a recent week the ladies of the local chapter of Daughters of the Empire were in nominal charge of the Empress theater, Manager John Hazza having entered into an arrangement whereby the order was to be given a percentage of the week's receipts, for patriotic purposes. The members canvassed the city thoroughly, and sold a large number of tickets. Special musical numbers were played at each performance by the Empress orchestra, under Earle C. Hill.

Standard Gets "Crimson Stain."

Winnipeg, Man.—The Standard Film Service has secured "The Crimson Stain Mystery" for Canada.

Unfair Competition by Churches

Provincial Treasurer Brown, of Winnipeg, and Local Moving Picture Men Discuss the Free License Churches Have of Putting on Big Professional Shows—If Necessary the Amusement Act May Be Amended.

By E. C. Thomas, 821 Rogers Bldg., Vancouver, B. C.

WINNIPEG, Man.—A question which was taken up at the recent conference between Hon. Edward Brown, provincial treasurer, and the moving picture men of the city was the matter of shows which have been put on by some of the local churches. Big professional performances had been staged, said the exhibitors, and the fact that these institutions paid no license made the competition manifestly unfair.

Mr. Brown stated that the spirit of the new Public Amusement Act did not countenance competition of this kind from the churches, and promised to have the matter investigated. He indicated that if it is considered necessary the Act might be amended so as to make a continuance of present conditions impossible. He thought, however, that the churches were acting under a misapprehension, and that when their attention was called to the matter the exhibitors would have no further cause for complaint.

Standard Film Service Rumors.

Vancouver, B. C.—Herbert Lubin of the Standard Film Service, Ltd., the Canadian Metro distributors, has returned after a flying trip to Calgary and Winnipeg. In the latter city he met A. H. Sawyer, general manager of the Standard, who had come to Winnipeg from the East for the conference.

There are mysterious rumors of big doings in the Metro camp, and from what has been accomplished within the past few months, almost anything is liable to happen. When seen by the World representative, Mr. Lubin was reticent as to the details of the meeting, but indicated that the Standard would make an important announcement in the near future. A few days after arriving in Vancouver from the Winnipeg conference Mr. Lubin received an urgent telegram from M. J. Williamson, of the Imperial, National and Osbourne theaters, who has just contracted for exclusive Metro service at these houses, asking Mr. Lubin to come East and take charge of a publicity campaign. Mr. Lubin accordingly left at once. "In keeping with our policy of helping the exhibitor," he said, "one of our main ideas has been 'Pictures Plus Publicity,' and that idea is a proven success."

In furtherance of plans which are being developed, Sam W. Whitehead, who was slated as manager of the Metro office in Vancouver, has been shifted to San Francisco, and is expected to return to Montreal about the first of the year.

A. E. Smith, who came from the Montreal office to take charge of the booking department in Vancouver, has been promoted to the position of manager here, and now has everything running smoothly. Mr. Smith is a live film man who acts like a handy person to have around the place, and should make an efficient head of the local office.

"Somme" Picture Honored in Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, Man.—A private showing of the British official film, "The Battle of the Somme," was given following the regular performance at the Dominion theater on a recent evening, and a large number of people prominently connected with war relief work and with the government were present. Hon. Edward Brown, who as provincial treasurer is the highest censorship authority in Manitoba, was present with a large party, and all were intensely interested in the picture.

Mr. Brown agreed with Lloyd George's decision that the film should go to the world without any alteration or deletion. An incident of the private showing was a break in the film at a critical moment, which prevented a few feet of the picture being shown. Mr. Brown afterward inquired if this happened by accident or design, and expressed the desire of all present, including the ladies of his party, that everything be shown. Any attempt to edit this film, he said, would be sacrilegious.

The picture has been booked by the Dominion for a full week, and will be shown from 11 a. m. to 11 p. m. every day. Prices will be 15, 25, 35, and 50 cents.

Local Manager Pays Small Fine.

Winnipeg, Man.—The local office of the Universal ran afoul of the censors recently, through the renting of an uncensored film to the Monarch theater. The picture was "The Code of His Ancestors." Although there was some talk of prosecuting the Monarch management, Chief Inspector Garland decided that the entire blame rested with the exchange, and the local manager was accordingly ordered to pay a small fine.

"The New Governor's" Big Week.

Vancouver, B. C.—"The New Governor," the Fox corporation's film version of "The Niggar," was rejected when submitted to the British Columbia censors recently by Manager E. R. Fauser, of the Dominion Exclusives, Limited, Western Canadian distributors of the Fox program. Mr. Fauser, however, deleted about six hundred feet of matter which had displeased the censoring board, and resubmitted the picture, which was then passed. Manager Hector Quagliotti, of the Colonial theater, kept the film for a full week, and did very heavy business.

Spokane Women Want to Help Censor Shows

Commissioner McBrown Chilly Toward Request of Local Women to Have Part in Censorship—Says There Is None in Spokane.

By S. Clark Patchin, E 1811 Eleventh Ave., Spokane, Wash.

SPOKANE, Wash.—That the censorship committee of the Spokane Federation of Women's Organizations expects to take a hand in the regulations of entertainment offered by Spokane theaters was indicated in its report at the last meeting of the federation.

A letter suggesting that the women be permitted to help in maintaining a high moral standard in the performance given here was drafted and is to be sent to the various theater managers at once. Permission to send this letter was extended to the committee by a vote of the federation this afternoon.

The effort of the committee to be recognized as a censoring agent by Commissioner McBroom met with opposition when the women took the matter up with him. He took the stand that there is no censor in Spokane, but that any individual may take the initiative in reporting offensive theatrical entertainment and invoke the ordinance governing improper stage or film programs.

Films to Show Washington Scenes.

Spokane, Wash.—Recently the Pathe Freres and the National Highways Association have advised Frank W. Gilbert, of Spokane, secretary of the National Parks Highway Association, of extensive plans for providing thousands of feet of films to be shown throughout the country. The Pathe organization has already started its work.

Stilwell Theaters Pay Dividend.

The Stilwell Theaters Company, which controls the Class A, Casino, and Rex theaters, Spokane, Wash., have been operating for one month, and have paid 3 per cent. dividend on the outstanding stock.

C. E. Stilwell and B. W. Copeland are elated over the success of the venture.

The reserved seat sale for the election night performance at the Liberty theater was heavy. An elaborate program was worked out for the occasion, and holders of reserved seats were privileged to come and go as they liked between 6:30 p. m. and 2 a. m. or later, according to the volume of the returns and the desire of the holders to hear them.

Spokane Picture Hits.

The first Fox film that has been seen in Spokane for several months was shown at the Class A theater, when June Caprice appeared in "The Ragged Princess."

"The Rainbow Princess," with Ann Pennington in the title role, proved a great success for the Clemmer.

A Metro film featuring William Nigh and Irene Howley in "Life's Shadows," was shown at the Casino.

Jack Pickford and Fritzi Brunette appeared in "The Conflict" at the Lyric.

"The Yellow Menace" film serial has started at the Best theater. It will be shown Friday and Saturday of each week.

Stories of the Films

General Film Company

KALEM.

THE MERRY MOTOR MENDERS (Oct. 31).—The cast: Ham (Lloyd V. Hamilton); Bud (Bud Duncan); Count De Nutte (Henry Murdoch); His bride (Ethel Teare).

Ham and Bud are seen as the proprietors of a wayside garage. Business is slow in coming so they use all sorts of expedients from tacks to dynamite to force Opportunity to knock. The knock doesn't come but the phone bell rings and the Count De Nutte and his bride enter the action in their broken down car. Ham arouses the jealousy of the Count by his attentions to the bride with results that bring on a whirlwind finish.

THE SON OF CAIN (No. 13 of "The Girl from 'Frisco"—Two Parts—Nov. 1). The cast: Barbara Brent (Marin Sais); John Wallace (True Boardman); Ace Brent (Frank Jonasson); "The Son of Cain" (Ronald Bradbury); The hermit (Edward Clisbee); The Sheriff (Hart Hoxie). Directed by James W. Horne.

Barbara and John Wallace set out to solve the mystery surrounding the killing of the old hermit bee keeper. They discover that the hermit was possessed of large amounts of gold coin which he secreted by placing them in the center of moulds of beeswax. They notice that slight traces of the wax remain on the edges of the coins even after much polishing, and warn the merchants of the frontier town to watch for a man spending gold coin with the tell-tale wax on it.

That afternoon Wallace finds "the son of Cain" at the local saloon, but in the bitter fight that follows the guilty man escapes to the stagecoach outside, and sets out in flight. Barbara pursues on horseback and a gruelling chase is on. The stage coach plunges over a terrifying precipice, but the fugitive leaps to safety in the nick of time. Reaching the railroad tracks he captures a train, but Barbara by a daring leap from horseback gets aboard the last coach.

With the train tearing along at great speed there is a stirring revolver duel between the guilty man and Barbara, atop the train. Coming to a drawbridge the fugitive leaps to the water, with Barbara closely following. Before he can continue his flight after reaching land Barbara has the murderer covered with her revolver and he is soon brought to justice.

THE PENCIL CLUE (No. 3 of "Grant, Police Reporter"—Nov. 3).—The cast; Tommy Grant, of The Chronicle (George Larkin); Myrtle, the stenographer (Ollie Kirkby); John Goss (Robert Ellis); Mansfield, city editor (William McKey); Police Commissioner Brophy (G. Chira); Detective Cadogan (Arthur Albertson). Directed by Robert Ellis.

Lawyer White, of the firm of White & Goss, is the victim of a fiendish plan, dying as the result of a pencil so powerfully poisoned that when he moistened it in the course of his writing the effect was instantaneous. The mystery of his death is a baffling one, but Tommy Grant, with the aid of Myrtle, the stenographer in Lawyer Goss' office, succeeds in solving it and placing the blame on the shoulders of Goss.

The latter suspects Myrtle and attacks her just as Grant and Detective Cadogan arrive to arrest him. Goss gains the upper hand and succeeds in escaping down the stairs, locking the door of his office on his pursuers. Grant rushes to the window just in time to see Goss leaping into the auto that Cadogan and Grant had arrived in. Without hesitating Grant leaps to the window ledge and through the air landing in the auto as it whizzes by. There is a struggle between the two in the car, Grant finally emerging victorious.

THE GATE OF DEATH (No. 104 of the "Hazards of Helen"—Nov 4).—The cast: The operator at Lone Point (Helen Gibson); Paymaster Benton (P. S. Pembroke); Superintendent Purdy (G. A. Williams); The crook (George Routh).

Helen succeeds in frustrating an attempt to rob the construction camp paymaster, and escapes with the money-bag, the crooks in close pursuit. Apparently all is lost when Helen comes to the edge of the precipice, but a huge four hundred foot chute that has been built as a delivery short cut down the mountain side to the railroad tracks offers a hazardous chance.

Leaping on the little truck Helen starts the perilous slide down the chute just as her pursuers overtake her. Half way down the slide she is startled by the sight of the express speeding along the tracks below—and certain death under the wheels of the train stares at her. But she clings to the truck, and as the bottom of the slide is reached hurls herself into the air, barely clearing the top of the freight train, and landing in a huddled heap on the far bank.

A DESPERATE DUEL (Nov. 7).—The cast: Ham (Lloyd V. Hamilton); Bud (Bud Duncan); Flossie (Ethel Teare).

Ham and Bud are jealous rivals for the hand of Flossie and are having their own time squabbling when a foreign element is introduced by the arrival of a Count on whom the fair Flossie looks with favor. One encounter after another leads to a duel between Ham and the Count that is a scream. Ham wins, but the fickle Flossie bestows her sympathy on the wounded Count. A broken heart sends Ham to the hospital for a whirlwind finish.

THE WITCH OF THE DARK HOUSE (No. 14 of "The Girl from 'Frisco"—Two Parts—Nov. 8).—The cast: Barbara Brent (Marin Sais); John Wallace (True Boardman); Ace Brent (Frank Jonasson); Joyce (Donald Bradbury); Boyle (Hart Hoxie); Simpson, a rancher (Edward Clisbee). Directed by James W. Horne.

Joyce is leader of a band of counterfeiters who are working in the cellar of a shack on the mountain-side. "The Witch of the Dark House" is apparently the only occupant of the house, which the dwellers of the mountain declare is haunted. Boyle, a Secret Service operative, comes upon the gang, but in the battle that follows is severely wounded before he makes his escape. He is found unconscious and taken to the home of Simpson, a rancher.

There Barbara's curiosity is aroused over the identity of the wounded stranger and his mission in the mountains. She starts an investigation of her own that brings on a stirring train of events when she finds herself in the hands of the counterfeiters and menaced by the dread "Witch of the Dark House." It is only after a thrilling series of scenes that Wallace is successful in effecting her rescue, and Joyce and his gang are brought to justice.

THE MAN FROM YUKON (No. 4 of "Grant, Police Reporter"—Nov. 10).—The cast: Tommy Grant, of The Chronicle (George Larkin); Helen, "The Mouse" (Ollie Kirkby); Porcupine Peterson (William McKey); Paper-Collar Joe (Robert Ellis). Directed by Robert Ellis.

Porcupine Peterson, of Dawson, Alaska, is in New York with a surplus of green-backs and anxious to "do the town." He falls into the clutches of Helen, "The Mouse," and her wire-tapping gang and refuses to heed the warnings of Tommy Grant, who had previously earned his friendship.

Tommy enlists the aid of his friend Detective Cadogan, and they set about the capture of the wire-tappers. Their plans are successful, but in the closing scenes it becomes necessary for Grant to slide down a painter's rope from a seventh story window to the ground in order to intercept the fleeing conspirators.

THE LONE POINT MYSTERY (No. 105 of "The Hazards of Helen" Nov. 11).—The cast: Operator at Lone Point (Helen Gibson); Arnold (George Routh); Dick Benton (P. S. Pembroke); The railroad president (G. A. Williams).

Arnold schemes to defraud the insurance company by disappearing under circumstances that point to his death. He hides in a shack near Lone Point while awaiting the collection of his $100,000 policy by his brother. By shrewd deductions Helen succeeds in learning his identity and frustrating his plot. She prevents his escape finally by a daring leap from the pilot of a speeding engine to his auto when a turn in the road forces the fleeing man to cross the tracks directly in front of the locomotive.

THE SHERIFF'S BLUNDER (Two parts—Nov. 20).—The cast: Hal Whitcomb and Steve Whitcomb (Tom Mix); Mary Turner (Victoria Forde); Sheriff Randall (Sid Jordan). Written and produced by Tom Mix.

Hal Whitcomb, a new bank messenger, is given a large sum of money for delivery, by way of the stage coach route. As the stage goes alone, Whitcomb discovers the Mexican bandits on the trail of the money. He induces the stage driver to give him the money, and he escapes on horseback, while the stage is overtaken and the driver held up by the Mexicans.

The driver reaches the town with the news of the hold-up, and is surprised that Hal has not yet appeared with the bank funds, which he was to save. Later, Hal, under suspicion of stealing this money, is captured by the sheriff and posse. Just as he is about to be summarily executed, Hal Whitcomb is allowed to tell a story.

He tells of a twin brother, named Steve, and that it was Steve who really took the money. He says that he, when captured, was on his way back home in another country, in response to a letter from his sweetheart, who is dying.

The sheriff's heart is touched; he believes the man's story and releases him. When the sheriff arrives at his office he finds a letter from officers in an adjoining county, telling the sheriff to beware of one Hal Whitcomb, a notorious cattle rustler and outlaw, who tells a plausible story of a dying sweetheart and a twin brother. Then it is that the sheriff realizes that he has been deceived.

HEDGE OF HEART'S DESIRE (Nov. 25).—The cast: Betty Chester (Virginia Kirtley); Mrs. Chester (Eugenie Forde); Arthur (E. J. Brady); Peggy McCann (Lillian Hamilton); Denny (Robyn Adair). Written by Marc E. Jones. Produced by Burton L. King.

Arthur, a ne'er-do-well, receives a letter from his father stating that no more funds will be sent to the son who has disgraced the family name. Arthur reads in a paper of Betty Chester's entrance into society. He tells the saloon keeper that he once knew the Chesters in the old days, and that if he had sufficient money he could win the girl. The saloon keeper furnishes the funds and Arthur sues for Betty's hand.

A hedge separates the Chesters' home from the home of Peggy McCann, who has a sweetheart named Denny. Betty appreciates the sincere love the two have for each other, for she questions the sincerity of her own suitor.

One day in a brawl Arthur kills a man and endeavors to fasten the blame upon Denny. He also, in the struggle that ensues, accidentally shoots and seriously wounds Peggy McCann. Betty then discovers the true caliber of the man who seeks to wed her; she leads a search for him and is instrumental in bringing retribution.

BIOGRAPH.

FISH (Reissue—Nov. 20).—After laboring for a couple of hours digging a "mess" of worms for the afternoon fishing trip, Bert Williams returns home for his fishing-pole only to find there is a big load of wood to be cut. Why should he cut wood when old "Pappy" and the younger brothers are there to do it. So while they are all working and "Mammy" is busy with the wash, Bert sneaks off with his pole and worms down to the fishing-hole.

Scarcely has he "charmed" a worm and baited the hook when he pulls up a "ten-pounder" and thinking it is a good day's catch starts home. As he goes along, he sees a house on top of a big hill and starts toward it with the hope of selling the fish for the Sunday dinner. The proprietor tells Bert he does not want his fish and after a long argument sends the dog after him. It does not take William long to go down the hill. When he reaches the bottom he looks up for a last look and sees the man of the house calling him back. Hopes now run high in his chest for selling the fish—but after laboriously climbing the hill again, the proprietor tells him that he does not want any fish next Sunday either. In the meantime Bert's mother has missed him, and traces him to the house. She leads him home and to the wood-pile.

OIL AND WATER (Reissue—Two Parts—Nov. 21).—The cast: Mlle Genova (Blanche Sweet); the idealist (Henry Walthall); his friend (Lionel Barrymore); the idealist's brother (Walter Miller).

His friends had always called him "the idealist." He was occupied in writing a set of books on the arts and sciences of history. His brother had taken up the ministry. There was a new sensation for the public in the city. Mlle. Genova had been engaged by the management of the Olympic theater in a series of classical dances in which she had made great success in European cities. The idealist went with his friends to see the act. It was a dance of much meaning to him and seemed to follow exactly his own interpretation of life.

It was called "The Dance of the Fleeting Hours" and was laid in Greece in its youth. Mlle. Genova as Venus, the goddess of love, symbolized all that life and love had meant to him. Then came Jupiter, the God of Earth, holding aloft the Roses of Happiness. The mortals bound their allegiance to him, but unobserved by them the sands of time ran on; but mortals are mortals the world over, and on they danced for the impossible, while Time, the silent reaper, shadows their excesses. Then old age creeps upon them and the reaper reaps his fruitful harvest of death and ashes. This conception was the young idealist's own idea of life and he could not help but feel that the actress playing the leading part must be in full sympathy with her interpretation.

After the performance when he was introduced to this lady at the cafe, he proceeded to tell her of his feelings and a proposal followed. She was taken to his quiet home as his wife.

Some years later the fact of mixing oil and water was learned. The actress, repressed by her surroundings, began to feel the need of her old excitement. The goddess was no longer present in the actress lady. She became the actress lady in everything she did. At last she began to revive her old associates and they excited her old desires by telling her of the latest dance. She indulges in a few stray cigarettes and wine with them. The husband entering at this time, sees that he can no longer hold her in the life that she has been living. His ideal of the goddess that had been was completely shattered. After the friends had gone, he told her such people could no longer come into his house. A quarrel ensued, in which the woman told him that she must go back to the life that was hers, but in justice to him she would surrender all claims to her child.

Shortly after this she departed with her maid. Once more she became the fickle public's favorite. She was no longer Venus, the Goddess of Love, but the leading lady in a comic opera, doing the latest song sensation. The goddess of the years before was forgotten. Her old friends and associations were revived completely and one night after the performance as they started out for their usual dinner at the cafe, the automobile failed to put in an appearance and they decided to walk.

In the meantime, at the home, her child's nurse had left the child in the care of her father. He, still the idealist, occupied with his writing, lost track of the child, and slipping from his embrace, she wandered out of the house into the night. Here she was found by the actress and her friends as she was on her way to the cafe. She brought the child home. While the father, alarmed at the child's departure, was seeking everywhere for her, he came upon the two in the drawing-room. Even now he was willing to take her back again and give her another chance to be goddess of his dreams and a fitting mother to his child, but her only answer was, "My ways are not your ways." Thus, oil and water each returned to its own element.

ESSANAY.

HIS MORAL CODE (Three Parts—Nov. 18).—The cast: Estelle Bland (Lillian Drew); George Ewing (E. H. Calvert); Dr. Armstrong (Edward Arnold).

Estelle Bland, a nurse, is engaged to Dr. Armstrong, an interne. George Ewing, a wealthy idler is injured and comes under Estelle's care. He falls in love with her. He pictures to Armstrong what he can do for the girl as against the struggle she must experience as a young physician's wife, and the doctor in his love for her, gives her up and leaves for the west. Thinking he has left her, the girl marries Ewing. Thinking he has left her, the proves himself unworthy and in revulsion, Estelle divorces him, returning to her old position at the hospital. Armstrong has established himself as a physician of standing in the west. On a visit he finds his former love, and takes her with him on his return.

UNTO THE LEAST OF THESE (Two Parts—Nov. 21).—The cast: Helen Brown (Mary V. McAlister); her mother (Frankie Raymond); her father (John Cossar).

Little Helen's father is at work on an invention which he expects to make him wealthy. He requires funds. The child befriends an old man, a miser, and on his deathbed he sends his accumulation of money to her. With the funds the father develops his invention and attains the wealth he expected. Then neglect by her parents, who have many social obligations, strikes woe into the heart of the child, who finds herself constantly under the guard of a governess, while all her little playmates of the days before the money come continue to enjoy themselves with their childish games. Her parents, as so many others, are unaware of the misery into which they have plunged their little girl by their neglect.

SOME BRAVERY (Nov. 22).—The cast: The brave bell-hop (Ben Turpin).

The bell-hop gets a job in an eccentric family hotel, where every guest seems to have a penchant for ice water. Amid numerous other experiences, he manages to saturate everyone with ice water. Then a fire breaks out and the bell-hop sees his chance to deliver his water in wholesale lots to the guests with a hose. Instead of winning their indignation, however, he is acclaimed a hero.

THE BORDER LINE (Three Parts—Nov. 25).—The cast: Jeanne Dolbert (Nell Craig); Dick Grant (Edward Arnold).

Jeanne Dolbert is a member of a group of blackmailers. Her accomplices pick out Dick Grant, a reckless son of a wealthy family, for their victim. The girl enters his home employed as a maid and the youth succumbs to her charms. She tricks him into a rendezvous and her accomplices, posing as detectives, give him the alternative of being arrested or marrying her, expecting him to offer a large bribe. To their surprise he marries her. This proves to the girl that his love is genuine and she resolves to give up the old life and be his wife.

VIM.

PIPE DREAMS (Nov. 16).—The cast: Maggie (Kate Price); Babe (Babe Hardy); Maid (Edna Reynolds); Butler (Joe Cohan).

Kate, the prize kitchen mechanic of the Goldrox home, has always envied the fair maids she has seen promenading the avenue, and resolves that, no matter what the cost be, she, herself, is some day going to enjoy the life of a society leader. Babe, the driver of one of the city's garbage carts, also has day dreams of the life he would like to lead.

In the park one day Kate, adorned in her best, encounters Babe, also attired in his Sunday best. The two entertain each other with stories of the thrills and bores of the lives they pretend to lead, greatly to the delight of the other. When the Goldrox are away for a day, Kate seizes the golden opportunity to indulge in the joys of living the life of the social grand dame of her dreams. With the help of the family servants she invited Babe to the house, where she proceeds to entertain him.

Babe is greatly impressed and the affair is progressing rapidly, but on the following morning, Babe, dressed in his overalls, drives up to the back of the house to empty the garbage cans. He meets Kate coming out of the kitchen with the scraps of the morning meal, and each learns of the deception of the other.

GOOD AND PROPER (Nov. 17).—The cast: Pokes (Robert Burns); Jabbs (Walter Stull).

Pokes and Jabbs two rich sport be com enamored of Mlle. Zee-Bra the dancing comedienne appearing at one of the local theaters, and invite her out to supper after the show. When Mlle. Zee-Bra appears at the stage entrance, the two sports are there with flowers and candy, but Jabbs with fiendish skill, double crosses his pal, and after getting in solid with the actress himself waves Pokes to pay for the taxi while he enters the cafe with the girl.

Pokes, however, disguises himself as the waiter, enters the private room where Jabbs and the Mlle. are dining, and proceeds to wreak vengeance upon his false friend. While Pokes and Jabbs are trying to arrange a plan whereby one of them can be eliminated, leaving the field open to the other, the husband of the actress appears at the cafe and demands an explanation. Mlle. tearfully begs her husband to spare the two cringing sports, but the husband is obdurate and refuses to show them mercy.

However, at length he consents to spare one of them but they themselves must decide who will be the unfortunate one. Pouring a vial (which all think contains poison) into the coffee, the husband orders Pokes and Jabbs to choose between the cups. Pokes loses, and, in a frenzy of fear, after drinking the fatal dose, implores Jabbs to save him from death. This Jabbs tries to do to the best of his ability, and the punching which Jabbs hands to Pokes according to his ideas of resuscitation makes Pokes regret that any such person as Mlle. Zee-Bra ever crossed his path.

MOTHER'S CHILD (Nov. 23).—The cast: Babe (Babe Hardy); his mother (Kate Price); Tom (Joe Cohan); Florence (Florence McLoughlin).

Babe, the pride of Cheestown and his mother's darling, arrives at Tidewater College at the opening of the school term. Babe's idea of a good time is a volume of the Iliad and a bag of peanuts. But after he has laid eyes on Florence, the prize peach of the Co-Eds, he deserts his book long enough to start a mild flirtation with her. This is directly in violation of the rules issued by the upper classmen to govern the conduct of the freshmen.

Babe pays no heed to the rules and thereby incurs the hostility of Tom, the Sophomore leader, who orders Babe to be subjected to the hardest of initiation and hazing stunts. However, after Babe has had a few rough stunts pulled off on him, his mother comes to visit her darling boy and, seeing the way he has been treated, decides to take a hand in the hazing game herself. Disguising herself, she lays in wait for the sophomores, and when they visit Babe's room for the purpose of hazing him, they receive the surprise of their lives.

MONEY MAID MEN (Nov. 24).—Both Pokes and Jabbs, clerks in Grabem's counting rooms, are in love with Ethel, the stenographer. Grabem, himself, becomes enamored of the pretty stenographer, much to the disgust of his two clerks, who realize the difference between their lowly wages and the great wealth of their employer. Jabbs determines that if it is money and ability to buy expensive gifts that prevents him from winning Ethel's love, then he will, in some manner, secure the necessary riches.

Late one night, while Ethel is out to dinner with Grabem, Pokes is working over his books in the counting room. Suddenly he is startled by a sound from the private office. Rushing inside he is confronted with a masked burglar, who, at the point of a gun, orders Pokes to help him open the vault. Against his will Pokes is forced to assist the crook, but once the vault is opened, Pokes pushes the burglar inside the vault and locks the door. Pokes calls for help and Grabem, Ethel and the watchman rush into the office. At first they think that Pokes is the crook, and are about to arrest him, when he begs them to listen to his explanations.

Telling Grabem to open the vault, Pokes drags the almost suffocated crook into the office where upon unmasking him the group is shocked to see that the masked burglar is Jabbs. Overjoyed at Pokes' honesty and bravery, Grabem thrusts a huge sum of money upon his bewildered clerk and Ethel not to be outdone in generosity, coyly tells Pokes that now she is willing to be his forever, but, after a few seconds of thought Pokes chooses which ah! that is the question.

VIM FEATURE COMEDY.

HIS WEDDING PROMISE (Nov. 15).—Harriet married Sidney only on the condition that he promised never to smoke. Sidney remains faithful to his pledge for many months. Harry's struggle to refrain from smoking is watched by his stenographer and clerk. A messenger boy smoking a cigarette delivers a telegram and Sidney orders him from the office before he is tempted to snatch the cigarette from him.

Dick, a friend of Sidney's and one-time model for their class, is invited to the house for dinner. He, however, is not the model he once was; he is now a real sporty traveling salesman for a cigarette company. Finally, Sidney solves the difficulty. He is still the perfect husband, but does not mean to allow Harriet to rule him in all things. He has rented a room where he spends an hour each day transacting his business and incidentally smoking to his heart's content, but his happiness is short-lived, for Jesse Walsh has traced him and tells the wife what he suspects. Here the real trouble begins but Sidney is not deprived of his cigarette. Harriet also is a little inclined to take a "puff" to satisfy her husband.

THE GOOD STENOGRAPHER (Nov. 22).—Mrs. Love is jealous of Mr. Love's stenographer and insists upon taking her place. Hubby does not like to refuse his wife's request and decides, after she is installed as his stenographer, to get rid of her some way, as the discharged stenographer is a great help to him in business. A friend of Love's schemes to help him. He telephones to Love's office and starts a flirtation with the stenographer (Love's wife). Wifey is indignant and tells Love of the incident upon his return. He informs her that he lost a good customer on account of her impertinence. She goes to explain to the customer, who tells her that he never phoned. She then realizes she was tricked and decides hubby shall pay the penalty. She quits the job when she is assured of a lot of pretty things.

KNICKERBOCKER STAR FEATURE.

TARGET OF DREAMS (Three Parts—Nov. 17).—The poet, a genius who would have been proclaimed a marvel had he lived in 1800, finds 1915 civilization cold and unappreciative. The publishers will not even look at his work. Behind in his room rent, the poet's landlady speaks her mind. "Scribbling verses won't feed you or pay rent," she declares. "Go out and get work." Knowing that he must live and despairing of recognition as a "scribbler of verse," the poet becomes a book agent. One hour is sufficient to demonstrate to his gentle, kindly nature that a book agent is not a welcome visitor. Discouraged the poet throws his prospectus away and gets a job as a laborer on an excavation work. One of the laborers is hurt. The poet helps carry the injured man to his poverty-stricken home.

Pay day comes. With his salary in his pocket the poet's first act is to visit the injured man's shack. Finding hunger and misery there, the poet gives his week's wages to the laborer's wife. When the poet returns to his room and has no money to pay his rent, the landlady turns him out, keeping his small possessions as security. He manages, however, to rescue the manuscript of his epic drama "Helen of Troy." That night he sleeps in the park. Next day he loses his job because he became lost in his manuscript when he should have been at work.

Sitting on a park bench, the poet makes friends with Helen Hayes, little daughter of John Hayes, a publisher. Helen's nurse was busy flirting with the park policeman and the little girl wandered away. The poet shows Helen the title of his drama, "Helen of Troy," and the child remembers it because that is her name. The nurse drags Helen away from the seedy-looking poet. Later, the poet is arrested by the park policeman on a charge of vagrancy. While talking to Helen the poet had left his precious manuscript on the park bench. He is agonized when he discovers his loss at the station house. "Ten days on the chain gang," says the magistrate.

Jean Dow, attractive Vassar College graduate, who is visiting Helen's mother, finds the manuscript on the park bench and becomes enthused over the worth of the drama. The author's name, however, is not on the script. Jean makes Hayes read the drama, and he, too, becomes enthused. Helen sees the script in her father's hand. "Why that belongs to the poor man," says Helen.

A week passes. Hayes has advertised in vain for the author of the drama. Then Helen sees and recognizes the poet in a chain gang working on the streets. Jean tries her influence with the magistrate and the poet is released. At Hayes' office the poet is treated to a surprise. "We don't usually fool with verse," says Hayes, "but this is so good that we will publish it." The poet tries to thank the publisher, but the latter turns to Jean and says, "Thank her, she is responsible for your good luck." In the course of time the poet, now prosperous, does thank Jean to such good purpose that she becomes Mrs. Poet.

TWIN SOULS (Three Parts—Nov. 24). The cast: Woodford Harding, Bad Lonie and Abdul Hamil (R. Henry Grey); Athalie Manners (Lillian West); Mrs. Manners (Mollie McConnell); Horace Naddison (Chas. Dudley).

Athalie Manners believes in reincarnation and Twin Souls. Woodford Harding, the Beau Brummel of the town, Bad Lonie, a gunman, and Abdul Hamil all look identically alike. She runs into Bad Lonie while doing settlement work and is carried, a prisoner, to a vacant house. Later, Harding rescues her from a fire in the house. Inasmuch as she has recognized Bad Lonie's type as the Twin Soul, she is quite confused but later marries Harding.

Later, in Cairo, she meets Abdul Hamid and is convinced he is the man. She runs away with him, but when she regrets the act and tries to return to her husband, he forcibly abducts her. Later she escapes. Of course there is the fight between Hamid and her husband and she returns to Harding quite cured.

A JANITOR'S VENDETTA (Nov. 25).—The cast: Bill (William Franey); Gale (Gale Henry); Lilly (Lillian Peacock); Wop (Charles Conklin); Guy (Milburn Moranti). Written by Harry Wulz. Produced by W. W. Beaudine.

Bill hires a pretty stenographer, but Mrs. Bill comes in and finds that the "steno" is not doing just what she is paid for. She demands that the poor girl be fired and a man hired. But Lilly plans to get even and dresses up as a man to get the job. Then in her male attire she carries on a flirtation with Gale until Bill gets jealous. But when he finds that the young man is none other than his old stenographer he decides to elope. But Gale is on the lookout and follows on a wheel. She catches up to the auto that is carrying the lovers away and when Lilly sees her she jumps out. Then Bill gets a glimpse and he is so perturbed that he wrecks the car.

UNIVERSAL SCREEN MAGAZINE (No. 1—Nov. 24).—The first "article" in the first issue of the Universal Screen Magazine shows a new machine for tunneling through solid rock without any kind of a blast. The contrivance consists of a surface of hammers that deliver 14,000 seven-ton blows per minute at the rock and so eats it away.

Next the campaign the government is conducting against the ticks that each year kill $15,000,000 worth of cattle. The cattle are given baths in an antiseptic solution.

Beauty hints are next on the bill of fare. In this case they ought to be valuable as they are posed for by one of the beauties of the stage, Catherine Calvert. The proper way to use cold cream, powder, etc., are all shown.

Next some wonderful views of a beetle that is causing great damage in the vineyards of the country are shown. This is the bug that is eating up the grape crop every year. And then something entirely new is shown—animated sculpture, which closes the picture.

HOW DO YOU FEEL? (Nov. 20).—The cast: Eddie (Eddie Lyons); Lee (Lee Moran); Dr. Dopum (Fred Gamble); Miss Dean (Priscilla Dean). Scenario by Walter Newman. Produced by L. Chaudet.

Eddie imagines that he is ill, so he consults Dr. Dopum, the same time Boggs, who is really ill, does so. The physician promises to mail them the result of the consultation, but Eddie receives the one meant for Boggs, and Boggs the one meant for Eddie.

Eddie is surprised to learn that he only has six more days to live and bemoans the fact he has no funds with which to have a last gay time. He drops the note, which is picked up by Lee whose business it is to procure cadavers for a nearby medical college. He persuades Eddie to sell him his body and pays him in advance. Meantime Boggs, elated to find that there is nothing wrong with him, endeavors to follow the doctor's advice and get married.

At the beach Lee follows Eddie about, ever reminding him of the six days. Eddie rescues Miss Dean from the unwelcome attentions of Boggs and they fall in love. It happens that Dr. Dopum also visits the beach, and so Eddie discovers the error. But his nemesis—the funereal Lee—is not to be put off and demands the body, dead or alive. But he is persuaded to pursue instead the unhappy Boggs, leaving Eddie and Miss Dean to their happiness.

MARRIED A YEAR (Nov. 24).—The cast: The husband (Ed Sedgwick); the wife (Betty Schade). Written by Calder Johnstone. Produced by John McDermott.

They have been married a year and one night the hubby had to stay at the office. On the way home he reads an article in the paper that tells of the evils of the modern wife, and the wife at home reads of the evils of the modern husband. Each dreams of what the other is doing in the time that the one is supposed to be at the office and the other is supposed to be at home. The dreams are so terrible that when the two of them awake they make resolutions to trust each other and a second honeymoon begins.

WHERE IS MY WIFE? (Two Parts—Nov. 22).—Billie is the proprietor of a hotel, but his wife is the one who does most of the proprieting. Billie is a modest little fellow and is well content to do the entertaining of the house. He is active about the place, showing every one how to perform their jobs but he really shines at serving the ladies.

One of these delicate creations arrives and Billie is all attention. But his wife says "No," and the ambitious lad is forced to sojurn under the desk. There he finds a way to get in a word or two by poking his head out from the bottom. He makes a little rendezvous with the lady without his wife learning of it. Then when the lady rings for soap he writes his love on the bar and covers it so that the sentiments are not apparent until the bar is used.

Then follow a series of mistakes that were most unfortunate, as they put the attentions of Billie in the wrong light. He sent a little note to the lady of his love by means of a fan. But the darn thing blew too far and the note came into the hand of her husband. Then there is a mixup as the doors of the two rooms that the manager and the lady had were changed. The husband went after Billie and trying to say he found him in the most embarrassing of positions. Then there was a chase in which Billie barely escaped the wrath of the other, and it all ended when Billie fell into a bathtub and was carried about the streets in the rear of an auto.

IRMA IN WONDERLAND (Nov. 23).—The cast: Irma (Irma Sorter); Dorothy (Dorothy Clark); Teacher (Linnie Gee); Bennie (Bennie Suslow); Gerald (Gerald Ward); George (George Hupp). Written and produced by Lule Warrenton.

Irma is waiting for her escort to take her to a party when she falls asleep and has the most terrible dream. She dreams that she is a poor little girl in the country and has to do all the chores. She gets into all kinds of trouble helping the other children and finally falls in the brook. But just as she is bewailing her fate her mother wakes her and says that Bennie has come to take her to the party. The dream is over and Irma is glad that it was only a dream.

SAMMIE JOHNSIN AT THE SEASIDE (Split Reel—Nov. 26).—Sammie Johnsin is a character that is not new to the admirers of the comedy cartoons of the films. He has appeared off and on on the Universal program and now he is performing some of his comic antics at the seashore. He almost gets drowned and then plays the hero, but in the end he is happy as all the heroes of the films and those in real life ought to be.

The other half of the film is the continuation of Dr. Dorsey's series about Japan. Some of the fine old ruins are shown and after seeing them it is not hard to believe that Japan had a civilization that antedated that of the occident by many years.

Felix, who is sent to visit some friends, is mistaken for the new butler. He gets into all kinds of trouble, but at last catches some crooks and is taken into the confidence of the family.

RED FEATHER.

THE DEVIL'S BONDWOMAN (Five Parts—Nov. 20).—The cast: Beverly Hope (Dorothy Davenport); Mason Van Horton (Emory Johnson); Prince Vandloup (Richard Morris); Doria Manners (Adele Farrington); John Manners (William Canfield); Aunt Barbara (Miriam Shelby). Scenario by Maie Havey. Produced by Lloyd Carleton.

Mason Van Horton, a young millionaire in good society, owns the Van Horton Bank in the tenement district, but has so little care for business that the bank—and the hundreds of poor workers who have entrusted their hard-earned savings to it—is on the verge of ruin.

John Manners is responsible for this condition of affairs, for he has business ability and has taken advantage of Mason at every turn. His wife, Doria, has social aspirations and is a typical vampire. She does her best to ensnare Mason, and he is easily charmed, until he meets Beverly Hope, who has come to visit her Aunt Barbara.

Doria is infatuated with Prince Vandloup. One night after a party at the Manners home Mason goes to Doria's apartment, where she is waiting to receive him. But as he starts towards her the face of Beverly comes before him and he rushes madly from the room, passing Manners on his way out. Doria tells her husband that Mason has forced his way to her room, and that she has had to fight for her honor. Manners is angry enough to kill Mason but she begs him to ruin him instead.

Manners does not take long to accomplish this feat. Beverly promises to marry Mason and helps him in every way. Doria gives a reception to which she invites Mason. He goes, intending to have a talk with Manners. One of the women whose earnings have been lost in the bank appears, but Doria orders her from the house. Instead the woman slips unnoticed to Doria's room and stabs herself. Later while all the guests are assembled at dinner, Doria is startled by a drop of blood which falls from the ceiling, causing much consternation.

Mason talks with Manners in the library and the two are advised of what has happened. Manners goes to the woman upstairs, and as he is returning to the library overhears his wife and the Prince making love. He denounces her and tells the astonished guests that she is the one who really is responsible for the failure of the bank and the ruination of Mason. He now realizes that she has lied about Mason. The Prince, after trying to persuade the Manners to forgive him, realizes that he can hope for nothing from Manners, and so at night, takes Doria away with him. His form changes to that of the Devil and he knows that he has his power.

GOLD SEAL.

THE WOMAN HE FEARED (Three Parts—Nov. 14). The cast: John Gray (Franklyn Farnum); Henry Clive (William Canfield); May Clive (Vola Smith); Claire (Clarissa Selwyn); Myrtle Andrews (Adele Farrington). Story by E. M. Ingleton. Produced by Harry Millarde.

Henry Clive, a wealthy widower, placed his small daughter, May, in a convent when she was a mere child, and now that her education is completed takes her home. Clive, alone, has amused himself according to his fancy, but now that his daughter has come to live with him he decides to reform. So he informs Claire, his mistress, that their relations can continue no longer. Piqued, she plans revenge.

Her nephew, John Gray, is a drunkard. When he loses his position on a newspaper because of this, she sends him to a sanatorium, where his cure is eventually consummated, and she promises to make him her heir and draws up her will accordingly. Through her he meets an artist, Myrtle Andrews, who has received a commission from Clive to paint May's picture.

May makes the acquaintance of Gray and soon the two are friends. Claire, who has been watching the little love god at work, tells her regenerated nephew that she will provide him with ample funds for a wedding if he can win May, but he must keep secret the fact that she is his aunt. While not understanding the reason for the stipulation, Gray agrees.

The wedding takes place. To the wedding breakfast comes Claire with her friend the artist. Stealthily she exchanges her glass of champagne for his of ginger ale. Gray becomes intoxicated and shames the woman he married and her father, and Claire tells Clive that because he once spurned her that now she is avenged and also discloses the fact that Gray is her nephew. Clive orders Gray returned to his apartments, whither Claire follows with liquors, and when he recovers somewhat from his drunken stupor tempts him further.

May, meantime, has decided that her place belongs beside him. As she arrives Gray, somewhat awakened to what his aunt is endeavoring to do, berates her and orders her from the house. Claire, returning to her own home, intends striking Gray from her will, but ere she can do this an attack of heart failure ends her life. So Gray and his wife are free to live out their lives in peace.

UNIVERSAL SPECIAL FEATURE.

LIBERTY (Episode No. 15—The Flag of Truce"—Two Parts—Nov. 20).—The cast: Liberty Horton (Marie Walcamp); Pedro (Eddie Polo); Capt. Bob Rutledge (Jack Holt); Major Winston (Neal Hart); Theresa (Maud Emory); Manuel Leon (Bertram Grassby); Jose Leon (L. M. Wells); Pancho Lopez (G. Raymond Nye). Written and produced by Henry McRae.

Pedro and Liberty are now in the prison. Pedro is sitting in his cell and outside are two guards talking of the torture that they are going to put Pedro through. They have been drinking rather heavily and pay no attention to their prisoner. Pedro finds that the door is open. He takes advantage of this discovery and lunges against it. The guards turn on him and he grabs one about the legs and upsets him and the other he throws against the table. He is about to escape when a number of other guards arrive and he is taken to the torture room. As one of the guards is found to be dead and the other badly wounded the men who have hold of him want to subject him to the severest tortures.

In the meantime Liberty has found a bit of masonry loose in the wall of her cell and by working manages to make it large enough to crawl through. She gets into an underground chamber, where she finds a pool of water and a number of skeletons. The walls are covered with slime and dirt and there can be heard the sound of dripping water. To add to the horror of the place there are all kinds of rats and vermin swarming about. Seeing no way of escaping here she turns to go back when she finds to her horror that the whole has been closed, and that she is a prisoner in the dungeon.

LAEMMLE.

THE EMERALD PIN (Two Parts—Nov. 23).—The cast: Kathleen and Grandmother (Roberta Wilson), Kitty (Eileen Sedgwick); Mrs.

Dexter (Gretchen Lederer); Alvin Randolph (Charles Pearley); Rose (Louise Owen); Rose's Cousin (Myrtle Gillette). Scenario by Maie Havey. Produced by Burton George.

Kitty lives with her grandmother. One day a Mrs. Dexter, who belongs to the smart set, invites Kitty to a bridge party. Ere the party is over, however, the grandmother arrives and takes a rather rebellious Kitty home, and then she tells the story of her own life.

Long ago when grandmother was a young girl she had a sweetheart, Alvin, and he finally asked her to become his wife. Kathleen was happy and confided the news to her best friend, Rose, who was herself in love with Alvin. Her jealousy caused her to plot.

Alvin requests Kathleen not to gamble; Rose learns of this and invites Kathleen to a party, where she has secured the aid of her cousin to make Kathleen play. At first Kathleen wins, but later she loses all the time and in order to pay her gambling debts borrows money from Rose until the sum mounts.

Then Alvin presents Kathleen with a beautiful emerald pin. Rose tells Kathleen that unless she pays the sum borrowed immediately that she will go to Alvin for the money. This alarms Kathleen and at the suggestion of Rose she pawns the pin. Then Rose suggests that they go to Kathleen's home to view the presents—and the wonderful emerald pin. Kathleen with a quivering heart accompanies them.

But meantime the maid, who was an accomplice of a band of crooks, had admitted one of the gang and taken all the presents. This foils Rose's plan, but never so long as Alvin lived did Kathleen dare to wear the emerald pin which she later secured from the pawnshop. Kitty promises never to gamble, and the grandmother feels that she has accomplished some good by disclosing her secret.

HER MESSAGE TO HEAVEN (Special Release—Nov. 25).—This is the story of a little girl who has been told by the pastor that heaven is a real place and she so firmly believes this that she calls up and asks to speak to heaven. But by accident she overhears a dire plot, which, by her efforts, is frustrated.

IMP.

WHEN HE CAME BACK (Nov. 22).—The cast: "Spike" Dugan (Malcolm Blevins); Dan Moran (Charles Cummings); Nellie Moran (Betty Schade). Written by Joseph Le Brandt. Produced by John McDermott.

"Spike" has been sent to prison by the evidence of Dan and has sworn to have revenge. One day Dan reads that he has been released and is terrified. At the time he is sick and Nellie goes to the druggist's for some medicine. The medicine is poisonous, so that when he hears "Spike" coming Dan pours some of it into a glass of whiskey to cheat "Spike" of his revenge. But when "Spike" arrives he sees the whiskey and, thinking to drink to the other's health, he takes the draught and is killed before the officers, whom Nellie has brought, can arrest him.

CIRCUMSTANTIAL GUILT (Two Parts—Nov. 24).—The cast: Fillmore (Jack Nelson); Antonio (Burton Law); Mary (Grace Bonyng); Hartman (Charles Cummings); Evans (Fred Montague); Casey (Dan Duffy). Scenario by Maie Havey. Produced by George Cochrane.

Antonio, a poor Italian fruit peddler, is on trial for the murder of Hartman. In spite of his protestations of innocence and his story of the finding of the gun hurled into his fruit stand, the consensus of opinion is that he is guilty.

The jury retires, and after being out for a considerable time all but one, Fillmore, are in favor of conviction. He stoutly adheres to his opinion and seems to be laboring under some strain. One of the jurors pleads with him to give in, as he is very anxious to get home to his wife, who is seriously ill, and still Fillmore holds out. At last he can seem to stand the strain no longer and calling for attention tells his story.

His sister, Mary, a sweet, innocent girl, had been betrayed by Hartman and had drowned herself. Over her dead body Fillmore had vowed vengeance. He had followed Hartman to the city, and then one evening saw him entering a cafe. Knowing that he would return home some time, he waited for him outside until midnight, and then, as Hartman emerged and started walking down the street, he shot him and hurled the gun into the wagon of Antonio.

The confession made, Fillmore falls dead and Antonio is cleared of the accusation.

BISON.

THE LOST LODE (Two Parts—Nov. 25).—The cast: John Stepton (E. N. Willack); Gloria (Edith Johnson); Tom Higgins (Edward A. Hearn); Edgar Collins (L. C. Shumway). Scenario by William Parker. Produced by Henry McRae.

John Stepton, owner of a once prosperous mine, finds himself on the verge of bankruptcy and is on the point of selling out to Graham, a chap who is picking up all the mines in the district. Edgar Collins, a young mining engineer, whom Stepton has engaged to trace a lost lode of the mine, tells him that he thinks he has discovered the lode which leads under Gloria mountain. This spoils the sale.

Tom Higgins has been Stepton's assistant and is in love with Stepton's daughter, Gloria, who does not favor his suit, as her heart already belongs to Collins. One of the drillers has discovered a new vein and disclosed the place to Higgins, who tells him to keep his knowledge to himself and they will buy the mine from Stepton and then work it themselves.

Collins forms the plan of blasting the mountain and makes all preparations. Higgins and the driller decide to frustrate this by cutting the wires just as Collins is ready to press the button and then when he goes to investigate the wires will be put in contact and he will lose his life.

One of the men who is working for Collins is assaulted by one of Higgins' men, who rolls what he thinks is the dead body down the mountain-side, but the man revives and manages to phone Gloria what has happened. She is away, but returns on her yacht and swims ashore. Higgins and his men tamper with the wires and pull the lever, causing the explosion, but Collins is not injured. The picture ends happily as the lost lode has been found.

BEHIND THE SCREEN (Two Parts—Nov. 13).—Set down in the midst of a thoroughly equipped motion picture studio, with the real director tearing his hair and shouting through his megaphone, with dramas and comedies under way, pretty actresses being picked, settings being put up and torn down—there is unlimited opportunity for the wild destruction that follows in Charlie's wake. As an under stage carpenter, he goes about his work of knocking over cameras, setting up columns, getting in bad with the director, and doing everything that he shouldn't do with the pathetic seriousness that makes his work so peculiarly human.

Every one picks on him. Big Campbell, the lazy head carpenter, makes him wait on him like a slave; the director catches him every time he sits down to draw a breath after his vigorous labors and thinks that he is loafing; even the stage properties that he is handling fall on him. However, Edna, an awkward country girl, the butt of ridicule of the other applicants for work, who manages to disguise herself in the overalls and cap cast off by a striking carpenter, understands him and is kind.

AMERICAN.

THE FIGHT ON THE DAM (Nov. 9).—Ed Newton, a young engineer, encounters many difficulties in the construction of the new dam. Bill Dolan, one of the wealthiest cattle men in the district, is especially against the building of the dam and does all in his power to prevent the engineer from completing it. Dolan's daughter meets Newton and they fall in love with each other.

Later the surveying is completed and the dam is built. The cattlemen attack the engineer and his party but find that violence is to no avail. Ed and his sweetheart go over the dam and one of the cattlemen, who is in love with the girl, attacks the engineer in the tower. There a struggle ensues and Newton finally grasps his assailant around the waist and hurls him over the railing. Turning to the girl he clasps her in his arms.

ECLAIR.

THE ETERNAL CHALLENGE (Two parts—Nov. 4).—The cast: Madam Danfers (Helen Aubrey); Radford, her son (Norbert Myles); a society butterfly (Rea Martin); the actress (Edna Payne).

Madam Danfers discovers that her overindulged son, Radford, is in love with a dancer. The girl is really a good girl who is struggling against poverty and temptation and is deeply in love with Radford. Madam Danfers invites Lila, the actress and some society girls to the house in order to show Radford the difference between "ladies and LADIES."

At the luncheon Radford introduces Lila as his wife and Madam orders them to leave the house and they set up housekeeping in a tenement. Later a child is born to Lila, but even this does not soften her mother-in-law. Radford takes his son to his mother and the babe is dressed in the baptism robes of Radford. Madam comes to her best and takes Radford, his wife and son into her house.

A LASS OF THE LUMBERLANDS (Episode No. 3—Two Parts—"First Blood"—Nov. 6).—Chapter II of this serial closes with Helen and Little Bear, the Indian fireman on "Dollar" Holmes' logging railroad, paddling down stream in a canoe to the recorder's office to beat Holmes' agents (who are racing them in an automobile, but have met with a spectacular accident) in filing on the homestead lands of Dawson, whom Holmes' men have murdered in his cabin. The two canoers guide the frail craft by dextrous strokes through the rapids of a boulder-strewn river in the famed Yosemite Valley of Northern California. They make a safe landing, and strike out afoot for the recorder's office.

In the meantime Holmes' men escape death when their automobile crashes through the rail of a bridge and falls sixty feet into a river by swimming to the bank. They arrive at the recorder's office a few minutes after Helen has filed on the coveted land. Coveted particularly by both sides because its title carries with it the exclusive right to float logs to mill from a timber area owned in part by Holmes corporation and in part by small holders, among whom are Helen and a number of her friends.

Through the taking up of a friendly subscription to buy Helen a birthday present it is discovered by Holmes' men that she was a few days under eighteen years old—the legal age—when she filed on the lands of the murdered homesteader, and Holmes and his son Stephen (Helen's half-brother, but though neither knows it) on the strength of that fact procure a nullification of her filing and record a new filing in Holmes' name.

To offset the loss of their log-floating right Helen and her friends decide to use Holmes' railroad to transport their logs to mill. The logs are loaded. Holmes arrives upon the scene and announces that his road is not a common carrier and will not transport a rival's business. He orders the engine uncoupled from the log train, and departs. The uncoupled and loaded flat-cars are shoved onto a down-grade and sent whirling of their own momentum to the mill.

Meantime Holmes' wife has taken a train to meet her husband, at his direction—and there is a wild race with a locomotive with Helen at the throttle to overtake and pass the runaway cars and throw a switch to prevent a fatal collision between the passenger and the freight. The race succeeds, there is a wild fist-fight between the small timber holders and employes of Holmes, the log train eventually reaches the mill, and the logs are unloaded. Helen wires Holmes tauntingly: "Logs at mill. First blood."

A LASS OF THE LUMBERLANDS (No. 4—Two Parts—Nov. 13).—In order to force the only railroad in their district to transport logs of small-holder rivals of "Dollar" Holmes' timber trust to mill, the small holders and Helen Holmes as railroad station agent frame a conspiracy to have the road declared by the Interstate Commerce Commission a common carrier. This chapter tells the story of Helen's efforts to carry out this conspiracy.

An agent of the road not familiar with Holmes' announcement that it is not a common carrier and will not handle rivals' business, accepts a package billed beyond the California state line—into Utah. Its delivery at destination will constitute the road a common carrier. Holmes' men find out about this conspiracy immediately after the package has been accepted by the agent, and Holmes is furious. He orders his men to see that the consignment is held up. Helen learns of this plan and undertakes to frustrate it.

She leaps on the platform of a flying train, tries the door, finds it locked, and in one of the most spectacular scenes ever shown on the screen climbs by hand-holds from window ledge to window ledge until she reaches the platform of the expres car where the package is—and gains entrance to the car just as one of Holmes' men holds up the express agent and tosses the package into a Holmes automobile that is racing alongside the train.

Helen doesn't hesitate a moment. She leaps after the precious parcel—and lands in the auto. The men driving it overpower her and throw her out into the road. She is stunned senseless by the fall, but recovers consciousness in time to start the package once more on its out-of-the-state journey.

Holmes's son Stephen—Helen's half-brother by her father's second and illegal marriage, though none of the persons involved knows that relationship exists between any of them—acts as his father's agent in trying to stop the shipment of the package, and he does not scruple to resort to pistol-point argument, but without success.

HIS GUARDIAN ANGEL (Two Parts—Nov. 13).—The cast: Rodney Bradley (Eugene Pallette); Mabel Saunders (Kathryne Vaughn); David Saunders, her father (W. K. Brainbridge); "Big Bill" Stevens (Harry S. Griffith).

David Saunders, a big contractor and manipulator, is interested in the construction of a railroad in northwestern Montana. The rival line is being pushed through by a rival company and the success of either line depends on which one crosses a certain divide first. Bradley's son Rodney, who is in love with Mabel Saunders, daughter of David Saunders, is sent by the rival company to see that their line is pushed through first. "Big Bill" Stevens, a regular roughneck, is sent out by Saunders and told to push the line through regardless of expense. Mabel learns that her father is plotting against Rodney, so she follows him into the great west and hovers over him. She saves his life for him and later, even though Rodney is successful, Saunders forgives him and sanctions his marriage to Mabel.

JERRY'S DOUBLE HEADER (Nov. 24).—The cast: Jerry (George Ovey); Hold-up Man (George George); Father (M. J. McCarty); Mother (Helen Gilmore); Daughter (Claire Alexander).

Jerry is "in bad" with his sweetheart's father and mother, so he rides concealed in a trunk on the back of the family automobile in which mother, father and daughter are taking a spin. The patrons of the roadhouse take refuge in a box and a barrel as a robber holds them up. The landlord of the place hides behind the counter, leaving the situation in the hands of the desperate character. The automobile party approaches. The desperado holds up the party, but seeing the daughter, he takes them under his protection, while Jerry peers out of the trunk at the proceedings. The hold-up man escorts the frightened family into the roadhouse, shooting as he goes, commanding the hysterical landlord to dance, firing at the waiter and taking a shot at Jerry, who follows them in.

As Jerry hurries out of the roadhouse he conceives the idea of using a racing automobile which has just driven up. He enters the restaurant quietly, ties a lariat around the feet of the hold-up man, who is dragged out by the racer. But the bandit, after he has been dragged down the road, is left rubbing his head dazedly when the lariat runs afoul of a tree. He recovers just in time to hold up the automobile party which has by this time followed from the inn. On seeing the bandit Jerry hastily concludes his conversation with the girl and gets into the trunk.

The family, with the bandit still accompanying them, enter the residence. When father phones for the police, the bad man shoots the telephone from his hands. Jerry now gets inside and fells the bandit with a blow over the head. Mother and daughter enter a bedroom and father is just knocking there for admittance when he sees that the bandit has recovered and is entering the hallway. Father escapes at the other side of the hall while the bandit raps on the bedroom door. The mother opens the door and falls into the bandit's arms. She screams and runs. While mother gets a shotgun and fires at the bandit, Jerry sneaks in again and fells the desperado with a vase. Jerry takes the bandit's guns and holds him up as mother shoots again. Two officers now enter and find that the features of the captive correspond with those of the picture on the notice of reward. As the policemen march the bandit off the scene, Jerry is hailed as the hero of the hour and gets the daughter with her father's blessing.

MUTUAL STAR PRODUCTION.

PECK O' PICKLES (American—Five Parts—Nov. 13).—The cast: Rudolph Schlitz (C. William Kolb); Louise, his daughter (May Cloy); Adolph Busch (Max M. Dill); Sergeant Todd (Frank Thompson); Caroline Pickett (Marie Van Tassel); Lutie Busch, his daughter (Josephine Clark); Jed, town sheriff (Burdell Jacobs); Bobbie Bennett (Alan Forrest). Directed by J. N. Heffron.

Rudolph Schlitz is the village shoemaker and Adolph Busch, the leading grocer, and butcher Rudolph has a daughter named Louise, who is pretty. Adolph's daughter, Lutie, is not so attractive as Louise. Bobbie Bennett is a romantic Boston boy. Jed Prouty is the village 'constable," who is in love with Lutie. Caroline Pickett is slightly infatuated with Busch.

Rudolph rips the sole of a shoe and finds therein an old lottery ticket No. 131313. The prize is $131,313. Bausch is persuaded to buy a ten per cent. interest for $10 in the ticket that had its drawing two years ago and their hopes soar as they contemplate the dents they will put in this old world when they win the dough.

Lutie reads Laura Jean Libby and obtains an inspiration thereby. While packing eggs she writes her initial "L" on the shell, tells how lonesome she is and sends it forth. Bobbie gets the egg and Lutie gets a letter requesting a photograph. Afraid to put her own picture in the mail, Lutie slips in a picture of Louise and signs it Louise. Return mail brings a picture of Bobbie, and Labor Day brings Bobbie himself pining for the real thing in girls. From this innocent incident the story grows until it involves all the characters in ridiculous situations.

Actuated by high moral impulses, Caroline stirs the town to frenzy on the subject of drink and gambling, the lottery ticket forming the chief charge in the latter complaint. Later on Caroline gets intoxicated from imbibing sweet cider which the frolicsome Bobby adulterated with "medicine water" abstracted from a black bottle carried by Busch. The cider becomes fashionable and all patronize it. The result is a most wonderful souse, ending in a deep sleep and a vivid dream in which all the village characters tread backward over the trail of time and appear in curious antics in the city of Washington, D. C., in the year 1860, before the war.

After scenes typical of that period time two Germans become the target of the rebel army and are blown thousands of miles through space, landing in the heart of 1960, in the exciting reign of King Theadore the First. After funny incidents, the final act brings the scene once more to Walpole, Mass., where the two jolly Germans awaken to find a great triple wedding planned and to realize that their mysterious peregrination was due to the influence of the stuff that made Milwaukee famous. They agree to destroy all the liquor in Walpole.

LONE STAR (American—Five Parts—Nov. 23).—The cast: Lone Star (William Russell); Helen Mattes (Charlotte Burton); John Mattes (Harry Von Meter); Jim Harper (Alfred Ferguson); Jefferson Mattes (Ashton Dearholt).

Lone Star, an Indian lad of superior intelligence, marvels at the efficacy of the white man's medical methods. He later goes East to secure an education and release his tribe from the practices of the medicine man. After a medical course in college Lone Star goes to New York and here becomes a noted surgeon. He meets Helen Mattes, the daughter of a rich New Yorker, and falls in love with the girl. Her father objects to his daughter mating with an Indian and he brings Helen to the same conclusion. A short time after the girl has told Lone Star that she can never marry him he saves her life by a very delicate operation. Then, disgusted with so-called "high society," he returns to the Indian village and there sets about to give them the benefit of his education.

VOGUE.

UP THE FLUE (Two parts—Nov. 26).—The cast: The Oil Magnate (Larry Bowes); the Magnate's daughter (Lillian Hamilton); the chief bombmaker (Harry Huckins); the bombmaker's daughter (Florence Rosee); one of the Bad Ones (Owen Evans); the Worst of Them All (Rube Miller); the Hired Man (Roy McCray).

McCray, assistant to the oil magnate and in love with the oil magnate's daughter, on seeing a suspicious character hanging around the oil fields, follows him. Lillian, the daughter, goes with him. Rube Miller is the worst of the bunch of bombmakers and he spies Lillian and McCray. The latter is locked in the boiler and a hot fire started under him. He is rescued just in time by Lillian. Later she is seen by the bombmaker's daughter and her fate is sealed. She is tied to a post with a bomb set under her ready to go off at a certain time. The girl is rescued just in time. The sputtering bomb is thrown out of the window and brings to earth a huge smokestack. Everyone is buried in the debris. McCray appeals to the magnate for his daughter's hand and as he is refused crowns himself with one of the many thousand bricks and falls back into a fade-out.

GAUMONT.

REEL LIFE NO. 26 (Oct. 29)—The first item in this release is entitled, "Operating a Submarine Mine-Layer." As it is manifestly impossible to get motion pictures of operations of such a craft, the exposition has been made with animated drawings. These have been done by Harry Palmer.

"Training a Hunting Dog" is a revelation to people who do not know the infinite patience required. Only the method of handling the puppy is shown in this issue. Another section of this film is "Making Potash From Seaweed." This was announced for "Reel Life" No. 25, but was crowded out of that number.

The longest article in this issue is "Developing Truant Boys." The pictures were taken at the largest institution of its kind in the world, a model school for training boys who will not go to school and those who are idle when they do go. The lads are all under sixteen years, yet they make their own clothes in the tailor shop, bake bread for their own and two other schools, print millions of forms for the New York Board of Education, and carry on almost every process required to make the school self-supporting.

SEE AMERICA FIRST, NO 60 (Nov. 1)—The Battle of Gettysburg was one of the ten decisive battles of the world fought before the great conflict now raging in Europe. Over half a century has elapsed since the battle, and in that time so many monuments have been raised by federal and state authorities that it ranks as the best marked battlefield in the world. The battlefield is pictured in this release.

There are views of great beauty as well as of historic interest. These include pictures of Big and Little Round Top, Cemetery Ridge the wheatfield across which Pickett's men made their gallant charge, General Meade's headquarters and the spot on which President Lincoln stood when he made his immortal Gettysburg Address.

On the same reel is an animated Gaumont Kartoon Komic by Harry Palmer.

REEL LIFE NO. 27 (Nov. 5).—The picture opens with an "article" entitled, "The International Beverage—Coffee." Two billion pounds of coffee are grown annually in Brazil. The pictures show how the bean is cultivated and prepared for market. There are typical scenes from the planting until the heavy sacks go aboard the ship at Santos, the greatest coffee mart in the world.

The efforts being made to rid the state of New Jersey of mosquitoes will prove of interest to every community which is afflicted with these pests which carry both malaria and yellow fever. This section of the film has as its general title "Our Trench Warfare." It shows how the state employes are pouring oil on the untroubled waters in an effort to kill the larvae from which the mosquitoes develop.

The third section of this issue shows how The Autoped has developed from the boys' pushmobiles. As this new method of locomotion is just now engaging the attention of cartoonists, vaudeville artists, screen comedians, and the general public, its development will prove very entertaining.

A fourth section shows a new life saving suit which utilizes the principle of the thermos bottle. Not only does the shipwrecked person enjoy his usual warmth, but there is a compartment in which he carries his lunch, making his outing a veritable excursion.

MUTUAL TOURS AROUND THE WORLD NO. 1 (Nov. 7). In the pictures of England and Germany, or Southern France, or Holland and Switzerland, the cameraman has succeeded in catching the real atmosphere of the localities pictured, and the costumes of the peasants of Galicia are to be faithfully reproduced than are the ravishing costumes of the Viennese grand dames, apparently unaffected by war or [illegible] of the gay army and navy ball crowd at Vladivostok, where the enormous munitions exports from Europe for the Russian army have been handled until recently for transshipment over the Trans-Siberian line.

Amongst the places of interest shown in the first release of Mutual Tours are La Rochelle, France scenes in the harbor, the ancient town hall and other buildings and the wharves. The scenes change from France to the heart of olden Egypt, where we are shown the Assuan Dam one of the world's great feats of engineering the famous River Nile and Cleopatra's Baths Cataracts. From Egypt you are taken to a Galician town in the midst of the war zone. Here views of Kamenetz-Podolsk are portrayed, scenes of the fortress and also many of the native Galician types.

SEE AMERICA FIRST NO 61 (Nov. 8)—The success of "Along the Columbia River" in Gaumont's "See America First" Number 52 is responsible for a return to this beautiful stream nine weeks later. These different views of the same country are called "Oregon's Famous River." The pictures are bound up intimately with the Columbia River Highway.

Among the pictures for which spectators who have made the trip over the celebrated highway will look eagerly are Cascade Rapids, Eagle Creek Bridge, the Devil's Punch Bowl, Catching Salmon in Eagle Creek, Eagle Point, Horse Tail Falls, Waukeena Falls, Latourell Falls and Beacon Rock.

Attached to the scenic is an animated cartoon by Harry Palmer.

The Columbia River is noted both historically and for the salmon which is taken from it.

This famous river was discovered in 1792 by Captain Gray. In 1804 the Lewis and Clark Expedition reached the mouth of the Columbia River and opened up the great fur producing region of the country.

MUTUAL TOURS AROUND THE WORLD, No. 2 (Nov. 14). First comes the ancient French town of La Rochelle. The pictures show the harbor, the quays, the fishing fleet as it sails and at sea, and the town hall built in 1606.

The second section shows the Nile at Assouan. Here is located the wonderful dam which is one of the world's greatest engineering feats. The granite formation responsible for the cataracts is shown, as well as the great mass of masonry which now holds back the water for better distribution during the dry season. A view shows the water rising to cover the Isle of Philae upon which are the ruins of the beautiful temples of Isis and Hathor. There are pictures also of native industries.

The third section of the reel takes one into the war zones before peace had fled. It shows pictures of the ancient Galician town of Kamenez-Podolsk. The streets, the bazaar, the fortress and the mosque pre-empted by the Turks in the seventeenth century, provide quaint pictures of a life remote from our own. The native type shows give one an idea of the refugees who fled into this country before the Russian advance.

THE VAMPIRES (Episode One, "The Detective's Head"—Three Parts—Nov. 23).—The cast: Philip Guard, cub reporter (Edmund Mathe); Mrs. Guard, his mother (Florence Simon); Normandin (Marcel Levesque); Baron Mortense and Doctor Nox (Eugene Eyme).

The terrible crimes of a mysterious band of law-breakers nicknamed the Vampires have made all France fear these desperate men. No one has been able to discover who they are. A young reporter on Mondial, a newspaper, Philip Guard, has been receiving anonymous notes in a feminine handwriting. He is publishing what clues he has found when Detective Durtal's headless body is found at St. Clement. The officer had been sent there to follow a Vampire clue, and his death is a warning from the band. Philip Guard asks his paper to send him to St. Clement.

Philip's mother tells him that near St. Clement lives an old friend of his father's, Dr. Nox. She fears for her son's life and makes him promise that he will seek Dr. Nox's protection. He does so, and meets there a Mrs. Simpson, an American woman, who is thinking of buying Dr. Nox's chateau. Philip is distressed the first night to find that a picture hides an empty space in the wall which could be used to conceal a bulky package. In the pocket of his dressing robe he also finds a message from the Vampires, warning not to seek further clues.

The next morning Mrs. Simpson discovers that during the night she has been robbed of both jewels and money. Philip discovers that her jeweled cigarette case has been placed in his pocket. He hurries to the authorities with latest news of the Vampires, and is followed by Mrs. Simpson and Dr. Nox, who accuse him of the theft. His accusers are detained in a room at police headquarters while Philip returns to the chateau with the magistrate to investigate. In the hidden closet behind the picture is found a box containing the head of Detective Durtal. It had been put there only a few hours previous, for, when Philip discovered the place, it was empty.

Philip returns with the magistrate to find that Mrs. Simpson left a note acknowledging that he was a Vampire, and that six months previously the band had murdered the real Dr. Nox. The newspaper reporter hurriedly returns to Paris, feeling the next developments will be in the city.

The Vampires discover that Philip Guard is learning of their movements from Marfa Koutiloff, a Russian dancer. She discloses her identity to Philip, who hastens to meet her. At the same time, in her dressing room at the theater, she receives a visit from a friend, Baron Mortense. The Baron gives her a ring, accidentally scratching her with one of its sharp points as he places it on her finger. He then goes to his box to watch her dance. Marfa attempts to dance, but falls dead on the stage.

Philip, who has met Baron Mortense in the dancer's dressing room, immediately suspects him of being a Vampire. He does not wait to see what happens to Marfa, knowing that the Vampires have finished her. He follows her executioner, the man who is the grand Vampire. The band is too sharp for him. In turn he is followed and captured. The decree of the judge of the Vampires is that he is to be killed at dawn.

The man left to guard Philip is Normandin, a Vampire working for the Mondial. He recalls how Philip has helped him and decides to liberate him. When the judge returns, Philip and Normandin bind him and cover his face. They then escape. It is their aim to capture as many of the band as possible. Under their leadership the police surround the cellar in which the execution is to take place. Before the Vampires can uncover the face of the bound and gagged man, they hear the police breaking in. As they make their escape through the underground passage, they determine that Philip shall not be rescued. They shoot the bound man, not knowing that it is their own comrade they are executing.

THE CRIMSON STAIN MYSTERY (Episode No. 12, "The Restless Spirit"—Two parts Nov. 6).—While in his laboratory one day experimenting in the hope of discovering some element to counteract the activities of Pierre La Rue and his gang of super-criminals, Dr. Montrose is interrupted by Pierre La Rue, who demands the drug. The doctor refuses, and puts La Rue out. The doctor then takes an oath to exterminate the gang and, pocketing a gun, follows Pierre La Rue. Dr. Montrose trails Pierre to Tanner's apartment, where, after a brief wait, his vigilance is rewarded by the sight of Pierre, Tanner and Kiel coming out of the house.

The three gangsters drive off. Dr. Montrose follows. Presently they reach a notorius dance hall. Dr. Montrose, following the gangsters in, sees them entering a private room. He seats himself near the door. A moment later a waiter carrying a tray of drinks to the gangsters, stops at the doctor's table and during the instant that his back is turned, the doctor drugs the glasses. A moment afterward the gangsters come out of the room and as they pass him, Dr. Montrose looks inside to see whether or not they emptied their glasses. Tanner catches him at it. Following stealthily, Tanner draws his pistol and with the butt end stretches the doctor senseless to the floor.

When the doctor comes to he finds he is bound hand and foot in a chair and a gag in his mouth. Tanner puts on him a black mask which covers the doctor from head to foot. Tanner has no sooner done this than Pierre enters carrying Florence. Just then Kiel bursts into the room saying that Clayton and three policemen are at the door. Pierre drops Florence and dashes out into the hall, followed by his henchmen. Florence released, sees her father's pistol on the floor and as the door opens she fires blindly, the bullet striking Robert Clayton. Realizing her mistake, Florence faints. Pierre comes hurtling back into the room and, picking up one of the drugged glasses forces its contents down Florence's throat.

Gagged and bound, Dr. Montrose struggles to tell Pierre that the whiskey is poisoned, but Florence drains the glass and slips out of Pierre's arms to the floor. In the midst of it all some one screams "Police!" Tanner and Kiel cut the doctor's bonds and make good their escape. The doctor drops on his knees beside Clayton and Florence, and picks up the gun just as the police break into the room, finding him in this compromising situation. And then like a thunder bolt out of a clear sky a startling revelation is made.

THE CRIMSON STAIN MYSTERY (Episode No. 13, "The Despoiling Brutes"—Two parts—Nov. 13).—Baffled at every turn in their attempts to be revenged upon Harold Stanley for his unyielding efforts to bring them to justice, Pierre La Rue, the master criminal, and his gang become seriously concerned with their future. Vanya Tosca learns accidentally that Florence Montrose, daughter of Doctor Montrose, discoverer of the element which is responsible for the Crimson Stain Gang, is going for a ride in the park. Accordingly Pierre La Rue lays elaborate plans for her destruction. The gang is increased by a new member, a cripple.

That afternoon as Florence and her father jog along in the park, Florence suddenly catches sight of an automobile speeding toward them. She recognizes the occupants as members of the Crimson Stain Gang, and she and her father spur their horses on, hoping to escape, but the

...overhauls them and the Crimson Stain Gang kidnap Florence.

The gang take Florence to an old hack by the river. While Red and Tanner watch Florence the others run off on an errand and once he is outside he reveals the surprising fact that he is not a cripple after all. The cripple hurries to a telephone booth, calls up the Montroe home and talk to Robert Clayton the latter Clayton and Doctor Montroe hurry out to Florence's rescue.

After telephoning the cripple gets a motor boat from the gang, cracks and speeds back to the shack. Red and Tanner put Florence in the boat and they start off down the river. Doctor Montroe and Clayton come up just as the boat backs away from the shore. They hurry to the bridge. They wait until the boat with Florence as captive comes along. Then a rope is tied to the bridge and the end lowered. Clayton climbs down the rope hand over hand the cripple unseen by the rest of the gang until Florence's bonds Red, seeing Florence free, jumps for her; Florence knocks him overboard. Tanner jumps to stop Florence just as the boat comes up to him Clayton dangling in midair reaches out and grasping Florence lifts her from the deck of the boat.

Tanner grasps Florence 'round the waist. Clayton hits Tanner and the latter, loosening his hold, drops into the water. Once more have Pierre La Rue and the Crimson Stain Gang been foiled in their efforts to wreck destruction upon the house of Montrose. That night as Florence is recounting her adventures to her father Robert Clayton, and Harold Stanley she expresses keen curiosity at the identity of the cripple who had cut her bonds and thus enabled her to make good her escape from the clutches of the murderous gang. Everybody is curious but Stanley who smiles as if he knew a whole lot more than he would tell.

...come from the mysterious "For Us", the time the message informs him that "The Grey Seal's" lady is nightly watched by a man, who is the sole support of an aged mother and who is being victimized by a band of crooks. Jimmy decides to go to the rescue. He discovers that Sammy Mathews, a cashier employee of the United States Currency Engraving Bureau, has been charged with stealing a counterfeit five dollar engraving plate and that the imposing secret service man has extorted $5,000 from Mrs. Mathews, Sammy's mother, under the threat of sending Sammy to prison.

Jimmy learns that the alleged government detective is a member of a gang of crooks who disguised himself as a secret service man for blackmailing purposes. Single handed Jimmy invades the underground den in which the gang makes its headquarters, and a fight ensues. In the meantime some mysterious information has reached the police headquarters to the effect that "The Grey Seal" can be captured at the headquarters of the gang. The police break in while the light is at its height but by a clever trick Jimmy succeeds in escaping both the police and the crooks. He leaves behind him, however, the now famous mark of "The Grey Seal," and the police officials are more baffled than ever in their efforts to capture the elusive "Gray Seal."

EXTRAVAGANCE (Popular Plays and Players Five parts—Nov 6)—The cast: Norma Russell (Mme. Petrova); Courtland Russell (H Cooper Cliffe); Franklin Hall (Mahlon Hamilton), Howard Dundore (Arthur Hoops); Horace Scott (J W. Hartman), Robert Mackay (Edward Martindel); Butler (Tom Cameron). Scenario written by Wallace C. Clifton Directed by Burton L. Ping.

Extravagance has always marked the lives of Norma Russell and her father, Courtland Russell. As a consequence debt overtakes them, and Russell is forced to borrow a large sum of money from Howard Dundore, the banker. Even this hint of coming trouble does not cause them to economize, and soon Russell has to ask Dundore for an extension of his note.

This the banker refuses to do unless the note is accompanied by the signature of a depositor of the bank. Russell forges the name of Robert Mackay, one of the bank's wealthiest depositors. Dundore knows the name is forged, but instructs his confidential man, Horace Scott, to pay the note and subtract it from his private account. He then accuses Russell, and to save her father from the consequences of his forgery Norma is obliged to consent to marry Dundore. She cables her lover, Franklin Hall, a business man, who has gone to South America to look after a rubber investment, that she cannot marry him.

Hall returns at once, pays back the amount of the note, thereby beggaring himself, and marries Norma. Dundore pretends to be friendly to the young couple, tells Hall he knows his investment has gone badly, and offers him a position in the bank, which Hall accepts. Dundore then seizes the opportunity to have Hall's accounts falsified in order to make it appear that he has stolen large sums of money. He continues to call at the Hall's home, and on one occasion makes love to Norma. Hall comes in unexpectedly, the men come to blows, and Dundore accuses Hall of having taken money from the bank. He is arrested, brought to trial and sentenced to five years' imprisonment. The only man who could have testified in his behalf, Horace Scott, has been given money by Dundore, with orders to leave the city.

Norma feels that her husband's trouble is a judgment upon herself for her extravagance, since he has always gratified her every wish. Left without means by his imprisonment she turns her talents to scenario writing, at which she is immediately successful. Her father who has been ousted from his clubs for non-payment of dues, and who lives in a little apartment with his daughter, secures work as a motion picture actor.

One evening when they are returning from the studio in the motor car of the director, they see an old man run down by another car. Norma takes the injured man home. When he regains consciousness days later his mind is a blank. During his ravings Norma gleans enough to suspect that he has knowledge of her husband's supposed crime, and tries in every way to bring back his memory. All efforts fail. She takes him to the prison to see her husband, and Hall recognizes him as Scott, but he does not recognize the husband. Norma decides upon an idea, and with the aid of her director carries it out.

She writes a scenario embodying the facts in the case of her husband's false accusation, and has it acted for the screen. Then she invites Dundore to see her latest picture at a special showing, and has Scott present. The picture is called "The Banker." As its action progresses there is a shout from the auditorium. Scott jumps to his feet wildly exclaiming: "That's the way he did it! Hall was not to blame. Dundore made me do it!" In the ensuing excitement Dundore escapes. He hurried to the railroad station, engages a special and leaves the city, but fate follows him, and he is killed when his engine crashes into a line of "dead" freight cars. Hall is released on the testimony of Scott, whose memory has been brought back by Norma's plan, and Norma and her husband begin life happily once more, both she and her father having learned a bitter lesson on the folly of extravagance.

BIG TREMAINE (Yorke Film Corp—Five Parts—Nov. 20).—The cast: John Tremaine, Jr. (Harold Lockwood); Isobel Malvern (May Allison); Redmond Malvern (Lester Cuneo); Judge Tremaine (Albert Ellis); Mrs. Tremaine (Lillian Hayward). David Tremaine (William Ephe); Samuel Leavitt (Andrew Arbuckle); Mammy (Josephine Rice); Julia Cameron (Virginia Southern); John Nolan (William De Vaull). Written and produced by Henry Otto.

The Tremaines are one of the first families of Virginia and owners of a large plantation. John Tremaine, the younger son, has fallen in love with Julia Cameron of Boston, who is visiting on a nearby plantation. Malvern, the banker, has entrusted John with a large sum of money to be delivered to a Richmond bank. Before starting on his errand John stops at his home to prepare for the trip. Upon entering the grounds he sees Julia in the arms of his brother David. Broken hearted at Julia's deception, John decides that after delivering the money to the bank he will never return to his home.

One evening, seven years later, John walks up to his old home to find it in a dilapidated condition and a "For Sale" notice on the front gate. He removes the sign and goes to Leavitt, the family attorney, who expresses surprise at John's return. John asks for an explanation and is told that upon delivery of the money to the Richmond bank seven years ago it was found to be several thousand dollars short, and his not returning to his home left room for only one conclusion: that he had taken the money. He also learns that the shock of his supposed theft killed his father, and that his brother died only a month prior to his return. John instructs the attorney to lift all mortgages and indebtedness against his mother's homestead and present the deeds to her. He goes home, only to find a scant welcome from his mother, whose entire life has been wrapped up in her other son, David. She will not accept the property, feeling that his fortune was founded on theft and that the act of his youth is a barrier between them. She decides to leave the old homestead, but remembrances of old times make it impossible and John implores her to remain.

Tremaine brings the plantation from ruin and desolation to a prosperous condition, remodels and refurnishes the home, and in time wins the love and confidence of his mother. Malvern, the banker, has one daughter, Isobel. While out riding one afternoon she falls from her horse and John carries her home. The doctors find she is suffering only from a slight shock. Malvern in his excitement and recalling the occurrences of years before, accusing John of being a thief as well as a coward, forbids him to come to his home again.

Julia, David's widow, comes to Tremaine for the holidays, bringing with her David's two sons. John learns that David's estate is in a depleted condition. He takes up all outstanding indebtedness and provides for Julia and the children. His energy and directness in all his undertakings has won him the respect and confidence of all his neighbors and also the title of "Big Tremaine." A committee waits upon him and urges him to accept the nomination for Congress, but he declines it.

Isobel recovers quickly from her injuries, and upon subsequent meetings with John finds that her interest in him is awakened. She is intensely interested in all matters pertaining to Virginia, and learns that John is the people's choice for Congress. Isobel in secret works for John's nomination. Leavitt, the attorney, informs John that a body of people are on their way to urge him to accept the nomination for Congress. Just as the enthusiastic crowd, headed by Isobel, arrives at the gate Malvern comes in and tells John that if he accepts the nomination he will denounce him as a thief. Julia comes forward with the statement, "It is a lie; John was not the thief!" and hands the banker David's confession stating that David stole the money from the bag while John was changing clothes for the trip to Richmond seven years ago. Malvern withdraws all opposition to John, and John goes forth to receive the welcome of his neighbors and claim Isobel.

BLUEBIRD PHOTOPLAYS, INC.

A STRANGER FROM SOMEWHERE (Five Parts—Nov. 13).—The cast: Sam Brockton and "Dippy" Lewis (Franklyn Farnum); Agnes Darling (Agnes Vernon). Mrs. D. G. Darling (Helen Wright); Olga Veloski (Claire MacDowell); Daniel Darling (Arthur Hoyt); Howard Dana (Barney Furey). Scenario written by Willis Wood. Directed by Wm. Worthington.

Howard Dana and his partner in adventures, Olga Veloski, discover that Sam Brockton, millionaire from the West, has arrived in town and they arrange to fleece him. They plan an old confidence game and locate the scene in one of the residences of wealth, knowing that the occupants of "Millionaire's Row" are spending the summer at various resorts. Agnes Darling and her father come to town for a day or two from their summer home in the mountains. Mr. Darling's automobile breaks down and as Brockton passes, he offers his services to help make repairs. In this way he discovers that Agnes is a charming girl and falls in love.

The incident has been observed by Olga and her accomplice and when the repaired automobile drives away, Olga attracts Brockton's attention. She tells him that if he will come to her home the next day she will introduce him to Agnes, who is supposed to call at Olga's residence. Olga and her accomplice manage to avoid the caretaker in the house they have selected for their work. At the appointed time Brockton arrives and through an old confidence game he is robbed.

The scene of the robbery happens to be the town residence of the Darlings. Just as the trick is being turned, Mr. Darling and Agnes arrive at their home. Upon entering the house, the Darlings are amazed to find that the house has been entered. They come upon Brockton, who is so frank and interesting in his explanation that he ingratiates himself with Agnes and her father, and they invite him to their country home. The two sharpers escape and join another member of the confidence gang—a crook known as "Dippy" Lewis. When Olga observes a striking resemblance between "Dippy" and Brockton, she decides to use the crook to an advantage.

Olga overheard the invitation Brockton had received from the Darlings and dresses "Dippy" to resemble him. She sends him to the mountains and he is received by the Darlings. "Dippy's" criminal instincts lead him to commit several robberies among the hotel guests, and when Brockton arrives he finds himself under suspicion. He is puzzled at Miss Darling's conduct toward him. Olga has directed members of her gang to chloroform Brockton and dispose of him in a cellar, that he may not by any mischance reach the mountains before "Dippy" Lewis arrives there. The striking resemblance between the two mislead the toughs and they chloroform "Dippy" and confine him in a cellar.

Agnes is perplexed at the strange transition in Brockton's manner, for he really is of a gentlemanly type in strong contrast to "Dippy," whom the girl had previously mistaken for him. The Darling family decide to return to the city and invite Brockton to call upon them there. Olga hears of this and plans to have "Dippy" again impersonate Brockton. When Olga attemps to locate "Dippy," she discovers that he is a prisoner. Before she can have him released, Brockton makes his visit to the Darlings, a fact of which Olga is not aware. Thus it is that she goes on with her plans, sends "Dippy" to call at the Darling home and there the two men meet and settle matters.

THE MEASURE OF A MAN (Five parts—Nov. 20).—The cast: Pattie Batch. (Louise Lovely); Jenny Hendy (Katherine Campbell); John Fairmeadow (Warren Kerrigan); Billy (Ivor MacFadden); Donnie (Marion Emmons); Jack Flack (Harry Carter); Tom Hendy (Marc Robbins). Scenario written by Maud Grange. Directed by Jack Conway.

John Fairmeadow has been expelled from a theological seminary because of his evident unfitness for the ministry. He goes West, and finally winds up in a lumber camp. Pattie, the pet of the woodsmen, is praying that a parson be sent to pronounce the burial service for her father, who has been killed by a falling tree. Fairmeadow's clerical appearance makes his arrival seemingly providential, for Pattie declares when she beholds him that her prayers have been answered, and thus Fairmeadow is compelled to conduct the burial service and thereafter pose as a parson. Having gone to the woods to fight out his own battles, Fairmeadow gains help for himself in helping others.

The "parson's" reputation as an exhorter has traveled to a nearby camp and he is urged to go there and conduct revival services. Jack Flack, the "boss" of the neighboring camp, objects to Fairmeadow's activities and undertakes to physically expel him from the community. In this encounter Flack comes off second best, and Fairmeadow's record is enhanced. Flack is living with a girl he has enticed from the camp where Fairmeadow makes his headquarters. This girl is moved by Fairmeadow's sermons to leave her environments and return home.

She leaves her baby where Fairmeadow will come upon it in the woods, and when the "parson" takes it in his arms and carries it to his home camp, she follows. Going direct to Pattie's home, Fairmeadow is arranging for the care of the child when its mother is discovered, by Pattie looking in at the window. Thus mother and child are reunited and Fairmeadow and Pattie go with her to her father's home, where a reconciliation is effected.

and have vengeance upon the "parson." One of the converts, Fairmeadow has made kills Fluck in a fight, and the "parson" witnesses that the deed was committed in self defense. While Fairmeadow has been at the neighboring camp, his congregation has built him a church and cabin to live in, and soon after his return the "parson" is called upon to perform a marriage. Then it is that he makes clear his standing, that he has studied for the ministry but has never been ordained.

When one of the lumbermen leaves the woods to visit his mother, he goes to Fairmeadow's father, who is a Bishop, and explains how matters stand with his son. The Bishop hastens to the lumber camp, ordains his son and performs two marriages, in one of which Fairmeadow makes Pattie his wife.

THE SCARLET RUNNER (Episode No. 9, "The Gold Cigarette Case"—Two Parts—Nov. 27).—Christopher Race, returning from a trip into the country, stops at an old castle with the intention of looking over the ruins. As he reaches the front of the place, a girl, leaning from a tower, attracts his attention. The girl throws something down which proves to be a gold cigarette case. She is then roughly dragged from the window. Race finds an old hag, who is the caretaker, and she shows him about the place. He is unable to find any trace of the girl except by one hairpin on a window ledge. He returns that night to search further, having put up at a nearby inn, and is attacked and wounded on the arm.

The next morning he receives a surprise when he sees the man whose photo is in the cigarette case at the inn with another. Race displays the case and the men come to his table. Talk follows which reveals the fact that the young fellow, Maurice Naylor, is searching for the girl, his fiancee, to whom he gave the case. The latter contains a slip of paper bearing some letters which are the combination of a safe, in which are some valuable bonds—the girl's fortune—left her by her parents. Her uncle, in whose care she is, has tried to force the combination from her. When she became engaged to Naylor, the uncle took her away. Naylor has traced her to that locality by a letter he received from her, but he does not know the house she is in.

As Christopher saw her being taken in an auto from the castle the previous evening, he knows she is there no longer. A letter comes while they talk saying that Race may learn something of the girl if he will call at a certain house that evening. The man with Naylor, Fergus O'Brien, a detective, scents a trap. It is arranged that Race shall go that evening, while the others will follow and see what happens. Christopher goes to the house and is attacked. After a fierce fight, the girl is rescued, her uncle and his accomplices are captured, and all ends happily.

LEND ME YOUR WIFE (November).—Tweedledum has an uncle who wants to bestow a fortune upon him, but not until he is married. This condition does not exactly please our hero, so he endeavors to deceive his uncle by making an arrangement with his friend to "lend me your wife" for a short time. Amusing situations follow when the husband and wife come to live in our hero's house. The husband plays the role of servant and is made to suffer all sorts of indignities when uncle comes to look things over. Things go on merrily enough for a time until uncle stumbles into the servant's room and discovers the husband and wife together. To prevent family scandal, the deceivers have to confess that it was a trick. But uncle was not allowed to escape with his fortune so easily, as Tweedledum sets about to find another partner to share his blessings. This he does before the time limit expires and everything is satisfactorily arranged.

THE YELLOW MENACE (Episode No. 13 - "The Spy and the Submarine"—Two Parts - Nov. 27).—By appealing to the vanity of Howard Smithson, who is the inventor of a remarkable air-lock for submarine use, Ali Singh, in the garb of a citizen of Europe, laying aside for the time being his Oriental make-up, succeeds in boarding the submarine, accompanied by two of his associates. Together they overpower Smithson and leave him for dead, intending to learn the secret of the air-lock invention. Smithson, however, is not killed, but revives enough to attempt locking himself while the submarine sinks. Ali Singh, however, is saved through the devotion of his men, who shoot him through a torpedo tube.

LESS THAN THE DUST (Seven Parts - Nov. 6).—The cast: Radha (Mary Pickford); Captain Richard Townsend (David Powell); Captain Bradshaw (Frank Losee); Mrs. Bradshaw (Mary Alden); Ramlan (Mario Majeroni); Jawan (Cesare Gravina); a derelict (Francis Joyner); Ahmed (Russell Bassett); Bhesthe (Walter Morgan); a gossip (Merlita Esmonde). Written by Hector Turnbull. Directed by John Emerson.

At the opening of the story a rebellion, caused by a dispute over the sacred rights of the Hindoos and their abuse by the provincial government, is in progress the natives and soldiers of the British garrison being in conflict. Radha has been adopted by a sword maker. During the warfare she meets Captain Richard Townsend of the local garrison. She is impressed by him. In a later scene when Radha, in her playful and innocent way, falls into the sacred waters of the pool at the temple, she is charged with desecration and is attacked by an infuriated mob of fanatical natives. Captain Townsend arrives on the scene and saves her.

Mrs. Bradshaw, the wife of a fellow officer of Townsend's, has fallen in love with the latter and when she learns of his friendliness for Radha, she resents it and shows her dislike at all times. During a severe fight between soldiers and natives the girl saves the life of the captain when he falls wounded in the field. During the rebellion the foster father of Radha is thrown into prison and before she can get his release Captain Townsend is sent to England on a furlough to recuperate from his wounds.

Then it is that Radha organizes a rescuing party and attempts to get her father out of prison. She is about to be killed when her father reveals the fact that the girl is not his daughter but is the child of an English officer, who, becoming addicted to drugs, dropped to the level of a social derelict, Radha knowing the officer has shown him great sympathy, never being aware of the relationship.

This derelict is the grandson of a wealthy Englishman. Radha is sent to England to see him and also to find Captain Townsend. It develops that Townsend is a nephew of the same old gentleman who died before the girl reaches England. He has left his fortune to Townsend. Arriving at the estate Radha is surprised to find her captain there. She tells him of her foster father's plight and the officer uses his influence to get his release. The little girl remains in England and is sent to school. Gradually the fondness for each other grows into a love and Townsend and Radha are married.

THE CHAPERON (Essanay—Five Parts—Nov. 20).—The cast: Madge Hemmingway (Edna Mayo); Jim Ogden (Eugene O'Brien); Count Van Tuyle (Sydney Ainsworth); Mrs. Hemmingway Frankie Raymond); Richard Coombs (John Cossar); Mrs Coombs (Marion Skinner). Directed by Arthur Berthelet.

Jim Ogden, secretly engaged to Madge Hemmingway, wealthy heiress, becomes sensitive over his lack of money and breaks the engagement. In a moment of pique she marries Count Van Tuyle. After six months she returns from Europe, minus her husband. Trying to forget her error, she goes to the country.

Richard Coombs is the nearest neighbor of Madge's aunt, and he finds it necessary for his wife and himself to hasten to the city. A chaperon is needed immediately for their four daughters. By necessity they are forced to take Madge, who is still the runaway Countess Van Tuyle.

Jim Ogden is on a canoe trip through the lakes and stops at the Coombs' camp. This is the crowning embarrassment for the chaperon. Up to the time the cook, butler and chauffeur have quit and each one of the girls has opened a summer flirtation.

However, Ogden persuades Madge to take a canoe ride. Their craft strikes a rock and the two are marooned on a little barren island. Meanwhile the Count has followed his wife to America and with Madge's mother arrives at the camp. Becoming suspicious he goes up the

THE COSSACK WHIP (Edison, Five Parts, Nov. 15).—The cast: Darya (Viola Dana); Katerina (Grace Williams); Alexis (Bob Walker); Turov (Frank Farrington); Sergius (Richard Tucker); Mme. Popeska (Sally Crute).

A long line of prisoners winds over the snow-covered Russian steppes toward the train which is to carry the unfortunates to Siberia. A band of revolutionists, bent on freeing their brothers from the living death, attack the Cossack guard and in the excitement several prisoners escape. Turov, Prefect of Police, learns of the attack and orders the whole district raided that he may punish the perpetrators of the attack.

In their crude home live Sasha and his daughters, Darya and Katerina. Suddenly the still air is shattered with the blood-curdling yells of the raiding Cossacks. Little Darya is quickly hidden, but Sasha and Katerina are led before Turov. The father is sent to Siberia. Soon afterward Katerina, robbed of life and honor, creeps back to the little settlement to die, carrying with her the Cossack knout with which she has been flogged.

Over her sister's body, Darya swears revenge and keeps the Cossacks whip as a reminder of her vow. Then follows a story of action and power, telling how Darya becomes the favorite dancer of the Imperial Ballet; how she brings the bloodthirsty Turov to her feet and finally accomplishes her revenge; how, at last, she listens to the pleadings of Sergius, a revolutionist and master of the ballet, and how the two of them make their way out of Russia and across the ocean to the great land of liberty and opportunity.

JEALOUSY (Five Parts, Nov. 20).—Carney marries Agnes Maynard and soon forgets his old sorrow. Anne, tired of her mock wedded life, attempts to make Roland jealous of his wife. She induces Carney to visit the home of Randolph Parsons. There Roland finds his wife, but a sudden twist of affairs results in his discovering that Agnes is innocent.

Anne tries new tactics now. She knows that Carney has been losing steadily in the stock market, through her husband's efforts to ruin the man his wife loves. Anne finds a memorandum on Martin's desk: "Corner B. H. R. Stock." She gives this information to Carney.

He is overjoyed and grasps the tip eagerly. Martin, however, learns of what Anne has done, and reverses his tactics. The result is that Carney is ruined completely. In his rage, he thinks that Anne has tricked him purposely, and he goes to her, furious. While he is there, she sees Martin returning.

She thinks she has an opportunity for revenge. She tears her clothing and lets down her hair. Then she turns out the lights and screams. Martin enters. Anne shrieks that Carney had been attacking her.

Martin smiles and takes out the B. H. R. memorandum.

"I know your game," he says. "Go," he tells Carney, "you are ruined. You have been punished enough."

Martin bids his wife good-bye, and informs her that he is going to leave her. Anne falls senseless to the floor.

Chicago, Ill.—Woman vote for president here for the first time. Their influence on Illinois aids in piling up a tremendous plurality in that state for Charles E. Hughes.

New York City.—An election night crowd of more than 900,000 persons swarms the streets where a mad multitude creates a Bedlam of noise as returns flash on outdoor screens showing the result of balloting all over the United States. The result of the election is in doubt many hours after the polls are closed. Hughes' supporters claim his victory, while Democratic leaders insist that President Wilson is re-elected.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX (Episode No. 14—"The Hidden Menace"—Two Parts—Nov. 6.)—The cast: Jimmy Barton (Harry Fox); Beatrice Fairfax (Grace Darling); Alice (Alice Masters); David Holmes (Nigel Barrie).

Beatrice Fairfax receives a letter from Alice Masters, an heiress and orphan, saying that she has become engaged to the man of her choice, David Holmes, but that her guardian, Mr. Harvey, objects and has forbidden her sweetheart to call upon her. She says that her other guardian, Mr. Wells, sympathizes with her and has promised to demand an accounting from Harvey. Alice also says that her mother died insane and recently she has begun to have delusions of the strangest kind, which greatly disturb and frighten her.

While Beatrice is thinking of Alice and her trouble, Jimmy Barton is given an assignment to investigate the death of a Wall Street broker named Wells. On his way out, Jimmy stops to tell Beatrice of his assignment. She is struck by the sameness of names and hands Jimmy Alice's letter. He advises Beatrice to call upon Alice, promising to join her there.

At Wells' office, he finds a policeman questioning the chief clerk, who declares that Wells saw no one that morning except Mr. Harvey, his co-trustee. Harvey carried a black bag. He remained only a few minutes, leaving the bag in the private office. An hour later Harvey's confidential servant called for the bag, and the broker was found dying, the bag on the floor near by. There was a queer odor and the servant quickly opened the window and went away with the bag. Jimmy finds a small key on the floor, but nothing else.

In the meantime, Beatrice arrives at the Harvey mansion. Harvey informs her that Alice is insane, but Beatrice is convinced otherwise and promises to spend the night with the girl. Jimmy hurries to the Harvey residence, but is refused admission. He goes on a tour of inspection around the house and discovers an open window on a low balcony. He enters and finds himself in a large bedroom. On the table he sees a black bag and concludes that it is the one Harvey carried into Wells' office. A noise at the door compels him to hide to prevent discovery by Harvey's servant who comes in and puts the bag in a closet, filled with all kinds of strange and fantastic costumes, parts of stuffed animals and reptiles. The servant takes a huge stuffed hand from the closet, locks the door, puts the key in his pocket and goes away.

Jimmy tries to pick the lock of the closet door but is interrupted and hides under the bed as Harvey enters with the closet door key which he places on the table. Harvey becomes angry over two telegrams which he reads and throws them on the floor within reach of Jimmy. Jimmy finds the telegrams are from broker demanding more margin. Harvey fails as yet. Jimmy take the black bag and hurries to the police station. He show the key to the captain and inserting it in the lock of the bag turns it around and around as if winding up a toy. There is a buzzing inside the bag and all draw back in alarm. Jimmy, unconcerned takes out his watch. At the end of an hour the bag suddenly opens and a puff of vapor is sent up. All are affected by the fumes. Jimmy demands Harvey's arrest. The police captain explains that there is no evidence that the bag is the same as the one taken into Wells' office. "We must have more evidence," he says, and Jimmy agrees to get it.

He secures a "devil suit," and with a detective gets into Harvey's bedroom. Jimmy puts on the devil suit and with the black bag hides behind the curtains. Harvey comes in and from the closet takes a large stuffed snake which he fastens on his arm and goes out into the hall. Jimmy and the detective follow and see him hide behind curtains on one side of the stairs. As Alice comes up, Harvey thrusts the snake out from the curtains and Alice screams. Jimmy in the devil suit and waving the black bag runs in and drags Harvey through the curtains. He tries to escape but is caught by the detective. Harvey asks if he can be arrested for playing a practical joke on his ward. Jimmy, still arrayed in the devil suit holds up the bag and leads the way to Harvey's bedroom, all following him.

The detective handcuffs Harvey to the bedpost. Alice, Beatrice and David look on wonderingly. Jimmy looks at his watch and calls attention to the fact that it is exactly nine o'clock. He takes the key from his pocket and makes a pretense of winding the bag. Then he sets his watch against the bag with the dial facing Harvey, and directs everyone to leave the room. At five minutes to ten, Harvey screams for help and Jimmy and the others burst into the room. Harvey is shaking and afraid. He confesses that he has speculated with Alice's money, and that when Wells demanded an accounting he fixed up the bag with a secret but powerful poison gas and left it in the broker's office timed to open of itself in an hour and do its deadly work. Jimmy takes down the confession and makes Harvey sign it. Harvey points in horror to the watch. "Ten o'clock," he shrieks. But Jimmy answers with a laugh, "I didn't wind it."

THE SHIELDING SHADOW (No. 8, "The Haunting Hand"—Astra—Two Parts—Nov. 19).—One Lamp Louie, sent by Sebastian to confirm a rumor that Leontine and her preserver, Ravengar, having escaped from a burning balloon at sea, are sheltered in a lighthouse, arrives in the midst of a terrific storm. A bolt of lightning demolishes the lighthouse and Louie, escaping with some minor injuries, returns to Sebastian with the welcome news that Ravengar and Leontine have perished in the ruins.

Sebastian hastens preparations for his marriage with Bianca, Queen of the Underworld, whose charms he has succumbed to. The night of the wedding Louie has a visitation from the Shielding Shadow, the weird visitor threatening his life if he does not prevent the marriage. Terrified by the uncanny threat, he sets out to obey its commands. At Bianca's gambling house he seeks Sebastian. When Bianca learns of his mission she sets her men on him and in the Hidden House a battle takes place. Wounded and unable to cope with their numbers, Louie manages to escape to the roof, Sebastian in pursuit. They struggle on a girder and Louie is thrown to his death from the dizzy height.

Sebastian, weak from his gruesome experience, staggers home where another shock awaits him. Seated comfortably in a chair before the fire he discovers—his wife. How did Leontine escape?

THE WORLD AND THE WOMAN—(Gold Rooster—Five parts—Nov. 19).—The cast: The Woman (Jeanne Eagels); The Man (Boyd Marshall); James Palmer (Thomas A. Curran); Jim Rollins (Wayne Arey); His Wife (Grace De Carlton); Anna Graham (Carey Hastings); "Sunny" (Ethelmary Oakland).

A gay dinner party took place in one of Broadway's showiest restaurants. The host was a bachelor of wealth, and his guests included men of his own station in life, and young girls caught in the whirlpool of gayety. The bachelor told the young girls that the keeper of his mountain lodge had advised him by letter that she requires the services of a maid, and he offered the proposition to the girls, but they refused. A face then appeared at the window of the restaurant. It was the face of a woman who had been cast aside. The girls told their host to offer the job to her. Being in a mood to take the advice, he hurried from the restaurant, overtook the derelict and brought her back with him. The woman was starving and accepted the position in the mountain. Her past life was recalled to her that very night, for one of the guests in the restaurant was the man who had made her what she was.

In the Adirondack Mountains the woman found life quiet, but a chance acquaintanceship with a family in the valley marked another change in her life. The family (a man, his wife and little daughter) took a liking to the maid and induced her to attend services at the village church. The weeks passed, and then the owner of the lodge arrived from the city with a number of his friends. Instead of the forlorn outcast whom he had sent to the mountains he found an attractive woman, but one who would not listen to his advances. Angered by her attitude, her employer tried to force his intentions upon her. She then left the lodge and went to the home of the little family, where she was welcomed.

Some days later the little daughter was accidentally injured. The doctor declared that her spine was broken and, despite all his efforts, the child steadily sank until her life was despaired of. The outcast prayed for Divine help, and as she prayed it seemed to her that she was told to heal the child. Strengthened and transfigured by her religious devotion, she accomplished what the doctor had failed to do.

The woman's power soon became known and was as effective with other invalids as it was with her first patient, while at the mountain lodge its worldly owner laughed cynically as he thought how these respectable, narrow-minded people reverenced a woman whom they would despise if they knew her past. From the city the man came who had blighted her life. His friend at the mountain lodge had written him about the woman's new career. He came to sneer, but soon learned to respect and honor her.

But one day the woman failed for the first time. A mountaineer brought his wife, a cripple for several years, to be cured. The owner of the lodge threatened that he would reveal the outcast's past life. Realizing that he would keep his word, the woman's great faith disappeared. While the assembled people were still discussing the failure of their idol, her former employer told them what this woman had been before she came among them, and they recoiled from her in horror, all of them except the man who had been her first enemy and had now become her friend. He asked her to marry him and she refused, going out into the world alone. The old bitterness did not return to her and she prayed for guidance. It seemed to her that she was told to make the cure which she had failed to achieve, and she set out for the mountaineer's cabin.

The mountaineer's wife had been crippled by a racing automobile and that day the owner of the mountain lodge told her husband the name of the man who had driven the car. It was the man who had asked the outcast to marry him. The mountaineer decoyed the guilty man into the mountains, and there a fight took place between the two men. The man from the city was no match for the mountaineer and he was about to be buried into the chasm when he beheld a sight which caused him to forget his vengeance forever. His wife was walking down the mountain path towards him. And with her was the healer, the woman who had failed. Realization came to him as his wife told him of the great cure, and he thanked the woman whom he had misjudged. Happiness has come to the outcast as the wife of the man who made an outcast.

ARMS AND THE WOMAN (Gold Rooster—Five parts—Nov. 26).—Rozika, a young Hungarian girl, gifted with a golden voice, emigrates to America with her brother Carl, a ne'er-do-well. Her street singing attracts the ear of David Trevor, president of a great steel works engaged in manufacturing guns for European warfare. Trevor advances money to have Rozika's voice cultivated by a master and in a short time it wins her fame. Her gratitude developes into a deep love and eventually Trevor marries her.

Halliday, commissioned by his government to order war munitions, arrives at the Trevor household and for the first time Rozika realizes the nature of her husband's business. Her patriotic Hungarian heart forsees the destitution and misery in store for her country and she pleads with Trevor to stop the manufacture of the death-dealing munitions. Her brother Carl, who has killed a man in a brawl, has returned to his country and joined an anarchistic brotherhood, who send him to blow up the Trevor works.

Rosika, torn between a love for her husband and her country, tries to prevent Carl from carrying out the plans of the Brotherhood by tricking him and locking him in a closet. Gun in hand he breaks through the door as Trevor enters the room. Carl wounds him, but not mortally. Shortly afterward an explosion occurs. While the room is lit by the glare from the flames of the burning factory, Trevor, held in the arms that really bear the brunt of war, says through a contented smile: "My dear, it is better so—it is better so."

AMERICAN ARISTOCRACY (Fine Arts—Five Parts—Nov. 12.)—The cast: Cassius Lee (Douglas Fairbanks); Leander Hick (Charles de Lima); Miss Hick (Jewel Carmen); Percy Horton (Albert Parker); Delgado (Arthur Ortiego). Directed by Lloyd Ingraham.

Leander Hick is anxious that his daughter should marry Percy Horton, a wealthy manufacturer, who has dealt extensively in war munitions and who has secretly sold to the Mexican government despite a government prohibition forbidding it. Horton is a mollycoddle and in no way measures up to Miss Hick's ideas of the man she wants to marry. Horton's legitimate business is the manufacture of malted milk. One day Miss Hick declares to a number of girl friends with whom she is riding in her machine, that the first real man she sees, she intends to kiss. As the machine rounds a corner, Miss Hick sees in the roadway a beautiful specimen of young manhood. He is unknown to her. In reality he is Cassius Lee, the son of an old aristocratic family with unlimited wealth. Lee has volunteered his services as a secret service agent to the government.

The unexpected osculation over with, Miss Hick jumps back into the car and speeds away. The young man decides he will know the girl and proceeds to haunt all the hotels. There is to be a ball that night at the best hotel in the place and the young man attends. So does Miss Hick, accompanied by her father and Percy Horton. While young Lee, who chances to be attired exactly the same as Percy Horton, is standing on the edge of the crowd, trying to pick out the girl of the afternoon, a Mexican

Exhibitors of Maryland

A Special Meeting has been called by the President of the National Organization for Sunday, November 26th, at the Hotel Emerson, in the City of Baltimore. The hour is three o'clock in the afternoon. It seems to be the prevailing opinion among exhibitors in Baltimore and throughout the state that

Organization is the Prime Need of the Hour

All exhibitors in Maryland are therefore urged to attend and make the new organization an instrument of good and a material advantage to themselves. The Moving Picture World, admittedly the best friend of the organized exhibitor, is printing this call at the request of a number of prominent exhibitors in the City of Baltimore.

Did It Ever Occur To You

That the Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co. has done more for the exhibitor by furnishing a machine for his booth at a great saving than any other similar company in existence? If you did not know this, we wish to impress upon you that the above is a fact.

We fear no competition when it comes to cost of up-keep and simplicity of machine, nor is competition plentiful when considering exactness of machine.

The MOTIOGRAPH is in a class by itself.

With a combination of accuracy—simplicity—economy—service and satisfaction, and the comparatively small initial cost, the MOTIOGRAPH is the biggest buy today.

The MOTIOGRAPH is not intended to merely produce an excellent picture for a short time but to continue to give unexcelled projection for years. The material used will not wear out with continued use.

The Price is within reach of every conservative buyer.

The performance of this machine with exceedingly low cost of up-keep and extremely long life are things that every exhibitor should take into consideration. Just give our dealer a chance to demonstrate its superior qualities.

spy who is disguised as a hotel porter, steps up beside him and mistaking him for Horton, puts a note in his hand. Lee's suspicions are aroused when he discovers the note to be a message directing Horton to ship 2000 pounds of explosions the next day. The note contained the information that the yacht would be in waiting.

Late that night, Lee steals into the Horton factory and a hasty examination reveals the fact that the malted milk cans really contain gun powder. He is set upon by hired guards of Horton and beaten, locked and tied in the cage of an elevator. He finally makes his escape. The next morning, Lee, having notified the government officials that he is on the trail of one of the gang he has been on the lookout for, starts in pursuit of the yacht. No tug being available, he uses a hydroplane; leaps from that to a speed boat and just as a United States torpedo boat destroyer comes up and takes a hand in the case, overhauls the yacht in a powerful speed boat. The undoing of Horton is complete and the girl—of course, she marries the real man she has chanced upon so accidentally.

JIM GRIMSBY'S BOY (Ince—Five Parts—Nov 12.)—The cast: Jim Grimsby (Frank Keenan); Bill Grimsby (Enid Markey); Waldo Whittier (Robert McKim); Mrs. Grimsby (Fanny Midgley); the doctor (J. P. Lockney); "Pard" (Rupert). Directed by Reginald Barker.

Jim Grimsby is a grouchy mountaineer of the gold-country. He married eighteen years previously for the purpose of rearing a son to whom he could teach his own peculiar ways, and who should become his boon companion. His wife died, leaving him with a girl-baby, which completely soured his spirits. He named the child Bill, and brought her up as a boy. Bill is beginning to be useful around the house, and tries her best to win her father's love. She is aroused one day to her charm through the illustrations of pretty girls in a magazine, and tries to arrange her hair according to the pictures. She also makes a crude skirt. Her father shows opposition, but her spirit of defiance, inherited from him, startles Grimsby, who desists in his attempt to cut off her hair.

Grimsby reads in the Goldville Weekly Nugget of Waldo Whittier, the new sheriff from the East, and is seized with a desire to defy this college boy sheriff. Bill informs her father of her intention to go to the county seat to school, and asks for a bag of gold to buy proper clothes. Her father refuses, and accuses her of murdering her mother by being born. She swears never to speak to him again until he admits he is sorry, and they live in silence.

Sheriff Whittier and a deputy ride past the cabin one day with a prisoner, and inquire the road to Goldville. Bill gives him the directions and tells him she wishes to go to school. He tells her she needs no money to go to school, but just some new clothes, and rides away. The next morning Bill starts for Goldville, but is intercepted by her father and returns to the hut.

Grimsby prepares to go to Goldville, and Bill is afraid of the outcome. She vainly tries to prevent his going. He holds up the Casino dance hall and tacks a taunting threat to the sheriff on a pillar. Then he returns home. The sheriff returns to Goldville an hour later, hears of the hold-up and reads the notice, whereupon he sets out alone for the mountaineer's hut. Arriving, he enters Grimsby's room by the window and is confronted by Bill's leveled rifle. She has heard him coming and rushes in to save her father.

Grimsby realizes his mistake, becomes reconciled to his daughter and says he is sorry for his words regarding her mother. The sheriff takes Bill's hands, and as she looks into his eyes she becomes shy, and turns to her father, who says to the sheriff: "Young feller, you'd better come around some other time when she ain't so dern excited. You can't tell which way she might jump jest now." Whittier departs and Grimsby caresses his daughter.

THE MICROSCOPE MYSTERY (Fine Arts—Five Parts—Nov 19.)—The cast: Doc Arnold (Wilfred Lucas); Ira Dayton (F. A. Turner); Jessie Dayton (Constance Talmadge); Dr. Horatio Bell (Pomeroy Cannon); Dr. Bell's assistants (Fred Warren and James O'Shea); "Drowsy" (Jack Sealock); Hilda, the Dayton's hired girl (Winnifred Westover); Jud, the Dayton's half-witted hired man (Monte Blue); Mrs. Simpson, Jessie's aunt (Kate Bruce). Directed by Paul Powell.

"Drowsy," Doc. Arnold's office boy, awakens long enough now and then to inform occasional stray patients: "No, the Doc ain't in; he don't come here much!" Doc Arnold is indeed busy elsewhere—bug-hunting, not microbes nor bacilli, but insects. The Dayton family retire from the farm and move "in town." Father Dayton sick with every symptom of every disease he can hear of. Hilda, the handsome hired help who sighs for the admiration of men; silly Jud, the half-witted man of all work; and, last and best of the family, Jessie Dayton, the daughter, who lives only to collect postage stamps—until she meets Doc Arnold, the other "bug."

Father Dayton rushes with his symptoms to Doc Arnold, and is told that he should eat less and exercise more. The "sick" man goes in a rage to Dr. Bell the great "specialist," just come to town with an imposing staff, to prey on the "hicks." The hypochondriac is welcomed and "taken in." Jessie and her aunt depart for the Chautauqua, and Doc Arnold follows, more ardently than ever he followed the rarest butterfly.

In her absence Dr. Bell takes up his residence in the Dayton house "to save the life of the very sick" (and very rich) owner, who almost dies under his ministrations. The great specialist is not too busy to find time to caress the chin of handsome Hilda, the hired help.

Jessie returns just in time to hear her father cry: "The scoundrel robbed me and has left me to die." The great specialist having just induced him to sign a check for a very large sum. Jessie snatches a revolver, and crying that she will kill the man who has robbed and almost murdered her father, through malpractice, rushes after the doctor, and, on the porch struggles with him for the possession of the note.

Doc Arnold and Mrs. Simpson, who have followed Jessie to the house, arrive just in time to hear the shot and to find Jessie beside the dead quack doctor and the still smoking revolver which lies on the floor. She says that she did not kill him. At the inquest Doc Arnold with his bug-hunting microscope identifies the user of the gun as someone afflicted with tuberculosis, and the crime is thus fastened upon half-witted Jud, who has killed the "specialist" through jealousy because of Bell's betrayal of Hilda with whom Jud himself is in love.

THE HONORABLE ALGY (Ince—Five Parts—Nov. 19.)—The cast: The Honorable Algy (Charles Ray); Grace Dryker (Margaret Thompson); Lord Rockmore (Howard Hickman); Patricia (Margery Wilson); Lon Bassett (Albert Cody); Bud Harvey (Jerome Storm); James Dryker (Charles French); Mrs. Dryker (Louise Brownell); the Marquis of Monteith (Thomas S. Guise); Belle Delmore (Katherine Kirkwood); the Vicar of Hadleigh (Walt Whitman). Directed by Raymond B. West.

Algernon, the youngest of four sons, is sent to America to contract a good marriage and bring money into the family, in order to save the estate of his father, the Marquis of Monteith. A fortnight later he starts, after bidding farewell to his sweetheart Patricia Leslie, the Vicar's daughter. On board ship he meets Lord Rockmore, who has a bad name. Rockmore is accompanying Dryker, a millionaire, and his wife and daughter to New York. Algernon is introduced to the Drykers. They have placed for safe-keeping, considerable jewelry in the purser's safe, including a rope of pearls, valued at sixty thousand pounds. Dryker has been followed since purchasing the pearls by Bud Harvey, a shrewd crook, who sees the purser returning with the tray, collides with him and drops, unseen, a pill into the glass. The purser drops asleep, and Harvey secures his keys and steals the Dryker jewels.

The robbery is discovered on the following day, and Harvey, knowing his cabin will be searcehd, ties the jewels in his handkerchief, which he attaches to a string, and drops them down one of the ventilating funnels on the upper deck. Algernon, sitting in his room, sees the handkerchief come swinging down through the ventilator, reaches up and unties it, and drops back in amazement when he sees the jewels. He decides to keep them, and hides them in his tobacco pouch underneath the tobacco. Harvey reaches New York with the jewels, undiscovered.

Rockmore and Algernon put up at the same hotel. Rockmore's picture is published in the society columns, and Belle Delmore, a dancer, with whom he used to be thick in London, learns of his arrival and intentions with regard to Miss Dryker, and swears that she will send his letters and a statement to the Dryker girl. Algernon decides not to keep the jewels, and puts them in a box, which he mails to Miss Dryker. Rockmore plans to intercept the package of letters, and watches the letter carrier, and just before the package is delivered, rings the bell of the Dryker residence, and is talking to the butler when the postman delivers a package, which he steals without the knowledge of the butler. Algernon arrives a few minutes later, and discovers that Rockmore has evidently taken the package, whereupon he bundles Grace and her father into a machine and tells the chauffeur to drive to the hotel.

They arrive in time to capture Rockmore, and recover the jewels. Algernon tells Grace Dryker of their rotten luck back home, of Patricia and of the family council. He asks her what he should do, and she suggests that he go to work. He has never thought of this solution, but it appeals to him, and he is eventually employed as a broker's clerk with a tidy salary. He ventures his all in speculation.

When Christmas comes, he is invited to the Dryker house, and after all receive their presents, Miss Dryker and his employer, who is engaged to Grace, announce the last present is for Algernon. His present is Patricia. His employer whispers that the "spec" is a big success and Monteith Hall is safe. He is pushed toward Pat, and the curtains drop together and Algernon hears Grace crying in her lover's arms and knew that they were tears of happiness for him. He gathers Pat into his arms.

"Just Crying for American Films"

This is the way a foreign film buyer put the case a few days ago. Even in some of the European countries our American films are steadily gaining favor in competition with the production of the home manufacturers in their own countries.

CINE-MUNDIAL

is the only Spanish film paper that is popularizing American films in all the South American and Spanish speaking countries. The old prejudices against American films are rapidly dying on account of the undeniable excellence of most of the recent big American productions. Even if not quite ready to handle this export business, now is the time to popularize your trade brand.

THE RATE ON EACH MONTHLY ISSUE IS VERY REASONABLE.

Get the Full Value Of Your Pictures

by using the lens that gives a maximum of steady illumination.

Marlux

projection lenses are built on mechanically correct principles. In every detail of their construction you can see the high "Marlux" quality.

Mechanically correct in design, the Marlux gives most satisfactory results in actual use, bringing out the full value of every picture by a strong, steady illumination.

There is no rotation of the lens in focusing, and consequently the image on the screen always remains perfectly steady.

The

is the ideal Pipe Organ for theaters. It is a whole orchestra in itself. It can express anything in response to a skilled touch. Organ music lends itself with singular adaptability to an accompaniment of motion pictures, but you, Mr. Exhibitor, must bear in mind that popular musical judgment is quick to discriminate between the grandeur and wonderful effectiveness of refined pipe organ tones and the cheap, commonplace drone and blare of the average theater organ. If you are ready to equip your theater with an organ do not fail to have the WEICKHARDT UNIT ORGAN demonstrated to you. Investigate its merits and your choice will be gratifyingly easy.

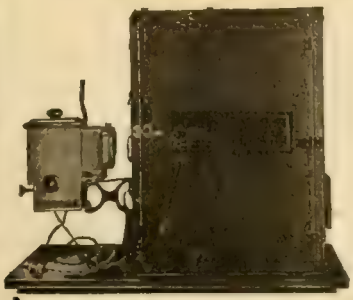
"MOST PERFECT SMALL PROJECTOR EVER BUILT"



So writes Geo. R. Clough, of Galveston, Texas.

"Fulfills an ideal of a motion picture projector on scientific principles, but still easily portable and simple to operate"—writes L. J. Burrud of El Paso Chamber of Commerce.

Every day we get letters like these about

THE PORTOSCOPE

A portable standard motion picture projector — price complete, $135.00

A machine built into an asbestos lined carrying case, no larger than an ordinary suit case, and weighing but 35 pounds.

In two minutes, the machine can be made ready for operation. Sets on any table. Equipped with either 1000 C.P. incandescent, arc or calcium light. TAKES ANY STANDARD FILM. Gives a brilliant, flickerless picture.

PRACTICAL, SAFE DURABLE

THE PORTOSCOPE is a thoroughly proven machine, in successful use for over a year and a half by America's largest concerns. Every essential of good projection is embodied.

JOIN THE LIVEST DEALERS—HANDLE THE PORTOSCOPE.

The big money makers in the business have recognized in THE PORTOSCOPE the machine they have been looking for. It is making enthusiastically good everywhere. Write for catalog, and full particulars of our proposition to you.

HILL MOTOR GENERATOR

For Motion Picture Arc Lamps

Delivers true direct current from alternating lines.

PRODUCING STEADY WHITE LIGHT PROJECTION OF TRUE COLOR VALUE, WITHOUT FLICKER OR FLARE.

It delivers 12,000 candle power on a standard sized screen up to 120 ft. throw, or 3 times more light than is obtained from the alternating current arc for the same current. It also eliminates all current wasting balancing and voltage reduction resistances, hence will pay for itself in this saving alone. Built in capacities sufficient to carry two machines during dissolve, this is accomplished without a break. Covering but 18x15 inches of floor space, it may be installed in the booth under the direct control of the operator. Running in ball bearings, it is quiet and free from vibration.

"What's in a Name?"

Well!—It All Depends Upon The Name!

In my case, I have a lot of pride in my name—not for reasons of euphony or braggadocio, but because it is definitely associated with a big, clean, successful, reputable and growing business.

In this particular instance, it is identified with the intention and ability to completely and efficiently serve the Motion Picture Trade.

I would have you consider this trade mark my signet—the symbol of my promise to give to your developing and printing—to the production of your photoplay—the same honest, intelligent and sincere attention it would have if mine alone.

And, I always take very good care of what's mine!

From the virile pen

"THE EAGLE'S

The grandest box office attraction released this season. A wonder play based on the stirring theme of National Defense. A play that will grip your audiences; that will stir the blood of every American man, woman and child.

Not a propaganda, or a lecture or a sermon, but a realistic portrayal of existing conditions so unusual, so stupendous in conception, and so lavish in production as to put to shame the so-called spectacular, mimic warfare pictures that attempt to stampede Exhibitors with wordy advertising.

PROOF that you get the Big Serial Money With The UNIVERSAL Serial Glorious

"LIBERTY"

Exhibitors say it is the greatest of all Serials and—IT GETS THE MONEY

READ

"LIBERTY is a splendid serial in every detail—has exceptionally good drawing power."—Empire Theatre, Sunnyvale, California.

"LIBERTY is a very exciting serial and is proving a very good drawing card for us."—Wigwam Theatre Company, Reno, Nevada.

"LIBERTY is the best serial I have ever run—the best I have ever seen. People think it great. I had one-third more business on LIBERTY day than any other week day."—Maze Theatre, Stockton, Cal.

"LIBERTY is going fine and is one fine picture—everybody seems to like it."—Star Theatre, Mason City, Iowa.

"LIBERTY is full of the best action I have ever seen. I can always bank on a good night for LIBERTY."—Grand Theatre, Santa Cruz, Cal.

"LIBERTY is going big in Western Canadian Territory. In Calgary, LIBERTY is more popular than any serial ever shown there with one possible exception."—D. G. Walkley, Manager, Western Canada, Canadian Universal Film Company.

"I am having such unusual good attendance on LIBERTY nights, I feel I must tell you of same. My 600 seats are not nearly enough to accommodate the crowds. That is going some in a suburban House four miles from the city. It is just the thing to grip the pulse of the public who are so much interested in the affairs on our Mexican border."—Echo Theatre, Portland, Ore.

"LIBERTY is one of the best serials I ever ran. In spite of bad weather and strong competition LIBERTY kept increasing box office receipts. Ran 10th episode to the best business yet, showing that it is gaining at that stage of the picture."—Silver Star Theatre, Freewater, Ore.

"LIBERTY draws big crowd here and every one much pleased."—Hardacre Opera House, Tipton, Iowa.

You don't have to wonder about "LIBERTY." Here is proof that it is the most popular serial ever filmed. Further proof, that it is GETTING MORE MONEY for Exhibitors than anything they have ever shown. You can take these men at their word. They are in business to make money the same as you. Write or wire for full information immediately to your nearest Universal Exchange, or

ITS star plays prove the soundness of the BLUEBIRD policy of "The Play's The Thing," while its star players and frequently an all star cast proves that in emphasizing the importance of the Play—nothing is left undone to make each BLUEBIRD a perfect photoplay entertainment.

In "The Sign of The Poppy," the drama begins with the introduction of strongly contrasted characters—a handsome and wealthy young couple returning from a joyous honeymoon—and the young man's father, living in deadly fear of an impending peril.

"The Sign of The Poppy" is the death sign of a Chinese Tong which seeks to wreak vengence on the aged man for an old time enmity. Moving swiftly in breathless suspense, the plot develops intensely dramatic situations and closes with an unexpected climax.

Ten million readers of the Saturday Evening Post are being told the inspiring facts about BLUEBIRD photoplays every week in BLUEBIRD advertisements. BLUEBIRD exhibitors all over this country are reaping the benefit in constantly increasing attendance. "What's Going On In The Mutual"

WEEKLY NEWS OF THE MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION AND ITS 68 EXCHANGES

DECEMBER 2, 1916

Notables In Uplift Work Enthusiastic Over "Charity?"

"CHARITY?," the seven-reel feature production, produced under the direction of Frank Powell, was given its first public showing on November 10. The Ziegfeld Theatre on Michigan Avenue, Chicago, was the scene of the screening, which was an invitation affair. The auditorium was literally packed with leaders in social-uplift work, heads of various settlements, and child welfare leagues. Besides these there was a goodly sprinkling of the clergy, reviewers from the trade press and others. When the last scene faded on the screen, the vast audience, roused to enthusiasm over the powerful arraignment of ill-conducted charity institutions, broke into applause which lasted for several minutes.

Bishop Fallows Speaks.

Ere the picture began on the screen, Bishop Samuel Fallows, one of Chicago's foremost church dignataries, addressed the audience. He pointed out the necessity of properly caring for the little ones, bereft of father and mother. He suggested that the picture which was soon to be shown might do more to awaken the public to the needs of properly conducted charity institutions than thousands of appeals by word of mouth alone. Present and interested in the mission of the film were such other notables as Esther Falkenstein of the Esther Falkenstein Settlement; Judge and Mrs. Thomas F. Scully; Miss Sophonisba Breckenridge and Miss Mary McDowell of the University Settlement; Mrs. Herman Wallstedt of the Child's Welfare Association of Philadelphia; Mrs. Corwin Hughitt of the Child's Welfare Department of Cincinnati, and numerous others.

A Plea for Social Justice.

The pictured story, wonderfully enacted and superbly photographed, proved a most powerful plea for social justice. It stars Linda A. Griffith, the famous "Biograph Girl," supported by a company that includes Creighton Hale, Sheldon Lewis, Elizabeth Burbridge, Veta Searl and others. President Freuler of the Mutual Film Corporation confidently expects it will prove as great a drawing card as have "damaged Goods," and "The Miracle of Life." Ask for "Charity?" at your nearest Mutual film exchange.

Thrills Continue.

The latest installment of the Helen Holmes picture, "A Lass of the Lumberlands," is even more sensational than those which have gone before.

Who Is Author of "Diamond Sequel?"

Who is the author of the sequel to "The Diamond From the Sky"? Thousands and thousands of people are wondering. The only possible way in which they can find the answer to the question is by seeing the films. Exhibitors showing the sequel to "The Diamond From the Sky" can profit by this overpowering curiosity on the part of the public. Bookings can now be made at any of the 68 Mutual film exchanges."

Mary Miles Minter Appears This Week In "Dream or Two Ago"

"A DREAM OR TWO AGO" is released this week. It is the fourth of the Mary Miles Minter Series of Mutual Star Productions. It is the third to be produced under the direction of James Kirkwood. It is a five-act story contrasting life in the underworld with that in the homes of luxury and wealth. Mary Miles Minter is charming, whether as a beggar girl in rags and tatters, or as a debutante in a millionaire's palace. The supporting company is well balanced and made up of players of note. The stage settings are exceptional. The photography is crystal clear. The story is absorbingly interesting.

Directed by James Kirkwood.

James Kirkwood, who formerly directed the pictures in which Mary Pickford appeared, is demonstrating with each new Minter release that he is a real artist. Dainty Mary Miles Minter is proving as adept under his instruction, as did his former star. In fact, she is rising to dramatic heights little short of marvelous. Each new release of the series is winning her thousands of new admirers. Theatres showing the Mary Miles Minter productions are finding them greater and greater attractions as new units in the series are issued. Bookings on the Mary Miles Minter Series can now be made at any of the 68 Mutual film exchanges.

Margarita Fischer Has Thrilling Adventures in "Miss Jackie of the Navy."

The second of the Margarita Fischer Series is now ready. "Miss Jackie of the Navy" is its title. It is released the week of November 27. It was made by the Pollard Picture Plays Company. It tells a thrilling story of a society girl's adventures aboard a battleship. Before she gets safely back to her palatial mansion she has some queer experiences in the Tropics. Miss Fischer is at her very best in this unusual five-act photodrama.

Life Aboard a Battleship.

Life aboard one of Uncle Sam's largest battleships is depicted in detail. In fact, when Miss Jackie, the society-girl heroine of the story, ventures aboard the warship, disguised as a little Jack tar, she finds life on the bounding wave to be composed of an infinite number of details of which she had never dreamed. Miss Jackie finds herself put to work as a common sailor by a burly boatswain. Unaware that she is a girl, he orders her to perform more than one embarrassing task. But she gamely carries on the masquerade—for she had vowed to win the attention of no less a personage than Captain Crowne himself.

Scenes in the Tropics.

Not all of the scenes are taken aboard ship by any means. The latter part of the story finds the cruiser anchored off an island in the Tropics, and a landing party ashore mixed up in some thrilling adventures. Miss Jackie is a member of the shore party and finally proves herself a heroine by rescuing them all from death at the hands of the natives. Eventually her disguise is penetrated and Captain Crowne finds her such a bewitching little creature that he compels her to enlist for life as his mate. Margarita Fischer is simply stunning as Miss Jackie. Bookings on the Fischer Series can be made at the nearest Mutual film exchange.

BY MAE TINEE.

THE devil asked "Is this art?" Linda Griffith asks "Is this charity?" And she forthwith presents us with seven reels of good acting.

A fairly large audience including well known charity and reform workers attended the private showing at the Ziegfeld theater. Bishop Fallows spoke feelingly of our children and what we should do for them before the showing of the picture.

Perhaps there is much to be deplored about associated charity. In fact I know there is. But promiscuous charity has never proved itself especially beneficial and until we have worked out some national plan for better caring for our orphans, the institutions must exist.

HELEN HOLMES in

A LASS OF THE LUMBERLANDS

A SPECTACULAR MOTION PICTURE
CHAPTER-PLAY OF THE NORTHWOODS

Praised By All the Critics

Here's what they say of the first chapter:

"Indications point to a really original and entertaining continued photoplay. The unusualness of the film's locale, the intenseness of the plot, and the popularity and daring of Helen Holmes, certainly ought to make this serial a sure winner."—William C. Esty in Nov 4th issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

"The opening chapter gives the story an excellent start. The big timber country of the Northwest is the scene of action, an authentic picture of the vast lumber industry being shown. The human interest of the drama is compelling and consistent with its surroundings."—Edward Weitzel in Nov. 4th issue of MOVING PICTURE WORLD.

"The initial chapter of the new serial is excellent. It has a great amount of action, fine settings in the Western lumberlands, and a story which promises to develop into one of the best of its kind so far shown on the screen."—Willard C. Benson in Nov. 4th issue of EXHIBITORS HERALD.

Here's what they say of the later ones:

"The second and third chapters bring in all the thrills foreshadowed by the first with more thrown in for good measure. The big moments are not only gripping, but are the logical developments of a genuiue story. Helen Holmes is peppier than ever."—William C. Esty in Nov. 11 issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

"The shipwreck scenes are impressive, an actual shipwreck having been used. Miss Holmes' likable personality and knowledge of the art of acting serve her in good stead. Leo Maloney has a congenial role and a number of the scenes in these later chapters are of great pictorial beauty.—Edward Weitzel in Nov. 4th issue of MOVING PICTURE WORLD.

"The second chapter of this dramatic serial is powerful in story and its dramatic situations are well done. In this production every thrill—and there are plenty of them—is strictly in the main plot. Not alone should the story itself prove a worthy attraction in any theatre, but the scenic beauty of the Western forests is really an educational feature." Willard C. Benson in Nov. 11th issue of EXHIBITORS HERALD

In one single chapter of this amazing new Helen Holmes serial—"A Lass of the Lumberlands"—the following thrills can be seen: A Boiler Explosion—Election Day in a Lumbercamp—The Riot at the Polling Places—Two Rival Gangs in a Pistol Fight—A Perilous Hand-over-hand Climb Along Telegraph Wires—The Burning of the City Hall—The Arrival of the Cavalry. Standing room is at a premium in the theatres running this chapter-play. Boom business at YOUR theatre. Book this spectacular chapter-play TODAY. Fifteen chapters—a new two-reel chapter each week.

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
In "The Chicago Herald"

IF you like action you will delight in the new serial, "Jimmie Dale, Alias the Gray Seal." If you want to see a picture that will make your heart beat faster and find you sitting upright in your seat waiting for the climax, you will not miss a single solitary reel of Jimmie's adventures.

No one will complain that these episodes drag or pall. There isn't time to be bored. Slam, bang, you scarcely emerge from one of Jimmie's adventures before you are taken right along with the current and carried bodily into another, just as thrilling.

All of the fans who have enjoyed E. K. Lincoln in the past will be happy to know that the portrayal of this temperamental youth has been intrusted to Mr. Lincoln's capable hands. Jimmie is a multimillionaire and social favorite. Far more important than Jimmie's place in the world is his systematic and contented thievery. Jimmie always leaves a seal to finish up his work, and this trademark is the only police clew.

Reviewed by MARGARET I. McDONALD
"Moving Picture World"

THE first three episodes of another new serial made by the Monmouth Film Co. have all the ear-marks of commercial success. The story of the film, based on "The Adventures of Jimmy Dale," by Frank L. Packard, appearing in the People's Magazine, has that thrilling, impossible quality, that the public like. It will be released in sixteen two-part episodes, and features four well-known and popular players, namely, E. K. Lincoln, Edna Hunter, Paul Penzer, and Doris Mitchell. Its first episode is entitled "The Grey Seal," and undertakes to present the characters of the story first in importance, clearly outlining that of Jimmy Dale, who is the son of a millionaire, and who, under some mysterious, unknown influence, follows the profession of breaking safes, leaving behind him an identification in the shape of a diamond-shaped gray seal. The proceeds of his escapades are always donated anonymously to some charitable purpose. A parallel head of the story brings to light the plot of Henry La Salle who with a party of organized criminals plans to murder his niece, Marie La Salle, in order to obtain possession of her fortune.

The Jockey of Death

You remember the joy with which you always greet the coming of the circus.

"THE JOCKEY OF DEATH"

is a story of the circus, with all the thrills and dare-devil acts that bring the audience to its feet. In addition, there's a charming love story.

Mrs Vernon Castle

MRS. CASTLE is today the best known woman in America. Her beauty, her grace, her charm, and particularly her individuality have brought her this enviable distinction.

As a dancer she has no peer. As a motion picture actress she is as wonderful as a dancer. Everyone will want to see this famous woman in the most talked of picture of the hour —"Patria," the serial supreme.

INTERNATIONAL

in PATRIA

"PATRIA" is a photoplay serial that visualizes Americanism.

Thrilling in its presentation, it brings you face to face with the problems that confronted our forefathers—for which they bled and died.

Wonderful in its development, far-reaching in its influence, it teaches the lesson of preparedness and patriotism as they have never before been taught.

As a motion picture, it is supreme.

HITCH YOUR WAGON TO A STAR?

It may be good policy to "hitch your wagon to a star," but you may find that in so doing you will soon have no wagon left!

It is far better to attach your theatre to a program of strong, entertaining features, where the tremendous salaries of the "stars" are eliminated, and which is sold to you minus the big profit of the central exchange.

Art Dramas is that program. It will satisfy your patrons because Art Dramas pictures are good. It will satisfy you because it will make money for you.

Art Dramas are all that the name implies. They are artistic in conception, and dramatically perfect in execution.

ART DRAMAS TAKES GREAT PRIDE IN PRESENTING TO THE INDUSTRY ITS FIRST THREE PRODUCTIONS

GERTRUDE McCOY in "THE LASH OF DESTINY" supported by an excellent cast, including Bruce McRae, Helen Green, Arthur Housman, and Mabel Scott.

An unusual story, embodying a number of strong situations that give Miss McCoy splendid opportunity to display her versatility. A new treatment of the theme of the country girl who comes to the city, plays the game, wins, loses, and finally wins again. Selected to be the First Art Drama.

Directed by George Terwilliger.
Produced by the Van Dyke Film Production Co.
Released December 14.

JEAN SOTHERN in "WHOSO TAKETH A WIFE"

A remarkable answer to Hall Caine's "The Woman Thou Gavest Me," picturized from the novel of the same name, written by J. Wesley Harmon. A big, virile story of the problem that confronts a girl who marries a man she does not care for, and who later meets the man she loves.

A special photoplay edition of the book now being prepared, to be illustrated with still pictures from the Art Dramas production. To be advertised everywhere by the local book-seller in conjunction with the showing of the picture.

Directed by Frank Crane.
Produced by the U. S. Amusement Corporation.
Released December 21.

DOROTHY BERNARD in "THE RAINBOW," with Robert Conness and Jack Sherill.

"The Rainbow" was one of the big hits of the legitimate stage, having had a run of over a year at the Liberty Theatre, New York City, with Ruth Chatterton and Henry Miller in the leading roles. An intensely powerful story, it tells of the separation of a father from his daughter because of his estrangement from his wife, and how he sees his child for the first time in fifteen years, and then for only one day, and the curious chain of circumstances that finally re-unites the family.

Play by A. E. THOMAS. Directed by RALPH DEAN.

Facts and Comments

THE question of whether to use the screen for advertising or not is raging in the British press. The question is of undiminished interest and importance to exhibitors everywhere. We believe that our American exhibitors are overwhelmingly opposed to using the motion picture house for advertising commercial goods. A writer in The Bioscope advocates advertising on the screen and puts up this somewhat specious argument:

While I grant that the picture house is a place of entertainment today, I maintain it does not follow that it will remain so tomorrow. It might become a great center of education. One might visualize ideas in it; use it as a means of circulating news; it has already been employed for the purpose of displaying fashions, and it is obvious that in course of time it must be pressed into the service of the advertiser.

Exhibitors unanimously, it seems, disagree with the writer. As one of them puts it: Purely commercial advertising would be "absolutely and definitely fatal to the interests of a good-class house." While we are on the subject we might say that there is a subtle method of advertising, from which our screen is by no means free. Watchful exhibitors have noticed that in certain films certain articles of commerce are advertised with considerable regularity. We know that exhibitors do not like this sort of advertising at all, and if it is kept up much longer even the ordinary spectator will be able "to see through it."

EVER since the outbreak of the European war complaints have come from England of an increase in juvenile crime. No doubt a similar increase has been noticed in other belligerent countries. There is nothing new in this phenomenon. It has been thus in every great war. The youthful imagination is always more highly developed than the moral sense. Consequently when a young mind is fired with tales of murder and adventure a little thing like the criminal code is not permitted to stand in the way of glorious achievement. Now the motio npictures are blamed for this state. There is talk of a special censorship. If any demoralization has taken place it is the result of war and not the result of motion pictures. Our editors on this side of the water have almost stopped attributing all juvenile crime to the screen. They begin to appreciate the absurdity of such a claim.

APROPOS of the disputed question as to who showed the first motion picture a little quotation from the columns of our British contemporary, The Kinematograph and Lantern Weekly, may be interesting. According to a paragraph in a recent issue of this paper the first motion picture exhibition was presented to the British public as early as April 19th, 1711. The press agent of the show had this to say of the performance: "The figures which are above one hundred and move their heads, legs, arms and fingers so exactly to what they perform and setting one foot before the other like living creatures, that it justly deserves to be esteemed the greatest wonder of the age." The show was called: "Mr. Penkethman's Wonderful Invention, Called the Pantheon: Or the Temple of the Heathen Gods." The performance lasted from 10 in the morning till 10 at night and the price of admission was something like forty cents.

A COMMITTEE of excited citizens, recently engaged in the campaign to promote the chances of a favored candidate, took occasion to denounce the motion picture men because some pictures had been made and shown exalting the ..... of the candidate to whom the aforesaid citizens were opposed. One of the excited throng went so far as to speak of the "prostitution of the screen." Tut, tut, brother! Are the papers opposing your candidate prostituting the power of the press? If you do not like to see the other fellow's record told in flattering terms on the screen, stop worrying and get a motion picture made which shows conclusively that your man is the real savior of the people. Just keep within the libel laws and then go as far as you like.

EVIDENCES of a successful invasion of the Latin-American market by our producers are multiplying. The real facts of the Latin-American film market have been brought to close view by recent developments. The most encouraging sign of all is the tact and the good sense displayed by some at least of our exporters. They are no longer afraid to send the best quality to this market. A story is current in film circles of a big feature film for which the producers received twice what they had intended to ask for the Latin-American rights. There is a vast field for an intelligent service which will improve projection. In this work which is of course bound to redound to the benefit of the whole American movement Cine-Mundial with its projection department in Spanish is rendering valuable service.

Read to Death

By Louis Reeves Harrison

GO TO all the picture shows you can; study all the stories exhibited on the screen and try to enumerate those which are not mere repetitions of what has been done. How few have freshness, originality, vitality, convincingness, or even a fragment of that sure insight into human nature which is one of the few signs of ability to tell an interesting story! Try to name a five-reel feature that is brimming with personal and dramatic interest, or one in which these are interwoven with what deeply concerns us as living beings. Where is one portraying the real American girl, the recognizable product of American parentage and environment?

We have had stories intended to picture local conditions in this or that part of the country, but they are mostly retrospective. They deal with phases of life remembered by their authors, conditions long since vanished, or with purely theatrical and therefore conventional ideas of what might be or might have been. There are touches of realism now and then, especially where the story deals with that part of our social world which is squalid and revolting, and even an occasional indictment of present civilization, but the life most of us know remains almost unpictured.

Particularly in vehicles for stars, written to order by the plot wrestlers, do we look upon creatures rarely to be found out of the studios, where heroes and heroines act with weary childishness and lack of common sense. To the verge of nausea we are shown the American heiress who is encouraged by an ambitious mama to marry an English Lord or a French Count only to discover in the end that he is a villain or a tonsorial artist. Who selects such stuff and permits it to be visualized over and over again? Why play with such puppets at all?

Many of the larger motion picture producers have scenario departments with one or more "Editors" in charge. These gentlemen do not lead lives of unclouded joy. The career of an editor depends largely upon his success or failure in judging what will suit many and diverse interests. Left untrammeled he would pick out stories best calculated to interest a mixed audience if he could. But he has to keep in mind that there is only a limited amount of money to be expended and that almost exclusively for material suited to the policy of his organization.

Above the editor are some gentlemen whose ambition is to get the most for their money, who are closely scanning the commercial side of the whole proposition. Even when he is personally convinced that a story will succeed artistically and commercially he has to consult them, and there is the director to be considered, and the star has to be pleased. After he has eliminated many hundreds of five-reel scripts containing one reel of material, some more of unpleasant theme, some others unoriginal and many more of narrow appeal he finds a gem.

At last a Gem! What is a Gem? It is well written and well constructed. It is filled with all that is bright, new and attractive concerning a vital motif of large appeal by an author who has observed high standards of technique and is leaping high hurdles toward fame. With joy in his heart over his discovery the editor announces that he has found something bound to make a hit if visualized with skill. There is no explosion in it, no fire, no train wreck, yet, in spite of these defects, it has decided merit. The editor, his face radiant with expectation, manages to secure an interview with the Boss and announces that he has at last found a great story.

"Give it to me," says the Boss. "I'll return it to you in a week." He puts the scenario in his brief case, along with a lot of others, and the editor goes back to his sanctum. At the end of four weeks he gently reminds the Boss of the Gem. "You never gave it to me," declares the Boss indignantly. A search is made, and, sure enough, there it is in the brief case. "Give it to the Star," says the Boss. "See what she thinks of it—I am too busy just now. And remember"—with aweful significance—"we are under contract with that lady." The editor slinks away with a wan and hopeless expression on his face.

"I like the play," says the Star very sweetly after glancing languidly over the script, "only I would like to have some of that man's role cut down—and—and couldn't you work in some business for my pet dog?—he—he is the cutest little thing!" The Editor again reports to the Boss and is told to see what the Director has to say. The Director thinks it would be a good story if told in an entirely different way. He is in favor of Good Old Melodrama—it always makes a hit—and a Sunset Effect at the end. Back again to the Chief.

The Boss thinks the Star is right. It would be bright and chipper to introduce some animals, some little kittens, or a lot of chickens feeding, or a drove of sheep on the hillside. Make her a Shepherdess. She can wear poor clothes in the first act and the best in our wardrobe room toward the last. But why not make it a Comedy—all people love a good Comedy. The Editor announces faintly that there seems to be some difference of opinion on that subject, and a grand Consultation is called behind closed doors to reconcile varying opinions. When the composite result is announced the Editor is caught in an attempt to jump out of the window and end his miserable existence.

It is not to be wondered at that such a condition exists. The system is faulty, but it is not an easy one to replace. A common sense view, one wholly unprejudiced, points to some form of final selection by capable single judgment. The ordinary mind is only equipped to pronounce upon the ordinary. It requires a special fitness, natural good taste combined with a comprehensive grasp of what is needed to suit a great audience being constantly educated and to send the organization ahead of its rivals in the matter of original production.

The new, the extraordinary, whatever makes for progress, can not be rightly gauged by people whose thoughts are almost entirely occupied with their respective branches of production. Any story that gets easily by the Boss, the Star, the Director and all others, is apt to be very ordinary. It is almost bound to be commonplace. The ideal staff is a very small one in full charge of an editor who is made and held responsible. The best place to recruit such men is from successful newspaper men who have felt the public pulse with intelligence.

When the Editor has discovered a Gem, the best possible consultation that could take place would be limited to Editor, Producer and Author. This gives the creator of the story a chance to throw light upon points not made clear in his scenario. It affords a chance for him to consider and reply to criticism, and the story may be changed to the advantage of all concerned through a better understanding of what is required, what can be done and how. By the older system small doubt exists that many a strong, attractive and well-designed screen story has been read to death.

What Practical Exhibitors Say

By W. Stephen Bush

WHEN recently we printed the text of an exhibitor's letter showing the problem of cost of service and its relation to box office receipts we invited other exhibitors to give us their opinions. We did not have to wait long. The subject is one of absorbing interest to exhibitors. The quick response that has come to us shows once more the intimate and sympathetic relationship which has always existed between the MOVING PICTURE WORLD and the exhibitors.

One of our correspondents says that "a continuance of present methods of film renting means ruination for the exhibitor." "We," continues this particular letter, "are not at all interested in what salary is being paid the 'star' and what the production costs, as both of these extravagant items are often caused by waste and gross mismanagement on the part of the manufacturer. The salient fact remains the same: 'How much can we afford to pay per day for film service?' Let me cite two examples from personal connection located at two different points outside of New York City. Both are large sized theatres not ordinary picture houses. At one we play some vaudeville acts and a prominent film service, the latter being the main drawing power. We formerly paid $100 per day for this service, holding the first run for the town. It drew well and pulled in the money at the box office, but we felt the price was excessive and after carefully surveying the field, came to the conclusion that no one else in the locality would be likely to pay anything like as much, so served notice on the film people to cancel the contract or take a fifty per cent. cut, which they accepted. A serial of a big 'star' was submitted us a short time ago for this same house at a figure per day which we felt to be excessive and we turned it down, even though we would have been glad to have it at a fair price. No one else took it and they later offered it at half the first figure but we declined to accept. Is it any wonder we look on the film manufacturers as bluffers and now try and make our own scale of prices?"

Here is the experience of an exhibitor with a high-priced feature shown at an increase in admission:

"Recently," says this exhibitor who signs himself "One of the pioneers," "we had a big feature and advanced our prices five cents extra throughout. The feature with a few extra one reel subjects cost $81 for the day and the gross receipts were $380 or a ratio of about 21 per cent. for service. On a corresponding day a week later with an old cheap feature and regular admission prices the gross ran $220 and service cost $20, ratio being 11 per cent. At first glance this looks like a big saving, but turn it around and we find that while we spent $61 more we took in $167 more. On the other hand I think that the advance in price the week before hurt the second week and was a direct cause of the big difference in receipts. * * * I find by experience that changing of prices is a fatal mistake."

All of which is mighty useful and instructive reading. One or two sentences more and we shall finish with this letter which we would very much like to print in full if only space would permit. Here is the sensible conclusion of our friend: "Personally I am making money, but I have brains enough to know that unless the film industry is soon put on a good foundation that the means I now have of making money will be taken from me. We must see all branches of the industry prosperous or see one end drown the other. I am not pessimistic, I believe in the future of the business and am investing accordingly. I believe your paper to be the best missionary to start the reforms."

We thank our friend for his good opinion and hasten to add that we agitate the question solely with a view to benefiting the entire industry. The troubles of the exhibitor are or ought to be the troubles of the exchange men and producer as well.

We feel that our readers will approve our giving considerable space to more communications on this vital subject. Read what an "old showman" has to say. He says that he finds "conditions impossible of profit in film exhibiting as at present conducted." We quote literally:

If a man opens a theater and does business, others think he is making a fortune, and opposition starts. To offset this opposition you spend more money on your service; the other fellow goes you one better. The exchange protects no one; it is a case of "get in all the money they can and play one against the other." I do not think exclusive franchises are good things, as an undesirable exhibitor can then tie up a city or a neighborhood and ruin it by conducting his house poorly. But there should be some sort of working arrangement or so-called gentleman's agreement, whereby an exhibitor can be protected from ruinous opposition.

Theatrical people protect the managers of theaters and have always co-operated along the right lines, and the vaudeville and burlesque people give franchises for protection—certainly the picture people should do the same. In the old days there was money in the business, but not now. Service is costing too much for the receipts. If you increase the admission price, you drive people out. Ten cents is the right picture admission. Five cents is out of the question as the houses are now conducted. And when you raise to 15 cents, you are driving the people over to the small time vaudeville house. I recall the days when the galleries of the high-priced theaters over the country had long lines waiting to get in, admissions then being 25 cents. They raised it to 50 cents and they hopped over to the Keith booked houses in the same towns. Likewise, the 50 cent admission crowds waiting to get in at 7.30 on the main floor, where a few rows on first floor and in the balcony were held unreserved for them. They raised them to $1.00, and drove those people over to the vaudeville houses; and now they are giving away tickets and selling cut-rate tickets and doing all sorts of stunts to get those same people back, but it's too late!

The picture people are making the same mistake. Hold to 10 cents and make the service fit to that admission price. Why not have the correspondents of the trade journals act the part of intermediary to bring the neighboring exhibitors to a friendly understanding as to what they should allow in the way of appropriation for film service, and stick to it. There are enough features to outfit three houses with a daily change of programme in a neighborhood, and there is no neighborhood that can support more than three houses, if that many.

A 10c. neighborhood house, showing evenings only, can only depend on a house-and-a-half per night on the outside, and in most cases, but one house. If the exchange would furnish posters free, pay express charges and relieve the house of all other charges for "stills" and heralds, I figure that an exhibitor can pay $100 per week where he does a gross business of about $300 a week, and still make good money. In a larger house doing twice the business, with expenses doubled, he can pay double for the service. The practice of renting film to large theaters should be abolished, as they can pay an amount of rental that the regulation exhibitor cannot pay except at a loss, and at the figure, make enormous profits. They should be put in such theaters on a percentage only with a minimum guarantee. The wished-for reform should come from two ends—exhibitors to come to understandings locally among themselves, and the manufacturers to get in closer touch with their customers. Speaking solely from the exhibitor's standpoint, I want to add that there have been too many lawyers mixing up in the business and telling exhibitors how to run their business. It's a showman's business and let showmen run it, not lawyers.

If the evils here complained of are to be remedied the exhibitors must get together. They must show ability to define their standpoint to get clear on their needs and then enlist the co-operation of exchange and producer. Time and again we have pointed out the folly of exchanges in getting exhibitors to pay inflated values by making competitors outbid each other for service. A wise exchangeman knows that there is no real and permanent profit for him in such conditions. He will try to heal the trouble instead of seeking to inflame it. The best remedy after all is organization among exhibitors, but even organization will fail of results if there is a lack of proper, intelligent and enlightened leadership.

A Warning Against Misrepresentation

RUMORS have reached us from many sources to the effect that the name of W. Stephen Bush, an old member of the staff of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD, has been used to solicit advertising for a new trade publication. Representations have been made to a number of advertisers that Mr. Bush was to be the editor of this new paper. Such representations are entirely unwarranted and have been made without the knowledge and without the consent of Mr. Bush.

We take this occasion to say that the MOVING PICTURE WORLD does not question the legal or the moral right of any one to start a new publication. The MOVING PICTURE WORLD does not fear competition conducted on fair lines, but we do most strenuously object to unfair methods and the unauthorized use of the name of Mr. Bush amounts to just that. While ordinarily we pay no attention to the rumors idly and constantly floating on the surface of the industry we feel that we owe it to the trade in general and to advertisers in particular to set the proper facts before them, and to guard them against unscrupulous misrepresentation.

All such statements in connection with this new publication made in regard to Mr. Bush or any other member of the regular staff of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD are knowingly false and can only be made with intent to mislead and deceive. We make this announcement in justice to our patrons and also in justice to the staff of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD, who are loyal as well as able conservators of its interests. It is this spirit of loyalty as well as ability on the part of every member of our staff that has been such a potent factor in whatever measure of success we have attained, and this fact is appreciated by the management of this paper to a far greater extent than can be realized by our friends and readers.

Another Damage Suit

Several Plaintiffs Sue Motion Picture Patents Company and Others for Damages Aggregating $18,000,000.

SUITS to recover triple damages aggregating over $18,000,000 from the Motion Picture Patents Company, General Film Company and other corporate and individual defendants, were filed in the United States District Court on November 17.

The plaintiffs in the suits are George Melies Company, the Chicago Film Exchange, the Standard Film Exchange, the Colorado Film Exchange, Miles Bros., Inc., Eugene Cline and Samuel Schiller. They allege that the defendants have formed an illegal combination in restraint of trade and commerce in the distribution and exhibition of motion picture films in violation of the provisions of the Sherman Anti-Trust Law.

The specific damages claimed by the resepctive complainants are as follows: Miles Bros., Inc., $2,325,000; the Chicago Film Exchange, $1,004,874; George Melies Company, $908,000;; Eugene Cline, $950,000; the Colorado Film Exchange, $500,000; the Standard Film Exchange, $247,500; Samuel Schiller, $149,000. Each of the complainants asks that the damages be tripled under the provisions of the Sherman Act.

The suits again raise the question of whether or not the film industry is subject to the provisions of the Sherman law which has been construed by the courts generally as applicable only to business enterprises engaged in the manufacture and sale of necessities of life and not to amusements, such as vaudeville, grand opera and horse racing.

Activity of N. A. M. P. I.

REPRESENTATIVES of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry have recently returned to New York after attending the convention of the New York Federation of Women's Clubs in Rochester. The executive secretary conferred with the new officers of the Federation, while the publicity director also took part in various conferences and addressed the committee on industrial and social affairs.

On passing through Rochester the executive secretary was interviewed by representatives of local newspapers and gave out a statement concerning the purposes and the progress of the new organization. The Rochester Times quotes Mr. Elliott at length on the activities of the Association and on how auspicious the present time is for a full expression of opinion on the many angles of the complex film industry by any civic body or any one who is sufficiently interested in the subject.

More Advisory Committees.

Following the announcement that appeared in last week's issue of the effort of Judge A. P. Tugwell to organize exhibitors in California, we learn that he has addressed a meeting in Los Angeles in regard to the formation of an advisory committee in California of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry. All the producing companies in the vicinity were represented. A strong committee on the coast along the lines of the Chicago Advisory Committee is being urged and Judge Tugwell is now taking up the question with the exchange men, supply dealers and others interested. It is expected that news of the actual organization of this committee will be presented to the board of directors at their meeting in New York on November 29.

Executive Secretary Elliott is also arranging a meeting of exchange men, supply and equipment dealers and film trade representatives in Boston with a view to forming another Advisory Committee there to take care of all New England activities. This meeting will probably take place within the next ten days.

At a meeting to be held in Chicago shortly rules and regulations governing the new body will be submitted, a draft having been forwarded to National Headquarters in New York.

N. A. M. P. I. Directors to Meet.

The Board of Directors of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry will meet in the New York offices, 805-6 Times Building, November 29 to consider a very large number of subjects which have been called to its attention by the executive committee. The meeting will bring to New York big motion picture men from every part of the country.

Judge A. P. Tugwell will make the trip from Los Angeles especially to attend the meeting; Charles E. Phillips, a Milwaukee exhibitor; Peter J. Joup, an exhibitor from Detroit; Thomas Furniss of Duluth, Maurice A. Choynski of Chicago, Frank A. Rembusch, from Shelbyville, Ind.; Fred J. Herrington, Pittsburgh, Pa. The other members of the board are in New York.

ANOTHER KNOCK-OUT FOR JOHNSON-WILLARD FIGHT FILMS.

In a decision on file in the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, Judge Ward has finally decided that the Pantomimic Corporation cannot exhibit films of the Johnson-Willard fight in this country.

The Appellate Court decided that the films which were reproduced from secondary negatives produced by setting up a motion picture camera on American soil this side of the Canadian border are under the ban of the statutes which forbids the importation of the original films.

Unless the film corporation decides to carry the case to the Supreme Court the effort to exhibit the fight films will have to be abandoned.

UNIVERSAL UNCOVERS ALLEGED FILM THIEVES.

Through the efforts of the legal department of the Univesal Film Manufacturing Company Aaron Beyer, a shipping clerk at the Twenty-third Street Exchange, New York city, has been arrested and is now awaiting trial for the theft of a number of reels of the "Peg o' My Heart" serial. Following up clues said to have been given by Beyer Hugo Mainthal, who conducts the Apollo Feature Film Company at 145 West Forty-fifth street, New York, was later apprehended and gave information which led to the recovery of films valued at $3,000. The investigation is being con tinued.

Ben B. Hampton Heads General Film Company

Director of Distributing Company Is Elevated to Presidency Pending Annual Election in January.

BEN B. HAMPTON is now installed in the chair of the president of the General Film Company at its headquarters in 440 Fourth avenue. Mr. Hampton was chosen at a meeting of the directors of the distributing company held on Monday, November 13, succeeding George Kleine. Mr. Kleine had held the office since his election on January 19 last. It has been more than an open secret among his intimates for some time that the retiring executive was exceedingly anxious to give way to another, owing to rapidly increasing private interests. Several meetings of the board of directors have been held to take up the matter of a successor to Mr. Kleine.

It has been understood that the head of the Kleine-Essanay-Selig-Edison exchanges expressed to his associates in the General the opinion that the job of president of their corporation was one requiring the whole time of an active man, that in justice to the General and the companies composing it such a man should be found. The same conviction was expressed by those executives of the contributing organizations who were asked to take up the duties of president. The election of Mr. Hampton to serve until the annual election in the middle of January next indicates that the belief of Mr. Kleine has been concurred in by his fellow directors.

When a Word man called at the executive offices of the General Film Company a couple of days after the election he found in the new president a tall, active man of strong personality, one of the sort you enjoy meeting—frank, speaking a language that may be understood by all men, and mentally alert. He will be liked by film men.

"I really don't see what there can be for me to say to the readers of the Moving Picture World," said President Hampton. "The directors of the General Film Company have seen fit to put me here until the annual election eight weeks hence, and you may be sure I am mighty glad of the opportunity to do what I can to further the interests of this fine old organization. Since the stockholders honored me by electing me a member of the board of directors several weeks ago I have taken part in various conferences looking to new plans in the affairs of the company. When it became necessary to choose some one to fill until the annual election in January the place which Mr. Kleine announced he would be compelled to relinquish and the directors offered me the position ad interim, I welcomed the opportunity to assist in developing the new plans. I am confident the officers, directors and stockholders will work together so effectively that when a new administration is chosen in January it will find the old General prepared for the biggest year in its whole history.

"Mr. Kleine has consented to serve on the executive committee, so that during my tenure of office I will have the constant and active counsel of himself and Mr. Marion of the Kalem company."

"Do you personally 'like' pictures—do you enjoy sitting in a theater and looking at the screen as a spectator?" the World man asked Mr. Hampton.

"Why, I have been a newspaper man and a dramatic critic," was the reply. "No man with a journalistic type of mind could fail to be interested in pictures. If he wasn't he could not be a journalist. I think a man likes pictures as he likes books. It has got along to the point where we can't live without pictures. They constitute one of the essentials of our civilization.

"The only question is whether pictures are good, and by good pictures I don't necessarily mean they must be long and enormously expensive productions or even that they must cost $5 a negative foot. The shorter subjects may be just as valuable as the big ones if they are faithfully made. There is a field for short stuff as well as for the long stuff. There are lots of opportunities for the men who make good short pictures. The distributors and the consumers are seeking these subjects.

"There is today, as there has been in the past, much shifting and changing going on in the industry. We are going to try to meet the desires of the photoplay public and the exhibitors. Those manufacturers in the General Film group I have talked to are very, very anxious to spend money and brains in making good pictures. I declare I didn't realize until I got closely in touch with them the amount of zeal and intelligence these men are putting into pictures. They wanted me to take a shot at the presidency job and I am going to try it.

"I believe the General has the biggest foundation in the world for a film distributing company. Everything about the General has been clean; it may have been conservative, but it has avoided the bad, it has clung to the good."

Hampton Has "The Barrier."

When Mr. Hampton was asked in reference to a published statement that Rex Beach would be one of the best box office names to be added to the roster of the General Film he replied that the item had not been brought to his attention. He said Mr. Beach was under contract to him, but that nothing had yet been settled as to the future in the way of the author's motion picture activities.

"Mr. Beach's 'The Barrer,' a most expensive production, has been completed, and I have the negative stowed away," said Mr. Hampton. "My friends assure me it is a most remarkable picture. They say that, mind you, I don't. But considering the story and the money put into its making it ought to be a big subject."

The Temple—A Pantheon of Pictures

Plans Completed for a New Moving Picture Palace on Broadway—Rothapfel to be Manager.

A NEW moving picture theater is to be erected on the southeast corner of Broadway and Forty-ninth street, at an estimated cost of over one million dollars for the land and building. This latest addition to New York's amusement palaces will be named The Temple, and the architect's plans call for an expenditure of $350,000. The Russell B. Smith Company, of 305 Madison avenue, drew the plans and will have charge of the construction, which will be started the first of next March. The doors of the building are scheduled to be thrown open to the public on the seventeenth of next November. The head of the operating company is G. M. Heckscher, and David Harvey, of the Russell B. Smith organization, is the authority for the statement that the theater will be ready on the date specified.

The Temple will present a most imposing front on Broadway, with a facade of white marble and bronze and eight stately columns adding to its effectiveness, the architecture being pure Grecian. Standing on a plot of ground one hundred feet in width and running back one hundred and forty-eight feet to Seventh avenue, the Temple will have a lobby across the entire front. The seating capacity is limited to 2,300, thus insuring ample space for the extra wide opera chairs with which the theater will be supplied. Although intended solely as a moving picture theater—the entire building will be devoted to that purpose—The Temple has been designed so that a regular stage may be added at any future time.

The program at the new theater will present the best in moving pictures, also several novel features of the highest type, according to Mr. Harvey. The representative of the Russell B. Smith Company is also the authority for the statement that the rumor that Samuel L. Rothapfel is to be the manager of The Temple is founded on fact. An interview with Mr. Rothapfel failed to corroborate the rumor.

DAWLEY TO DIRECT "SNOW WHITE."

When Marguerite Clark begins the actual work on the adaptation of "Snow White" in which she is to be starred by the Famous Players Film Company on the Paramount Program Christmas Day, she will be under the direction of J. Searle Dawley, under whose auspices she has already starred in "Little Lady Eileen," "Molly Make-Believe," "Still Waters" and other big successes in which she has appeared within the year.

TWENTIETH CENTURY GETS LIFE PHOTO FILM SUBJECTS.

The Twentieth Century Film Company, of 220 West 42d street, New York, announces that it has bought outright from the Life Photo Film Corporation the negatives of these productions: "The Grey Hound," "The Ordeal," "Unbroken Road," "The Modern Magdalen," "Captain Swift," "Curious Conduct," "The Avalanche," and "Springtime."

STORMY SCENES AT OCHS HEARING.

Many Sharp Passages Between League President and Lawyer Keppler in Variety Charge Inquiry.

STORMY scenes marked the proceedings of the Saturday session of the committee of Manhattan local exhibitors examining the allegations against Lee A. Ochs, president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, printed in Variety and signed by Fleischman & Goldreyer, Bronx exhibitors. Mr. Ochs was in attendance, and for probably half of the four-and-a-half-hour session was in the witness chair. The Exhibitors' Trade Review, a publication announced for appearance in the latter part of November and of which Mr. Ochs is president, figured extensively in the discussion. Tobias A. Keppler, counsel for Fleischman & Goldreyer, made a demand for the stock list subscription books of the new company, declaring he was not satisfied that on the record there appeared no name of any one connected with a film company.

Mr. Keppler's demand was that the books be produced immediately, not several days hence, suggesting that no great time was required to create a new set of books. He insisted the exhibitors of the country would not be satisfied that the names of no representatives of manufacturers appeared on the books unless the books were that day submitted to the committee. Mr. Blumenthal, the secretary and treasurer of the Exhibitors' Trade Review, as well as Mr. Ochs, at first refused to permit the examination of the books, but after considerable discussion Charles M. Rosen, who announced that he was a member of the law firm representing Mr. Ochs, said that the books, which were in his office, would be forthcoming. As the talk waxed and the afternoon waned Mr. Rosen pointed out many reasons why the books would not be available that afternoon. The member of the firm who personally represented Mr. Ochs was playing golf and the office was closed. Mr. Keppler suggested his opponent had a key and could gain access to the building and offered to hire a taxicab and employ a detective to guard the books while away from their place of keeping.

The committee, of which Messrs. Trigger, Steiner, Anson, Ascher, Needle, Oestricher and Samuelson were present, at first seemed disposed to agree with the view of Mr. Trigger that it was a matter for the National League to determine. Then a motion was made by Mr. Anson and seconded by two of the members that Mr. Blumenthal be asked to produce the stock subscription lists. It was just after this motion was presented that Mr. Ochs, who had during the session engaged in several sharp colloquies with Mr. Keppler, declared with much heat:

"I want to go on record right here. I have sacrificed everything for the exhibitors. I have gone to the expense of founding a trade paper for the Exhibitors' League. It would not have been put across unless I had done it—that is, together with Blumenthal. For you gentlemen, pals of mine, to insist and allow an attorney to insist and insinuate that I am crooked is unspeakable. There is going to be published in the first issue of the Exhibitors' Trade Review a sworn statement of ownership. I am not under cover, as other trade papers are who refuse to give subscription lists. Ours is run honestly, and the Exhibitors' Trade Review will live where others will die.

"How dare you men even charge or even insinuate that Ochs and Blumenthal are crooks? I want to say if you don't stop where you are I am through forever."

"I am the maker of this motion," said Mr. Anson. "Mr. Ochs is the last man I'd accuse in any shape or form, but a situation has arisen here where the issue has been beclouded all along the line. If things are as said we will take the affidavit of Mr. Blumenthal."

"I say, produce the books now," declared Mr. Keppler. "This is your psychological opportunity. If you don't do it now you are done."

It was finally agreed to show the books to the committee at the next meeting, on Tuesday, November 21.

At the opening of the session Mr. Keppler asked for a stipulation by both sides that there would be no suits for slander or libel growing out of the testimony and that witnesses should in this respect be accorded the same protection as in a court. The lawyer said this action was essential in order to secure the attendance of certain witnesses. Mr. Ochs refused to consent to the suggestion. Mr. Keppler said his clients felt the action would stifle the investigation. The president also said, in response to a demand by a committeeman, that he had no desire to be attended by counsel and that he would conduct his own case. Later, however, when Mr. Keppler was asking questions about the Exhibitors' Trade Review, it developed Mr. Rosen had entered the room. The lawyer at first advised Mr. Ochs not to answer questions appertaining to his newspaper venture.

A long discussion followed the attempt of Mr. Keppler to read into the record the draft of the reply of Fleischman & Goldreyer to the charges against them. As the Exhibitor's Trade Review was mentioned in this, as was revealed when Mr. Keppler read it, there was opposition to receiving the answer. Mr. Trigger here declared that phase of the controversy was a national, not a local matter.

"I was present in a body of men of honor and repute from twenty-five states when the matter of this paper was brought before them," he said. "The question had been pending for months, and after due deliberation the national organization came to the conclusion that it was a good thing for the organization. I think the matter has nothing to do with the committee."

"We have been charged with improper conduct as members of this organization," said Mr. Keppler. "If the committee is going to adhere to the attitude that we have no freedom, why the whole object of this investigation is going to defeat itself. This is not a narrow, little question. Don't take a narrow gauge view of it. My clients feel that if certain abuses have grown up that will prove to be a cancer on the organization they must be rooted out and met with frankness and candor."

"If the gentleman feels the Exhibitors' Trade Review is so important, why doesn't he try to get it into court?" asked Mr. Ochs.

"I'll make an offer to Mr. Ochs right now," declared Mr. Keppler spiritedly. "A libel suit can be preferred. If Mr. Ochs will serve us today, Saturday, we will serve an answer Monday and we will consent to go to trial Wednesday morning. If Mr. Ochs wants to get a trial we'll go Wednesday morning."

There was a commotion in the room, in the midst of which the chairman declared the remarks out of order.

Mr. Ochs said the hearing must be confined to the six specific charges in the article in question. "This is the way we will conduct this investigation," he said. "I am willing to let the exhibitors of the country know about the Review, but it must go before the National League.

"We are not attempting to escape a single word in that letter," said Mr. Keppler, "but we can't meet our charges unless we can put in our defense. Mr. Ochs' refusal to accept our answer does not place him in the light before the exhibitors such as an open discussion would place him."

"I court investigation," replied Mr. Ochs.

The examination of Mr. Ochs proceeded. The president said he had been a member of the local league four years. He told of his connection for eight months with the Playgoers Film Company, which produced "Cavalleria" and "The Great Diamond Robbery." He said he had no financial interest, that he acted as treasurer.

"How could you be treasurer without being a stockholder?" the lawyer inquired.

"When I was treasurer our treasurer was out of town and I had power of attorney."

Q.—Were you ever interested in the Unity Film Corporation? A.—No, sir.

Q.—You did recommend "The Yellow Menace"? A.—Yes.

Q.—Ever a stockholder in Popular Plays and Players? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Ever had any business interests of any kind with the Metro? A.—No.

Q.—Positive? A.—No.

Q.—You traveled through the state of New York and asked exhibitors to book their films? A.—No.

Q.—Did you ever state you were responsible for 75 per cent. of their business? A.—No, sir.

Q.—In your two Bronx theaters you keep your various contracts? A.—Yes.

Q.—You will let the committee see them? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you go to Pathe and ask them for the service that Fleischman & Goldreyer had? A.—Simply asked them for service.

Ochs Produces Many Letters.

At this point Mr. Ochs produced many letters and started to read one of them.

"We will not have any letter reading here," declared Mr. Keppler. "We will object to any man reading a letter. If a man wants to say anything to this committee he will come here and say it.

"Why, if you had a clear conscience, was it necessary for you to go to these men and commit them to writing if you had done nothing that feared the light of day?"

"The reason I went to these men was that at the next meeting of the National League I had to show proofs," replied Mr. Ochs.

Q.—Your idea was to get these letters so as to subpoena these men and pin them down? A.—No, no, sir; no.

Q.—Did you know that a letter never can be evidence? A.—I am not a lawyer.

In answer to a question if he hadn't been paying expressage on a number of services Mr. Ochs said he had on Triangle and Paramount. Asked why he didn't cancel these he replied that that system had been in vogue since the companies had been in business. Mr. Keppler then took up Philadelphia matters.

Q.—You went to Philadelphia to break up the control that Mr. Mastbaum had upon the independent exhibitors because he controlled a large number of houses? A.—I looked after the exhibitors' league.

Q.—Did you go as national president? A.—Yes.

Q.—Mr. Mastbaum and his associates control so many theaters they can get about everything that is worth while? A.—I believe that's so.

Mr. Keppler here brought out the visit of Lewis J. Selznick and Herbert Brenon to Philadelphia.

"Mr. Selznick had offered to go over to Philadelphia and give preference to the Philadelphia league," said Mr. Ochs.

Q.—Don't you know these visits resulted in a combination between Mr. Mastbaum and Mr. Selznick? A.—Yes.

Q.—If you felt it necessary to go over to Philadelphia to relieve them of Mastbaum why not try to relieve them of Mastbaum and Selznick? A.—Right.

Q.—You are the man who brought that about? A.—You're a liar. It was not my efforts at all.

Q.—Do you own any stock in the Selznick corporation? A.—No.

Q.—You have received no compensation, directly or indirectly, from Selznick for going to Philadelphia? A.—No.

Q.—Did he pay your expenses? A.—The National League.

Q.—You are the president of the Motion Picture Review, Incorporated—who are the other officers? A.—Blumenthal is secretary and treasurer, Merritt Crawford vice-president.

Q.—Mr. Crawford worked with Metro? A.—He did something.

There followed a series of questions designed to reveal the apportionment of the stock among the various factors. It was apparently indicated there were 1,500 shares of preferred stock at $10 a share and 4,500 shares of common stock of no par value, that the common stock only is invested with voting power, and that of the stock one-third is apportioned to the promoters and one-third to the league.

Q. Of this common stock is there a voting trust? A. Yes.

Q. So that all this common stock would be controlled by who? A. The league and the workers.

Q. The league stock and the workers' stock is tied up five years, tied up so four men can vote in it? A. Two men representing the league and two the workers, Mr. Blumenthal and myself and Mr. Crawford and Leslie Mason.

Q. You four gentlemen cast the votes and have the controlling vote for that stock. That is correct? A. Yes.

"The exhibitors that invest only have one vote for each ten shares they buy, but you gentlemen having a majority can always outvote them," remarked Mr. Keppler.

Q. Didn't you issue a prospectus that one-third was issued to workers and one-third to the league? If that prospectus is correct that common stock will not be paid for? A. Ultimately yes.

Q. As a matter of fact, two-thirds? A. None of your business.

"It is the business of the exhibitors of the United States," said Mr. Keppler.

Q. Two-thirds of the common and voting stock is commonly known in high finance as water? A. No, sir.

Q. No money has been paid for it? A. Didn't say there had.

Q. You did say one-third of the stock goes to the workers, and you are one of the workers? A. Yes, and one of the financiers, to the tune of $15,000.

Q. You have put up $15,000 in cash in this paper? A. Yes.

Q. Isn't it a fact if the corporation gets money, you get that money back? A. Yes.

Q. Then your money is a loan?

At this point Mr. Rosen interrupted and advised Mr. Ochs not to talk further about the Exhibitors' Trade Review. Mr. Rosen insisted the matter should be aired in private by the committee.

Mr. Keppler claimed the Review should be the property of the organization. He wanted to know whether Mr. Ochs put in $15,000 or a film company put it in. "Will you put up the stock subscription books?" he went on. "We defy you to produce them before they can be tampered with. We will show that it is film money that is promoting this magazine and that the exhibitors haven't a chance. It behooves Mr. Ochs to produce those books. Mr. Ochs answered every question about Mastbaum and Selznick, about film concerns, about preferences shown to him by dealers. Mr. Ochs has proceeded up to the vital point, but just when we get to the part that will show the serious issues at stake—the life of the organization is at stake—he stops. I want to say our object is not to break up the organization. We are trying to prevent being thrown out of the organization.

"Unfortunately a large burden has fallen upon my clients. They are compelled to fight this battle alone. At the best it should be fought inside the organization. We have been publicly charged with having done things that are vile, we have been charged with not being fit to associate with decent men. If Mr. Ochs stops now, I think he will be in a worse position."

"I feel that questions regarding the Trade Review should cease," said Mr. Rosen. "Mr. Keppler would have us believe something mysterious is afloat. He would have people believe that it is filled with watered stock. If the exhibitors are satisfied it is up to them. It is not fair to the exhibitors to let the charge go out that there is watered common stock in that company.

"In the first issue of the paper there will be a sworn statement that there is not a film concern interested in the stock," said Mr. Ochs.

"I call upon this committee and ask them to compel Mr. Ochs to produce that record," said Mr. Keppler. "Our cards are on the table. Put up or shut up. I appeal to the committee to produce the books—not ten minutes from now, but now."

"I can clear up the situation," said Mr. Blumenthal. "The only thing they want to bring out is that the books may be changed. As secretary and treasurer I will make affidavit that no book will be touched."

"I know as one of the executive members of this organization—I have absolutely no more to do with it except as a member of the executive board—but I do know where the money was raised and when it was raised," declared Mr. Trigger. "I know it was raised in a bank and raised legitimately."

COMMITTEE DECIDES TO OPEN DOORS.

Chairman Trigger Invites Press Representatives and Is Sustained by Fellow-Members.

THE second meeting of the committee of the Manhattan branch of the Exhibitors' League appointed to investigate the charges published in VARIETY against Lee A. Ochs, was held Tuesday, November 14. Present were Messrs. Fleischman and Goldreyer and their counsel, Tobias A. Keppler. Mr. Ochs was absent.

Those composing the committee are Samuel H. Trigger, chairman; Charles Steiner, secretary; M. Oestricher, S. Rhonheimer, Michael Glynn, A. B. Samuelson, Sidney Ascher, Morris Needle and Grant Anson. The committee represented the selection of four members by Mr. Ochs and four by Fleischman and Goldreyer. These eight selected the ninth.

When the meeting opened it developed through a question raised by Mr. Steiner, that there was objection to the presence of representatives of the trade press. "What was the idea of sending out notices to the press?" asked Mr. Steiner. "At our first meeting it was decided to have the proceedings kept secret. We are not going to find any one guilty or bring in a verdict. We are just to formulate a statement of facts."

"Rumors were afloat that this committee would not be a fair body to conduct this investigation," replied Mr. Trigger. "It has been alleged that on the committee were too many friends of Mr. Ochs. I thought the cleanest way would be to have the members of the press here to see for themselves that we were to be absolutely clean in this matter, that the investigating committee had nothing to fear on either side. The committee was not appointed by the organization, but the eight men representing the organization chose a chairman between them."

Secretary Steiner moved that the newspapers be excluded from the hearing and that the secretary be instructed to draw up a statement of the proceedings and send it to the newspapers. The motion was seconded by Mr. Rhonheimer.

During the discussion on the motion, Chairman Trigger inquired if the counsel for Fleischman and Goldreyer had any objection to the presence of reporters.

"We want an open meeting," said Mr. Keppler. "We believe this is a matter that deserves the greatest publicity."

Mr. Ascher expressed the opinion that a prepared statement would save the reporters considerable labor and spare them the necessity of sitting around and listening to very dry questioning on the part of the committee. He believed that much publicity would add to the differences now existing between the parties at odds. He pointed out that while at the first meeting it had been agreed that the greatest secrecy should surround the proceedings at the same time if the principals had no objection to publicity he could not see why the committee should be averse to it.

"We have a number of serious matters which we would like to include in our charges which we believe to be prejudicial to the League and to exhibitors generally," said Mr. Keppler. "We would like to add to the charges already before the committee. We respectfully submit that the deliberations of this committee will be subject to suspicion if the proceedings are not made public. The readers of the newspapers can determine the situation in their own minds."

The vote on the question to exclude resulted in a tie. Then before this situation was resolved it was pointed out that it would be necessary to rescind the action of the first session making the meetings secret before the committee could admit reporters. This action was taken, Chairman Trigger casting the deciding vote.

Mr. Steiner asked that a note be included in the minutes to the effect that the notice of the meeting sent to the press by the chairman was without the knowledge of the members of the committee.

"Before this committee finally gets down to business I don't think it would be out of place to have a preliminary idea as to whether any of the members of the committee have any financial interests in common with the parties in the controversy so that unconsciously their judgment will be biased. We have no objection to any member of this committee, but we submit if on it there are any who have any interest in the business of Mr. Ochs they would hardly be in a position to do justice. Do any of you gentlemen have any stock in the Exhibitors' Trade Review?"

There was denial all around of any such ownership. One member said the question was out of order. "Suppose we do have shares in it? What of it?" he said. "I haven't taken any and I don't know as I will," said another member.

"You ask if Fleischman and Goldreyer wrote the article in question," said Mr. Keppler in reply to a committeeman. "You know that we have been sued for a little think like $100,000 for libel, and for legal reasons we decline to answer the question. But for the purposes of this proceeding we assume the liability of that article.

"Before proceeding with the hearing of these charges I submit that we have done all that can be done today," continued Mr. Keppler. "We would not care to be placed in the position of taking advantage of Mr. Ochs' absence. In addition to that, we didn't intend to prefer charges before this organization. If we had intended to we would have included a number of other things. We would ask permission to prefer formal written charges which we think should be brought to the attention of the association. We ask further time in which to serve further charges and for a record on which to proceed."

According to the instructions of the League we are here to investigate charges printed in VARIETY and also to investigate the charges made by Thomas Howard, against Fleischman and Goldreyer for publishing that article," said Mr. Steiner. "I think anything outside of that is new business. I think, too, our instructions are to go ahead with what wehave."

"We want to limit ourselves to what is before us," added Mr. Samuelson.

"We want you to feel that we have been fair," said Mr. Keppler. "We want you to feel that it is not a case between Ochs and Fleischman and Goldreyer, but that the questions here under consideration affect every exhibitor in the United States. We want to justify our conduct and the issue should be met with honesty and frankness on both sides. We want to be able to prove our justification by other matters. We want a fair opportunity to meet these charges."

"I believe Fleischman and Goldreyer should be permitted to put in any supplemental charges which tend to bear out their case," said Mr. Ascher, after a discussion between Messrs. Trigger, Ascher and Howard. "I move that Fleischman and Goldreyer be permitted to submit any further matter to back up the charges bearing on the case."

"The whole of the organization is involved," suggested Mr. Trigger in response to Mr. Steiner's complaint as to the methods being followed in the investigation.

"We don't intend to indulge in any technicalities at all," said Mr. Keppler, in answer to a committeeman who had called attention to the presence of lawyers. "The only reason I am here is the fact that my clients have been sued for a hundred thousand dollars. I am here to protect their legal rights. While they don't take very seriously the hundred-thousand-dollar suit, still they want to meet the issue. If we are right it is a matter that affects exhibitors all over the country. If we are wrong it is a wrong that the president of the National League should rest under any cloud. We want everybody to feel that the best interests of the industry will be served if everyone addresses the situation with frankness and candor."

"Either both of the parties should be represented by counsel or neither of them," said one of the members.

"I think Mr. Ochs would not object to the proceeding," said Chairman Trigger. "He told me that he was perfectly sincere, that he relied absolutely on this committee, and he was not afraid of anything. What this committee said he was willing to abide by. Mr. Ochs was acquainted with the fact that a lawyer was to be present."

There was a discussion between Mr. Blumenthal and Mr. Ascher in regard to the witnesses to be called.

"We refuse to answer any questions in the absence of Ochs," said Mr. Keppler emphatically. "I will advise my clients to answer no questions. I respectfully submit it will be highly improper to do anything. If I may be permitted, I move that no further proceedings be taken until Mr. Ochs and his counsel can be present."

"I can make a statement that will put this committee in a constructive spirit," said Mr. Keppler later, following a general discussion of the difficulties likely to ensue with a lawyer on each side of the case. "This court bugaboo is nonsense. There is no desire on my part to make a court proceedings of this. The only way to conduct an investigation is to bring the parties before the people who are to decide the issue. It is not what a man says, but how he says it.

"Long experience has demonstrated that if you want to arrive at the truth of a matter you will have to bring a person before his judges. Any other method would develop this hearing into a biased, star chamber proceeding.

It was decided to adjourn until the morning of the Saturday following and that Mr. Ochs be notified to be present with his counsel.

BROOKLYN EXHIBITORS ASK QUESTIONS.

Call on President of National League to Describe Plan and Scope of Exhibitor's Trade Review.

SEVENTY-FIVE members of the Brooklyn Exhibitors' League gathered in the Triangle Theater, in that borough, at 11 o'clock on the evening of Saturday, November 18, for a special meeting. One of the matters brought to the attention of the exhibitors was a resolution asking for information as to the scope and plan of the Exhibitor's Trade Review. The measure was presented by Executive Secretary William Brandt and was passed unanimously, following a discussion of the points involved.

The meeting also unanimously approved the action of Commissioner Bell in prohibiting in New York City the showing of five pictures. Upon the suggestion of Lewis J. Selznick a committee was appointed to look into the advisability of creating a reserve fund, based upon the seating capacity of the respective houses, as a substitute for the present deposit system.

In the discussion following the introduction of Mr. Brandt's resolution it was brought out that there was not a person in the room who had any first hand knowledge of the projected paper. Mr. Brandt said the only information he had been able to obtain was of the rumor description, and he believed members had a right to know particulars. The resolution is as follows:

Whereas, Information has come to this local that a trade paper is about to be published in New York City, under the title of The Exhibitors' Trade Review, according to the advance notices, primarily intended for the benefit of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America; and

Whereas, we, the Brooklyn local, being an integral part of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, are without any knowledge concerning the executive, financial or business policy of this proposed new trade paper; therefore

Be it resolved, That we, the Brooklyn local, New York City Branch No. 3, in meeting assembled, go on record as requesting a complete report from the National President on the scope and plan of the executive, financial and business policy of the proposed trade paper; and

Be it further resolved, That information regarding the benefits to the organization to be derived from such a trade paper be obtained from the National President; and

Be it further resolved, That this local go on record as withholding its indorsement until the above facts have been made public to the members of this local.

NEW YORK EXHIBITORS WIN.

Question of Return Express Charges In Way of Amicable Settlement.

THE difficulties heretofore existing between the organized exhibitors of New York and New Jersey and the F. I. L. M. Club consisting of local exchange managers, have been happily adjusted to the satisfaction of all parties. Several conferences had been held between A. M. Beck, E. Saunders and William Raynor executives of the F. I. L. M. Club on the one hand and L. F. Blumenthal representing the organized exhibitors on the other. The burning question was that of the return express charges. After much discussion it was agreed to let the matter of the return express charges stand as it was before the formation of the F. I. L. M. Club.

On January 1 a new arrangement will be arrived at as the result of further arbitration between the parties interested. It is generally understood, however, that after the first of the New Year the return express charges problem will be decided by individual agreements between exhibitors and exchangemen. It is felt by both parties to the dispute that the future looks brighter now for all amicable settlements of any differences that may arise hereafter. A big meeting of exhibitors has been called for Friday, November 24, when the question of return express charges will be presented for final action by the organization as a whole. The meeting will be held at three o'clock in the afternon at League Headquarters and all exhibitors are invited to attend whether they belong to the league or not.

ORGANIZER HERRINGTON IN MICHIGAN.

Fred Herrington, organizer for the National Association of Motion Picture exhibitors, was in Detroit this week and is going to spend three or four weeks helping the Michigan state association. His work will be to show exhibitors the great benefit to be derived by affiliating with the state organization. Incidentally, he will boost the coming state convention, December 12, at the Hotel Statler, Detroit. With Lee Ochs, national president, as the principal speaker, the state annual meeting is certain to be well attended and successful from every angle.

PLANNING AN OHIO CONVENTION.

Committee to Select Date and Place for State Meeting—Cleveland Favored.

CLEVELAND is likely to be host to a state convention of motion picture men in the near future. At a meeting of the Ohio State Branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America held in Cleveland, November 14, plans for a state convention were discussed and a special committee is to be named to complete arrangements. The convention is deemed necessary because of the desire of La Motte Smith, of Alliance, state president and Frank Beverstock of Mansfield, state vice president to resign in order to give their entire time to private business. Both asked that they be permitted to resign, in letters to the state organization several days ago.

Benjamin J. Sawyer, president of the Northeastern Ohio Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, referred the matter to the national body and as a result, Fred J. Herrington national organizer, was at the meeting November 14. Herrington advised holding a state convention to elect successors to Smith and Beverstock and on his advice, Acting State President Henry J. Lustig, was empowered to name a convention committee. This committee will select the place and date of the convention subject to approval by the state organization. It is regarded as likely that the gathering will be held in Cleveland.

Herrington also sounded a note of warning to the local exhibitors, telling them that unless their organization was strengthened there was grave danger of further adverse legislation in Ohio. Local exhibitors say they have reason to believe certain interests contemplate making the Ohio censor laws more stringent.

"I think the outlook for the growth of the League in Ohio is good," Herrington said, "but I believe if the League does not grow many of its members will be exterminated by adverse legislation."

NEW YORK F. I. L. M. CLUB MEETING.

A large and enthusiastic Film Club meeting was held Friday, November 10. The membership committee recommended for admittance several new members, also announced applications from many others. Among them, were those from film centers outside New York City. Every member present expressed his gratification at the many benefits already derived from the club.

C. B. Hoy, president of the Hoy Reporting Service, reported the adjustment of many disputes between exchanges and exhibitors, and recommended that the exhibitors in question be accorded the same confidence as they enjoyed before the dispute. He also submitted a list of exhibitors who by their unfair practices, should not be entitled to any credit consideration until they improve their business methods.

Exchanges are organizing F. I. L. M. clubs in many exchange centers. Mr. Hoy is arranging with a number of them for his service. A letter was written by his company to all exhibitors in this state, inviting them to submit any grievances they had against exchanges to his office and their interests would be protected, without any expense whatever.

CINCINNATI EXCHANGES ORGANIZE.

The Associated Film Exchange of the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce is a new organization formed November 10, at the Chamber of Commerce, by the film exchange men of the city. The object is to secure the co-operation of the exhibitors, who are already organized in the Chamber, and the public, in order to popularize the motion picture, and also to co-operate with one another in order to advance the best interests of the exchanges. The organization meeting was well attended, being one of the best ever held by film exchange managers in Cincinnati. The managers expressed themselves as confident that under guidance of the Chamber of Commerce the motion picture exhibitors and the public can co-operate with them to the mutual benefit of all concerned.

Following are the officers elected at the last organization meeting: President, H. A. Buge, of the George Kleine exchange; vice-president, I. W. McMahan, of the McMahan and Jackson; treasurer, C. E. Holah, International Film Service; secretary, H. Serkowich, of the Chamber of Commerce. C. E. Holah, chairman; L. W. Greenstein, of the Standard Film Service, and W. S. Wessling, of the Pathe Exchange, were appointed to draw up rules and regulations: Harry L. Crear, of the General Film Co.; W. C. Bachmeyer, of the Famous Players; H. J. Wessel, of the Film Service Co.; C. C. Hite, of the Triangle Film Co., and Clarence Runey of the Cincinnati Motion Picture Co.

National Board Has Annual Meeting

General Committee Attends the Function at Hotel Astor and Listens to Many Speeches.

THE National Board of Review held its annual luncheon on Saturday, November 18, in the East Ball Room of Hotel Astor. This luncheon is given to the members of the General Reviewing Committee, consisting of many earnest, unselfish young and old workers, men and women.

In addition to the members of this committee, consisting of more than a hundred persons, a number of guests had also been invited. Among the latter were M. A. Moskowiz, who is connected with the Municipal Civil Service Bureau; Campbell McCullough, of the Triangle Film Corporation; Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew, authors and actors of the famous Drew comedies; Rabbi Silverman, W. N. Seabury, of the N. A. P. I., and W. Stephen Bush of the staff of The Moving Picture World.

Dr. Cranston Brenton, the chairman of the National Board, acted as master of ceremonies and made the various speakers get up and answer to their respective topics. Mr. Moskowiz, the first speaker, paid a high tribute to the founders of the National Board and spoke of the good will of the city administration toward the work of the board. His remark that the city officials stood ready at all times to co-operate with the National Board were greeted with emphatic expressions of approval. The next speaker was Mr. Drew, who spoke of his feelings when confronted by the camera. He entertained the company by a lively description of his own feelings when he first faced the camera. "Nothing is quite so bad as a bad actor," he said, "and the camera proves the old axiom." There were insistent demands for Mrs. Drew, who finally arose and declared that her invitation had been too sudden to enable her to make such an address as she would like to make. She spoke of the joy she took out of the work in which she and her husband were engaged and declared that she had but one regret, i. e., the shortness of the days, which consisted of but twenty-four hours each. Mr. Seabury followed with the topic, "How to Reconcile Commercial Aspirations with Ethical Standards." He denied that there was any conflict between the two. More than ever in the history of our country he said do the public expect good ethical standards in business and the business men of the country as a body had no idea of reverting to low ethical standards. This he claimed was entirely true of the men in the motion picture business.

Campbell McCullough gave a most instructive and entertaining talk full of wit and wisdom. He suggested a widening of the board's scope of work. The decisions and standards of the board he thought ought to be communicated to the general public. "The newspapers of the country," he explained, "I feel will be entirely willing to co-operate in any plan for advertising the decisions of your board. The public indeed will be grateful to know of your approval or disapproval before they go in the motion picture theater. If you will get in touch with the press of the country you will find that the press is most anxious to co-operate with you." Mr. McCullough predicted that in the immediate future the producer will find out how profitable it is to cater to the tastes and demands of the "family group." "A picture that cannot be shown to the family group is rarely fit for public exhibition." This sentiment was heartily applauded. Rabbi Silverman spoke of the need of entertainment rather than education for the great masses of the people whose minds and bodies are absorbed by the grind of their daily toil and whose right to entertainment should never be questioned.

Mr. Bush talked on the relation of the board to the industry. He said that the industry as a whole thoroughly appreciated the work of the National Board. He knew that both producers and exhibitors were thoroughly agreed as to its usefulness, its impartiality, its desire to serve the public no less than the industry. "The Board," he continued, "is entitled to the gratitude not only of the industry, but to the gratitude of the American public, because no influence has operated more effectively against the establishment of legalized censorship than this Board of Review. Censorship is not only an attack upon the motion picture men, but a dangerous move against American institutions, which abhor the very word of censorship." The speaker drew an amusing picture of the suspicion with which legislators both in Washington and elsewhere regarded the work of the board. These legislators were convinced that large sacks of gold were periodically handed over to the board to be distributed among the chief conspirators. He spoke of the fight made by Dr. Brenton, Mr. Maguire and Dr. Cocks, and described how on many occasions these gentlemen appeared before hostile and bitterly prejudiced committees and by their evident sincerity and common sense made converts of their hearers.

At Leading Picture Theaters

Programs for the Week of November 19 at New York's Best Motion Picture Houses.

"Miss George Washington" at the Strand.

MARGUERITE CLARK in a Famous Players production entitled "Miss George Washington" was the star for the week of November 19 at the Strand. This picture is the first straight farce in which she has appeared on the screen. One little fib, told by Miss Clark, starts an avalanche of deception in order to conceal the first breach of faith. The producers have given the piece elaborate settings and a well-balanced supporting cast, including Frank Losee, Niles Welch, Florence Marten, Joseph Gleason, Maude Turner Gordon, "Billy" Watson and Herbert Prior. Other films of interest shown were "To the Shrine of the American Gladiator," "An Eruption of Mount Vesuvius," a Burton Holmes masterpiece; another chapter of Ditmar's "Living Book of Nature;" a Hughey Mack comedy entitled "Hash and Havoc" and the Strand Topical Review.

Frank Keenan at the Rialto.

"The Sin Ye Do," with Frank Keenan starred and Howard Hickman and Margery Wilson in the supporting cast, was the dramatic feature of the bill at the Rialto. Mr. Keenan plays the part of an eminent lawyer, respected for his mental attainments, but regarded with suspicion as to his morals. A friend of his is killed by a girl he had attempted to wrong and the eminent attorney is about to prosecute her when he discovers her to be his own daughter.

Senor Enzo Rozano, James Price and Miss Amparita Farrar were the soloists. The usual topical digest and comedy picture completed the program.

"War Brides" at the Broadway.

The eight-reel screen version of "War Brides," in which Nazimova plays the leading role, continues at the Broadway. In many respects it is the most powerful photoplay now on view. The acting and the production are of the best.

Eighty-first Street Theater Bill.

At the Eighty-first Street Theater four pictures were shown. On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday Charles Ray was seen in "The Honorable Algy." A Keystone comedy was also on the bill. Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday Frank Keenan, in "Jim Grimsby's Boy," and a Mack Sennett comedy were the picture features.

TO ADAPT "THE CHEAT" AS AN OPERA.

For the first time in the history of the motion picture industry an original photoplay is to serve as the basis of an opera. This is "The Cheat," which was written by Hector Turnbull and produced by the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, with Fannie Ward as the star. It was released on the Paramount program last December and made a distinct sensation in this country and abroad.

So great was the success of the photoplay in Paris that it attracted the attention of Camille Erlanger, the well known composer, with whose name is associated such successful operas as "Aphrodite," "Le Juif Polonais" and "La Sorciere," which has played one hundred times at the celebrated Theatre de l'Opera Comique, one of the greatest theaters in Europe.

"THE CELEBRATED STIELOW CASE" (Argosy).

Argosy Films, Inc., has builded a six-reel photoplay upon the circumstances surrounding the case of Charles F. Stielow, who has been convicted of the murder of a farmer and his wife in Orleans county, New York, and is now on reprieve awaiting a new hearing of his case by Governor Whitman. The picture was written and produced by Lois Weber and is said to relate the evidence brought out at the trial of Stielow without prejudice to either side of the case. This case has received considerable attention from the press of the country and is replete with highly dramatic situations.

UNIVERSAL TO PRODUCE HOWARD'S WORKS.

The Universal has entered into an arrangement with George Bronson Howard, the noted author, whereby they acquire the rights to the larger proportion of this popular author's works which are adapted to filming. Several of his popular stories are already under production at Universal City. One is to be made into a series, as its original publication as a serial lends itself to this form of production. This was the Yorke Norroy series of detective stories. John McDermott, director, has already started one of these stories, and the title of the first chapter will be "The Adventure of the Last Cigarette."

Screeners' Ball Brilliant As Ever

Grand March Led by President Quirk and Norma Talmadge a Pretty Spectacle.

The Screen Club held its fifth annual reception and ball at the Hotel Astor on the evening of Saturday, November 18. It was the equal of its two immediate predecessors in numbers, in gayety and in all that goes to make the yearly function of the Screeners a real top-notch event in filmdom. Present were many manufacturers and distributors, and of directors and players there were almost all of those in the East. Daniel Frohman arrived well before the time set for the beginning of the grand march, and the big parade started promptly at midnight.

Among the film men noticed were Ad Kessel, Carl Laemmle, Richard A. Rowland, Lewis J. Selznick, P. A. Powers, Ingvald C. Oes, Adolph Zukor, Winfield R. Sheehan, H. M. Horkheimer, Samuel Grant of Boston, Mark Dintenfass, Harry Sherman of Chicago, Fred Levy, Joe Engel, Herbert Brenon, J. C. Graham, J. V. Ritchie, A. C. ("Doc") Willat, R. W. Horn, Julius Stern, George Kann, J. Parker, Jr., M. H. Hoffman, E. T. Peter and Dave Reed of Dallas, Carl Pierce and Alec Lorrimore.

There were many prominent stage players, too, among the throng. Wilton Lackaye was one of these, and so, also, was Ethel Barrymore, who was not to be denied a place in the grand march. Albert Capellani was one of the interested spectators. Mary Pickford was present a good share of the evening. So, too, was Clara Kimball Young.

The march was directed by Oscar Lund, who had his hands full marshalling and guiding the large number who participated in the spectacle. His chief aid was Alan Hale, and there were a score of others who had assisted Mr. Lund in working out the rather intricate evolutions. The first formation was a gigantic B, in honor of the club's first president, King Baggot. The second was a Q, and President Billy, as in the case of his predecessor, was called out in the midle of the floor to receive the applause of the assemblage. The last was the S C monogram of the club. Treasurer Will C. Smith supervised the electrical arrangements, and there were many novel effects in the colored lights thrown on the dance floor. J. H. Gerhardt was treasurer of the ball committee.

The clubhouse at 117 West Forty-fifth street was thrown open to the women friends of the members, and there was a throng present in the early hours following the dance. The house was as usual open to the feminine friends of members all during the day following the ball.

FLORENCE TURNER RETURNS TO NEW YORK.

Miss Florence Turner, one of the first known and never-to-be-forgotten motion picture stars, who has been in England for the past few years, producing pictures under the name of Turner Films, Ltd., returned to New York on Sunday, November 12, on the steamship New York, accompanied by her manager and director, Larry Trimble. As previously announced in these columns Miss Turner will continue the production of Turner Films in this country. These pictures are now being released on the Mutual program.

MARY PICKFORD'S SECOND SUBJECT, "THE PRIDE OF THE CLAN."

The incomparable Mary whose first production by her own company, "Less Than the Dust," has just been released by Artcraft Picture Corporation, is completing under the direction of Maurice Tourneur, an elaborate feature entitled, "The Pride of the Clan." It will be released through Artcraft. "The Pride of the Clan" gives Miss Pickford another national role to add to the several she already has created.

TRADE SHOWING OF "THE WITCHING HOUR."

The Frohman Amusement Corporation will give a showing of Augustus Thomas' famous play, "The Witching Hour," at the Strand theater Wednesday morning, November 22nd, at 10 o'clock sharp, to which the trade is invited. Invitations are being sent out, but a card will admit anyone interested.

FARNUM SIGNS UNIVERSAL CONTRACT.

Vice President H. O. Davis, of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company has been so pleased with the work of Franklyn Farnum before the camera that he has given the actor a long-time contract to appear in leading roles of Universal pictures.

Popularity of Pictures Growing in Colon

Another Theater Being Built to Satisfy Demand for This King of Entertainment—Will Seat 1,000.

MOTION pictures are so popular in Colon that another theater seating 1,000 persons has recently been opened in addition to the two large ones in operation here for years, says U. S. Consul Julius D. Dreher, Colon, Panama in "Commerce Reports." These theaters, which receive the better class of popular films from the United States, do a good business every evening in the week. Most of the films brought to Colon are used also at the two forts near the city (Fort Sherman, at Toro Point, and Fort Randolph, at Margarita Point) at both of which motion pictures are shown every evening; on the U. S. S. Charleston, the mother ship for the submarines stationed here, four evenings a week; and at Gatun, 7 miles south of Colon, three evenings a week. A few weeks ago "The Birth of a Nation" was given in the Y. M. C. A. clubhouse in Cristobal and at many other places in the Canal Zone. In spite of the rather high prices for tickets this picture drew large houses. At the Cristobal clubhouse films are shown three evenings a week.

In the Province of Bocas del Toro, in this consular district, there are four picture halls—two at Bocas del Toro, and one each at Almirante and Guabito. It is announced that the Guabito Banking & Mercantile Company, recently organized with a capital stock of $100,000, is about to replace the old halls in Almirante and Guabito with new theater buildings to cost about $5,000 each.

WILLIAM BURNSTEIN HANDLING "JIMMY DALE" SERIAL.

William Burnstein, brother of Jules Burnstein, vice-president and general manager of the Monmouth Film Corporation, has joined the ranks of the Unicorn Film Service Corporation to handle the Monmouth's sixteen episode serial, "Jimmie Dale, alias The Gray Seal," which is being released through the country through the Unicorn.

Previous to joining the Unicorn Service, Mr. Burnstein was associated prominently with the Fox Film Corporation, also with the Triangle Film Corporation. He is a film man of wide experience and great popularity in the trade.

"THE BATTLE OF THE SOMME," SHOWING IN THREE HOUSES.

Owing to the success that attended the production of the "Battle of the Somme," at the Astor theater, New York, on Sunday, November 12, the Shubert's decided to give the pictures at the same theater and also at the 44th Street theater, on Sunday, November 19. In addition, plans were made for showing the films at the Princess theater, daily, for two weeks, beginning with November 15th. This will be remembered as the first time for a film to be shown at three great New York theaters, simultaneously.

SELIG VICTORY PROTECTS FRIEDMAN.

Benjamin Friedman of the Friedman Film Corporation, of Minneapolis, Minn., calls attention to the fact that the injunction granted to William L. Selig in his action against the Gate City Feature Film Corporation to prevent that corporation from exhibiting "The Spoilers" in the states of Iowa, Nebraska, Missouri and Kansas, has the added effect of protecting the exclusive rights owned by the Friedman Company to show "The Spoilers" in the territory named.

BUYS 3,000,000 FEET OF FILM.

There is in transit from San Francisco at this time a carload of old motion pictures, 3,000 reels. This carload has been bought by Joe Miles and E. H. Manheimer, of New York. The lot comprises an assortment of old picture stories and is said to be one of the biggest sales of picture film on record. The freight alone on the invoice is $800.

COMMISSIONER BELL BANS FIVE PICTURES.

Commissioner Bell of the license bureau of New York City has sent a letter to all exhibitors in the five boroughs serving notice that the exhibition of any one of five named pictures will be cause for summary revokal of license. The subjects are "The Sex Lure," "It May Be Your Daughter," "War's Women," "Protect Your Daughter," and "Twilight Sleep."

LAEMMLE'S CHICAGO PARENT EXCHANGE BURNED.

THE Laemmle Exchange at 205-207 W. Washington Street, this city, was destroyed by fire Wednesday morning, November 15.

I. L. Lesserman, manager of the exchange, states that the fire took place about 4.50 o'clock A. M., when the night force of seven men was at work. As near as he could ascertain, it started in the inspection room. By 6 o'clock the entire four-story building, the second and third floors of which were occupied by the Laemmle Exchange, was entirely gutted. The fire department had everything under control at that hour, and had prevented the fire from spreading to the adjoining buildings.

Manager Lesserman placed the number of reels lost at about one thousand. These included new releases up to date. All the new films which were just released in the city, had been returned to the exchange shortly before the fire, which greatly increased the loss. The damage will reach $50,000 or over, including the value of the films burned and the expensive new fixtures which had been installed only a short time before.

Temporary offices were immediately established at 172 W. Washington street, this being the shipping department of the Bluebird Photoplays, Inc. Mr. Lesserman was found there at an early hour, and assured me that every customer, both in the city and country, would be taken care of. In this he will be largely aided by the Anti-Trust Film Company's branch of Universal. He also stated that the New York office had assured him immediately after the fire, that the greater number of the films destroyed would be duplicated at once.

Manager Lesserman rushed to the fire from his home immediately on being notified, and, assisted by his staff, succeeded in saving nearly all of the books and records. He could not furnish any information regarding the insurance on the exchange and its contents, nor was he able at the time to define future plans concerning a new exchange office.

Edward Gehring, a clerk on the night force, was badly burned, and was taken to the Iroquois Hospital for treatment. The other men of the force had fled to the street, when Mr. Gehring remembered that the door of a vault in which valuable films were stored, had been left open. He rushed back to close it, but on reaching the second floor a terrific explosion took place, blowing out windows and scattering glass in all directions. An unidentified man who was passing on the street at the time, was struck by a ladder which was blown out of a window by this explosion, and injured on the head.

Carl Laemmle and Maurice Fleckles arrived in the city from the New York office on the Twentieth Century Thursday morning, and immediately co-operated with Mr. Lesserman in seeking a new location for the exchange. On Friday morning, November 17, it was given out that, most probably, the old office of the General Film Company, at 17-19 Wabash Avenue, will be secured. This is a fine location, being centrally situated, and the building is modern.

Unfair Criticism of Moving Pictures.

The unfair criticism of moving pictures at the recent general convention of the Episcopal Church at St. Louis showed a remarkable departure from the accustomed conservative attitude of that body. The following editorial by the Chicago Examiner on the action of the convention is both fair and timely:

The General Convention of the Episcopal Church, in its recent session at St Louis, passed a resolution favoring a national censorship of moving pictures. The resolution recites that a number of the moving pictures contain "suggestions of lust and license and details which combine to develop a school of crime."

The statement is rather too strong. There are faults in the movies, of course. So there are in sermons. There must be many sermons preached each week that are rank heresy, from an orthodox point of view. But we hear no one proposing a censorship of sermons.

The morality of the motion pictures is certainly not inferior to that of the speaking stage. In fact, no motion picture would dare exhibit some scenes that are put on the stage. Yet nobody talks of censorship of plays.

The explanation is that the moving picture is new, and the conservative mind is always averse to what is new. Even those who are not ultra-conservative are more critical of new things than of old, and complain of faults in the new, while paying no attention to exactly similar faults in the old.

This trait explains why the motion pictures are so readily criticised for faults which pass without notice in spoken plays, books, magazines and newspapers.

The best thing to do with the motion pictures is to let them alone, while time, experience and public taste perfect their useful and entertaining features and eliminate their crude and unsatisfactory features.

They should have exactly the same freedom that the press has, for exactly the same reasons.

Chicago Film Brevities.

The "Kitty Kelly" photoplay column in the Chicago Tribune has been discontinued, owing to the merging of the Sunday and daily departments devoted to moving pictures, which has led to the assignment of the owner of the well known nom de plume to another department of the great daily. We shall miss "Kitty Kelly," and the "we" is not used editorially, for her daily column was widely read by people interested in moving pictures, including both the public and those connected with the moving picture business in the city. As a rule "Kitty Kelly's" criticisms have been concise, fair and helpful, and her column also included live current news of happenings in the business, and of prominent stars and others in the photoplay ranks. "We" all wish "Kitty Kelly" well in her new work, and speed her with the assurance that in breaking the field of photoplay criticism for "the world's greatest newspaper" she was a right worthy pioneer.

Max Glucksmann, one of the largest and most important individual operators in the moving picture business in the Argentine Republic, with headquarters at Buenos Aires, has been in Chicago for the past week, accompanied by his American representative, Frederick H. Knocke. Both gentlemen have been busily engaged in looking over the film output here, including films of all lengths, with the object of contracting for the South American rights for those selected. No announcement has as yet been made by them as to the result of their investigations, but most likely something definite will appear in my next letter.

Alfred Hamburger has booked "Less Than the Dust," which had a fine run for two weeks at the La Salle theater, at the local offices of the Artcraft Pictures Corporation for a first neighborhood-theater showing on his circuit. On the South Side it has been booked for the Twentieth Century, and on the North Side for the Pine Grove. He has also booked "Romeo and Juliet" (Metro) for the Twentieth Century theater, for a showing during the current week. Mr. Hamburger's policy for the admittance of children at his newest theater, the Grand Oak, Grand Boulevard and Thirty-ninth street, is meeting with great favor. Children are admitted to this theater for five cents always, though the admission for adults is 10 and 15 cents, according to the importance of the film subject. It will be advantageous to know that the Grand Oak is now one of the most profitable theaters on the Hamburger circuit.

The first of the Newman Travel Talks at Orchestra Hall for the season of 1916-17, was given Wednesday evening, November 15. The travel talks have been subdivided into three courses, exactly alike, A, B, and C. Course A will be given on five successive Wednesday evenings, at 8:15; course B on five successive Friday evenings, at 8:15, and course C on five successive Saturdays, at matinees. The travel talks are comprised of "Japan Today," "The New China," "Peking," "Korea," and "Hawaii and Manila." Judging from the popularity of "Japan Today," on Wednesday evening last, the courses should prove exceedingly popular.

Saul Goodfriend has succeeded Ned Holmes as manager of the Studebaker theater. He is well known in theatrical circles, having been business manager of several important companies, with star features.

Geraldine Farrar and her husband Lou-Tellegen, were guests of the Studebaker Monday evening, November 13, where they enjoyed the great novelties of "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea." This tribute to moving pictures is all the more remarkable when it is recorded that the night in question marked the opening of the opera season in Chicago, one of the most important events of the year in society and operatic circles.

Albert H. Woods, the well known dramatic showman of New York, has arranged for the building of a new theater at the northwest corner of Dearborn and Randolph streets, in the heart of the "White Way" of Chicago. The playhouse will be located in a ten-story structure and office building that will cost $600,000. A ninety-nine years' lease on the property was secured, beginning May 1, 1917, at a rental of $50,000 a year for the first five years, and $55,000 for the remainder of the term. The Marshall Field estate bought the two sites from the former owners for a consideration of $1,057,500. The new playhouse, which has not yet been named, will seat 1,100 people. Mr. Woods has announced that he will give the lie to talk of theatrical hard times, owing to the incursions of moving pictures.

Word has been received from the Selig studios at Los Angles that Colin Campbell has started on the production of another big Selig picture drama that may run 10 reels or more. A strong cast has been engaged for the production, and will be announced later. The photoplay was written by Gilson Willets, and the story is timely with a universal appeal. The title for the present is being withheld for obvious reasons.

"The Brand of Cain," a Selig feature that will be released through the General Film Company's service Monday, December 4, has such artists as Kathlyn Williams, Harry Lonsdale and Wheeler Oakman in the cast. It will be remembered that these players starred in "The Ne'er-Do-Well." Indeed, many of the scenes for the production were filmed when "The Ne'er-Do-Well" company was on the way to the Panama Canal Zone. The Selig Polyscope Co. has issued a beautiful and expensive one-sheet poster of Miss Kathlyn Williams for the production. This poster is in five colors and carries no advertising lettering. It is on heavy plate paper, and no extra charge will be made for it to those booking the film. For others who do not book "The Brand of Cain," the posters will be sold at 50 cents each. It is a splendid likeness of Miss Williams and was sketched from life by the artist. It will make an artistic decoration for any theater when becomingly framed.

The following programs have been announced at the prominent downtown theaters in Chicago for the ensuing week:

Studebaker—"Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea" (Universal). Well filled houses are still the rule.

Ziegfeld—"The Price of Fame" (Vitagraph), featuring Marc McDermott and Naomi Childers, and "The Glove and the Ring," a chapter from Vitagraph's serial, "The Scarlet Runner."

La Salle—Rita Jolivet and Hamilton Revelle in "The Masque of Life" (Signet Film Co.), succeeding "Less Than the Dust" (Artcraft).

Colonial—The run of "The Birth of a Nation" has been extended one week, and will end on Saturday, November 25, instead of November 18, as formerly announced. Griffith's "Intolerance" will open its run on Tuesday, November 28.

H. A. Spanuth has resigned as manager of the Central Film Corporation, which is owned and controlled by Jones, Linick & Schaefer and Nathan Ascher. He has done so in order to promote the interests of a new producing and distributing company, which he announces has been incorporated for $2,000,000, the stockholders and promoters of which are Chicago business men. The company will be known as the Commonwealth Film Co., and Mr. Spanuth will leave for New York in the near future to open an eastern office there.

Mr. Spanuth has been connected with Jones, Linick & Schaefer as manager of the Central Film Corporation for the past three years, and, in fact, opened up that exchange for the firm. He is also well known as one of the organizers of the F. I. L. M. Club in Chicago, which stands for the Film Industrial Local Managers, of which he is the secretary. This organization has already been copied in New York City, and much good has been done the distributing business through it.

The Universal Joker Company featuring Gale Henry and William Franey, is filming "Trunks and Trouble" in one reel. under the direction of W. W. Beaudine.

News of Los Angeles and Vicinity

By G. P. VON HARLEMAN and CLARKE IRVINE

Brodsky, Manager of Cinema Company, Limited, Arrives at Coast With Interesting Chinese Pictures.

A MOST interesting figure in the film world, is in Los Angeles. His name is B. Brodsky, and for the past ten years he has lived and traveled in China. He is the general manager of the Cinema Company, Limited, with offices in Hong Kong. His travelogue, one of the most fascinating Oriental pictures ever made, will be exhibited next week at the Majestic theater on Broadway.

Mr. Brodsky, besides managing two motion picture plants, one in Hong Kong and the other in Shanghai, also owns eight picture theaters in China.

He says that making pictures in China, with native players, is an exceedingly interesting occupation, and many were his mishaps and adventures when he began his work ten years ago, when that country had not even seen a picture. He opened the first picture show house in the southern metropolis, Hong Kong, about eight years ago, showing American made films.

He says: "I had to hire my audiences in those days. Every Celestial is skeptical, and wants pay for all he does, he wants to be shown. For several days I paid them to see my show. Crowds gathered outside and soon they began clamoring for admittance, and before long the business had started."

Mr. Brodsky continued, "My two companies are made up of Chinese players, and the pictures filmed are all historical. The orientals like American slap-stick comedies, but they would not stand for seeing a Chinaman making a fool of himself. Also realism is demanded by these fans. When we have a hanging in a picture, we are forced to hire a man from the prison, who is under sentence of death."

The Chinese Charlie Chaplin is a Chinaman, Mr. Brodsky says, by the name of Chan, who is a clever acrobat, and the only Chinese slap-stick comedian in pictures as most Chinese won't stand for doing this sort of thing at all. He receives $12 a month, but it's so much money the other actors refuse to believe it.

"Our methods of getting our actors to work are most entertaining at times," continued Mr. Brodsky. "When we want a Chinese portrayer of various characters to put over a certain piece of business, we have to make him do it by methods unknown to any other such profession. When we want him to register fear, or grief, we sometimes have to whip him. If we desire to show cheerfulness, we buy him a new hat or something, then he goes to work with a will.

EXCITING SCENES FOR SIXTH EPISODE "A LASS OF THE LUMBERLANDS" AT THE SIGNAL STUDIOS.

Some genuine thrillers were filmed this week at the Signal studios in the production of the sixth episode of "A Lass of the Lumberlands."

Among other things, a box car was shunted over an embankment and totally wrecked. The location used was the fill opposite the company's studio station. Three cameras were focused on the car as it came down the track. S. A. Sues, who was stationed at the base of the embankment with his camera, remained at his post until the car was within twelve feet and coming straight towards him. He had expected it to go by on one side, but it jumped the track several feet before it reached the derailing switch. He cranked until it appeared suicidal to remain longer. Then, throwing the machine to his shoulder, he stepped out of the way just in time to keep from being struck.

Helen Homes, the charming Lass of the Lumberlands, performed one of the most hazardous stunts in the filming of this episode that has ever fallen to her lot.

According to the scenario she was forced to climb to the crossarm of a telegraph pole and from there leap to the top of a caboose as it passed her at twenty-five miles an hour. Several times she has been called upon to drop from a bridge to a train passing beneath her, but this is simple compared with balancing upon a crossarm and then leaping out from the pole far enough to light on the passing train. Not only did she have to make the jump once, but the better to "put over" the scene, it was later decided to have her do it twice. The first time, the camera caught it from the ground; the second, the camera was stationed on top of the caboose and caught the jump from that position.

The first episode of "A Lass of the Lumberlands" is being presented this week at the Pantages theater. On Monday a box party of Signal players including Helen Holmes, Thomas Lingham, Charles Wells, Katherine Goodrich, Leo Maloney and others attended the premiere presentation. When the picture was over Manager Carl Walker of the Pantages theater turned the spot on the Signal box and in a few well chosen words introduced the heroine of the serial. Miss Helen Holmes, to the appreciative audience. Miss Holmes graciously responded.

SENNETT DOES A WESTERN THRILLER.

Gambling Dens of Wild and Wooly West Portrayed at Sennett-Keystone-Triangle Studios.

Every Keystone picture of late had a thrilling climax, usually in some great set which was specially constructed for the picture. This week the carpenters and mechanics were busy on a set representing a gambling den of the west. The locale of the place where thousands and thousands of dollars transfer pocketbooks, is Coyote, Montana.

For these scenes over fifty extras are used, all perfect types of the rough and uncouth westerner. Mack Swain is featured in this set as the grizzled sheriff who enters the place and rescues the pretty heroine and piles of money in short order. Then he rides his horse up the stairs, then a cut shows him on the balcony, peering down the steps, and seeing himself pursued by mobsmen, he forces his horse to leap from the balcony, through the twenty feet of space, into the river below. This bit of realistic thrill was done in the Keystone plant.

WOODLEY THEATER TO HOLD ELABORATE CHRISTMAS CAMPAIGN.

The Woodley theater has announced tempting Christmas Gift Campaign for Boys and Girls, nineteen years of age and under, in which the prizes range from a 4-passenger roadster down to a $10 gold piece.

Every boy and girl who makes a cash report each week of the campaign and fails to win a prize will be paid five per cent commission on the total amount of money turned in by them.

First of the grand prizes will be the 4-passenger Roadster, in addition to which the winner will have first choice between a $250.00 Edison Diamond Disc Phonograph and a $250.00 Pathescope. The third grand prize is to be a $250.00 Racer, and in addition a $20.00 gold piece.

The district prizes will number thirty-five, the territory being divided into five districts, in each of which five special prizes will be given. These prizes will be first a $250.00 racer; second, a $45.00 bicycle; third, a $22.50 Eastman kodak 3A; fourth, an annual pass to the Woodley theater, loge seat, value $15.60; and fifth, $10.00 in gold. All prizes will be on display at 840 South Broadway, Woodley Theater Building, campaign headquarters.

The gift campaign will be carried on by votes—free vote coupons being given with admissions to the Woodley theater during the period of the campaign. Nomination coupons good for 5,000 votes each may be obtained at once.

SCREAM CLUB HOLDS SESSION.

Members of the Scream Club held an interesting meeting in the Town and Country club house on the summit of Mount Washington on Saturday night, November 11. The hosts were Don Meaney, publicity and booking man, and H.

F. Keelar, assistant to Kennath Anthony O'Hara, Ince studio publicity manager.

There were over seventy-five members and guests present at this, the third of the fall entertainments. A dinner served, followed by dancing and a lively program. The Scream Club has become quite a club, and enjoys the distinction of having no regular meetings, no officers, no dues, no bothersome details, just a meeting held semi-occasionally.

Los Angeles Film Brevities.

James Young and Marie Doro.

On Saturday evening Miss Doro entertained at her cozy Hollywood home, Rock Cranny. Elliott Dexter, her husband, assisted her. Wallace Reid did a turn on his violin and Charlie Chaplin was there to dance with Wallie in a funny version of the spring song, also Douglas Fairbanks warbled.

Director Rex Ingram of Universal City has completed a five reel Russian story, "The Reward of the Faithless," written by E. Magnus Ingleton, Scenario Editress of the Pacific Coast Studios of the Universal Company, and in a few days will start work on another five reel story by her entitled "The Woman Without a Soul." It is an underworld story with numerous thrilling situations.

Two other stories written by Mrs. Ingleton are in course of production. One is three-reel comedy drama, entitled "Heart Strings," which is being directed by Allen Holubar. Francelia Billington plays the leading role and the Universal's vampire actress, Maude George, also has a strong part. Ruth Ann Baldwin is directing the other Ingleton story, a society drama called "Retribution." This is in two reels and Cleo Madison is enacting the principal role.

A massive Hacienda setting of larger proportions than was that used in "Lieutenant Danny, U. S. A.," is being erected this week on one of the stages at the Ince-Triangle studios at Culver City, for the production of the new Triangle Kay-Bee play by J. G. Hawks in which Thomas H. Ince will present William S. Hart as star. The set is being constructed under the supervision of Art Director Robert Brunton, and when completed will occupy practically the entire floor space of the stage. The cast appearing in support of Hart in this play consists of Mary MacIvor, Joseph J. Dowling, Fanny Midgly, Will H. Bray, Thomas Kurihara, Darra Foss and Mary Jane Irving.

It is rather an unusual thing for a theatrical magnate and the producer of a big film play as "Ramona" to take the part of an extra man himself. But this really happened the other day at Universal City.

The magnate in question was William H. Clune, owner of Clune's auditorium and Clune's Broadway, two of the leading theaters of Los Angeles. Clune was visiting the photoplay city with a party of friends. Lois Weber was engaged in filming the scenes connected with a fire in an athletic club and required a large number of well dressed men for one of the scenes. Spying Clune, Miss Weber called out to him, "Just the kind of a man I need—please come into the picture and bring your friends along."

Clune and the members of his party did so, and each was presented with a $3.00 ticket for their work as an "extra." Clune said, "I am going to have mine framed—I'll point proudly to it some day when I become a real leading man."

Helen Starr, scenario writer and actress has joined the forces of the Universal Company at Universal City. Miss Starr was formerly a newspaper woman and also has appeared upon the speaking stage. For the past year she has been editor of Universal's Eastern scenario department.

Eugene B. Lewis Welcoming Helen Starr and Edna Rowell Schley, to Universal City.

Accompanied by Edna Rowell Schley, a writer, Miss Starr traveled from New York to Universal City by automobile.

Miss Starr will play in the pictures as well as write for them. Her stories in New York have appeared in Collier's Weekly, Harper's, and other leading magazines. She has sold photoplays to all the large producing companies.

General Film Program

Interesting List of Subjects in the Offering for the Week of Nov. 27.

"FOLLOWING THE FLAG," the first picture released on General Film program for week of November 27-December 2nd, inclusive, is a three-reeler of considerable interest. The National Guards of the different states are shown entering McAllen Mission and other cities near the border. It gives close-ups of the cavalry, infantry and artillery and depicts life as lived by the men on the border. Vitagraph offers "Taking the Honey Out of Honeymoon," a one-act comedy in which Mary Anderson is featured. Then comes the ever-interesting Selig-Tribune, showing pictorially all the big events of the day, followed by a one-reel drama reissued by Biograph, "The Influence of the Unknown," in which Mae Marsh and Henry Walthall have the leading parts.

On the following day George Beane supplies the fun in Essanay's two-reel comedy, "A Tin Soldier." "Dudes for a Day," a one-reel Kalem production, with an all-star comedy cast, including "Ham," "Bud," Ethel Teare and Henry Murdoch, shown at their best, will then be screened.

An Essanay cartoon, "Dreamy Dud Joyriding with Princess Zlim," and a split-reel scenic will be the first picture Wednesday, November 29th. The comedy pair, Harry Myers and Rosemary Theby, are seen in a Vim one-reel comedy, "Hubby's Chicken." This will be followed by "Border Wolves," the seventeenth episode of Kalem's "The Girl From 'Frisco," in which Marin Sais and True Boardman share honors. Irene Howley is starred in a Biograph three-reel drama (reissue), "The Wages of Sin," which rounds out the program for that day.

Selig-Tribune, showing all the big news of the world, and a Vim one-reel comedy, "The Prize Winners," with Babe Hardy and Billie Ruge featured, will be Thursday's offering.

A Knickerbocker star feature, "Butts Casey—Crook," a drama in two parts, featuring Frank Mayo, will be the first picture flashed on the screen Friday, the 1st of December. The seventh adventure of Kalem's "Grant, Police Reporter," entitled "The Wizard's Plot," starring George Larkin and Ollie Kirkby, will follow. Then will be seen a Vitagraph one-reel comedy, "Have You Heard About Lillie?" and a Vim comedy of the same length, featuring "Pokes" and "Jabs" in "Ambitious Ethel," will close Friday's program.

Two of Essanay's big stars, Bryant Washburn and Gertrude Glover, are featured in the first picture shown Saturday, "The Final Fraud," a three-reel drama. Vitagraph's Broadway feature, "Our Other Lives," a drama of three reels, in which Adele Kelly and Raymond Walburn have the titular roles, will precede "The Trial Run," an episode of Kalem's "Hazards of Helen" Series, in which daring Helen Gibson is featured. The program for the day and week will close with Selig's one-reel drama, "Mistakes Will Happen," in which Tom Mix, the cowboy actor, is featured.

PATHE'S SERIAL PUBLICITY PLAN BIG SUCCESS.

"One of the best features ever offered to a newspaper in connection with motion pictures," is the way the publisher of one of the biggest newspapers in the United States describes the series of lessons in scenario writing prepared by Pathe in connection with "The Shielding Shadow," the Wonder-serial. These scenario lessons by George B. Seitz, author of the photoplay, were published in more than two hundred of the leading newspapers throughout the country.

The scenario lessons as presented in the newspapers were condensed from the real working scenarios from which the Astra Film Corporation produced "The Shielding Shadow" serial. The technical phrases were retained and at the end each week was published a technical dictionary. In introductory notes the newspapers encouraged their readers to first study the scenarios, then see the play presented on the screen and go home and try to write their own scenarios. Many scenarios were submitted in response to this invitation. A number of the newspapers publishing these scenarios have started scenario contests of their own, offering cash prizes for the best scenario submitted for the final episode of "The Shielding Shadow."

"WHO'LL BE SUE," CAUSING TROUBLE.

The Pedley & Burch Theatrical Company of Owensboro, Ky., advise the Moving Picture World in a letter, dated November 18, that they are having some trouble with the Universal Advertisers, who have been putting on "Who'll Be Sue" contests in Southern Illinois, Indiana and Kentucky. They claim that the promoters have not been living up to their contracts with exhibitors, themselves among the number. The contracting, they say, was done by J. L. Shrode.

The First Four Art Dramas

Newest Program Offers as Its Initial Releases a "Photo Adaptation of a Broadway Success, an Original Scenario, and Picturizations of Two Well Known Novels.

ART DRAMAS, Inc., the company that was recently formed to distribute the productions of the William L. Sherrill Feature Corporation, the U. S. Amusement Corporation, the Van Dyke Feature Production Company, the Erbograph Company, has announced its releases beginning with the middle of December, and extending through to the middle of February of next year.

The first picture that will be released by the new organization will be a production from the studios of the Van Dyke Feature Production Company. The feature will be called "The Lash of Destiny," and was written and directed by George Terwilliger. It is described as a drama of more than usual intensity, embodying a number of strong situations. Gertrude McCoy, who has the leading role, is said to have done some remarkable work in the picture. The release date is set for the 14th of December.

A week after the release of "The Lash of Destiny," during the Christmas holidays, "Whoso Taketh a Wife—" a powerful novel, will be picturized and released under the same name. The story is by Lester Putnam, and is an answer to Hall Caine's "The Woman Thou Gavest Me."

"Whoso Taketh a Wife—" is being produced under the direction of Frank Crane, Jean Sothern, the little beauty who already has so many screen triumphs to her credit, will play the leading part in the picture. The production will be released under the U. S. Amusement Corporation brand.

The third of the Art Dramas will be a picturization of a well known Broadway success, "The Rainbow." It was in this play several years ago that Ruth Chatterton, now playing in "Come Out of the Kitchen," first was starred. Playing opposite her in the Broadway production was Henry Miller. In the picture version of the play Dorothy Bernard will play the part created by Miss Chatterton, while Jack Sherrill will portray the male lead. It is a curious coincidence that while Miss Bernard was the star of the Belasco stock company in Washington she also played the same role. Because of her familiarity with the part, Miss Bernard will undoubtedly be able to give a very interesting performance. The story was deservedly popular on the legitimate stage and will surely repeat its success on the screen.

The Erbograph Company will contribute the fourth release to the Art Dramas program, a picturization of 'The Swinging Gates," a novel of mystery and thrill. The book appeared serially several years ago in a magazine, and proved to be very popular. It is said to lend itself very well to picturization.

Superpictures in Triangle Exchanges

New Distributing Company Formed With Hodkinson as President and General Manager.

OFFICIAL announcement was made on the afternoon of Saturday, November 18, to the effect that H. E. Aitken, president of the Triangle Film Corporation, and W. W. Hodkinson, president of Superpictures, Inc., had agreed upon the formation of a new company to be called the Triangle Distributing Corporation, which is to be jointly owned by the companies, Triangle and Superpictures. Continuing the announcement says:

"The purpose of the new organization is to operate the twenty-two Triangle exchanges and to handle exclusively in the United States the Triangle-Fine Arts, Kay Bee and Keystone productions, together with the films released by Superpictures, Inc.

"Messrs. Aitken, Kessel and Baumann will continue their activities with the Triangle Film Corporation and the producing companies, and Mr. Hodkinson, as president and general manager of the new company, and Raymond Pawley, as treasurer, will be in charge of the distributing organization, with headquarters at 1459 Broadway, New York."

This new deal is a new twist to the plan put forth by the Triangle Film Corporation a few weeks ago by which it proposed to sell a substantial interest in its several exchanges to parties residing in or familiar with the trade in the territory which each branch exchange served. The Triangle people had not proceeded far with that plan when they were approached by Mr. Hodkinson with a proposition to buy that interest in each exchange which was to be disposed of, in one block instead of piecemeal. This proposition was finally accepted by the Triangle interests and the Triangle Distributing Corporation resulted.

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

Showmanship.

LATELY we have been hanging around the prosperous town in Maine where we go when we get tired of the town. It is a place, too, where we can study the conditions in the smaller places. Three houses share the business of perhaps 15,000 people and mostly they just sit and wait for it to come in. Three advertisements adorn the local paper. Each says that there will be certain films shown. Also announcement is made that the prices are five and ten cents. That is all save that the most ambitious house adds that Boston is paying as much as a quarter for the same show. That is a close to argument as the three of them get. There is no announcement of time of showing, though there is a considerable transient population that might not be supposed to know these details. But one house, in particular, can be used as an answer to the question as to why so many managers fail. The house has changed hands since our last visit. It is now being run by a man who previously conducted a candy store across the street. The house has a frontage of about twenty-five feet, of which four feet are occupied by the entrance to the upper floor, used as a restaurant. The lobby proper is about ten feet wide, or perhaps a trifle less. It is divided into two parts by a pop-corn machine that takes about two-fifths of the space, leaving barely room for a fat man to enter. On either side the auditorium runs up into what was probably the show windows of the original store, but now these are curtained off. One side is the candy store and the other is given over to the peanut roaster, an annex to the latter being placed in front of the pop-corn machine when the house is open. Four one sheets in brass frames advertise the attractions. If you peer behind the pop-corn machine you can see the box office and so be assured that this is a theater. It looks to the stranger far more like a badly planned candy store. At night there is a rim of 16 candle lamps about a banner for the serial, but no projecting sign or other device to catch the stranger up the street.

One recent attraction was Shoes. Now if there ever was a vital, gripping picture—for the first four reels—it is that same Shoes, and managers all over the country have done wonders with it. It is not only a good picture, but it is one that lends itself to innumerable unusual advertising stunts. The picture showed Wednesday and Thursday and Wednesday morning. Two three sheets were pasted on a board in a vacant lot a block or two away. Apart from the paper as it came from the lithographers were two Hentegan strips reading

"Wednesday" and "Thursday." The name of the house was nowhere shown. Presumably everyone was supposed to know that the crude boards belonged to this house and not to one of the others. Wednesday there was also a reading notice in the local paper. It started off with the "Why do you deal at one store" argument and ran into the briefest sort of a comment on the play. As a result the first showing Wednesday was to about half a house, and the house was not even a full one. With all the chance in the world for a legitimate clean-up, with the best picture in town the week we were there, nothing whatever was done out of the routine. Presently the manager will be dropping his picture theater annex and spend the rest of his life declaring that there is no money in pictures. There is not, the way he runs things, and yet it does not require expert knowledge to be prospering to pull business. The Bluebird sends out a lot of suggestions on each picture, and with such especially good ones as Shoes it goes to considerable pains to tell just how to work the campaign. In this department have been shown a lot of ideas. One exhibitor, in the Southwest, got the merchants to come in with him on a double-page advertisement of which he paid only a small fraction. Many have dressed the lobby with old shoes and we reproduce a photograph of the Majestic, Grand Junction, Colorado, showing how Charles Decker dressed his front. He was just launching Peg O' the Ring, and so he advertised that he would admit children to the matinee of the first instalment if they brought a pair of old shoes. This got out a big crowd for the first instalment of the serial, gave him his decorative material free, and probably roused parential interest as well. He writes that he jammed them in. The Majestic is not in a large town, and it was a [illegible] and the house was packed at all shows. Half the time—and more than half the time, the trouble is not with the pictures but with the methods of the exhibitors. One man did not advertise and did a small business. The other cleaned up. One man spoiled his front to let in a candy store. If you'll look at the picture of the Majestic you will see two regular store fronts. The one on the left was formerly given to the Universal exchange. Now it is a waiting room for patrons. One man is a manager and the other merely runs a house. In which class are you? It is as easy to be one as the other with all the help you get.

A Lobby.

Here is our idea of a nice looking lobby. It is the Princess, Pocatello, Idaho, and operated by Archibald and Carpenter. There is nothing to prevent the spectator from entering. He does not have to hurdle easel frames, three-sheet boards or the like. He just walks up to the box office from any point, puts down his money and enters a wide door. Only two loose frames are employed, and these could be replaced by others just large enough to contain the photographs and narrow enough to be securely fastened to the posts. That card just below the word "Paramount" over the box office window tells the hour of the next performance. It doesn't pay to keep your lobby cluttered up. Make it easy for a person to reach the box office. Keep most of your paper on boards away from the house, and have your lobby display where it cannot blow over or be knocked down. Look this picture over and then see what you can do with your own lobby if you have a shallow one.

Good Work.

It is pleasant to note the efforts of the Pennsylvania exhibitors to educate the public as to Censorship. The Rowland and Clark theaters have done splendid work in this line, and now the Third Street theater, Easton, and the Lehigh-Orpheum, South Bethlehem, are in line. Let public opinion and not opinionated men and women keep evil pictures out of the theater. It can be done.

Neatly Done.

The Grand, Bay City, Texas, sends in an announcement slip they got out for Alob Aoc, mailing it out under first-class postage. They anticipate comment by explaining that full information as to stars, etc., was made [illegible] and on slide. The slip is a four-page light card 3¼ by 5½ inches, a slightly mottled brown stock, but so slightly marked as not to be annoying. Only the outside pages are printed, one side reading:

> Doubtless God could have made a better berry than the strawberry, but doubtless God didn't. Izaak Walton.
> Doubtless man could make better pictures than Triangle, but doubtless man hasn't, and isn't likely to.
> See them Friday at the Grand and be convinced.

On the other side is an invitation to witness Alob Aoc on a specified night. The printing is in black. A deep blue would have also been good as would a dark red, but the black stands up best. It is simple, neat and convincing. The same [illegible] on the best of a cheap stock with cheap printing would not have carried half the conviction that this better than "just good" does. The management writes:

> We do these things right along, but do not overdo them, and they never fail to bring results. But we change the style and idea of the folder in nearly every instance.

The same folder, no matter how good, would soon lose its effect. We would like to get a permanent place on the mailing list.

Changed Again.

The Bluebird publicity department now issues a four page printed sheet, blank on the reverse side, giving enough publicity material for a campaign in any city. This is about all a manager needs to get results with, plus his pictorial paper, and yet many maangers do not even take the trouble to clip and send out, though the four pages are printed as an eight, with blank backs to make it still more easy.

Velvet.

Pretty easy for Gloria exhibitors with Billie Burke—a front-page news feature all over the country.

Wilby Resumed.

R. B. Wilby, of the Strand Amusement Co., has resumed publication of his program for the theaters in Montgomery, Ala. The new Stramco Post is a four-pager, due to the high cost of paper, but it works on all four pages. The main point is to get the program before the reader, and this Mr. Wilby does very nicely in a new form that is shown here.

This is a slightly new form to most program editors, but it is a handy way to get much in little, and others than Mr. Wilby feel the paper costs. Inside there is an editorial page, and one given to brisk notes. We think that so far as real pull goes this four-pager will do almost as well as the larger issue of last spring. In the original the space from rule to rule is 4⅜ inches, the regular five by eight page.

Wise Crowd.

L. W. Carroll, of the Lyric, Lancaster, N. H., has a wise audience. He has to charge extra for good stuff to make them believe that it is good. He writes:

> Have not sent in any work for criticism for some time, and think I must need it by this time.
>
> The enclosed letter on the Three Godfathers was a typewritten (not carbon copy) sent to a selected list of about 100 names. Our mailing list, besides a general list, contains a separate doctors, lawyers, railroad men, bankers and business list. Thus a picture that may appeal to a certain class is easily exploited.
> For the Exposition's First Romance, a 101 Ranch picture I dressed a boy in cowboy suit and gave him a bugle, then placed him on a horse with a drape reading: "101 Ranch To-night." He appeared on the principal streets during the day and was in front of the theater during the early part of the evening. In spite of a pouring rain we did a capacity business.
> You will notice that our prices for the Bluebird are 10 and 25 cents. I have to charge this to get the crowd. They do not believe our shows are good unless we charge extra prices. Recently we ran the Alien, with Geo. Beban, and advertised it as a special attraction for only 5 and 10 cents. We did not take in enough to pay for the reels. I advise others to try this, but be sure your program is worth it.

We would rather pay a quarter to see a good Bluebird than a dime to see a feature of doubtful merit and paternity. We caught one the other night up in Maine that was a dead steal of thirteen cents out of the fifteen we paid for a seat. It was an ex-gambler's idea of how an old vaudeville player would act if she were a member of the French aristocracy. It was a wild and fearful thing.

One of the Bluebird heralds has pinned to it a letterhead of the house, and upon this in typewriting is "Dear Patron: We guarantee this attraction. Carroll and Donnell." That means something. It means that they are going to stand by their statement that the picture is worth a quarter to see, and we do not think they had to return any money, at that. It costs some time to type a hundred noteheads, but it clinches results. There is little to criticize in Mr. Carroll's advertising. It is well laid out, and the compositor does the best he can with the equipment of a small-town printing office. Evidently Mr. Carroll stands in with the compositor and gives him the idea of how he wants the job done. The write-ups are better because here type arrangement does not count. He picks up the good talking points and tells them interestingly. Mr. Carroll may think he needs criticism, but he has guessed wrong on this. He is keeping up to his mark, and a little better than that.

the big noise with Dave. He does not always ring the bell, but he does it so often that his advertising is watched just to see what he will do next, and that is a good frame of mind for the patrons to be in. Between Dave and his printer the advertising is always above par.

Paramount Publicity.

It is perhaps a coincidence that shortly after we commented on the fact that exhibitors were asked to pay for the cuts and other matter used in advertising brands the Paramount Company announced its free material, but at any rate it no longer charges for newspaper cuts, trade-mark cuts, slides and other helps including its series of frames for mortise advertising and top and bottom pieces, some of which can be worked with standard brass rule. That is also an improvement we suggested. At any rate this material is all free and now is catalogued in a loose leaf cover that will permit additions or substitutions to be made with ease. As conditions now are the Paramount is giving its exhibitors the fullest possible aid, not alone in the quantity and diversity of material, but in excellence of design. If you are a Paramounter and have not the new Paramount Advertising Aids, devil your exchange until you get it. You are losing money without it. It gives a complete outfit that will supply any exhibitor, no matter what his needs, and the stuff is all practical and well planned.

A Pickford Brochure.

Wallace M. Powers has gotten out a book, by Wells Hawks, How to to Handle Mary Pickford Pictures, that is decidedly interesting. It outlines a general scheme of policy, promising definite campaigns for each release as it is made. Its general aim is to teach the lesson that quiet courtesy and a quiet house make the best environment for the Pickford pictures. It does for most others, for that matter, and we think that Mr. Hawks might have laid even more stress upon this point. These Pickford pictures will bring to the house a class of patrons above the average. If they are greeted with a calliope they will be lost to the management. That is about what the book means boiled down, and in that is the essence of progressive management. Don't make your appeal solely to those who want knockabout comedies and thrillers. Play for the better class and you can charge them more for seats. Mr. Hawks has been a bit too careful, perhaps, of managerial feelings, so we'll say it for him. What he means is that you cannot advertise Artcraft pictures with a brass band and a ballyhoo. You must suit the atmosphere of the house to the dignity of the subject. Peanuts and Pickfords do not blend well. Subdue the peanut crushers and make the house habitable to the more refined patrons and you'll get money from both of them. On his side Mr. Hawks promises on behalf of the company that the publicity matter will be distinctive and in harmony, distinctive paper, newspaper instead of press agent stuff, and special schemes that will match the subjects. It is an interesting little booklet, and it is the third booklet in less than a month that speaks of real service. It really looks as though the days of the "bunk" press agent are numbered.

Read This.

Even if it does take up a lot of space we are going to print this page from the Vitagraph Chairman, the organ of the Kansas City Vitagraph exchange. We do not know whether it was written by L. J. Scott or E. R. Pearson, but it is something that should be cut out and framed and hung on the wall where you can see it daily. Be something more than a man who runs a picture house. Be part of the town. The story runs:

It has been something more than we took an inside inspection of our elves. Let's look this time to discover just how we stand with regard to the community.

Do they like us or not?

Have they come to realize that the Motion Picture Industry takes its hat off to no other?

Do they consult with us every time they want to put on a Home Talent Show or a town picnic or do they merely say "Oh, he runs the movie show," and pass on by?

Do you know there are innumerable reasons why the theater man should be the town's most representative citizen?

The first looking at the matter from a commercial standpoint is that it is good advertising for him to keep in the public eye. The dollar end, alone, should be reason enough.

Another just as strong a reason, but slightly more ethical is because he can become a wonderful factor in bettering his town.

His theater is the Mecca toward which every kid looks with longing eyes. They will work for hours to earn the necessary admission fee. They are the strongest boosters he has. Consequently he should be a friend to every one of them and take them into consideration when selecting his programs.

The next portion of his clientele to cater to is really the court of last appeal, the mothers, sisters, wives and daughters. If they do not come he is doomed. Although for their benefit it is necessary to conduct a refined up-to-date house and show the finest photoplays, that is not enough. It is easily possible to increase their respect and therefore their patronage by co-operating with them on benefits, little plays, and church affairs by either, donating a per cent. of the proceeds or assisting them in their advertising campaigns. Whatever is done along that line will be returned a hundred fold.

One way of adding tone to a theater and at the same time interesting ladies, who may not be regular patrons, is to arrange with local merchants for Fashion Shows, Musical Concerts and Special Demonstrations. These ideals have been worked successfully, and you may rest assured as to their value. They will appeal to the merchants who will grasp at the chance to pay you a reasonable rental for your house for an afternoon.

On the 28th of each month the new Victor records are released. Rent your house to the Victrola man and have him issue tasty little invitations to all his customers and prospects. You will find that ninety per cent. of the invitations are accepted and taken advantage of by the very best people in town. The leading milliner should use your house spring and fall to introduce the new styles. Young girls who are customers of hers will no doubt be elated at the opportunity to act as models. This applies also to the store which handles suits and gowns.

When the Electric Light Company gives its season's demonstrations of heaters, cookers, fans, and so forth, arrange to handle this in the same manner. The hardware demonstrations can also be included in this plan. Instead of forcing the ladies to stand or be cooped up in crowded quarters, they are enabled to be seated, enjoy themselves and are therefore in a much better frame of mind to absorb the best points of the demonstration.

This method furthermore elevates the demonstration above the plane of advertising and makes it an entertainment.

By suggesting these ideas to the merchants you force them to realize that you represent "To-morrow" in their community instead of "Yesterday."

Having gotten this far it is an easy matter, by joining the Commercial Club and any other important local bodies to take your place on the platform instead of in the back row. You are considered the man with ideas because your advertising is constantly before them. You have at least a portion of the day which you can devote to local affairs if necessary. Then doesn't it logically follow that you should be the man to have an important part in arranging all conventions, celebrations and local affairs which come up?

Man, man, right now is the time for us to place this industry at the head of things. Opportunity calls and if you have not already done so, answer "present" to-day.

It is the best and cheapest advertising in the world.

Make your house the center of all that is happening in town. Make it the place where things happen. Just because you run a picture theater it does not follow that you should limit yourself to the showing of pictures. Be somebody.

Definitions.

Arthur G. Stolte, manager of the Palace, Vinton, Iowa, hands the picture a wallop in all innocence when he remarks in his week's program that:

"Freckles" is a first-class show, not a picture attraction.

And he had the Birth of a Nation the same week, at that! But Mr. Stolte gets out an unusually readable program and a well-arranged one—all except the program itself. This is a series of display advertisements. In a program the list of current attractions should be the easiest thing to read in the entire issue, but in this program. It would be better to run something on the lines of the theater Lousiana program on the back page and, if desired carry the display advertising on the inside pages. Apart from this the make-up is unusually good, and most of the text well chosen and above the average. There is a large proportion of foreign advertising, but it does not interfere with the display of the house, and so is permissible. Mr. Stolte is a former newspaper man, which probably accounts for the quality of his reading matter.

A New One.

Louis Rosenzweig, of the Victoria, Greenfield, Mass., sends in the initial issue of a new program and asks for comments on it. Inasmuch as he seems to have studied the forms in the department before he put the issue on the press, he probably knows there is not much to be offered in the way of suggestion. It is a four-pager with a nicely drawn front page design, the program on the inside pages and trade advertising on the back. He might, with profit, condense those back page ads and take heed of the space for a short and pointed house talk. Apart from that there seems to be little that need be done. One thousand are printed for a 12,000 town, which will probably cover the house clientele.

Another Contest.

Misspelled word contests have long since lost their popularity as inducements to the reader to wade through the advertising. A dozen prizes are given to the persons who first complete their search of the advertising columns of Saxe's Weekly, Milwaukee. This clip will give the details:

> In each of the following advertisements, Alhambra, West Side Dye Works, Tegtmeyer, Fischer, Sinnsheimer, Hoeffler, Blatz Hotel, Vaughan Atlantic, Kuhli, Peterson, Chas. Herr and Frank Saxe's Restaurants there is one or more missing letters (a misspelled word). These letters assembled form the name of the star whose photograph you will get. The name selected for this week you all know well. She will soon be seen at the Alhambra in her latest picture. "Who is it?" In your answers you must give the misspelled words, also each missing letter, and the name of the advertisement in which they were found.
> For example:
>
> | | | |
> |---|---|---|
> | Alhambra | (M) | Alha-bra. |
> | West Side Dye Works | (A) | Rep-iring. |
> | Fischer | (R) | Fu-niture. |
> | Tegtmeyer | (Y) | Jewelr-. |
> | | | |
> | Hoeffler | (P) | Phonogra-hs. |
> | Sinnsheimer | (I) | Sc-entific. |
> | Frank Saxe | (C) | Lun-hes. |
> | Alhambra | (K) | Frederic-. |
> | Blatz Hotel | (F) | Ca-e. |
> | Peterson | (O) | Dec-rating. |
> | Kuhli | (R) | Photog-apher. |
> | Vaughan | (D) | Laun-ry. |

In framing the terms of your contest be careful to observe the post office rulings and avoid lotteries. The program must be free and easily obtainable, and the announcement of the prizes must be equally free. You cannot announce them in the house or require the winners to attend a performance in order to receive the prize in public. The weekly is a pretentious twelve-pager, about the size of the Paramount magazine.

Written Postcards.

The Star, Easton, Pa., is using post-cards of its front for advertising. On the message side is:

> Dear ——: This is the theater I attend nearly every evening. The pictures shown are swell, and the music is simply grand. They recently installed a $5,000 photoplayer that's wonderful. You should hear it.

Teaser advertising of this sort works well only when it is done well. This is done on some duplicating machine that does not give a good impression and looks more like the menu of a cheap restaurant than a hand-written card. With a little care a printer can get a good imitation of handwriting from a cut. It would be worth the additional expense. The house also uses a small four-page program, not elaborate but well printed. It would pay to condense the program into the middle pages and take the back page for house talk.

INQUIRIES.

Questions concerning photoplay writing addressed to this department will be replied to by mail if a fully addressed and stamped envelope accompanies the letter, which should be addressed to this department. Questions should be stated clearly and should be typewritten or written with pen and ink. Under no circumstances will manuscripts or synopses be criticised, whether or not a fee is sent therefor.

A list of companies will be sent if the request is made to the paper direct and not to this department, and a return stamped envelope is inclosed.

Learning to Criticize.

EVIDENTLY many authors have trouble in changing their plots, but few put it as clearly as a western correspondent. She writes that even in her high school days her plots came to her entire and not as parts of an idea. She lets the plot ripen for detail, but she finds that if she makes any attempt to alter or improve, her work becomes stilted and unreal. She has read that success is possible only where plots are given their fullest development, and writes to know if this trait will prevent her eventual success.

Unless she learns to make over and build up her plots, it is probable that she will never reach her fullest development, nor will any other writer, for first thoughts are seldom best. Few students have the trick of thinking whole plots. They think of a suggestion, which they gradually build into an idea, and this plot development becomes second nature because it is the way they learned. This writer for years thought entire plots and still does think more complete plots than plot ideas, but realizing the need, we have trained the critical faculty as applied to personal production, and so can most anyone who makes a serious study.

But until this is attained it will be fatal to attempt to reconstruct ones own plots. To work these over will serve only to render them stiff and unreal. Construction must be studied apart from the original work for a time, at any rate, for the earlier stories will be spoiled if they are used for study material and many of the plots should sell on the strength of their spontaniety. The plot with vigor and swing even though a bit crude, will sell better than the same idea carefully and laboriously built up. The workmanship will show on these, and the visible effort will spoil the swerve and dash of the plot movement. Afterward, when skill has been gained, it will be possible to do building up without letting the effort be perceived by the audience.

The best way to study plot construction is to study the work of others. Take the stories of the films each week. Go over such as are fully told. Analyse them. See wherein they are weak or wherein lies their strngth. Smprove the poor ones. Seek to improve the better. This cannot be done—as yet -with the author's own work, any more than a medical student can gain proficiency through the dissection of his own anatomy. It is necessary to study the work of others to gain a knowledge of plot construction. Take a story you see on the screen and try to work it over. Do the same with fiction stories. Take the stuff apart, put it together again, or put part of it back and supply the rest.

The object of the study is to improve the understanding of plot and situation. Even this, in time, will become more or less instinctive and your full-grown inspirations will present themselves in their most perfect form, and you will be able, then, to see that it is the most perfect form.

It is this appreciation of the value of situation and plot factor that makes the real author as against the plot mechanic. It must become a part of the mental habit to appraise situation and construction. Then work with the utmost care to build up.

Probably most readers of this department have seen the Bluebird "Shoes." For four reels this story proves what most authors know, that heart interest alone can make a good story. "Shoes" is, in one sense, a white slave story, but only technically. It is the story of a girl's self-seduction, but you lose sight of that fact in the interest you are caused to take in the girl and her situation. There is scarcely a suggestion of palpable evil, little or nothing that even the rigid moralist can find even to the slightest degree offensive, because it is the story of the girl, rather than the recital of her fall. The fall is seemingly an incident and not the objective. At the end of the fourth reel she comes home, and there is the silent confession of the lifted skirt that shows the new shoes. The mother knows that there is but one way in which she could have obtained them. She knows and she understands and she draws her daughter to her.

If the story ended there, it would be one of the most powerful dramas of the photoplay. But with the evident intention of strengthening the story, the author goes on and on, almost interminably. The mother sees what might have been. She sees the daughter engaged to a fine young mechanic; she sees her the belle of a social event; and finally, to smash home the contrast, the father comes home, jubilant over the fact that at last he has a job—a day too late. In theory this last reel drives home the lesson. In actuality it kills the effect with a thousand feet of anti-climax. The story is too strong to need driving home. It would have been better to have left all this to the imagination and off the screen. It was over-developed through a sense of the theatric rather than through a knowledge of the dramatic.

It is precisely this the author needs to acquire in studying—to sense the difference between the theatric and the dramatic. Study to gain a sure knowledge of what is best, and let your knowledge guide you. You may not need, then, to make many changes, but you will know how if you have to.

Ease Off.

We've always been rather sorry for the late King Solomon. He was the wisest man of his time, but he had innumerable wives and therefore, presumably, innumerable children to ask questions that even he could not answer. Now and then we get just one that keeps us thinking for weeks. For example George C. Shafer innocently asks, "Do you write your story to suit the Editor, the director, the actor, or the company's bank account?" Just like that he asks it. The answer is that if the company uses the star system you write to suit all four at one and the same time, otherwise the actor has no voice. The story must make a good showing at a reasonably small expense, it must first attract the Editor and then please the director, and it must suit the star, if there are stars. Mr. Shafer suggests his own remedy when he adds the alternative, "or do you just run chances and write your own ideas to suit yourself?" That scheme works if you can hold out long enough for a good story will always find a market in the end, though it may take a long time to sell it. The better scheme is to write to please the supposed tastes of some company and make the script over if it has to be sent somewhere else.

Personal Contact.

A New York inquirer wishes to know if it is permissible to take stories to the editor. He explains he would like to see the inside of a studio, and that this might create the opportunity. Judging from ihs correspondence he is far from being a boob, and it is to be supposed that if he did get into an editorial office he would not make a nuisance of himself in any way, but he has to suffer from the faults of the boobs, because the boobs do storm the editorial offices without waiting to take advice, and the editor knows that in most cases he is going to be bored and have his time wasted, and the office boy shoos the authors from the door.

The editor is not interested in you, but in your scripts. When the scrips have gained his interest, it is quite probable that if you are close by he will ask you down some time for a chat, but until you can prove your merit through your work don't even walk on the same side of the street. Then when you do get your chance it will be unspoiled.

In the same way, if you send stuff in by mail, do not send along lengthy, chatty letters. Wait until you have either sold some stories to him or until he has turned back so many good but unsuitable scripts that he is moved to write and tell you just what he does want. And even then make your letters interesting rather than lengthy.

It will all come in time, if you can deliver the goods, but the way to deliver the goods is by mail and not by hand.

Sticking.

Lately an author wrote that he knew the Drews were not buying because they had turned down five of his stories and he had sent only the best of his work. It brought a smile because the first sale we made to the Drews was on the twenty-fifth synopsis sent them and some of the twenty-five were better than the one taken—better for somebody, but not for Mr. Drew who knows just what he wants and will take nothing else. If it will cheer any faint heart up we don't mind admitting that to sell five stories to Mr. Drew we had to write seventy-nine synopses. We have seventy-four left, about fifty of which we shall presently sell elsewhere, for they are good stories, but we know that when Mr. Drew does see a story he wants he knows it, so we don't mind getting eight or ten back in a bunch. It's all part of the game. It is not always cheering after five years of eighty per cent. of sales to one company, but we figure out that we have made five sales and have been encouraged to write a lot more good ones, besides having had the pleasure of seeing five really artistic productions after a mad career of slapstick with our name tied to it. Instead of worrying about the story that doesn't sell, go write another that may stand a better chance. It takes less time, no more thought or energy, and is more remunerative.

The THIRD Edition of Technique of the Photoplay

IS NOW READY

This is virtually a new book under the old title. More than double the text and with an arrangement especially adapting it for the student. The most complete book ever written on the subject of scenario or photoplay construction.

Manufacturers' Notice.

IT IS an established rule of this department that no apparatus or other goods will be endorsed or recommended editorially until the excellence of such articles has been demonstrated to its editor.

Important Notice.

Owing to the mass of matter awaiting publication it is impossible to reply through the department in less than two or three weeks. In order to give prompt service, those sending four cents, stamps, (less than actual cost) will receive carbon copy of the department reply, by mail, without delay. Special replies by mail on matters which cannot be replied to in the department, one dollar.

Both the first and second set of questions are now ready and printed in neat booklet form, the second half being seventy-six in number. Either booklet may be had by remitting 25 cents, money or stamps, to the editor, or both for 40 cents. Cannot use Canadian stamps. Every live, progressive operator should get a copy of these questions. You may be surprised at the number you cannot answer without a lot of study.

Question No. 165.

If you brought your carbons together, they would only spark, and your fuses and resistance devices are in good condition, what would be the trouble?

Roll of Honor on Question No. 155.

The Roll of Honor on Question 155 consists of F. N. Irwin, Lufkin, Texas; F. F. Bell, Palestine, Texas; C. E. Linstruth, Carthage, N. Y.; G. A. Yager, Anadarko, Okla.; J. H. Marchard, Baton Rouge, La.

I have selected the reply of Brother Irvin as best covering the subject.

Reply to Question No. 155.

By F. N. Irvin, Lufkin, Texas

The Question:

Should size of picture have anything to do with distance from front row of seats to screen, and why?

The Answer:

The size of picture has a very great deal to do with the distance from the screen to the front row of seats. The larger the picture the greater the distance should be from the front row of seats to the screen, for the following reasons. One very serious evil attending the imperfect projection of pictures is eye strain, and one of the principal causes of this is failure on the part of theater managers to understand the problem presented when it comes to fixing the distance of the front row of seats from the screen of their theater. In brief, the problem is simply this. Beginning with a minimum of 15 feet from the front row of seats to the 10-foot wide picture, that distance should be increased as size of the picture is increased, until with the 16-foot picture the front row of seats is at least 20 feet from the screen, and even a greater distance than this is better. With a picture larger than 16 feet this distance must still be materially increased.

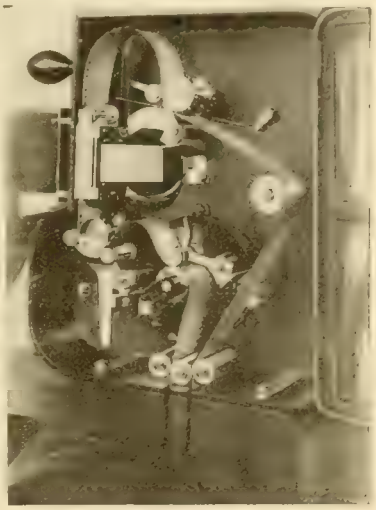
The reason for this is that the eye reads the picture practically the same as it reads a printed page, and when seated too close to a large screen is compelled to move around over considerable distance, and do it very rapidly if the action of the film is to be followed in any adequate way. This very naturally sets up eye strain. In addition to this, whereas one can sit within 15 feet of the 10-foot picture without noticing any serious out-of-focus effect, if one attempts to sit within 15 feet of the 15-foot picture the out-of-focus effect will be very pronounced, and lack of sharpness always causes heavy eye strain.

At say a distance of 75 feet an 18-foot picture will look perfectly sharp, and the eye follows its action with perfect ease, but when one goes up within 15 feet of the same picture one finds it very difficult to follow the action of the film, and also finds a very decided out-of-focus effect. If I were projecting a picture larger than 18 feet I would want at least 25 feet between the front row of seats and the screen.

Jenkins Again.

While in Washington, D. C., I, of course, paid a visit to C. Francis Jenkins at the office of the Graphoscope Company on Eleventh street. Brother Jenkins is always pulling some new stunt on us. Recenlty he called a meeting which resulted in the formation of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, which it is expected will, in the near future, contain in its official roster the names of many of the best men in the industry and very likely have its official home on Fifth avenue, New York City, though the latter, is of course, a subject for legitimate speculation.

Another new stunt that Jenkins has just sprung on an unsuspecting film world is the "Graphoscope," a new standard projecting machine built along novel lines. In the first place this projector has no upper magazine. The reel of film is placed in the lower magazine, right alongside of the reel, which takes up the film; and, by the way, the rewinding is done in the same magazine, slowly, and thus the local laws which require the rewinding of the film in a fire-proof magazine are complied with. The rewind works beautifully, the only criticism being that it is impossible to examine the film while it is being rewound. Of course, this can be overcome by the operator if he has marked it "examine," by opening the door until the marks come through.



The Graphoscope is only made motor-driven. It has no crank, therefore operators of the Graphoscope can never be called "crank twisters."

One novel feature of the Graphoscope is that the projection is at right angles, the projecting lens setting right beside the aperture instead of in front of it. The picture is reflected into the lens with a periscope prism. A three-winged shutter is used which is on the shaft which drives the intermittent movement, therefore, it cannot possibly get out of time by injury or worn parts. The upper and lower sprockets are connected by and driven by a bar which is in the form of a triangle with an idler at the apex.

In Fig. 1 we have a side view of the mechanism and lower magazine. The motor shows through the glass door which closes around and encloses the mechanism. The long semi-upright lever handle is a framing lever. The upper horizontal handle is the one which opens the gate by pulling it, the handle towards you.

The machine certainly projects a good picture. The loss through reflecting prism would, I think, not be serious, being the same as that lost by reflection from the surface of a lens. We will no doubt have more to say about this machine after it comes into general use and the letters of commendation, if any begin to arrive.

Fig. 2 is a view of the reverse side of the mechanism, the lower large pulley being the take-up pulley. These two views give a very excellent idea of the construction of the mechanism. One thing I forgot to mention, however, and that is that by the removal of three readily accessible screws the whole intermittent movement may be taken out and replaced with a new one. This operation may be completed in less than two minutes and which will not in any way interfere with the operation of the rest of the machine. By this I mean you can replace the intermittent with a new one without any adjustment of any kind whatsoever being necessary—not even set the shutter.

The lamp house and lamp is the standard design of lamp, and capable of carrying 40 amperes. There are other novel features in connection with the machine but these will, as I have intimated, be dealt with from time to time.

Will it Pay?

Many exhibitors have asked for our advice in a projection engineering capacity, whether or not the installation of the D.C. to D.C. motor generator set will pay where the supply is 110 volts. I believe this particular proposition ought to be taken up in the department for the benefit of all concerned. A D.C. to D.C. motor generator set is a very excellent proposition where the voltage supply is 220, but where it is 110, it takes close figuring to show any financial gain through the installation of such a set. Taking 50 amperes of 110 volt current, through a rheostat requires 5,500 watts of energy, which, at eight cents per K.W., (a fair medium figure) means 44 cents per hour of operation. Now with a D.C. to D.C. motor generator set, delivering 50 amperes to a 50-volt arc, we would only have 2,500 watts, or 2½ K.W. of energy absorbed at the arc. But to this we must add the difference between the energy delivered at the arc and that taken from the line, or, in other words, the difference between 100 per cent. and the actual efficiency of the machine.

There are very few motor generator sets which can show an over-all efficiency higher than 66, or at the very most 68 per cent., even when they are in the very best of condition. I venture the assertion that nine motor generator sets out of ten which have been run, under ordinary operating conditions, for a period of six months, will show considerable less than a 65 per cent. efficiency. Taking 65 per cent. however, as the figure, we would have 35 per cent. lost in the machine. In other words, the energy taken from the line would be 2,500 watts, plus the 35 per cent. loss, or a total of, in round number, 3,800 watts. On the face of it this shows a saving of say 2 K.W., or 16 cents per hour of operation. But from this must be subtracted: (A) increased cost of operation of a machine of this kind as against the rheostat; (b) the arc produced by a generator of this type, while not hard to handle, still is not as stable as the arc having the cushion of a rheostat, which is breaking down over half the line voltage; (c) the depreciation of a machine costing between four or five hundred dollars; (d) the fact that under unintelligent care the efficiency of the machine will probably not be anything like the figure quoted.

There, that I believe is a fair statement of the case. It has nothing whatever to do with A.C. to D.C. generator sets, the installation of which by all means I advise; also it has nothing whatever to do with the installation of D.C. to D.C. motor generator sets where the voltage is considerably above 110.

If any manufacturer of D.C. to D.C. motor generator sets feels that this article is in any way unjust, I shall be glad to have him set forth, in cold figures, percentages and arguments, such facts as he may believe to be correct, which are in favor of the 110 volt D.C. to D.C. motor generator set.

New Screen.

The J. H. Genter Company, manufacturer of the Firroroid Screen, has sent in samples of a new screen surface they propose to put out, calling our particular attention to the weight and flexibility of the basic material. It is put out with the usual five year guarantee with which the Genter Company covers all its product. The surface may be had either plain metallic, silver flesh tint, or gold tint. The surface is a light matte, such as is produced by the surface of heavy cloth, and ought to produce very good results. The material certainly is flexible. The company asks an opinion from me, but that it is impossible to give simply from looking at a surface. The material, as I before said, is certainly flexible. Of course, it is well known that I have always disagreed with the idea of yellow in a screen surface. I have not in the slightest degree changed my opinion in that respect, but, as the Genter Company very aptly says, some theater managers demand a yellow surface, and as long as that is a fact, screen manufacturers must, perforce, put out a yellow surface to meet the demand.

The Genter Company has their new coating machine perfected, and I am informed it is delivering the goods. This will enable the company to put out as many as twenty fifteen-foot screens per day, which certainly ought to be sufficient to take care of all the business that can be expected to come Newburg way.

Open Letter to the Underwriters.

Mr. Sweetland, secretary Electrical Committee, Nat. Fire Protection Ass'n., 141 Milk street, Boston, Mass. Dear Sir:—While in Lancaster, Pa., it was my privilege to inspect the remarkably up-to-date operating room of the Hamilton theater, and there I saw absolutely the first sane and sensible installation of a fire shutter system I have yet viewed. It consisted of the very thing this department has recommended for years, viz: A film fuse link installed in the master-cord which holds the shutter, the same being located immediately above the upper magazine where the flame would immediately come into a contact with it, and thus instantly and automatically drop the port shutters.

I was, however, informed that Mr. Charles O'Neil, the Lancaster underwriter inspector, objected to this installation, and insisted upon the installing of link fuses. I immediately wrote to Mr. O'Neil, who seems to have, without acknowledging its receipt, referred the letter to the Underwriters' Association of the Middle Department at Philadelphia, which body replies as follows:

Mr. F. H. Richardson, Editor. Projection Department, Moving Picture World, New York City.

Dear Sir:—Our Mr. Charles O'Neil, inspector at Lancaster, Pa., has handed to us your letter to him, dated September 23, relative to the use of sections of inflammable picture films in lieu of approved link fuses for the support and operation in event of emergency of the lids of the booth openings. In approaching this subject we might say that, with all due respect to your personal experiences and opinions, we are not as yet fully convinced that any medium which flames in operation is a good proposition for protection of the booth and contents. We rather think that this is an example of "using the hair of the dog to cure the bite." We might even say that although we do not have laboratory facilities, that we have pursued some experiments along the lines you mention, the results of which only serve to still further emphasize the question in our minds that a change, such as you recommend, is inadvisable.

You doubtless know that the rules relating to the installation and operation of motion picture equipments have only been developed after serious thought on the part of a committee appointed for such purpose, and these said rules are a composite of their presentations, and the sense of the meeting of the National Fire Protection Association at which they were adopted. We would state further that the proper method of inaugurating any changes in said rules would be to address a communication to the committee, whose secretary is Ralph Sweetland, 141 Milk street, Boston, Mass.

In closing, we desire to thank you for your exhaustive and thoughtful handling of this subject, and if it can be shown that the use of pieces of film is superior to the use of fuse links, this association will accept with alacrity any promulgation to that effect by the proper authorities.

Very truly yours, LOUIS WIEDERHOLD, JR., Secretary.

Now I am not blaming Inspector O'Neil, nor am I blaming the Underwriters' Association of the Middle Department. As they very aptly say, the authority comes from 141 Milk street, Boston, and I suppose nothing is left to the discretion of the local official, or the Philadelphia Association.

I would like, however, to call your attention to the following propositions, viz.: First, it is a well known fact that with modern fireproof operating rooms there is to all intents and purposes absolutely no danger whatsoever to the audience from a film fire as such, meaning by this there is no danger from the actual fire itself. The danger comes from the PANIC, AND PANIC INEVITABLY RESULTS FROM THE AUDIENCE CATCHING SIGHT OF EITHER SMOKE OR FLAME, OR BOTH. It happens about thusly: A film catches fire at the aperture, or at the rewinding table; the port fire shutters do not drop instantly. The first instinct of the audience when the picture goes off the screen, is to turn and look directly at the operating room. Smoke appears through one of the port holes, whereupon some cheerful idiot yells "fire," and that settles it! The audience promptly makes a concerted rush for exits, and in the process more or less of it piles up in a heap. Result: Serious injury, or death, perhaps to many. The question of "protection of booth and contents" does not enter the question at all

Now let us examine into this matter. WHY DOES MR. CHEERFUL IDIOT SEE SMOKE OR FIRE? ANSWER ME THAT QUESTION MESSRS. 141 MILK STREET. Lay aside your fine spun theories for a moment, get down to brass tacks, and ANSWER THAT QUESTION. Isn't it because (a) the fire shutters don't drop quickly enough; (b) because there was no adequate means provided for the escape of the smoke and gases? You cannot very well say no to those two propositions, can you, gentlemen of 141 Milk street?

Well let me tell you that the projection department of the Moving Picture World has been calling your attention to that proposition for the past six years, and has been continuously pointing out to you the very simple remedy. Also it is all set forth in detail and illustrated by drawings on Page 222 to 230 of the third edition of the "Motion Picture Handbook for Managers and Operators." I quote from page 226:

> The whole proposition is to place the fuse link (film) where a fire, either at the film box, the rewind table, or either machine will INSTANTLY strike one of them, thus severing the master-cord and dropping all the shutters before there is any smoke or flame visible, to the audience. Incidentally, however, it is exceedingly important that the bottom stop upon which the shutters fall be heavily padded with shredded asbestos, since if the shutters fall on anything hard they will make an awful clatter and direct the attention of the audience straight to the operating room—the very last thing to be desired.

The plan I advocate, and have for years past advocated, is to place short fuse links, two or three inches long, in the master-cord to which all shutters are attached at various points. There should be one over and not more than 12 inches from the rewind, or one over and not more than 12 inches from the film box, and one either directly over the aperture or the upper magazine or both, of each machine.

AS A PRACTICAL OPERATOR, WHO SPENT FOUR YEARS TWISTING A CRANK, I MAKE THE UNQUALIFIED ASSERTION THERE IS ABSOLUTELY NO DANGER OF ANY KIND WHATSOEVER IN THIS SORT OF INSTALLATION.

In order to prevent panic it is absolutely necessary that the fire shutters be dropped within two or three seconds of the starting of the fire.

THERE IS NOT A METAL FUSE SHUTTER SYSTEM ON EARTH WHICH WILL DO THAT. Nothing but quick-burning celluloid, or its equivalent, will accomplish that particular thing. It is, however, absolutely necessary that, in addition to this, ADEQUATE MEANS BE PROVIDED FOR TAKING AWAY THE SMOKE, and this, as I have for six years insisted, calls for the installation of an ADEQUATE VENT FLUE.

And now let us see what the Milk street gentlemen, who take care of the safety of the collecting fire underwriters, do to protect the lives of operating rooms where the only part either can consist of a single metal sheet TO BE LOCATED ANYWHERE FROM THREE TO SIX FEET AWAY FROM ANY PROBABLE SEAT OF FIRE, and very few of them are within, and that too on such an installation is absolutely absurd. It spells crass stupidity and yet these utterly foolish instructions are approved by the Underwriters who object to a fuse link installation pronouncing it dangerous. I CHALLENGE AND DEFY ANY COMMITTEE TO PROVE BY ACTUAL OPERATING ROOM TESTS THAT A FUSE LINK INSTALLATION IS IN ANY DEGREE WHATSOEVER DANGEROUS. I also challenge and defy any Underwriters' committee to prove to this department that the present average fuse link metal installation will stop the hottest blaze before the film has gotten well under headway.

In addition to this, until the projection department of the Moving Picture World, in year 1910, began insisting that an operating room without a proper vent flue to the open air was unsafe and unhealthy there was practically no provision for carrying away the smoke in case of film fire and this fact of affair continued for years, and ALL THROUGH THOSE YEARS RECEIVED THE APPROVAL OF THE BOARD OF UNDERWRITERS, or at least they entered no protest. It was the projection department of the Moving Picture World which called attention to the dangers of such a proposition both from the point of view of health and panic risk and brought about the installation of vent flues. I do not think any one in any degree posted on the course of events will dispute this proposition.

I am giving space to this matter because it is one of the utmost importance. Metal fuses don't act quickly enough; also they are seldom or never properly installed. Fuse link fuses properly installed act almost instantly and in conjunction with an adequate vent flue afford a real safeguard against panic, therefore, suppose we come down out of the clouds of theory and adopt a role of common sense.

The Underwriters' committee which has handled these matters is no doubt composed of very estimable gentlemen, but I do not believe it has on its membership one single practical moving picture machine operator, and if it has not, and has not consulted with recognized authorities on operating room practice, then no matter how well intentioned the committee may be, its action would be very similar to the appointment of a committee of attorneys to devise a block system for the handling of railroad trains, or a committee of architects or civil engineers to teach locomotive engineers how to handle the water in their boilers.

This department has a great deal of respect for the good work the Board of Underwriters has performed, but insofar as moving picture operating rooms be concerned, its work, uptodate, has not been any particular credit to it, and this, I think, is because of the fact that it has undertaken to promulgate rules without calling into consultation pracical, competent projection men.

With Regard to Screens.

It recently came to the attention of the editor of this department that a certain prominent screen manufacturer voiced very strenuous objections to our course with regard to screens. Really, I was not in the least offended by this report, because I was perfectly well aware that it was the view held by one or two of the screen men by reason of the fact that I have not fallen in with their ideas, regardless of whether I thought them right or thought them wrong. As a matter of fact, I am in position to prove that this same manufacturer has made the following statement: "It is only reasonable and right that we should adopt more sensible policies in selling screens. Everybody is knocking the other fellow until the exhibitor thinks we are all a bunch of crooks. The statements in our advertising are the same old circus stuff that has been put over for the last ten years. If we would tell the truth about everything it would not be long before we would all get more money and more orders. With all of which the editor of this department most thoroughly and heartily agrees.

And now let us, for a moment, examine into the chronometer balance and cylinder escapement of this whole screen proposition. I think a little bit of light and air won't hurt the matter. There is, beyond any question of a doubt, but two things to be considered in deciding whether it will or will not pay to install a metallic surface or a mirror screen. The first and BIG consideration is the item of brilliancy. I have said that, in my opinion, there is nothing which gives a more artistic projection than a fine grade white muslin, white plaster or properly applied white calcimine. But, on the other hand, the metallic surface screen, or the mirror screen, gives a result which is not very far behind, and THE SAME BRILLIANCY MAY BE OBTAINED WITH A GREAT DEAL LESS CURRENT CONSUMPTION WHERE THE METALLIC SURFACE OR MIRROR SCREEN IS USED.

The position of this department is, and always has been, that it cannot play favorites among screen or other manufacturers. We may sometimes make mistakes, but the absolute honest endeavor of this department is to take only such things as seem to merit favor by superior excellence in quality.

There is just now considerable talk about a combination of certain screen manufacturers. The Simpson Solar screen has already been purchased by the Minusa Company. I, for one, would welcome a combination which would put one metallic surface combining all the good points of the various screens on the market. And let me tell you right here and now that ALL the various leading metallic surface screens I have examined and tested have good points.

As to the exhibitor, why, as a general proposition, he is the goat. He is the man who plays the role of sucker. I am sometimes tempted to think that if some slick conversation artist started out with a black and white striped screen surface he would succeed in finding exhibitors who would buy them and absolutely rave over the results. First it is a red screen, then a green one, and so on, through almost the entire chromatic list of colors, and each exhibitor who buys a new freak surface praises it to the skies. Verily imagination works a wonderfully prominent part in the affairs of mankind.

Montreal Exchanges.

Smith Falls writes as follows:

> I think it is time that some one raised a vigorous kick with regard to the way Montreal exchanges—the Pathe Exchange in particular I mean—are sending out film. A great many splices are very poorly cemented, without the emulsion first being properly scraped off. Representatives of the Montreal exchanges claim they cannot keep the film in condition as it should be since more damage is done to the film in the city of Montreal than in all the rest of the Provinces put together. This, they claim, is due to the fact that the majority of theaters are controlled by those who are far more interested in the cheapness of the operator than in his ability. I look after all the film bookings for our theater, and don't fail to register a few good kicks when I think it will do any good. As a rule, however, I get the above excuse. The General and the Fox Film Companies seem to keep their films in the best condition of any, with the Mutual next on the list.
> I follow with much interest the various trips you take. With regard to your trip through Quebec, and New Brunswick I certainly believe your description of the roads is correct. I am a Harley-Davidson rider myself, and can sympathize with you, particularly with regard to rear tire trouble on such roads.
> And now I would like to ask a question. We have a Wagner 35 ampere rotary converter, and are experiencing the following trouble. Switchboard fuses on the A. C. line to transformer get hot, and at about the fifth hour of running will be burnt until the fibre of the fuse (ferule) will be black, and will loosen on the brass part. It has done this on a 40, 50 and 60 ampere fuse. Current is 110 volt, 60 cycle for which the transformer and converter is O. K. The transformer does not heat and the machine runs fine, giving a steady, pure light; also the wires keep cool. Should D. C. and A. C. wires run in the same conduit?

With regard to the Montreal exchanges, it is not the first complaint of this kind I have had, and it will be up to them to mend their ways or we shall be compelled to take the matter up with the various headquarters here in New York City. The sending out of film in bad condition is unfair to all concerned. If Montreal operators are incompetent, or if their equipment is such that the film is unduly damaged a strict rule made by all exchanges to charge for the damage would put a stop to it, because Mr. Manager would soon find that paying for film damage is more expensive than the employment of a real operator and the keeping of the projection machines in good condition.

The trouble you speak of, it seems to me, is due to heat caused by poor contact between the fuse and its contacts. Moral: Clean the contacts thoroughly and tighten them, though probably after so much heating it will be necessary to install a new fuse block. As to A. C. and D. C. wires in same conduit, I have no underwriter's code handy, but do not believe it would be permissible. Under certain conditions, I think an inductive effect might be set up which would affect the D. C. circuit.

My Policy.

Ralph W. Martin, Los Angeles, Cal., sends the following letter:

> I have been making further investigations of the aperture lens, using a distance of 20 inches from condenser to aperture. This makes conditions very much better, and I think it is almost a foregone conclusion that the simple, uncorrected aperture lens as shown in issue of September 30, is a practical stunt. I, however, realize your policy with regard to the Sabo Company, and maybe it is lucky after all that I was not as clear in my explanation of the published article as I later made it in my reply to Solar's objections. Meanwhile I will say nothing further on this point, but will await developments.

In the first place I would like to say to Brother Martin, and all others interested, that I have no "policy" with regard to the Sabo Company or any other company except to deal with their proposition absolutely, wholly and entirely on its own merit. I have favored the new Sabo lens wholly and entirely because it seems to me after looking this whole matter over, examining hundreds of drawings and also reams of manuscript arguments that the aperture lens carried in the same mount with the objective offers the only practical solution of this whole proposition. My reasons for coming to this conclusion is, first: that any attempt to correct the condenser lens sets up apparently impractical complications in the lens itself; second: any attempt to design a condenser which will give the effect of distance between the condenser and the film without it actuality is impractical by reason of the necessary form of the lens involved, which I do not believe could be made to hold the heat of the arc without excessive breakage; third: any attempt to use an aperture in fixed position must, it seems to me, fail because of the fact that such a lens must inevitably affect the E. F. of the objective and since any given objective may under different local conditions work at very different distances from the aperture and therefore from a fixed position aperture lens, and each distance would set up an entire different E. F. for the objective, the whole thing becomes impractical—or so it seems to this Editorial Editor.

It now looks to me as if the very best results can only be obtained by building each optical system to fit local conditions, but that under all ordinary conditions we are going to be able to obtain a very satisfactorily result with from 18 to 20 inches, or even less than that in some instances, between the condenser and the aperture and the three combination objective, the back lens of which will serve the purpose of an aperture lens, and to a considerable extent parallel the light ray. And this is exactly what the Sabo lens does. The greatest trouble with this whole proposition lies in the fact that the majority of operators and managers have no adequate understanding of the tremendous loss of light involved in the use of the present inefficient lens system. I venture the assertion that with the knowledge this department has brought to light during the past year put into practice, four theaters out of every five could cut their expense for projection light by at least one-third, and I am not sure but they could cut it right square in two in a majority of cases.

17 Madison Avenue,
NEW YORK.

GENTLEMEN:

ENCLOSED FIND MONEY ORDER FOR $2.00, PAYABLE TO THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD, FOR ONE YEAR'S SUBSCRIPTION TO YOUR PAPER. IF I HAD KNOWN WHEN I WAS IN THE STATES THAT YOU PUBLISHED A HANDBOOK FOR MOVING PICTURE OPERATORS I WOULD HAVE SENT FOR ONE AT ONCE. I WOULD NOT BE WITHOUT ONE NOW FOR TEN TIMES WHAT IT COSTS. I HAVE BEEN IN THE MOVING PICTURE BUSINESS FOR THE PAST FIVE YEARS AND THE HANDBOOK HAS SAVED ME MANY A DOLLAR AND THE HANDBOOK HAS PAID FOR ITSELF MANY TIMES OVER. I HAVE SAVED HUNDREDS OF DOLLARS FROM INFORMATION I HAVE OBTAINED FROM IT. I HAVE KEPT OUR HOUSE RUNNING WHEN I DON'T KNOW WHAT I WOULD HAVE DONE WITHOUT IT. I CLOSE WITH MY BEST WISHES AND REGARDS TO MR. RICHARDSON.

VERY TRULY YOURS,

THE HARMONY THEATRE
By F. M. McDonald Mgr.

$200 to Friend McDonald! It certainly ought to be worth at least $4.00 to almost any theater manager.

A Difficult Problem.

Ever since visiting the Maritime Provinces, I have been thinking over the situation from the organization point of view, and it seems to present a reasonably difficult problem, insofar as the operator be concerned.

Aside from Halifax and St. John there are no towns employing sufficient men to form a local. Moncton has three, four or maybe five, operators—certainly not more, and that is the only town outside of Halifax and St. John in which there are even that number.

There is no manner of question, however, but there should be some form of organization to which all the men can belong, and I am inclined to think the only practical method would be to form two locals, or perhaps three, viz.: one in Halifax, to which all Nova Scotia men can belong, and one in St. John, and one in Moncton, in which event all the men in southern New Brunswick can belong in the St. John local, and all in northern New Brunswick in Moncton. Of course there is Fredricton, but as I understand it there are only three or four operators in that city.

Let it be understood that this is merely a rough—a very rough idea. The point is that the great number of operators are scattered, one or two in a town, and if they are to reap the generally admitted benefit of organization some plan of this kind will unquestionably have to be adopted. Just how the business of such a local would be conducted I cannot say, but some scheme might possibly be evolved which would fit the conditions at least reasonably well.

I would welcome discussion of this matter, in the department, by Maritime Provinces operators. You men are better acquainted with the local situation and possibilities than I can possibly be. This article is by no means intended as an attempt to butt in your affairs, but merely to start discussion as to the best way the peculiar situation can be handled to best advantage.

I understand the Exhibitors' Organization has been perfected, and I am glad of it. I hope it will prosper and become a power for the good of the industry in that territory. I also believe the operators should perfect some method for building up an organization, because the benefits of organization are many, and, rightly handled, the detriments are none.

Impractical.

R. W. Pope, Hasbrouck Heights, N. J., says:

> Have been much interested in your discussion concerning the change-over signal. Have tried Brother Eave's scheme of preparing a cue sheet, October 7th issue, and have found, as you say, it works all right for the second show, but does not help the first any. Now might I suggest that the film exchanges themselves prepare these cue sheets for all multiple reel features, and send them along with the reels, the operator to return same. This would eliminate all necessity for punching the films. The exchanges ought to be willing to do this because they are the ones who objected to the punching of film; also it would not be as expensive to prepare these cards is it would be to put a change-over sign on the film itself. Could you take the matter up with the exchanges? I think they would be willing to do it, but it needs someone with influence to take the matter up.

I am afraid it is impractical for more than one reason Brother Pope. First, whereas some of the better class exchanges doubtless might be induced to do it, a great many of them just simply would not. Some exchanges don't seem to be willing to do much of anything except take in the money. Second: it is a question whether the exchange change-over sheet would be such that the average operator would be able to understand it, and third, having once made out a sheet they would not change it, although anywhere from ten to twenty feet of the tail end of the film might be gone. But the really big objection is that it would be an awful job to reach all the exchanges in any effective way—a bigger job than the Editor of this department cares to undertake. We would, however, suggest to exchange managers that the putting out of such a sheet, while ot an ideal plan, is at least in a considerable degree practical, and certainly would stop at least some of the punching of film.

I repeat, however, that the really practical thing is to incorporate the change-over sign in the negative itself. Now, Brother Pope, don't get insulted because I cannot agree wholly with your plan. Your suggestion was made in good faith, and I therefore thank you for having made it. I do not think, however, you stopped to consider all the difficulties involved in this particular matter.

Up to Susquehanna.

C. F. Furkey writes from Susquehanna, Pa., as follows:

> I am an operator and believe I know good projection when I see it. I therefore would like to see you shake this burg up good and plenty. The place they call the "Opera House" runs feature pictures on Thursdays, and intends to run Emily Stevens in "The Soul of a Woman." Say, Richardson, you just ought to see the "projection." They run five reels in approximately fifty-five minutes, and the screen looks like a rainbow. As a matter of fact there are times when you cannot see the picture at all, but they keep right on turning the crank just the same. Susquehanna is a town of 6,000 inhabitants and I don't believe a theater ought to be allowed to get away with that kind of projection. You are entirely at liberty to use my name, and to put it right at the top in red letters if you wish to. I have been a reader of the department for three years, and must say it has helped me a great deal. I intend to get the third edition of the Handbook just as soon as I land a job. Now don't any of you fellows holler "sour grapes," because I gave up my position to serve on the Border, and have just returned.

Well, Susquehanna, it is up to you, no matter if it is a small town. If the charges contained herein are true, the fact that the city is a small one offers absolutely no excuse for projecting the pictures in any such way. Even if you cannot afford to use plenty of current, that is no reason why you cannot use weak current and get a fairly good picture, provided your operator "knows how," and even if you cannot afford a really first class operator, the Handbook will at least teach you how to remedy the conditions described. It is quite possible to put on a very good, though by no means a brilliant, 12 foot picture with 25 amperes D. C., and many, many hundreds of small theaters are doing it. It is also possible to put on at least a passably fair picture with 40 amperes A. C., and hundreds of small theaters are doing that stunt too. The editor of this department conducts a projection engineering business, and for a very reasonable fee will supplement the work of the Handbook and undertake to at least very greatly improve the projection in cases of this kind, provided the operator possesses ordinary intelligence. There really is no excuse for such work. It constitutes not only an outrage against the public, which pays its good money to look at a show, not a rank imitation of one. It also constitutes an outrage upon the moving picture industry itself. I TAKE THE POSITION THAT NO THEATER MANAGER HAS THE MORAL RIGHT TO DELIBERATELY RENDER ABORTIVE THE EFFORTS OF THE PRODUCER BY FAILURE TO PROJECT THEIR PRODUCTIONS AT LEAST IN A FAIRLY ACCEPTABLE MANNER, PROVIDING THOSE THINGS, INCLUDING SUFFICIENT CURRENT NECESSARY TO HIGH CLASS PROJECTION. THE KNOWLEDGE IS NOW AVAILABLE, AND THERE IS NO VALID EXCUSE FOR SUCH WORK AS BROTHER FURKEY DESCRIBES. Of course if Susquehanna can show that the charge made is not true, why we will be glad to withdraw everything we have said, in so far as it applies to Susquehanna theaters.

Need of Economy in Picture Business

By F. J. Rembusch

Prominent Indiana Exhibitor Expounds His Views Upon Some of the Present Day Evils of the Motion Picture Trade

ARTICLE I.

Are We in Pursuit of Commercial Gain or of an Ideal?

IF CHARITY "covereth a multitude of sins," then surely the use of economy in all branches of the motion picture business would cover a multitude of financial evils that affect the whole motion picture industry at the present time.

We who are active in any branch of this industry are primarily interested in the making of money out of the business rather than chasing moonbeams; therefore, when experience and statistics of other lines of enterprises prove that the financial success of all business enterprises depends largely on the strict practice of economy along the right lines, and as everything else at the present seems to fail to bring prosperity to the exhibitor, we may well turn to the study of economical questions to keep us from further depreciation or ruin.

The principal drawback to the practice of economy is our lack of any general standard, status, or basis on which the manufacturer and exhibitor can run his business and be reasonably sure of a profit. And until we have some definite system of calculating the true economical basis of this business, we will be at the mercy of all enemies to motion picture progress from within and without.

Recently an exhibitor asked me this question, "Is this picture thing a commercial enterprise or the striving for an ideal?" If we base our answer on the general methods followed by both exhibitor and manufacturer in conducting this business, then either we are working to accomplish some great ideal, or trusting to win on gambler's luck rather than for everyday bread and butter, for when we compare this business with other businesses, we must agree that the commercial end of it is turned completely around and going in the wrong direction.

Instead of manufacturers and exhibitors decreasing their overhead, they are constantly increasing the expense of running their business. Instead of a more flexible plan of manufacturing, distributing and purchasing films, our contracts and systems of trade become more arbitrary every month. Instead of a lower cost of making film the trend is higher and higher, and film rental necessarily goes up with the wave. Instead of an opportunity to exploit and vary the programme so the exhibitor may meet his particular condition in his locality, he is burdened by less freedom of deciding such questions day by day.

In short, investments, manufacturing, distribution, exhibiting—everything in this whole industry is creeping higher and higher except the gross box office receipts, which remain at the old level, or perhaps grow less.

Unfortunately, the motion picture business has a tendency to go to extremes. It seems the conservative middle of the road route has little or no place in our plans or work. We invariably go from one extreme to the other. And yet, the true basis of success in this business financially, esthetically and every way would be a well balanced distribution of all the elements in this business working together for the common good on a strong economical basis.

Economy in Making Pictures.

The first step in economy must be taken by the manufacturers of film, because they have been and are now lavish and extravagant, even reckless in their expenditures toward every item that goes into producing a picture.

The present chaotic conditions were prophesied several years ago at a banquet given by the Vitagraph Company to visiting exhibitors at their plant, with John Bunny as Toast master, and Mr. J. Stuart Blackton the Speaker or Prophet.

Reviewing the wonderful progress of the industy up to that time, Mr. Blackton feared that the time would come when this business would overreach itself. He spoke of the enormous sums of money then being spent on film production compared with the cost of production at the inception of the business. The cost of the first picture made by that company sixteen years before that time was $25. The title of the picture was "The Burglar on the Roof." One of the partners turned the crank of the camera, the other played burglar and a friend allowed them the use of the roof free of charge.

Today the producing companies tell you that a film production has so very much virtue because they are spending so and so many hundreds of thousands of dollars to produce each production. This is another case of going to extremes.

Twenty-five dollar pictures are out of reason, but so are half a million dollar productions unnecessary to produce good program and impossible to support by the exhibitor. Good pictures may be produced for very much less money. Many one thousand and ten thousand dollar productions were money-getters for both the manufacturer and exhibitor, and can be again. In fact, will have to be, because the exhibitor finds it impossible to meet the high cost of film rental caused by the high cost of producing.

The cost of film production should be based on the question of what an exhibitor can afford to pay and make a profit, and not on "all the traffic will bear," and let me say here, with emphasis, when the exhibitor is no longer in the profit-sharing column this whole industry is booked for a reverse. The exhibitor pays for every penny that goes toward making, renting or showing a picture and everything else connected with the industry, and as he is not making money at present, much of the overhead will have to be cut down.

Before me is an advertisement in which a great automobile manufacturer states that by his system, organization and great facilities he can give you a better car for less money. You will notice in the film market this proposition is the very reverse. When I asked a film agent why they did not go to the exhibitor with a like argument in their canvass for business he answered, "I don't deny what you say is good, sound business sense, but if you tried to sell film by telling the exhibitor that you were going to give him good service for less money, he would probably turn you down." Personally, I doubt this statement, but if it is so, then the exhibitor is hanging himself by his own hands.

Economy in Distributing Pictures.

Four years ago a great film company was supplying Chicago and vicinity from three branch offices. This same business has since been divided up until thirty offices do not supply as many theaters with film as three offices did then.

Anyone can readily see this means a great increase in the overhead of the motion picture, and at the same time an increase in trouble, worry and expense to the exhibitor in filling his program.

The remedy is not easy to apply. The exhibitor might book films direct from the manufacturer. A body of exhibitors could book collectively. Several manufacturers could distribute films together. Either plan would help, or some other plan might be suggested, but certainly something should be done to relieve this overhead, which would incidentally relieve some of the burden which the exhibitor carries.

Economy in High Salaries Paid to Stars.

The public and some exhibitors believe that the high salaries of stars, of which so much is said, is paid out in "stage money," but as one of the big manufacturers recently said, "The sad part of it is we are giving these salaries away in real money and don't seem to be able to help ourselves." One manufacturer will bid up the salary of a player and take him or her from the other manufacturer; to cover up, he asks the exhibitor for a large advance deposit and high film rental. Too often, in order to keep his fellow film exhibitor from getting the picture, the exhibitor pays the price and in the end neither the manufacturer nor the exhibitor profits thereby, but the star, who has no investment, no worry, no care, takes all the profits the business can make.

Now, when the conservative film manufacturer sees a newcomer get away with that proposition, he will say, "If this film manufacturer can do that so can I." And so it goes from worse to worse, and will continue unless exhibitor and manufacturer get together and place certain limits to the expense and overhead of this industry, based on the best experience of the best minds we have.

My strong antagonism to the advance deposit system is based upon the extravagance it incurs. It is a case of "come easy, go easy," especially if you are spending another body's money. I am in favor of strictly cash basis for film rental, with every film paid for before it leaves the exchange, or a discount for cash, if paid for ten days in advance before it is used.

Motion Picture Educator

Conducted by REV. W. H. JACKSON and MARGARET I. MACDONALD

"BY THEIR FRUITS YE SHALL KNOW THEM."

THIS is the greatest and safest of all possible tests which (we say it reverently) can be applied by God or man, it is the test in the world, it is the test in the church. Recently a great religious denomination in solemn conclave assembled found time to pass resolutions reflecting upon the moving pictures, condemning them for the evil effects upon the young people generally, with occasional criminal results in particular. We are willing to apply the same test herein to the moving picture as generally applied in the world at large, or to the church in particular. Taking it for granted that various religious critics are correct in their criticisms let us look for the only proofs which can justify them and so apply the "By their fruits ye shall know them" test.

Several millions of young people see the moving pictures each week of, say, six days, this being an established fact, the education which they receive must be prejudicial to their best interests and so must be in evidence. Let us look for this evidence. Is there an increase of juvenile crime or even of juvenile delinquency? Are the truant schools and similar institutions being overcrowded by a sudden increase for cause? Are the public schools less effective, or are the church schools injured in any way? If so, we are ready for the proofs, so far none have appeared, the criticisms are made, but no facts and figures are forthcoming; where are the evil fruits of the evils of the pictures? The critics will help us by pointing them out.

One of this class of critics once called for the abolition of Santa Claus and so despoil the children's Christmas, claiming as a reason that the children were taught deception thereby; when challenged to point out any number of people who could put any blame upon the fiction of Santa Claus for any downfall, or even enough to become derelict to truth, the critic failed to "make good," and so the children still enjoy this merry personality. It is to be hoped they always will. In like manner let the proofs of the evil effects of the pictures be presented. If our critics are correct, judging from the large numbers—nay, the tremendous numbers—of young people daily viewing the pictures, the country ought to be a veritable school of crime. Is it so, or what are the true conditions? To begin with, the liquor interests are bitterly complaining that their future customers (the young people) are being taken away from them by the thousands and blame the pictures for this loss of their prospective trade. The district attorneys of the large cities tell us that thanks to the pictures the groups of idlers with their resultant mischief have largely decreased, and the courts do not have so large a number of young men delinquents as formerly. These two conditions are but samples of what can be produced along all lines of previous tendencies to error or crime of ante-picture days. The only exception which can and must always be made is in the case of the already prepared evil mind, which seeks occasion to use any and all opportunities to do his evil work. It would therefore appear that judging the moving picture by its fruits, the millions of young people of the country are better off now than formerly, they are more cheaply and thoroughly entertained, the entertainment is not only of a more interesting character, but it is often instructive. The librarians tell us that as a result of what they see in the picture houses great numbers of young people turn to them for the reading which the pictures have prompted. School teachers tell us that they find the children who attend the picture places are usually a more well informed class than those who do not attend. Manufacturers find that they can give instruction to and obtain better results from their young men by using the pictures and by encouraging their attendance at picture exhibitions. The more we delve into the use and value of the pictures we find the same results everywhere and everywhen. It has now become possible to invoke the word of clergymen as to the value of the pictures, both in their work, and in their experience, and they, too, declare for their positive good. All this is without touching upon the full value of the educational pictures, if we use these we can go to almost any length in proof of the good of the picture, but, without going into this larger field we are content to stop here, and to say, "By their fruits ye shall know them."

Against the old cry that the moving pictures are hurting the attendance at church, a correspondent points out that this conclusion is based upon a false reasoning. To get a right proportion of the respective attendance it must be remembered that a picture house is open to four or five times as many exhibitions as the church is opened for services; with this proportion in view, a canvass in a large city has shown that the attendance at church and Sunday school does not suffer by comparison and that in the aggregate, the church still retains its long run of popularity with all classes of people; it is also pointed out that the days wherein the pictures could hurt the churches have passed, and that in the future the church and the picture will come closer together and be of mutual help.

In the leading and best theaters now, the educational pictures are given a permanent place; this is one cause of a successful program. It is this idea of making them a permanent part of the program that is bringing good results, the people get used to them, and expect them; they give a tone to the exhibition and lift it up generally. At the present time there is more opportunity than ever for introducing them, we have a splendid and prolonged series of near war pictures which are attracting thousands in New York, the Topicals are just now full of increasing interest, the Travel and Scenic series are becoming more appreciated, while The Living Book, which is really the beautiful unfoldings of pleasing natural history studies, is giving daily more satisfaction. This class of program is also lifting the picture house above the heads of those who are crying for censorship; it will not be very long before these people are bankrupt for the very lack of something to censor; on the contrary there will soon be nothing but praise for the moving pictures if they follow this lead and make the picture houses a place of culture as well as of entertainment; that there is a great future looming up before the whole trade, the results above referred to give ample proof the pioneer work has been done, the trail is plain.

A NEW MAGAZINE IN FILM.

A new magazine in film, the first release of which is scheduled for the week of November 20, is being issued by the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, will be known as the Universal Screen Magazine, and will be released fortnightly.

The contents of the first issue come under the following headings: "New Inventions," which introduces a machine that tunnels through rock, eliminating the necessity of blasting; "Friends of Dumb Animals," illustrating a crusade that is being waged by the U. S. Bureau of Animal Industry against "Ticks," insects that shorten the lives of cattle by sucking their blood; "Beauty Hints," showing how a woman can avoid having wrinkles without the aid of a doctor; "Studying Nature," consisting of close studies of a beetle that preys on vineyards; and "Animated Sculpture," which is an animated cartoon fashioned in clay, entitled "The Butterfly and the Flutterfly."

The cartoon of clay work is worthy special mention as being a new and interesting departure in cartoon work. A Texas sculptor, who is introduced to us as Willie Hopkins, is the inventor of the new idea, and demonstrates remarkable skill in the fashioning of these cartoons both as regards basic idea and sculptural work.

The second issue of this magazine in film introduces another series of interesting subjects, the most remarkable among them being the production of anti-toxin serum. The details of inoculation and extraction, using a horse as the subject, are thoroughly illustrated. Other subjects presented in this number show an electrically equipped kitchen, with the various labor saving devices under operation, a useful housekeeping and sleeping device for use in an automobile in a cross-country tour, and Animated Sculpture, presenting an up-to-date clay cartoon based on the recent eight-hour day railroad controversy.

NEW FILM FOR ANTI-TUBERCULOSIS CAMPAIGN.

Films Play Large Part in the Diffusion of Knowledge Concerning the Dread Disease.

IT MAY not be generally known that the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis conducts a moving picture service for purposes of propaganda. Some time ago the Edison Company made a series of six moving pictures on this subject, four of which have been preserved and are being circulated in the interests of anti tuberculosis campaign, the negatives of the other two having been destroyed by fire. These films are entitled respectively, "Hope," "The Price of Human Lives, "The Temple of Moloch," and "The Lone Game." These are being rented by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, not to moving picture theaters, but to anti-tuberculosis associations, sanitoria, open-air schools, and anti-tuberculosis agencies. Y. M. C. A.'s and churches are also allowed the privilege of using the films when the limited supply permits.

The latest addition to the anti-tuberculosis propaganda films is a two-reel production entitled "The Great Truth." It was made for the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis by the Plimpton Epic Pictures, Inc., and will have a general circulation through the Health Departments of each state. An effort will be made to have it exhibited in theaters, schools and churches all over the country. The purchase of copies of this film are already in contemplation by the Ohio Educational Exhibits Association of Columbus, Ohio, the Department of Public Welfare, Cleveland, Ohio, the General Chemical Co. of New York, and many other organizations.

"The Great Truth" emphasizes the fact that tuberculosis is not inherited, but is communicated only by contact. The scenario for the picture was written by Elise Williamson Phifer, and carries a story of considerable interest while demonstrating methods of prevention. This film will be exhibited in the interests of the Red Cross for six weeks preceding the holiday season.

In addition to the exhibition of anti-tuberculosis films and slides in the ordinary channels, we find that in Louisiana Dr. Oscar Dowling travels through the country with a two-car train equipped with a projector and storage batteries for the supply of electricity where other electric connections are not available. During his travels Dr. Dowling takes time to photograph material evidences of unsanitary conditions which he frequently comes across, transferring these photographs to lantern slides for purposes of fuller demonstration. In Florida the same method is pursued by Dr. Jos. Y. Porter, Florida's state health officer. Frequently a screen is erected near the railroad upon which the pictures are projected fom the train.

In Vermont the State Board of Health employs a covered wagon drawn by horses, carrying a generating machine in addition to a projector. The anti-tuberculosis associations of Maryland and Wisconsin employ automobiles for the same purpose, also equipped with generator and projector, and in North Carolina the same method is followed by the State Board of Health. It is said that in the mountain region of North Carolina the moving picture is still such a novelty that the inhabitants have been known to travel as far as twenty miles to these exhibitions.

INVENTOR EBERHARD SCHNEIDER RECEIVES PATENT OF INTEREST TO EDUCATORS.

The rapid camera as a European product has been used in various instances in scientific analysis. As an American product we believe it has yet to be placed on the market; yet, the time when it will be a necessary adjunct to the producer of the educational moving picture is close at hand, if it has not already arrived, judging from the latest developments in the educational field. A patent for such a moving picture camera has recently been received from the United States Patent Office by Eberhard Schneider of the German-American Cinematograph Co., of 219 Second Avenue, New York City. As an actual product it has developed no farther than the obtaining of the patent, and is awaiting an opening up of the educational market that will give such a camera sufficient commercial value.

Eberhard Schneider came to America from the town of Essen, Germany, some twenty years ago. He was an employee at the Krupp munition works; and while America fostered his first inventive efforts in the moving picture field, his first knowledge of the moving picture was gained at the Krupp works. Here with a crudely modeled moving picture camera through which a film 1¾ inches in width was run by continuous motion, pictures were taken of the operation of guns, shells in combustion, etc.

The patent granted Mr. Schneider covers a moving picture camera through which the film moves by elliptical motion in place of the intermittent motion common to the ordinary moving picture camera, making it capable of two hundred exposures to the second without injury to the film, which would be a natural result should such a speed be attempted by the usual method of intermittent motion.

In addition to this the camera possesses an air wheel which blows against the sprocket wheel, eliminating static, a nuisance which the camera man tries to avoid, and which is the outcome of a condition caused by the friction of the film against the sprocket wheel.

EDUCATIONAL FILMS CORPORATION OF AMERICA ESTABLISHES MORE ADEQUATE FILM SERVICE.

As an aid toward the heretofore discouraging task of locating educational films of the class required, the reader will no doubt be glad to learn that the Educational Films Corporation of America, of which E. W. Hammons is the executive head, has now exchange connection with considerable territory in various parts of the United States and Canada.

In addition to the library of films previously controlled by this corporation, some fifty or so additional subjects, including many of scenic, scientific, zoological, industrial, topical and literary value, have been purchased during the past year. Among the number are noticed such films as "Hiawatha," "The Life of William Shakespeare," "Turpentine and Rosin Industry," "Structure of a Fertile Egg," "A Trip Through the Canadian Rockies," "Oliver Twist," "The Petrified Forests of Arizona," "The Hot Springs and Geysers of New Zealand," "Cain and Abel" and "Life in the Aquarium."

The exchange connections recently established by the Educational Films Corporation of America are located in Detroit, Mich.; San Francisco, Cal.; Pittsburgh, Pa.; Minneapolis, Minn.; Dallas, Tex., and Philadelphia, Pa.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

An encouraging bit of news concerning the growth of interest in the educational picture comes from Mrs. Katherine F. Carter, who recently returned to New York after an extended visit to the west coast. Mrs. Carter states that public interest in the educational picture has developed to such an extent through the cities of the west that exhibitors in some sections have found their audiences dissatisfied unless a portion of each program is composed of educational subjects. During her visit to the west considerable of her attention was focused on existing conditions in the moving picture field. Her estimate of the situation is that there is a revulsion of feeling against the unfit type of film, and a strong inclination of taste toward the better class program.

The News Scimitar, of Memphis, Tenn., contains on the editorial page of a recent issue a tribute to the moving picture. It states that "The educational value of the moving picture is becoming more widely and better understood as people have an opportunity to experiment with it." It claims for it "a method of imparting accurate information that is speedy, effective, and easily received." It goes still further in saying that "Students, young and old, are from Missouri, and are asking to be shown," and that "The simplest, easiest and cheapest way to show them is by employing high-class films."

WHARTON TAKES FIRST VACATION IN 11 YEARS.

Theodore Wharton, of Whartons, Inc., who has been personally directing the International's photoplay, "Beatrice Fairfax," left last week for California and Honolulu on the first vacation he has taken in eleven years. He was accompanied by Mrs. Wharton.

Before sailing for the islands in the mid-Pacific, Mr. Wharton stopped at Los Angeles, where his brother, Leo Wharton, is in charge of the company making the films for the International's new preparedness serial, "Patria," in which Mrs. Vernon Castle is starred. Mr. Wharton expects to be gone about two months.

British Notes

A PROPOSAL is before the London Chamber of Commerce for the immediate formation of a moving picture trade department. At a meeting convened last week to discuss the proposal, about a dozen manufacturing and distributing agencies signified their intention of supporting a special department of the Chamber for the promotion of the industry's interests. Another meeting at which definite plans will be laid will be held in the course of a day or two and I understand that the first question for the attention of the department will be censorship. The London Chamber of Commerce is unquestionably at the head of organized industrial associations in this country and in matters affecting legislation exercises a powerful influence. It is allied with similar bodies in every large town throughout the United Kingdom. With such questions as censorship, modification of Amusement Tax and the new import and export restrictions demanding urgent attention, there is probably much more to be said in favor of the trade becoming identified with a body of accredited status than forming a new association upon its own account.

The Film Company of Ireland is making notable headway. The first comedy subject, "The Miser's Gift," first saw the light of the arc lamp last week and is described as being worthy of comparison with the best English films. None of the half dozen subjects produced by this Hibernian enterprise have yet been shown to the trade in London.

A number of important manufacturers of photographic apparatus have banded themselves together into an incorporated enterprise named the British Photographic Manufacturing Association, Limited. The objects of the association are the consolidation of British photographic trade interests and the joint development and exploitation of home manufactured articles. The undertaking has no registered capital and is limited at present to £500 on its liabilities. The first members are W. F. Butcher (photographic manufacturer and film exchange); E. W. Houghton (photographic manufacturer); G. M. Bishop (photographic manufacturer); W. S. Hobson (lens manufacturer); E. B. Cook (photographic chemical manufacturer); J. Hill (photographic film, plate and paper manufacturer); J. A. Sinclair (photographic manufacturer); T. Illingworth (photographic plate and paper manufacturer), and Austin Edwards (film manufacturer). Two of the above are manufacturers of motion picture film stock and the association has power to add to its membership.

The Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association in conjunction with the Musicians' Union and the National Orchestral Association, two principal trade societies for professional musicians, have drawn up a definite schedule of hours and wages for musicians engaged at motion picture theaters in the London area, which by mutual consent are to remain in force until the termination of the war. Under the agreement musicians in orchestras consisting of six performers or more will in future receive a minimum weekly wage of £3 ($14.40) in the case of continuous exhibitions with not more than nine hours of playing per day or £2 2s. ($10.08) in the case of evening exhibitions of not more than five hours playing per evening. For orchestras consisting of five performers or less the wages for the same hours will be for a continuous show £2 11s ($12.24) and for evening shows £1 16s ($8.64). The rates are to include one rehearsal per week of not more than two and one half hours. Extra rehearsals and matinees are to be charged for on the scale of one twelfth of the performer's weekly salary for each. The above does not apply to the provinces.

American film exporters would do well to watch the different announcements made by the Foreign Trade Department of the British Foreign Office regulating exports and imports, both to this country and colonies. While not affecting North America, another recent order requires additional certificates for all goods coming to this country and certain colonies from many South and Central American states. The additional certificate is a certificate of interest, a document certifying that no enemy person has any interest in the goods to be shipped and they will be issued to shippers at British Consular offices. The countries prescribed in the order are Argentine, Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, Columbia, Costa Rica, Cuba, Danish West Indies, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Guatemala, Honduras, Mexico, Dutch West Indies, Nicaragua, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, the Philippines, Salvador, Uruguay, Venezuela.

Apart from our present censorship trials and vicissitudes in England it looks as though Ireland will want to establish its own censorship of moving pictures. The Public Health Committee of Dublin Corporation is of the opinion that all films shown in the city should bear the mark of a Dublin censor, particularly in case they should have occasion to be dissatisfied with the London censor. An exhibitor friend who volunteered this information asks if the rumored retirement of D. W. Griffith is the outcome of this newest declaration of independence.

A Wesleyan Methodist meeting hall in London opened the other day by the Lord Mayor, has been built like a motion picture theater with tip-up seating, a projector and screen.

AMERICAN FILMS POPULAR IN COSTA RICA.

U. S. Vice Consul Albert B. Pullen, Port Limon, writes in Commerce Reports that "Teatro Arrasty" is the only motion picture theater in the Port Limon district. It seats 800 and charges an admission fee of 30 cents, the performance lasting two hours. The films usually shown are features of five or six reels, all types of pictures being in favor—dramatic, scenic, comic, etc. The theater rents the pictures from "Teatro Variedades" in San Jose, the rental charge ranging from $4 to $20 per film.

Although American films are the most popular, those from France, Italy, Spain, Denmark and England are also shown. Among the American feature films recently seen were "The Yellow Passport," "As in a Looking Glass," "Evidence," "The Mark of a Dollar," and "The Adventures of Kathleen." The duty on all films is 4.2 cents a pound.

AMERICAN FILMS FORGING AHEAD IN DENMARK.

There are some 200 picture theaters in the Kingdom of Denmark, with an average seating capacity of 150 each, according to U. S. Vice Consul Axel Permin, Copenhagen. Admission fees range from 25 to 60 ore ($0.067 to $0.161); the performance lasts about an hour. Dramas and comedies usually make up the programs, very few scenic reels being shown. Heretofore Danish films have been most favored, but of late the American film is forging ahead. All well-known American brands are shown here.

There are only four concerns buying films in Denmark and these have their headquarters in Copenhagen. The motion picture theaters rent the films from these four firms. The price usually paid for films by importers average about 90 ore per meter, or $0.073 per foot. The duty on new and used films imported into Denmark is 70 ore per kilo, or $8.51 per 100 pounds.

DAUGHTER OF EBERHARD SCHNEIDER MARRIES.

On November 1 Margaret Irmgard Schneider, daughter of Eberhard Schneider of the German-American Cinematogaph Co., and Victor Milner, were quietly married at the home of the bride's parents, 219 Second avenue, New York City. Out of respect to prevailing conditions in the Fatherland, and on account of the fact that near relatives of the family have been lost or wounded in the war, the usual wedding festivities were dispensed with.

Mr. and Mrs. Milner left on a honeymoon trip which took them to Chicago, thence to Los Angeles, San Francisco, San Diego and other points in the west and south. They will return to New York by steamer.

ACKER WRITES BIG FEATURE.

Edward Acker, the photoplaywright, has written an unusual multiple-reel story, which has been accepted for the Feature Film Corporation by Carroll Fleming, the director-general. The theme is said to be one of world-wide human interest, and the subject is slated for an early and elaborate production.

BROOKLYN PROJECTION ASSOCIATION BALL.

The Brooklyn Projection Association, incorporated last February, announce a carnival and ball to be held on New Year's Eve. The membership includes operators, managers and employees of moving picture theaters in Brooklyn. Fuller announcement will appear later.

NEWS AND VIEWS OF PHOTOPLAY HOUSES EVERYWHERE

Savoy Theater, Washington, D. C.

Now Most Beautiful Structure in the District—Seating Capacity Increased to More Than 1,400.

AFTER two months' work on improvements, representing an expenditure of several thousands of dollars, Crandall's Savoy Theater, at Fourteenth street and Columbia road, Northwest, Washington, D. C., has emerged from a network of scaffolding and painters' ladders, the most artistic motion picture theater in the District of Columbia. Radical changes have been made, and so elaborate are the decorations of both interior and exterior, even old patrons have found it difficult to believe that so magical a change was possible.

Savoy Theater, Washington, D. C.

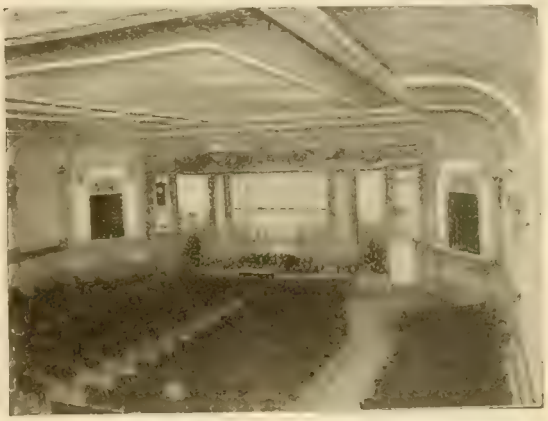
The most striking change of all is the addition of a balcony, increasing the seating capacity of the house to something more than 1,400. To accomplish this, it was necessary to raise the roof of the theater and make other very extensive alterations in the structure itself; the rebuilding of the front, the changing of the roof lines, etc.

Lobby of the Savoy Theater, Washington, D. C.

The front is beautiful really because of the simplicity of the design. The colors are rich, and Mr. Crandall spared no expense in seeing to it that these blended. It is done in the Moorish, or East Indian type. There is a marquise of metal and glass running the full length of the front and from the building line to the curb, suspended by ornamental chains. This, with the woodwork, is finished in verde antique, with all high lights done in vermilion.

There are three double entrances leading into a lobby, the beauty of which is hard to describe. The coloring of the ceiling is wonderful, with cloud effects that take in many hues. The floor is laid in mosaic blocks with a huge "S" for "Savoy" and a lyre in the center panel. The walls to a height of several feet are of Irish Conamara marble and there is a dado of green marble. The walls above the base are of a greenish yellow Caen stone. There are three double entrance-exits to the auditorium and above, stretching across the entire front, is the operators' booth. The lobby side of this is ornamented with a series of mirrors, which give depth to the lobby. The electric fixtures are very handsome and massive.

The interior of the theatre is equally pleasing. As one enters the auitorium his attention is immediately directed to the stage at the back of which is a curtain upon which there is painted a scene representing an Italian garden looking down the walk toward a fountain. Masses of artificial flowers bank the front of the stage. The arch above is highly ornamented in blue, ivory ,and French gray. On each side of the stage is the representation of a box with curtains of heavy red velvet.



Interior View of Savoy Theater, Washington, D. C.

The side walls have a base of marble. That part above the base is toned in various colors, there being noticed ivory, purple and French gray. The ceiling has been tinted a light buff, with old gold scrolls and sky blue centers.

At the rear of the theater is a balcony seating three hundred persons. The seats, of the opera type, are done in Circassian walnut, the ironwork being in French gray and the end pieces having the letter "S" in gold. Plenty of room has been left between the rows of seats and these, as well as those in the auitorium, are all "vision" seats. The balcony is reached from either side of the house by a wide stairway.

The lighting effects of the house are very pleasing. The wall brackets have ornamental shades of leaves and flowers. The center lights are of a semi-indirect type, the bowls being suspended from the ceiling by massive brass chains. Before the showing of the photoplay, the curtain is raised, leaving for projection a new screen. Between each exhibition the orchestra renders concert music, which is proving quite a hit with the Savoy patrons. The projection is also excellent for two new machines, Simplex motor driven, have been installed in the booth.

Theater St. Francis, San Francisco

Design of Facade of Latest Photoplay House Here An Innovation—Concrete Front Beautified by Illuminated Stained Glass Work—Sidewalk In Front of Main Entrance Is Done In Tile of Artistic Pattern—Interior Decorations Pleasing—Admission Prices 15 and 20 Cents —Charles Rosenthal, Jr., Manager of House.

UNDER the most favorable auspices the Theater St. Francis, Geary street, near Powell, San Francisco, Cal., which has been in course of construction for almost a year, was opened to the public on the evening of October 20. This house, named for the patron saint of the city, and located opposite the Hotel St. Francis, is an exceedingly interesting one, for not only is it unique in its construction and furnishings, but it is blazing a way in a new district for amusement enterprises. It was designed and built especially for moving pictures, and in many respects presents a wide departure from usual theater construction. N. L. Josey, who designed the theater, cast all precedent to the winds and then proceeded to plan a house after his own ideas. The result is somewhat startling in several ways, but the innovations are none the less effective.

The building is of fireproof construction throughout, reinforced concrete being the material used. The feature of the exterior is a facade of photographers' glass, surrounded by a decorative border of stained glass, the whole set in a concrete front adorned with Art Nouveau modelings. From the rear colored effects can be produced, showers of butterflies and flowers, storm scenes or gorgeous tints, suggestive of the picture being shown on the screen inside, the idea being a development of the illumination of the dome of the Palace of Horticulture at the recent exposition. The sidewalk, which is covered by a beautiful marquis, is laid in two-toned tiles, in a pleasing geometric pattern and at once attracts the attention of the passer-by. The lobby has ticket booths at each side, with space for a limited amount of advertising matter, which will always be of the highest class. The doors are fitted with neat glass panels, each with a photograph of a leading film star.

The interior of the house shows the work of the designer to even better advantage than the exterior, as far as new ideas are concerned. The arrangement is the reverse of the common practice of theater design, the screen being in the front of the house, and patrons are enabled to reach their seats without being confused by the light from the picture. There is no center aisle, thus eliminating to a large degree the annoyance to which those seated are so often subjected by newcomers. The balcony is reached by two stairs, which are really continuations of the two side aisles. On the mezzanine floors are located the rest rooms for men and women, each furnished in handsome fashion and here a marble fountain plays where it can be seen from below. At regular intervals along the aisles concealed lights are placed to guide the steps of patrons.

The interior decoration of the house follows the art nouveau mode and bright and discordant colors have been eliminated. Instead there are soft hues of mauve, blue and green, with an occasional touch of orange. The indirect lighting fixtures harmonize in design and color with the decorations and are unusually effective. The seating facilities are out of the ordinary, mahogany and leather curved back chairs modeled after the office type having been installed at an expense of about ten dollars each.

Music is made a feature of the new theater and a splendid double orchestra under the leadership of Barnat Jaulus and Sydney Polak has been installed. The prices are 15 cents for the entire house on matinees and 20 cents for evening performances with loge seats priced at 30 cents. First run Paramount pictures are used, the opening attraction having been Pauline Frederick in "Ashes of Embers." In addition a comedy, a travelogue and a news pictorial is given. A complete change of program is made once a week, Monday being the day of change.

The operating room contains two Power's 6B cameragraphs and a dissolving stereopticon, the projection being in charge of W. F. Rhea. A unique system of magnetic control has been installed, with automatic "dousers" to minimize the danger of fire. The house is 137 feet deep, but a perfect view is obtained from all the seats, whether close or near.

The house is in charge of Charles Rosenthal, Jr., who has had wide experience in this capacity, and the programs selected by him are designed to conform with the tastes of a discriminating class of theater-goers. The house is located on the edge of the shopping district and is surrounded by some of the leading hotels and apartment houses of the city.

Rialto Theater, Baltimore, Md.

Linden Company Operates Another Magnificent Photoplay House—An Illuminated Rectilinear Dome Representing the Sky and Showing Wavery Clouds Is One of Electrical Features—It Extends Across Auditorium—Beautiful Rest Rooms for Men and Women—Ventilation Chairs Used.

THE Rialto theater, which is located on North avenue at Linden, Baltimore, Md., and which opened its doors to the public on Saturday, June 24, is essentially a residential house and caters to a high-class of patrons. The Linden Company, which operates this theater, has as its president Myer Fox, who is also president of the Mt. Royal Amusement Company, which operates the Mt. Royal theater. This is Mr. Fox's second venture in the moving picture theater line and it was taken due to the fact that the Mt. Royal theater has proved such a success under the able management of A. B. Price, who is assisting Mr. Fox, who is acting as managing director of the Rialto. The Linden Company spared neither labor, time, nor money in its efforts to make the Rialto what it is termed, "The Theater Beautiful."

On the opening night a pleasant surprise was given the immense crowd which thronged the doors, in the shape of an artistically arranged souvenir program in the form of a booklet, measuring 4½ by 6 inches. This booklet was bound in a light green, heavy paper and contained 16 pages, giving a talk by the management to the patrons on the construction, the motion picture in general, the program to be used and the time of performances. The officers of the Linden Company are: Myer Fox, president; Robert Fox, vice-president; Louis Fox, secretary, and Edwin R. Downes, treasurer.

The time of performances is continuous from 2 to 11 p. m., except on Saturdays, when the exhibitions begin at 1 p. m. The admission price is ten cents. The program consists of the pictures of the Paramount, Metro, World and Mutual film companies. The building is constructed of brick and steel with the exception of the roof, and measures 40 by 150 feet. The entire cost for the ground and the construction was $75,000.

The exterior design of the Rialto is a typical Italian Renaissance and while the impression it gives is of sturdiness, strength and lasting qualities, still this is blended with what is beautiful in this style of architecture. The structure is built of tapestry brick and terra cotta. Directly in the center of the building is located a huge archway of paneled glass and from the center of this, just above the three pairs of mahogany plate glass doors, hangs a bronze and glass marquee on the inner side of which are located 50 incandescent lights. At night this theater presents the appearance of a spark of radium on an indigo velvet background, blazing out light from the three 1,000 watt nitrogen lights, two of which are located on the corners of the marquee and the other placed just over the center portion of the cornice. A brass three-sheet holder has been placed on each side of the main entrance, while at the extreme edge of each side other one-sheet brass frames are located.

As one enters the lobby, the impression is that you have gained admission to the palace of some wealthy oriental prince. All the marvelous effects here are gained through the use of marble, kahnstone and gold. The diffused glow of the indirect lighting pleases the eye, the nerves are rested. The space taken up by the lobby measures 21 by 26 feet, the floor of which is tile and marble worked in a clean cut design. The substantial pilasters and walls are built of Italian

Rialto Theater, Baltimore, Md.

Pavanaza and Tavanel marble and the cornices of which are decorated in gold. The walls run up into a kind of half dome or archway effect, and kahnstone trimmed with a gold design forms the basis of its construction. Directly from the center of this ceiling hangs an indirect dome light of kahnstone trimmed with gold which, when the suffused glow of its rays shoot up into the ceiling and return to mingle with the natural colors of the marble, cause a gorgeous mingling of exquisite hues.

To the left, directly as you enter, a small bronze, grilled window of unique design faces the lobby. Behind this is located the ticket office, which measures 4 by 8 feet, from which tickets are dispensed from an automatic ticket seller and an attractive cashier. The entrance to the main auditorium is gained through a double mahogany, plate glass door while on each side a double door of the same size and material is used for the exits. On the right, directly opposite to the ticket window is situated a solid mahogany door which leads to the office of the manager. All three of the plate glass doors are hung with figured, old rose, silk curtains.

Old rose and ivory is the keynote for the color scheme of the interior decorations, while gold is used extensively for the trimming effects. Large panels of old rose silk damask, with a unique border moulding of ivory and gold decorate the walls, while at the top there is mounted a cornice of ivory designed in the style of the old Italian Renaissance. Just inside the center entrance to the main auditorium is placed a permanent screen to shield the interior, when it is darkened, from glow from the foyer. This screen is faced on the inside with a covering of old rose velvet. The space allotted for standing room is 30 feet square and a heavy balustrade of mahogany and marble has been erected just back of the last row of seats. From this balustrade there extends on each side to the exit doors heavy brass railings.

Five hundred persons can be comfortably seated in the Rialto. Modern ventilated panel chairs have been installed which measure 19 inches. These chairs have been arranged so that there is a row of nine in the center, while on each side of this is an aisle of 4 feet and banked next to the walls on each side is a row of four seats. The orchestra pit allows spacious accommodations for a six piece orchestra and a baby grand piano. It is located just under the screen and measures 6 by 18 feet. A heavy balustrade of ivory and mahogany encloses it.

The screen is made of gold fibre and measures 12 by 16 feet. It is enclosed in a large tastefully ornamented frame of ivory, black and gold. Located centrally at the top of this frame there rests a large ornament enclosing an illuminated clock. The throw from the operating room to the screen is 116 feet. Besides the orchestra accommodations, the Rialto is equipped with a Kimball organ, the console of which is located just to the right of the screen near the first row of seats. The organ chamber is located just behind the screen. From where the organist sits, the screen is plainly visible.

The Rialto is the only theater in Baltimore which has the floors covered with paratex mastic flooring. This is understood to be the latest covering for floors, as it has the same properties that cork or rubber has in deadening the sound, and is sanitary. This is also the only theater in Baltimore where the cove lighting system has been carried out as extensively as it is possible. The results are extremely gratifying to the eye. The lights have been so arranged that when the full power is turned on, by the aid of the long rectilinear dome, which runs the entire length of the auditorium, a glow of even, restful light which is bright and translucent suffuses the room. This dome is decorated so as to represent the vault of the sky on a bright day with large billowy clouds floating through the firmament. Six hundred lamps, equipped with X-ray reflectors, have been placed so as to accomplish this effect, while there are fourteen border lights around the dome.

The ventilation is superb as there are located in the building eight syphonage, 30 inch ventilators, each having a 36-inch motor driven exhaust fan placed directly over it. Seven of these ventilators are located in the main auditorium and one is situated in the lobby. An additional ventilator has also been installed for the operator's room, fourteen latest make, 16-inch oscillating fans have been placed on the walls of the auditorium, seven on each side.

The heating facilities are a combination of direct and indirect low pressure steam. Four radiators are located on each side of the auditorium with outlets over the dado caps. These radiators have been placed in addition to the direct heating system of which there are two radiators near the entrance of this section of the building, one in each exit at the rear, a large one placed in the center of the lobby and one placed in each front exit.

All that is modern and efficient in machine appliances has been supplied for the splendid operator's room with which the Linden Company has equipped this theater. This room is located on the second floor, directly over the lobby, and measures 10 by 20 feet and is absolutely as fireproof as modern architectural construction can make it. The walls are of solid concrete, while metal clad doors protect the entrance. Two of the latest Simplex motor driven projection machines have been installed and in addition to this the room is equipped with a motor rewinder, a mercury arc rectifier and two arc controllers. This theater also has an elaborate layout of magnet control switches by means of which the operator can control the lights of the entire house.

Just back of the ticket office on the main floor is located the handsomely appointed rest room for women, while directly over this, on the second floor, a rest room for men is situated. To the right of the operator's room is located a director's room, where meetings are held by the officers of the company. This room has also been arranged with an open window facing the main auditorium so that it can be used as a sort of balcony for any of the friends of the members of the company who wish to watch the pictures.

Longacre Wiseacres and Other Things

Stories More Necessary Than High Priced Stars and Beautiful Lithographs.

By Willard Bradley.

CERTAIN wise Broadway gentlemen, who pretend to have a monopoly on the latest ins-and outs of the Land O' Make-Believe, seem to think that our own beloved motion picture is on its last legs. Their proof-positive, they will tell you, is the fact that a certain motographic triumvirate has been burning the midnight oil in a supreme effort to procure a remedy—a panacea, in fact—that would tend to cure their manifold money-ills, and place them, once again, on Easy Street.

These self-same Solomonlike gentlemen will also tell you that the actors, actresses, directors and even some of the cameramen of this gigantic concern are drawing down more money every Saturday night than are the officials of the corporation themselves. They ARE. But that does not prove anything—to those "in the know."

Some time ago, the officials of this particular corporation of which I write, became afflicted with that new and incurable disease called "sudden riches," and began to dabble in Wall Street. Instead of soaring to Himalayan heights, stocks tobogganed to the bottom. As a direct result, these money-mad officials became as poor as the proverbial church mouse. They found it requisite to "soak" their Rolls Royces and ride home in a surface car—just like regular folks.

However, it is true that many of the smaller companies are beginning to crack under the strain. The "star evil" is the cause. Many actors and actorines of my acquaintance who never "pulled down" more than two hundred a week on Broadway are now extorting four figures per week just for making faces at a Bell-Howell. Others, who were never nearer stardom than "leads" in some ten-twenty-thirty "stock" house in the tall grass, when asked to take a flyer in the "movies" (confound that word!) become full-fledged "stars" over night. Some even become comets, tails and all—if you get what I mean. Which reminds me: Every circus Indian becomes a chieftain as soon as he leaves the reservation.

Once upon a time when picture producers did not pay their puppets a railroad president's salary, the producers made money. And the exhibitors made money. The industry can only last just as long as the exhibitors can show profit. To the exhibitor, a new "star" means boosted rental. Boosted rental means small profits. Small profits grow smaller. And then, perhaps, the prediction of the Longacre wiseacres may come true!

Most assuredly we need "stars." But this is no reason why we should have to watch the stiffened motions of some venerable gentleman of many years and wrinkles, who, perhaps, was a favorite in our grandfather's day. Fifty-five year old ingenues are quite out of tune, too.

Between serial and series pictures, and the abominable "reissues," the owner of the small theater—the spine of the industry—is fairly driven mad. Today, the junkiest negatives imaginable—produced some six or seven years ago—are being taken down from shelves that are lambrequined with dust, and, after being printed and tendered new and gaudy "paper," are foisted upon an unwary and unsuspecting public. Many a director and "star" has blushed for shame recalling memories of his "work" of the old days—the amateurish days. A trip to the neighborhood nickelodeon wherein "reissues" are shown will depict to you just why he or she blushes!

High-priced "stars" and beautiful lithographs cannot take the place of stories. People do not go to the theater to see Ima Soandso and Lloyd Whatshisname show how fittingly they can wear "store clothes." They go to be amused, educated, enthralled, thrilled or what you will. Those who enjoy Ima and Lloyd should subscribe for the fashion magazine and the Paris edition of the New York Herald.

If the industry is sick, the only remedy is stories—good stories. Let those producers who cannot obtain good stories quit producing. Few tears will be shed at their departure. And when they go, let them take with them the giddy, lackadaisical ingenue and the pink-eared "leading man." We want men with brains—men with original ideas. The story first—and then the puppet.

Again the wise chappies of Longacre Square. Allow me to quote one of them—in his own words: "The moving picture business is in a crucial, chaotic state." IT IS. A bat could see that. But that does not imply that the business is on its last legs. Does it?

In conclusion let me answer my know-it-all acquaintances. The industry is in a crucial, chaotic state. The producers have been forcibly thrust into the red crucible of competition. Few of them will survive the gaff. Those that do will live.

Lowering Duty on Films to Brazil

Heavy Oiled or Tarred Paper Proves a Valuable Substitute for Tin Containers—Customs Rate Based on Entire Weight of Package.

THE American Consul General at Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, has called attention to a saving on customs duties now being made by some American film companies sending films to Brazil through a change in the type of packing used, a heavy oiled or tarred paper being substituted for the tin case ordinarily employed as the immediate container for American films, says U. S. Consul General L. J. Kenna, Valparaso, Chile, in a late issue of "Commerce Reports."

A similar saving could be made on the duties on films imported into Chile. The duty on positive film is 6 pesos gold per kilo "legal" (inclusive of wrappings or of weight of immediate container), equal to $0.993 United States currency per pound. As the tin container for a film will weigh approximately a pound, the saving on duty by substituting for it a wrapping of heavy oiled or tarred paper would be approximately $1 for each film. There would be no objection to having the box or case in which a number of films are shipped lead or zinc-lined, and no additional duties would be incurred provided the lead or zinc lining were fastened to the outer box or case in such a manner as to make it part of that case.

The duty on posters and advertising matter in general is 1 peso gold per kilo gross weight, equal to $0.165 United States currency per pound. It is improbable that in a country presenting so small a market for films as Chile posters and advertising matter could be printed locally with an appreciable economy.

Bob Doman Crosses the Briny—Maybe

ROBERT S. DOMAN of the Universal family left for Paris on the Espagne of the French Line on Saturday, November 11. Mr. Doman will contribute to the columns of the Moving Picture World on film topics and also will represent a number of American newspapers as correspondent—if a "U-boat" doesn't get him.

Robert S. Doman.

After studying law at St. Louis University Doman joined the staff of the New York Evening Sun in 1909, for which paper he covered many important assignments. Early in 1913 he started a moving picture supplement for The Evening Sun which marked the first recognition given the industry in the New York non-theatrical press.

In 1914 he became associate editor of "Reel Life" and "The Mutual Girl Weekly" and later in the same year was associated with Philip Mindil in the general publicity business in the Times Building.

Upon completing the publicity campaign for E. S. Curtis' film, "In the Land of the Headhunters," which was presented at the Knickerbocker theater, Doman came to the Universal with which organization he has since been connected. Mr. Doman represented the N. Y. Morning Telegraph on the Ford Peace Trip to the neutral countries of Europe last year.

BENOIT COMES EAST.

Georges Benoit, one of the most capable camera men in motion picture work, who has been with director R. A. Walsh, has been transferred to the William Fox Eastern studios. Mr. Benoit was responsible, in a large measure, for the photography in "The Honor System," the great human photoplay which William Fox will soon release.

Benoit was born in Paris in 1883, and at the age of sixteen became one of the four members of the Gaumont Company's first producing staff. Since then, he has done photographic work for one moving picture company or another. He spent two years in Europe and Africa making scenic productions. He has been with William Fox since 1915.

Invading South America

By W. Stephen Bush

New Corporation, Formed to Exploit Latin-America, Has Made Big Contract With American Firms.

THE Yankee invasion of the Latin American film market shows unmistakable signs of growing success. It may not be long developing into a rush as to a New Eldorado. The latest or one of the latest efforts to win Latin-American territory for the American-made film is that of the South American Film Service Corporation, an organization whose offices are located in the Godfrey building. Mr. Grossman was found by a representative of The Moving Picture World, busily engaged with preparations for the first step in the invasion.

"We have," said Mr. Grossman, "eighty-one theaters in Buenos Aires practically under our control. Let me show you some of these theaters."

The speaker brought forth a bulky album containing pictures of many excellent screen theaters in Buenos Aires, their seating capacities ranging from 300 to 2,000.

"You will notice," continued Mr. Grossman, "that many of these theaters compare favorably with the best of our own. Now it is a remarkable fact that most if not all of these theaters are paying extravagent sums for service. The money they pay for service is much higher than we pay here for the best; in fact, in many cases the service consumes more than fifty per cent. of the gross receipts. In return for these extravagant prices the exhibitors receive a service which is of the worst. We will try very hard to remedy this evil by reducing the cost of film and improving, at the same time, the quality of the service. We have now contracted with the Metro for handling their output in South America. We have guaranteed an annual film purchase and will buy a minimum of $100,000 a year from the Metro. In addition to this we are well equipped with a supply of independent features. Instead of going down to South America to look for an outlet of our films we have created the demand before looking around for the supply.

"No," replied Mr. Grossman, "we will not depend for our supply on any European manufacturer. This is going to be an all-American concern. We mean to introduce and popularize the American film in Latin-America. We do not think the task will be impossible, we have made some progress even now. People down there are getting tired of the Italian film, which is dropping into ruts. We want to be of service to the Latin-American exhibitor, and for that reason we have opened a special department in connection with our exchange in Buenos Aires. The object of this department is to improve projection. Projection in Latin-America is surely still in its infancy. We have two expert American operators, who will volunteer their services to any exhibitor in need of a first class picture on the screen. Besides, I have hired a capable young man who is an expert on the handling of films and will be on the staff of our special service department. We don't want to obtrude this service, but I believe it will attain all the usefulness we claim for it, because we are going to approach our Latin-American friends with courtesy and diplomacy. I am sorry to say that these two qualities so indispensable in doing business with Latin-Americans, have been absolutely ignored by many Americans.

"On the twenty-fifth of this month the president of our company, Mr. Bartelme, will leave for Buenos Aires with about half a million feet of film. He will be accompanied by the film expert I have mentioned. The latter will have supplies with him that will last four months at least. I want to add that in addition to Universal and Metro we have closed contracts with Vim Comedies, 'The Crimson Stain,' Hans and Fritz Comedies, Mutt and Jeff cartoons. Buenos Aires will be our headquarters and we propose to centre our activities there for a while at least. Our plans, however, are big enough to extend our field to every part of South and Central America. That will come later on. We believe that this is the psychological moment to enter the Latin-American film market."

Burnstein Reports Great Trip

Says "Jimmie Dane, Alias The Grey Seal," Creates Furore Among Exhibitors at Trade Showings.

JULES BURNSTEIN, vice-president and general manager of the Monmouth Film Corporation, producers of "Jimmie Dale, alias The Grey Seal," has returned from a flying trip through the East and Middle West. Jules is a very happy man these days, for his was a triumphant trip. From all parts of the country, wherever a trade showing was held, comes most enthusiastic reports, and better still, the exhibitors are booking this novelty series as fast as the Unicorn Exchange men can write the contracts.

Jules Burnstein.

"Truly, this trip was a surprise and a revelation to me—gratifyingly so," said Mr. Burnstein, on his return. "Among the cities where we held 'trade showings' were Boston, Buffalo, Cleveland Pittsburgh, Detroit, Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis, St. Louis, Indianapolis, Cincinnati, Kansas City and Omaha. These showings were arranged for us by the various newspapers allied with us. As a matter of fact, these screenings were intended to be what one might practically call 'trade showings,' as our suggestion to the newspapers had been that they notify only a few of their local exhibitors to attend the screening, merely for the purpose of getting a concensus of opinion. We got it in the shape of bookings.

"The funniest incident in all my experience took place in one of these cities. The showing in that city was held in the most important downtown theater. According to the manager, that house had never booked a series or a serial of any kind. Furthermore, they would not book such a production because their patronage is of the transient type, which would not be interested in anything but a complete story; whereupon I informed him that each episode of 'Jimmie Dale' was a complete story. Still he was skeptical regarding the value of 'Jimmie Dale' to his house. At this time, another exhibitor chirped up with the information that he had come to see 'Jimmie Dale' because he thought it was a serial, as his patrons were of the neighborhood kind, and would be interested only in a serial with a suspensive interest.

"I thereupon suggested that they see the picture for themselves and decide. The upshot of it all is that Mr. Downtown Theater Manager has booked it for a full week's run, and Mr. Neighborhood Exhibitor enthusiastically proclaims it just the very thing that he wanted, only more so, because the suspensive interest was there and at the same time he could really announce it as a two-reel feature. I am indeed satisfied with the manner in which 'Jimmie Dale' was greeted."

SHADOWGRAPH IS NOVELTY FROM GAUMONT.

The policy of the Gaumont Company is to release an occasional novelty. This brings to the screen, Nov. 24, a Shadowgraph entitled "Haystack Horace, or A Knight of the Road." It was written and produced by Harry Palmer who animated the Gaumont Kartoon Komics, and replaces one of these animated funnygraphs on the reel with "See America First," No. 64. A good cast of pantomimists supply the fun in silhouette. Among the players are Jack Bell, well known for his impersonation of animals. He duplicates in shadowland his success as Tige in "Buster Brown." Another animal he visualizes in "Haystack Horace" is a lion. Miss Hope Leslie has the leading feminine role. The comedy is mainly in the hands of Tom Ward as Haystack Horace. Another member of the Shadowgraph Company is Joe Lasher, who has appeared in many Gaumont productions.

JULIAN DIRECTING "A CHRISTMAS CAROL."

Director Rupert Julian is busily engaged at Universal City filming in five reels Charles Dickens' story, "A Christmas Carol," which was prepared for the screen by E. J. Clawson. Julian plays "Scrooge," and is supported by a cast including Claire McDowell, Francelia Billington, Agnes Vernon, Harry Carter, Lydia Yeamons Titus.

Mary Pickford in Dangerous Accident

Property Ship Founders With Miss Pickford Aboard, Players and Cameraman Washed Overboard.

MARY PICKFORD and her players, as well as thousands of spectators on shore were given an unexpected thrill when an old boat with the famous star at the helm, foundered off the shores at Marblehead, Mass., Sunday, November 12. At first the "fans" on shore who were viewing the staging of several scenes on board the old fishing schooner "Eddie Miner," thought the affair was part of Miss Pickford's new photoplay, but when they saw the cameraman and his machine, together with several players, washed overboard and Miss Pickford clinging to the helm waist-high in the water, they realized that the accident was genuine and that the lives of the players were in danger. Pandemonium reigned on shore and many boats set out to rescue the members of Miss Pickford's company.

In accordance with the scenario of Miss Pickford's new photoplay, a Scotch subject, entitled "The Reeds of the Clan," to be released by the Artcraft Pictures Corporation, the popular idol of the screen set out to sea at the helm of the old fishing schooner. Two tugs towed the boat out about a quarter of a mile and then set it adrift.

Director Tourneur and several other members of the company were in the cabin, out of the camera's range, when the boat suddenly listed toward the bow and rapidly settled in the water. Before the players realized that the old boat had sprunk a leak, the waves were washing over the sides taking the cameraman and several members of the cast with them. Miss Pickford was clinging to the helm waist-high in the water when a big wave washed her forward. Director Tourneur, who had just come out of the cabin, fought his way toward Miss Pickford and brought her back to the mast to which both were clinging when they were finally rescued by motor boats.

The Pickford company has been working on its second subject for the past five weeks and quaint towns were built among the rocky shores for the story of the Scotch fisher lass. Thousands of spectators journeyed to the locations daily to watch the famous girl at her work and when Miss Pickford was brought ashore after her exciting experience, the few policemen present found it impossible to handle the eager crowd that witnessed the affair, Miss Pickford has just returned to New York and after a few days' rest to recover from the shock, will resume work on her new production at her Fort Lee studios.

SIDNEY GARRETT ARRIVES.

After an association with Alec Lorimore in the Canadian film business, Sidney Garrett has recently arrived in New York from Montreal. Mr. Garrett's experience has so far been Canadian, but he is to be permanently located in New York City, and has in hand several important picture propositions. His commercial experience in Great Britain and the United States fits him to occupy an important executive position in the film industry. He is young, being only 31 years of age, and has a knowledge of the intricacies of the business, which is a credit to himself and his mentor, Mr. Lorimore. Mr. Garrett's present address is care of "Civilization," Suite 1401, Times Building.

Federation for Better Films

Nationwide Organization Proposed to Promote Concerted Action on Motion Picture Matters.

THE National Committee on Films for Young People, held its regular meeting on Thursday, November 9, at the rooms of the Civic Club. The Secretary reported that a number of addresses had been given during the month, or were soon to be delivered, in which the question of selected pictures was discussed. Among those already given were the addresses of Mrs. Trumbull, of the National Advisory Committee, at Seaside, Oregon, Mr. Brenton, before the Georgia Federation at Macon, Miss Oglebay before the West Virginia Federation at Wheeling, Miss Eaton of Grand Rapids before the Michigan Federation at Jackson, Miss Connolly before the Pennsylvania Federation at Philadelphia, Mr. Covill in Brooklyn, Mr. Cocks before the Federation for Child Study, the Civics Division of the N. J. Federation at Newark, and a group of social workers at Elizabeth. Among those contemplated were addresses by Mr. Sherwood at Bellows Falls, Vermont, Mr. Persons and Mr. McGuire in Washington, Miss Duey before the Buffalo Federation, Mr. Brenton in Providence and Boston, Mr. Cocks in Albany, Norwalk, Jersey City and possibly Mr. Collier before a group gathered by the Women's City Club at the Vanderbilt Hotel.

Mr. Perry presented a preliminary report purporting to consider the advisability of the formation of a Federation for Better Films. The Committee discussed at length the questions involved in the formation of such a Federation. It was voted that the Federation for Better Films be formed. Almost immediately it was suggested that the preliminary report of the sub-committee be referred back to them for the consideration of policy, methods, finance, the budget and relationships, both to the National Committee and the National Board.

The following points were pretty well agreed upon: That the Federation at present should be loose; that it should be handled by the National Committee; that it should strive to bind together and assist local movements; that it should codify and circulate facts and suggestions in the form of bulletins, and that a large degree of local initiative and autonomy should be preserved.

The sub-committee was requested to present a more complete report at the next meeting. At the suggestion of the Chairman, Mr. Bush was added to this committee.

A report was made regarding the coming New York State Federation of Women's Clubs at Rochester and after some discussion it was decided that the subject of arrangements be left in the hands of Miss Duey, Mrs. Ackerman and the Secretary.

The question was raised as to the possibility and advisability of recommending to individuals especially fine films. This involved questions of policy which could be settled only by the National Board of Review. After some discussion it was decided that Mrs. Price should present this matter to the Executive Committee of the National Board and that the Executive Committee be requested to invite Mr. Bush to discuss the questions involved.

A suggestion was made and embodied in a motion that all family group lists issued by the committee do hereafter in the case of features carry references to reviews printed in the Moving Picture World.

KALEM PLAYERS IN STAGE PLAY.

George Larkin and Ollie Kirkby and their fellow members of the Jacksonville Kalem Company will return to the speaking stage for a "one night stand" on Thanksgiving eve in St. Augustine, Florida. The Kalemites have consented to appear at a monster benefit performance for the Catholic Church there in charge of Father Connally. The players are now busily rehearsing in a sketch, "A Night at the Movies."

George Larkin, who lists among his varied accomplishments that of being a professional dancer, has arranged to give as a specialty an exhibition waltz with Miss Kirkby. Among the others who will be seen in the sketch are Director Robert Ellis, William McKey, Mary Taylor Ross, Strom Boyd, Fred Schierbaum, O. A. Zangrelli and T. Justin Dow.

POPPE MANAGES HORSLEY PUBLICITY.

The publicity and advertising departments of the David Horsley interests are now in charge of Harry H. Poppe, who left New York recently for Mr. Horsley's Los Angeles studios to take up his new duties. Mr. Poppe was with Mr. Horsley before in the same capacity. Recently he was associated with Chester Beecroft in the New York office of the American Film Company.

Attractive Bluebirds

Subjects Offered for the Holiday Season Have Special Application.

BLUEBIRD has done its holiday selecting early and is at hand with the announcement of a special Christmas feature, as well as a list of attractions with which it will, practically, complete its first year of usefulness. But one more feature remains to be scheduled and that will be No. 52 in the series. The week of January 15 will start Bluebird's second year.

The Christmas and New Year's attractions will be "The Shriveled Soul," a Lynn Reynolds presentation, and "Flowers of Doom," a Rex Ingram production, respectively. For the week before Christmas timeliness will mark the bill, when "A Christmas Carol" will be the title of the release to oppose the call of Christmas shopping. In this Bluebird is the first to announce a Christmas feature of particular appropriateness.

December 4 will have Hobart Henley, in "The Sign of the Poppy," this fine young actor then making his first appearance in the Bluebird series. December 11, Dorothy Phillips will be seen in the first of a number of features she will lead as a Bluebird star—"The Price of Silence," an attraction founded on W. Carey Wonderly's story, publish last summer in a popular fiction magazine. Joseph De Grasse directed and King D. Gray photographed. Miss Phillips will have as her principal supporters, Vola Smith, Evelyn Selbie, Frank Whitson, Lon Chaney and Jack Mulhall.

"A Christmas Carol," December 18, was directed by Rupert Julian, from E. J. Clawson's adaption of the famous Dicken's story. Mr. Julian will play Scrooge; Agnes Vernon will be Caroline, and Francelia Billington will be Scrooge's sweetheart. John Cook, Mrs. Titus, Harry Carter, Wadsworth Harris, Tom Figee and Dick Le Strange will play the other characters. In adapting the story, the scenes begin with a revelation of Scrooge's early days, which Charles Dickens failed to delve into—and thus will photoplays again improve upon the original.

"The Shriveled Soul," written and directed by Lynn Reynolds, will be the Christmas week attraction, George Hernandez, Val Paul and Myrtle Gonzales appearing in the featured roles. Frederick Montague, Jack Curtis, Edward J. Brady, Harvey Griffith and Francis Lee will be the others. Exhibitors who recall other Lynn Reynolds productions, in the Bluebird flock, will know what to expect—"The Secret of the Swamp," "The Girl of Lost Lake," and "The End of the Rainbow" are some of the plays that have made Mr. Reynolds popular with the "fans."

"Flowers of Doom," week of January 1, will be a Rex Ingram production with Cleo Madison featured. Wedgewood Nowell and Francis McDonald will be her chief supporters. Miss Madison's recent appearance in "The Chalice of Sorrow" will indicate to exhibitors the artistic expectations this new Ingram-Madison Bluebird is sure to realize.

While "The Eagle's Wings" is not listed on the Bluebird program, "It's a Bluebird" just the same—and an extraordinary feature. Bluebird exchange managers have taken charge of the feature, circulating it on State right lines and in every section of the country it is now being pre-released. The regular release date will be December 4. This is an "industrial preparedness" feature, written and supervised by Rufus Steele, who presented "Hop, the Devil's Brew" among earlier Bluebirds.

Scenes taken in government arsenals, and in munition plants now operating on European war orders make this feature exceptional among five-reelers. There is an exact replica of the Mexican raid at Columbus, N. M., when the greasers "started something;" sets duplicating the United States Senate chamber and the House of Representatives, with Congress in session; and more than two reels of pictures showing the manufacture of munitions, and how the shells and shrapnel are manipulated in actual use.

"The Eagle's Wings" is a non-political, purely patriotic exposition of what captains of industry will be able to do toward helping Uncle Sam in time of sudden stress or unexpected assault from foreign sources.

"MASQUE OF LIFE" IN CHICAGO.

Fully demonstrating itself in New York as a box office success, "The Masque of Life" will begin an indefinite run at the La Salle theater, Chicago, where film men of the Middle West will have a chance to see it. J. L. Kempner, of Signet Films, 220 West 42d street, New York, is the distributor. An elaborate advertising campaign, with all sorts of unique advertising display cuts, full line of unusual publicity stories, will assure exhibitors of having plenty of good material to bring in the crowds at advanced prices.

Urban Colorfilms

Charming Glimpses Into the Richest Colorfilm Library in the World.

Review by W. Stephen Bush.

"A PRIVATE Exhibition of Urban-Color" was given on the night of November 16 in the projection room of the Wurlitzer Building. Never was there a greater variety and a wider range of pictures on the screen. There were scenes from the Edison-McClure production "The Seven Great Sins," there were beautiful pictures of precious stones, the finest exhibit in that branch consisting of a view of the Imperial Crown of England, there were animated portraits, there was meat as natural as any that ever attracted passerby to a butcher shop, there were the natural colors of claret in the process of being mixed with water, there were peaches, apples, pomegranates, oranges, cigars, and other "still life." The humor was provided by "dog studies" which pleased the audience hugely.

Studies of animal life, indeed, formed no small part of the exhibition, life under the water being especially interesting. Beauty, pathos and humor were found in happy admixture in such short scenes as the doings of the stately and almost stilted flamingo and that great Arctic comedian, our old friend the penguin. Scenic subjects followed and were presently varied with pictures of military displays taken in various European countries, most of them before the great war, some of them evidently since the war. There was a series of "Floral Studies" including a few examples of speed magnification as for instance, "The Opening of a Bud to the full blossom." Perhaps the most remarkable examples of colored photography in connection with the drama were the scenes from "Oedipus Rex" which had been taken at the Urban studio in Nizza.

The piece de resistance was the wonderful reproduction of Admiral Jellicos's Grand Fleet in the North Sea. To photograph and to transfer in natural colors to the screen the belching flames of a broadside seems impossible until one sees it done on the screen. Nothing made a more profound impression on the audience than these flashes of lightning from the cannon's mouth. They produced a sense of realization which it is difficult to describe. Altogether the exhibition was highly successful. The pictures we were told in a note printed on the program were "selected for the purpose of demonstrating the applicability of the Urban color process to all classes of subjects. The demonstration left nothing to be desired.

Thanhouser December Releases

Florence La Badie and Frederick Warde in Two Important Features.

FLORENCE LA BADIE in "Divorce and the Daughter," and Frederick Warde in a splendid production of Shakespeare's "King Lear," are the features that the Thanhouser Film Corporation will release through Pathe in December. "Divorce and the Daughter" is a play by Agnes C. Johnston, based upon the ideas of "free" marriage advanced by the modernists. Miss La Badie plays a girl whose parents find that the old, tried and true marriage is a failure. Seeking happiness, she turns to a man who preaches of the "marriage" advanced by his cult. She finds, almost too late, that the old way is best. The story is a strong arraignment of the so-called "advanced thinkers," who would disrupt the home by their unwholesome ideas of "freedom." Frederic Sullivan directed "Divorce and the Daughter," which is to be released on December 3. Miss La Badie is supported by Edwin Stanley, J. H. Gilmour, Kathryn Adams, Sam Niblack, Zenaide Williams, Ethelmary Oakland and Arthur Le Vien.

Shakespeare's "King Lear" is to be issued to exhibitors on December 17. Frederick Warde, the star, is so widely known throughout the United States that Thanhouser, Pathe and Mr. Warde himself have been besieged with inquiries regarding the release date of this production.

Edwin Thanhouser, Frederick Warde, and Ernest Warde, his son, who directed the feature, have taken infinite pains in making "King Lear" and it tells with splendor and sympathy the story of the trials of Shakespeare's famous old monarch. The adaptation, by Philip Lonergan, follows the original play in every detail so that no critic ever will be able to say that any part of it "isn't Shakespeare." The cast was carefully selected and Frederick Warde, himself an authority upon Shakespeare, helped Ernest Warde in staging the drama.

Frederick Warde makes the character of the much abused King an object of great sympathy, and the production as a whole is one that will appeal to every class of patron.

Artcraft Wants Master-Directors

President Greene Outlines Novel Policy of Company Which Allows the Director the Greatest Opportunity to Present His Best Efforts.

IT HAS just been learned that the Artcraft Pictures Corporation is ready to negotiate for the services of the very best directors in the industry for its producing organizations. In accordance with Artcraft's progressive departures from the conventional in its endeavor to improve conditions which in turn will tend to improve the general quality of the present photoplay standard, a statement by Walter E. Greene, president of the concern, discloses a novel policy that will greatly benefit its directors, as follows:

"The Artcraft Pictures Corporation is ready to negotiate with the very best directors in the industry. Of course, we can only consider the master-directors in the business and will afford them the greatest opportunity to present their very best efforts.

"The directing end of the Artcraft Pictures will be given particular attention, and the Mary Pickford Company, the Geo. M. Cohan Company and other producing units of this organization to be announced in the near future, will proceed along lines that present progressive departures from present studio rules and regulations. In fact, as far as the director is concerned, these "rules and regulations" are just what the Artcraft producers will avoid.

"When we announce that our subjects are produced by the director, we mean just that. The Mary Pickford Film Company, for instance, does not hand its director a script at the eleventh hour while he is still working on the last subject, stipulate a time when the new production is to be finished, or handicap him with other limitations as evidenced in the average studio. Our producer is given the story four weeks in advance of the date on which the actual production will commence. He is given more than sufficient time to fully study his forthcoming subject, and to lay his plans. His creative capabilities are given wide play and he is allowed ample time to figure out and test the practicability of his ideas. It is felt that through this system many great producers will develop. Not only will this benefit the industry in general, but it will more than repay the producers of Artcraft Pictures for their liberal policy in this direction, which at this time might not perhaps appear strictly 'business-like.'

"The motion picture industry represents an art and should be treated as such. The talented artist does not sit down and paint a wonderful idea in a specified time. His time is his own and he proceeds in his work accordingly. There is no one to tell him how much paint he should use nor how long he should work on his subject. He thinks, plans, makes tests and when his work results in a masterpiece he is more than repaid for any apparent waste. Of course the director could hardly proceed along the lines of the average artist, but at the same time he should be allowed to work with much the same feeling as the artist who is ambitious to turn out a masterpiece. He should be allowed to create and improve his handiwork and should be allowed to finish it properly before he is asked to commence actual work on a new subject.

"In connection with the final work of the director, this to my mind is of chief import. Although it is readily apparent, few seem to realize that the great director is to the photoplay what the great editor is to the newspaper. The scenario writer may be a wonder, every player in the cast may be an artist, the cameraman may be an expert, the laboratory may be efficient, but it is up to the director to not only get the best efforts out of each department, but—after they have been obtained, to put them together so that each will appear to best advantage in just the same manner, as the editor who gets the best work out of the various members of his staff and then places it before the public in the most effective manner.

"While it is our desire to give each director the greatest possible scope in order to achieve the best results, at the same time, we do not intend to allow this to effect the efficiency of our organizations. Miss Pickford, herself, has advanced and is practicing a system which, while affording each director ample time to fully study, produce and prepare a subject for public presentation, prevents any waste of time or idleness of the plants. In place of waiting for the director to cut and assemble his subject before starting on another, Miss Pickford alternates directors, thus allowing the producer much more than the necessary time for the final work on his production. In accordance with this idea Director Emerson was giving proper time and attention to the ultimate work on 'Less Than the Dust,' while Director Tourneur commenced activities on "The Pride of the Clan," which is the next Mary Pickford production to be released by Artcraft.

"In addition to encouraging the productive genius of the directors of its producing units, Artcraft will at all times act as the great intermediary between the man who produces the subject and the man who presents it to the public. We will, through an efficient system now being completed, keep in constant touch with the public and will have our metaphorical finger on the pulse of public desire. We will give the exhibitor only what his patrons want. Our producers, through Artcraft, will be in direct touch with the man who pays to see our produce—and the man who thus pays out his money will not only view the kind of entertainment that pleases him, but will have the opportunity of seeing the very best efforts of such master-directors as Maurice Tourneur and John Emerson."

Five Dollar Admissions

"Civilization" Inaugurates Them at Remarkable Premiere in Buenos Aires.

"CIVILIZATION," the Ince spectacle, has started on a career in the South American republics, quite as triumphant as that which distinguished it on Broadway, New York. J. Parker Read, Jr., general manager of the Harper Film Corporation, exploiting the picture from the Times Building, New York, has received the following cablegram from the company's representative in South America, J. Parker Read, Sr.:

> "Civilization house packed, wild enthusiasm, all seats five dollars. Am pushing sales; buyers insist on ownership films end five years."

"Civilization" thus ranks as the first spectacle to attract a five-dollar audience on the American continent. The seating capacity of Arturo Cairo's theater at Buenos Aires is over 2,400. On Sunday night, November 12, when the picture opened there, this audience each paid $5 in Argentine money, which is approximately $2.50 in United States currency. Even at the equivalent this would be the highest price ever paid by people to see a motion picture spectacle.

From Argentine the picture proceeds to the other South American republics.

MUTUAL'S PRODUCING STAFF ENLARGED.

Miss Doris Schroeder, formerly general assistant to Rollin Sturgeon, Vitagraph Director of the West Coast, has been added to the staff of American scenario writers at Santa Barbara.

Marie Frances Kierman, the popular child player, has become a member of the Pollard Picture Plays Company, and is working with Margarita Fischer on her third Mutual Production, "The Butterfly Girl."

Miss Della Pringle, for many years a star on the legitimate stage, is also supporting Miss Fischer in this picture, which is being produced under the direction of Henry Otto, another recent addition to the Pollard forces.

A third addition has recently been made to the Pollard Picture Plays Company, Jack B. Timms, formerly connected with the editorial department of the Los Angeles Times, has been engaged as secretary and assistant to Henry Otto. Walter Lundin, the well known cameraman, has also accepted a contract from Harry Pollard.

WAR PHOTOGRAPHER THOMPSON FORMS COMPANY.

Brought into being for the purpose of handling war and topical films, and with a record of one real success already to its credit, the Donald C. Thompson Film Co., Inc., has entered the New York market and opened a splendid suite of offices on the twenty-first floor of the Times Building. The capitalization of the new concern is $15,000, and the officers are: President, Captain Donald C. Thompson; vice-president, Theodore Miller; treasurer, Florence Ann Harper. The general sales manager and director of publicity is Captain Edwin Bower Hesser, of the Hesser Publicity Bureau, Montreal.

"War As It Really Is" will be released on a state rights basis, and Leslie's Weekly, prominently featured on all lithographs, are giving it their backing, in connection with the syndicate of daily papers with which they co-operate. The proposition is one which is to be handled directly in connection with newspapers in every large city.

HARRY CAREY LEAD IN "HIS FRIEND."

With Harry Carey playing the featured lead supported by Priscilla Dean, leading lady, and a number of the cowboys, Director F. A. Kelsey is filming in two reels "His Friend," a western drama. Most of the scenes are being taken at Universal City.

Paramount Managers Meet

Heads of Eastern Exchanges Hold Important Conference With Department Heads of the Organization and Plan Many Exhibitor Helps.

THE general managers, publicity and advertising directors of all the Eastern Paramount exchanges, together with the executive departmental heads of Paramount Pictures Corporation, the Famous Players Film Company, the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company and Pallas Pictures, held an important meeting last week at Paramount's office, 485 Fifth avenue, New York, at which was discussed methods and means of extending the service rendered by Paramount and the producing companies making Paramount Pictures, to their exhibitors. The visiting managers were the guests of Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

The meeting was confined principally to the discussion and the making of definite plans for the future extension of a larger, better and more elaborate lobby display in all theaters showing Paramount pictures, and the interchange of opinions and ideas regarding the kind, form and manner of producing and distributing new accessories, lithographs, photographic stills, music, announcement films, publicity, cuts, mats and other materials. A number of definite ideas were accepted and will be put into immediate effect.

Those who attended the conference were Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation; Hiram Abrams, president of the Paramount Pictures Corporation; Jesse L. Lasky, president of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company; Arthur Friend, treasurer of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation; Kenneth Hodkinson, general manager of Paramount Pictures Corporation; Benjamin P. Schulberg, director of publicity of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation; John C. Flinn, publicity director of the Lasky Feature Play Company; Carl H. Pierce, special representative of the four producing companies and Paramount Pictures Corporation; Gabriel L. Hess, general counsel of Paramount Pictures Corporation; D. Leo Dennison, special representative for James Steele, treasurer of Paramount, in the Pittsburgh, Chicago, Detroit and Cincinnati exchanges; Harry Asher, manager of the Famous Players Film Company of New England; Whitman Bennett, business manager of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation; William E. Smith, president of the Famous Players Exchange of Philadelphia; William O'Haran Hurst, editor of the Paramount Pictographs; Charles C. Burr, advertising manager of Paramount; W. F. Seymour, manager of the New York office of the Famous Players Exchange of Philadelphia; O. F. Bower, manager of the Famous Players Exchange, of Philadelphia.

Harry I. Day, editor of Picture Progress and Paramount Progress; Oscar Morgan, director of advertising and publicity of the Famous Players Exchange of Philadelphia; Frank Gilman, publicity director of the New York office of the Famous Players Exchange, of Philadelphia; George Mann, manager of the Famous Players Exchange of Washington, D. C.; Charles E. Moyer, director of publicity of Paramount Pictures Corporation; Julian M. Solomon, JrJ., office manager of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation; J. Albert Thorn, purchasing agent of Paramount; Eugene J. Zukor, of the Famous Players- Lasky Corporation; S. J. Stoughton, manager of the William L. Sherry Feature Film Company of New York; George K. Robinson, director of p ublicity and advertising of the Famous Players Film Company of New England; Vincent Trotta, artist for Paramount and William Walker Hines, of the sales promotion department of Paramount.

The meeting was entirely informal and discussions were entered into by all the members present. Many of the excellent advertising and publicity aids that have recently been distributed to the Paramount exhibitors were decided to be continued, but many additional business stimulators for exhibitors were decided upon, all of which will be standardized and of a caliber that will be up to the standard of the productions of Famous Players, Lasky, Morosco and Pallas Pictures. These new ideas which will be placed on the market during the latter part of the year will be utterly different from anything of its kind that has ever been distributed in the motion picture industry and all of which will decidedly add to the attractiveness and standard of Paramount theaters.

A spirit of sincerest co-operation between producer, distributor, exchanges and exhibitors, was the keynote of the meeting and the purpose was primarily to provide additional materials for the man who is ambitious to have a letter, more attractive and more profitable theater.

One of the most important announcements was made by Mr. Zukor and Mr. Lasky, when they stated that they were particularly desirous of having the personal opinions of all exchange managers each week, upon the productions of the Paramount program, in connection with the criticism blanks that are returned to Paramount by all exhibitors, and that they should go back to their territories and tell every exhibitor that the productions that the majority want, are the productions that will be given them in the future and that all that is necessary is for them to feel the public's pulse and send in the reports.

Practically all the managers of the exchanges and the departmental heads of the producing companies and Paramount had reports in writing with their suggestions attached which were submitted to Mr. Zukor, Mr. Abrams and Mr. Lasky, which were acted upon and the suggestions will be reduced to actualities in the near future. After the meeting those who attended were entertained at dinner at the Hotel Astor by President Zukor, of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, President Hiram Abrams, of Paramount being the guest of honor.

Masterpiece Film Corporation

Organization Formed by H. P. Wolfberg, of St. Louis, to Handle State Rights Pictures.

AN ORGANIZATION known as the Masterpiece Film Corporation has been formed in Missouri, with H. P. Wolfberg, former manager of the General Film Company's offices in St. Louis, as vice-president and general manager. Features of the bigger kind and only those big enough to be considered in the masterpiece class will be handled by the new concern.

According to Mr. Wolfberg, the company's plans include the exhibition as well as the distribution of features and the scope of their activities, while confined to the East, at present, will soon be made to take in the entire country. State rights for "The Crisis" has been bought for a strip of territory extending from Indiana to the Atlantic Coast, taking in Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland, The District of Columbia, Delaware and New Jersey.

H. P. Wolfberg.

"The Crisis" will be handled on the Road Show plan, four companies will be put on the road to play all of the large towns and cities in the territory. The companies will carry sixteen piece orchestras with full effects, heavy publicity will be used to exploit the feature and top prices will be charged for admission. Temporary headquarters for the new concern will be established in Philadelphia.

Mr. Wolfberg has been connected with the General Film Company for a period of seven years, and when he resigned to take up his new work was the oldest employe, in point of length of service, holding an executive position with the organization. He started in with the Geo. K. Spoor Branch of the General in Chicago, rose to be manager of the Chicago Exchange, was transferred to Milwaukee, where he served in the same capacity and then went to St. Louis, to assume the management of that office.

STANLEY TODD WRITES OF MOTION PICTURES.

The Wells-Fargo Messenger, the monthly publication of the big express company indicated in the title, in its November issue prints a leading article on the activities of motion picture manufacturers and distributors. The story, which covers three pages and is illustrated, is from the pen of Stanley W. Todd, a former Brooklyn Eagle man and now connected with Wells-Fargo. Mr. Todd made a trip to the coast during the past summer and many of the facts revealed in the interesting and informing article were gathered during the trip. He has long been interested in motion pictures, being the author of a goodly number of scenarios.

Batting Out the "Big U's"

Universal Program for the Week of November 27 Includes "The Mainspring," Red Feather Five-Reel Feature.

LEADING the Universal Program for the week of November 27 is the five-reel Red Feather feature production "The Mainspring," with Ben Wilson in the leading male role. The play was scenarioized from a stirring story by Charles Agnew McLean, the editor in chief or rather the supervising editor of all the Street and Smith publications, by William Parker, and the direction by Jack Conway leaves nothing to be desired in any respect. In the supporting cast appear such well known names as Francelia Billington, Thomas Jefferson, Marc Robbins, C. Benson and R. Whitaker. "The Mainspring" grips from start to finish and contains among other features a wonderfully staged shipwreck that is uncanny in the accuracy of its detail.

Sharing the position at the top of the program is the sixteenth episode of the serial "Liberty." In this the stirring events of this master serial are continued and the story is brought just a little nearer to the close although as yet there is not the slightest indication as to what the end will be. Marie Walcamp, the featured star, in the part of Liberty Horton continues the sterling work that has marked her performance so far. Owing to the illness of Jacques Jaccard, "Liberty" is now being directed by Henry McRae who will continue with the direction until the close as Jaccard will not be able to finish the film. Among the actors who support Miss Walcamp are Neal Hart, L. M. Wells, Jack Holt, Eddie Polo and G. Raymond Nye.

On November 27 besides the Red Feather already mentioned there will be released under the Nestor Brand a Thanksgiving Special called "The White Turkey," featuring Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran and Priscilla Dean. This production which was written by Bess Meredyth and produced by L. W. Chaudet, illustrates the policy of the Universal to be always timely in the choice of subjects for the program.

The Gold Seal three-reel drama to be released on Tuesday, November 28, is entitled "Should She Have Told," an underworld drama. This tense photoplay was written as well as produced by Director John McDermott and tells an interesting story in a straightforward way that leaves the spectator in doubt as to the final outcome until the last foot of film. The players are Edward Hear, Ruth Clifford and George Beranger.

Wednesday, November 29 is the release date of "The Last of the Morgan's," a Laemmle two-reel feature directed by William V. Mong. The play was scenarioized by Mr Mong from the story of Constance Crawley and Arthur Maude and serves to present Mong himself in a character part. Others in the cast are Nellie Allen, Harry Holden and Wm. Carlock. On the same date there will also be released a one reel L-Ko comedy called "Eat and Grow Hungry," featuring Phil Dunham. As usual this Wednesday is also the release date for the Universal Animated Weekly with its topics of the day told in an interesting manner.

The Thursday Victor will be omitted on November 30, but the loss will be more than made up for by the excellence of the Big U which will be another Thanksgiving Special entitled "The Mother Call," starring Dorothy Davenport. The story of this one-reler was written by Universal Director Lynn Reynolds and produced by Ruth Ann Baldwin, a newcomer to the Universal staff. In support of Miss Davenport, in this appropriate play, are Mary Talbot, Charles Cummings and George Pearce. Under the Powers Brand on this date there will appear a comedy called "The Fascinating Model," featuring Ed Sedgwick and Belle Bennett with Jay Belasco in the supporting cast. In the same reel will be a short piece of Educational film called "At the Top of the World," showing the beauties of Alaskan scenery. On this date there will also be released a two reel Special Imp drama of the underworld with King Baggot and Jane Gail in the leading roles, entitled, "The Heel of the Law."

"The Mansard Mystery" is a two-reel mystery drama which will be released as an Imp on Friday, December 1. The scenario was by Harvey Gates of the Universal staff from the story by Sylvester Jones and the direction is by Stuart Paton. This is the first Paton production to appear on the program since the completion of the great under water feature, "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea." In the cast Neva Gerber is featured and the supporting cast is a strong one including Howard Crampton, William Quinn, Joseph Girard and Wadsworth Harris. There will be no Rex released on this date but the L-Ko will be an excellent one-reeler entitled "Tattle Tale Alice," starring Alice Howell in the title role. This is well up to the unusually high standard that the L-Ko company strives to maintain.

As a special feature on the above mentioned date there will be released a Special Big U, an Indian drama entitled "The Circle of Death," featuring Mona Darkfeather the Indian actress.

The feature for Saturday, December 2, is a two reel Bison drama entitled "The Greater Power." The cast is an exceedingly strong one including as it does Harry S. Griffith, Katherine Griffith, Alice Beice, Ernest Van Pelt and Ervin Denecke. The Laemmle on this date is to be omitted but the Joker will be released as usual and will be "Scrappily Married" written by Harry Wulze and produced by Universal Director W. W. Beaudine. The featured players are Gale Henry, with her inimitable antics and William Franey. A novel plot gives these two great opportunities to make merry as well as showing the rest of the Jokers, Charles Conklin, Lillian Peacock and Milburn Moranti, to good advantage. There also appears on this date the Special Laemmle called "A Designing Woman," featuring William Shay and Vivian Prescott in the leading role.

On Sunday, December 3, there will be released the two-reel feature "Just Her Luck," directed by Donald MacDonald from the story by Constance Crawley and Arthur Maude. This is a charming little play half humorous and half serious that ends happily but leaves the spectator in doubt until the last moment. The featured players are Irene Hunt and Lee Hill and the others in the cast are Mina Cunard, Lydia Yeamons Titus, Peggy Coudray and Helen Wright. The Powers split reel with a comedy cartoon entitled "Sammie Johnsin's Love Affair," and Ancient India as seen by Dr. Dorsey, will also be released on this date. The Special Imp drama entitled "The Wall of Flame," featuring Wallace Reid and Pauline Bush, closes the program for the week.

From Fox Studios

Forecast of Forthcoming Releases Reveals a Number of Interesting Subjects.

STUART HOLMES will be starred alone for the first time in a notable photoplay now in work in the Fort Lee studios. The picture will really be a genuinely masterful screen play, with a plot never before used in the silent drama. Mr. Holmes will enact the role of a man entirely unvillainous, and decidedly heroic because he is a "human" man. Opposite Mr. Holmes will be Mary Martin, who appeared in "Daredevil Kate," "The Broken Law," "The Wonderful Adventure," and "The Eternal Sapho." The direction is in charge of Carl Harbaugh who played for William Fox in "The Regeneration," "Carmen" and "The Serpent."

Within a short time, Gladys Coburn will make her debut in the world of films in a William Fox feature production. After seeing the excellence of Miss Coburn's dramatic work, Mr. Fox had no hesitancy in starring her in what will be her first motion picture.

For November 27, before the release of the Coburn photoplay, June Caprice's fourth film is announced. It is titled "The Mischief Maker," and the rollicking, cheery nature of the production makes it an ideal photoplay for the Thanksgiving season. In the cast with Miss Caprice are Harry Benham, John Reinhard, Margaret Fielding, Inez Marcel, Minnie Milne, Tom Brooke and Nellie Slattery.

In the release for next week (November 20), "Jealousy," which stars Valeska Suratt, there is a drawing-room interior of amazing beauty for a studio "set." It is unquestionably one of the most expensive room settings erected within the last year for any regular five-reel production.

Jewel Carmen, lately associated with Douglas Fairbanks in photoplays, who has just joined the William Fox screen forces, has been assigned to a leading part in a new production which director R. A. Walsh is making on the West Coast. This is Director Walsh's first picture since he completed "The Honor System."

George Benoit, who has been chief cameraman for the Walsh company, has been transferred to William Fox's Eastern studios. Mr. Benoit has a wide reputation among technical men in the movies, as one of the most capable in the profession.

He has been in motion picture work since 1899, and with William Fox since 1915.

RAWLINSON RETURNS TO WORK.

After having been laid up for six weeks with torn ligaments as the result of a film fight, Herbert Rawlinson has returned to work at Universal City and is being featured in Director Charles Swickard's production of "The Scarlet Srystal," written by J. Grubb Alexander. Among the other members of the cast are Edith Johnson, Dorothy Davenport and Gertrude Astor.

Mutual Leaders

Mary Miles Minter and Margarita Fischer Head the List of Stars on Program for Week of November 27.

MARY MILES MINTER in a five-reel Mutual Star Production, "A Dream or Two Ago" from the American Studios and Margarita Fischer in a five-reel Mutual Star Production, "Miss Jackie of the Navy," from the Pollard studios, head the Mutual schedule for the week of November 27.

"A Dream or Two Ago," is from the pen of Henry Arthur Phillips, and was scenarioized by Arthur H. Gooden. This vehicle gives the lovable little Mary Miles Minter a great opportunity to display her charming mannerisms, and she does some exceptionally good work in it.

Supporting "Lovely Mary" are Lizette Thorne, Gertrude Le Brandt, William Carroll, Orral Humphrey and little Dodo Newton, who does some very appealing work in the part of Millicent, at the age of six years. The production was directed by James Kirkwood and is from the American studios.

The Margarita Fischer production "Miss Jackie of the Navy," from the Pollard studios, is most and thoroughly enjoyable. Miss Fischer portrays a new role in her latest vehicle, that of a lovely girl who masks as a sailor boy and her characterization is wonderfully good. Harry Pollard is responsible for the direction of the production and is to be congratulated for the great success he has achieved.

Miss Fischer is given an opportunity in this subject to display her lighthearted and sparkling personality and lends to the production an airiness which fairly radiates from the screen. There are many little humorous situations in this story of the little sailor lad and at the same time there is gripping interest interwoven throughout.

On Monday, November 27, "When the Tide Turned," a two-reel Mutual drama featuring Lillian Hamilton and Frederick Church, is scheduled for release. Both of these Mutual stars have proven their ability to inject heart interest into dramas and this production is a very good sample of their work.

"Tours Around the World," the one-reel Gaumont scenic, which contains beautiful and interesting scenes from war-ridden countries of Europe, will be released on November 28.

On Wednesday, November 29, "Mutual Weekly" which never fails to film all of the happening of interest, both in this country and Europe, "See America First," an interesting travel picture showing the noted and beautiful spots in America and "Kartoon Komics" on the same reel, will be released.

A single reel American comedy, featuring Louise Lester and a two-reel Mutual drama are to be released on Thursday, November 30.

Friday, December 1, will have as its release a one-reel Cub Comedy, featuring that ever-laughable comedian, George Ovey, supported by the regular Comedy Cub cast.

J. Warren Kerrigan will appear in an American drama in one reel entitled "The Capture of Rattlesnake Ike." Kerrigan is well cast in this story of the Wild West and the production is full of thrilling action. This production is scheduled for Saturday, December 2, in addition to which is a one-reel comedy, title to be announced later.

Paddy McQuire, who is always stumbling his way into more comedy situations than anyone could possibly imagine in the short space of time it takes him to stumble in "The Wicked City," and Gaumont's magazine reel "Reel Life," are scheduled for Sunday, December 3.

ANITA LOOS WRITES THE TITLES.

Anita Loos of the Triangle-Fine Arts scenario department, will henceforth write the sub-titles for all screen plays in which Douglas Fairbanks is starred. This arrangement has been made at the special request of Fairbanks himself, who is convinced that the drawing power of the features in which he appears can be greatly affected, favorably or otherwise, by the amount of ingenuity or commonplaceness evinced by the writer of the captions.

"Time and again," says Fairbanks, "I have sat through plays by Miss Loos and have heard the audience applaud her sub-titles as heartily as the liveliest scenes. There have even been cases I could mention where her comments outshone the scenes themselves. This has convinced me of the great value of the kind of work she does.

Miss Loos has written more than fifty successful starring vehicles, among which the Fine Arts productions "The Social Secretary," "Stranded," "His Picture in the Papers," "American Aristocracy," and a forthcoming release, "The Wharf Rat," would reflect credit on any writer.

E. Henry Grey

E. HENRY GREY, who plays the leading male role in "Boots and Saddles," picturized in five big reels, from Eugene Walter's gripping play, by the B. S. Moss Motion Picture Corporation, is one of the few American born actors that ever qualified for the German speaking stage. A native of California, Grey went abroad with his parents as a child. There he was educated in private schools, where he gained such command of German that he was able to speak it like a native. As a result, he was able to do classic drama in the foreign language.

E. Henry Grey.

Coming back to this country, he went into comic opera. Mr. Grey inherited his mimetic talents, as he comes from a long line of artists. For several years he was one of the foremost juvenile leads in stock circles. Then he went into a number of big productions. His initial appearance before the camera was made in G. M. Anderson's company, whose leading man Mr. Grey was for several seasons.

"I like 'Heavies' and good leads," said E. Henry Grey, in speaking of his work recently at the B. S. Moss Studio. "The greatest pleasure I know of is to step with experienced people who can troupe in a big scene. There's an exhilaration to the work that one can't imagine, if he does not know what acting is, from the actor's standpoint."

Although he prefers to do "heavies," Mr. Grey is not limited to "dirty-work-in-the-gulch" acting. As an evidence of his adaptability, it needs only to be cited that he played the Christ in the recent Balboa production of "St. Elmo," which was so favorably received everywhere, and did it sympathetically, too. The genuine actor can fluctuate from the hero to the villain, as well as from grave to gay. This fact is brought out by the work of E. Henry Grey.

AMERICAN WANTS SCRIPTS.

The American Film Company is in the market for scenarios. "We want great big compelling stories written especially for our stars," said R. R. Nehls, manager of the American and the other producing companies, Vogue and Signal, with which S. S. Hutchinson, president of the American is associated, at the Chicago plant of the American the other day. We want scenarios for Mary Miles Minter, we want scripts for William Russell, we want dramas for Helen Holmes, filled with opportunity for her own peculiar kind of dare-devil playing.

"Our demand for comedies is small, since we have a large scenario staff to prepare material for Rube Miller, Paddy McQuire and Ben Turpin at the Vogue studios. But that should not discourage authors with good scripts. Every one is always ready to snatch up anything that is really good."

JOSEPH KAUFMAN DIRECTING M'INTYRE.

Contrary to the erroneous report that he was directing Pauline Frederick in "Nanette of the Wilds," Joseph Kaufman is presiding over Frank McIntyre's screen debut in the Famous Players adaptation of that well-known star's stage success "The Traveling Salesman." Mr. Kaufman originally intended to direct the Frederick production, but after he had worked several days in preparing the script and determining upon locations, it was found expedient to place him in charge of "The Traveling Salesman," as McIntyre found himself at liberty to begin work on the adaptation sooner than he expected. The photoplay adaptation of "The Traveling Salesman" will be released on the Paramount Program December 18th.

New Essanay Stock Company

Organized to Produce a Twelve-Part Series, "Is Marriage Sacred," Released by General Film.—Other Announcements.

GEORGE K. SPOOR, president of Essanay, has just formed a new Essanay stock company, the members of which will play together continuously in a set of features planned by Essanay. There will be twelve members to this stock company, all chosen from among Essanay's best players to take the principal roles. Other players will be selected from Essanay's corp of actors to take minor parts whenever needed.

It is Mr. Spoor's idea to form a definite company whose members are familiar with each others work so that they will play more harmoniously together and form a more perfect and unified organization. Marguerite Clayton and Edward Arnold have been chosen to play the two leading parts in the series. This plan will also give the exhibitors, not only a definite idea of the subject being produced, but an opportunity to rely regularly on announcing certain players who will become known to the public as playing together. It is Mr. Spoor's aim to make these players, already well known individually, familiar to the public as an all-star stock company. It is his belief that this will not only materially aid in the making of better productions, but that it gives the exhibitor something definite upon which to advertise his photoplays and attract the crowds to his theater.

The first of the series in which this stock company will appear is a set of twelve stories bearing on the subject "Is Marriage Sacred"? These twelve stories are in no way connected except that they bear on this main topic. Each play will have its own title and be entirely distinct. This is distinctively a series of stories and in no way a serial. Although it is believed that the spectator who sees one of these photo plays will wish to see all of them, yet the interest in one is in no way dependent on the other. The first series has been written by Charles Mortimer Peck and is being directed by E. H. Calvert.

This series is being announced as short features and will carry an approximate screen time of 33 minutes each. They will be released each Saturday beginning December 16, through the General Film Service. The first release is "The Burning Band," the second on December 23, is "Dancing with Folly," the third on December 30, is "Wife in Sunshine," the fourth on January 6, is "The Sinful Marriage," the fifth on January 13, is "When the Man Speaks." The others in the series will be announced shortly. These stories touch the lives of all the people. There is not a man, woman or child in which this does not in some way affect. The subject is a flaming banner of impelling interest. It touches a problem in every home.

While bearing on one of the deepest problems of the present day, the relation of husband and wife and children, the marriage and divorce situation, every play will be clean and wholesome and morally uplifting. It is planned to continue the work of this stock company after the series is completed in still other features, holding the members as a unit continuously.

On K-E-S-E Program.

A program change of importance to exhibitors has just been announced by George K. Spoor, president of Essanay. Not only does the announcement advance on the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay Service program a widely advertised feature, but it indicates an increased production of multiple reel picture from Essanay.

"The Breakers" will be offered two weeks earlier than formerly announced. This will make it available on December 4. Bryant Washburn and Nell Craig appear in the featured roles with Ernest Maupain heading the support. Fred E. Wright directed the picture. It was taken from Arthur Stringer's thrilling story in the Saturday Evening Post.

To take the place formerly occupied by "The Breaker" on December 18, an intensely interesting international story, "The Phantom Buccaneer" will be offered. This is taken from a famous book, "Another Man's Shoes," by Victor Bridges. Richard C. Travers and Gertrude Glover will appear in the leading roles. J. Charles Haydon is directing the play.

"The Truant Soul," Henry B. Walthall's superfeature maintains its original date, December 25. The picture is now in the process of assembling and will be ready for trade showing early in December. Mary Charleston takes the feminine lead in support of Mr. Walthall and Patrick Calhoun as the heavy. Harry Beaumont directed the piece, which is designed for a screen time of approximately two hours.

Kalem's Reporter O.K'd

New York Newspaper Men Approve "Grant, Police Reporter" at Private Exhibition.

A GATHERING of New York police reporters last week placed an enthusiastic O. K. on "Grant, Police Reporter," the one-reel Kalem series featuring Dare-Devil George Larkin and Ollie Kirkby. The press representatives were the guests of Robert Welles Ritchie, author of the series, at a private exhibition of four of the episodes in the Kalem projection room. Mr. Ritchie, before becoming prominent as a writer of fiction, was well known on the staffs of the New York Sun and the New York World.

"Grant is a sure-enough reporter in appearance and actions," said F. H. Denny, of the Newsfeatures Syndicate, in expressing the opinion of the gathering. "Your printed newspaper inserts and handling of the newspaper office scenes are the best that I have ever seen on the screen. Newspaper men usually get a good laugh when they see a picture director's idea of what a reporter looks like and a bigger laugh at the near-city editors and local rooms. Kalem appears to be the first company to discover that there are such things as a morgue room, rewrite men, and so on. There's only one thing wrong—you'll have to show me the reporter who will do the dare-devil stunts that you put up to Grant in each story. I'll resign my job tomorrow if they call on me to risk my neck and bones in that reckless way."

The newspaper men were particularly pleased when they saw that each episode of the series was based on real happenings in New York newspaper records. Most of those present had themselves worked on the different cases used as the basis of the film plots. The episodes presented at the private exhibition included "The Rogue's Pawn," "The House of Three Deuces," "The Wizard's Plot," and "The Trunk Mystery."

George Larkin brought praise from the newspaper audience by his thrilling hand-over hand climb on a telephone wire which suddenly snaps and catapaults him through the air in "The Rogue's Pawn," while Ollie Kirkby came in for her share of admiration by her pluck in allowing herself to be let down on a rope from the roof of a seven-story building to the ground. The title "The House of Three Deuces" was greeted with recognition for the reporters were all familiar with the East Side tenement known by this nickname which figured in so many crimes about five years ago. The thrill in this episode was furnished by Larkin's struggle with Robert Ellis on a rickety fire escape which suddenly collapses under their weight.

Robert Welles Ritchie is most enthusiastic over the manner in which Kalem has staged his stories. "No matter how thrilling or entertaining the pictures are," he declares, "I would have felt disappointed had you not made them true to newspaper life. But I am glad to say that not a detail of realism has been overlooked. Kalem has gone the limit in assuring absolute realism in these one-reel stories just as it did for the two-reel Girl From Frisco" adventures.

Among those present at the showing were Fred Sullivan, L. H. Hall, Redfield Ingalls, Frank Malloy, F. H. Denny, William Clark, and James McGrath. The gathering included men from the World, Herald, City News Association, Sun and Journal.

LED NEWARK OPERATORS' BALL.

Mollie King, winsome little star of the Pathe-Astra film forces, led the grand march at the reception and dance tendered by the Local 244, I. A. T. S. E. of the Moving Picture Operators' Union on Friday, November 17, at Kreuger's Auditorium, Newark, N. J. Music was furnished by Voos' orchestra.

Miss King is a great favorite with the "fans" in Jersey, and her selection to lead the grand march comes as a well earned compliment to the hard working little girl, who made a great personal hit in musical comedy and with the World Film. After appearing in a picture with Robert Warwick, Miss King will be seen in "Kick-In" and a serial for Pathe. This marks Miss King's initial appearance at a public function of this kind and every nook and corner in Newark was utilized to herald the coming of Miss King in their midst.

JEWEL CARMEN GETS ROLE.

Jewel Carmen, lately associated with Douglas Fairbanks in photoplays, who has just joined the William Fox screen forces, has been assigned to a leading part in a new production which director R. A. Walsh is making on the Pacific Coast. This is Director Walsh's first picture since he completed "The Honor System."

Good Year for Gold Rooster

Popular Pathe Brand Makes Fine Record—Much Good Material Promised.

ONE year ago it was announced by Pathe that on the Gold Rooster program would be placed features adapted from the best plays only, with stars of national reputation in the casts, and with the ablest direction procurable. That this was no mere idle statement is shown by mention of some of the titles and stars of the Gold Rooster Plays of the past year: Florence Reed in "At Bay," "New York" and "A Woman's Law"; Bruce McRae and Gail Kane in "Via Wireless"; Pearl White and Bruce McRae in "Hazel Kirke"; Edwin Arden in "The Beloved Vagabond"; Dorothy Donnelly in "Madame X," and Robert Edeson in "Big Jim Garrity." The complete list of real stars featured in various Gold Rooster plays is too long to be given here, but it embraces some of the most famous in the land.

The authors represented during this year of achievement include Richard Harding Davis, Paul Armstrong and Winchell Smith, William J. Locke, Henry C. Rowland, George Barr McCutcheon, Henry Kitchell Webster and Samuel Merwin, John McIntire, Alfred Sutro, Richard Dehan, Mrs. Maravene Thompson, Clyde Fitch, Rudyard Kipling, W. J. Hurlburt, Rupert Hughes, Alexander Bisson, George Scarborough, and Owen Davis, a most noteworthy list.

The directors include George Fitzmaurice, William Parke, Edward José, Donald Mackenzie, George Marion, Frederic Sullivan, Eugene Moore, Henry King, Sherwood MacDonald, Ernest Warde and Herbert Blaché, men whose names count for much in the motion picture business.

That exhibitors thoroughly appreciate the great effort that is being put forth by Pathe to give them absolutely first class features is proven by the numerous letters of commendation received from exhibitors who are showing Gold Rooster plays.

Not content with the large business already being done on Gold Rooster plays, Mr. Berst is exerting every effort to make them even better, and in this he has the hearty co-operation of Louis J. Gasnier, president of the Astra; Edwin Thanhouser, president of the Thanhouser Film Corporation; H. M. Horkheimer, president of Balboa, and W. E. Shallenberger, president of the Arrow, these four companies making the Gold Rooster Features.

In forthcoming Astra productions will be seen among others, William Courtney, Mary Nash, Mollie King, Montague Love, Cooper Cliffe and Lumsden Hare. Every theatre goer will appreciate the value of these names.

In Thanhouser productions in addition to Gladys Hulette and Florence La Badie, will appear Charlotte Walker, Jeanne Eagels, Frederick Warde, and Victor Serrano, stars of Broadway reputation. Baby Marie Osborne, now known as "Little Mary Sunshine," the phenomenally successful baby star, will be presented by Balboa in a number of super-excellent features.

On November 26 will be released "Arms and the Woman," starring Mary Nash, a picture produced by George Fitzmaurice, admittedly one of the greatest directors in the business. Rarely has a picture received such commendatory notices from the reviewers as this. Five solid reels of continuous action, marked by superb acting, and sumptuous sets is the universal verdict on this picture. Pathe is proud of it and confident it will do big business.

On December 3 Florence La Badie will be presented in "Divorce and the Daughter," a play by Agnes Johnston, author of the very successful "The Shine Girl" and "Prudence the Pirate." The way the divorce question is handled in this play will excite much comment.

On December 10 will be released an A. H. Woods play adapted for the screen, "The Challenge," directed by Donald Mackenzie, and featuring Charles Gotthold, Montague Love and Helen Chadwick. Helen Chadwick is a "find" of Mr. Gasnier's and is rapidly developing into a real star. Messrs. Gotthold and Love are well known actors and the play is full of thrill and dramatic action.

On December 17 Frederick Warde, the famous Shakesperian actor, will be seen in "King Lear." Mr. Warde has a large following all over the country, and is seen at his best in "King Lear," in which he appeared in practically all the cities and towns of America during a period of ten years. His acting in this Thanhouser production is described as superb.

On December 31 Little Mary Sunshine will be seen again, this time in "Joy and the Dragon," a piece which gives her ample opportunity to display the winsome baby charms which have captivated the country, and made her almost a household word. These Sunshine pictures have been hailed everywhere as something new and refreshing and have played many return dates in the best theatres.

On January 7 Thanhouser will present "A Modern Monte Cristo," with Victor Serrano, the well known star, in the lead. The story is dramatic, adventurous and novel and will find a wide appeal.

On January 14 comes "Kick In," the famous A. H. Woods stage success, which played to phenomenal business. George Fitzmaurice produced the picture for Astra, and in it is starred William Courtney, who is supported by a stellar cast including Mollie King and Suzanne Willa. The story has an action which never lets down for a moment, and the suspense is well sustained until the very end. "Kick In" will be one of the great pictures of 1917.

On the 21st and 28th of the month will follow in the order named, Valkyrien in "The Image Maker of Thebes" and Baby Sunshine in another picture, yet to be named. The first has a most unusual story, dealing as it does with previous existence and a love that lasts through the centuries. It strikes a new note and one that will be appreciated.

With these and other productions now under way, Pathe feels that exhibitors may well look forward to a series of Gold Rooster Plays that will rank second to none on the market.

Will C. Smith

IN the final analysis projection is undoubtedly the most important factor in the exhibition of motion pictures, and yet but little is known by anyone except exhibitors and operators regarding the work of those who daily contribute to the success of the motion picture theater. There are but few who are eligible to qualify as projection experts, one of the most prominent among them being Will C. Smith. Mr. Smith is essentially a projection engineer, and has through his extensive road experience with traveling shows, his supervision of many of the most important projection machinery installations, his years of close association with Nicholas Power, as well as a most thorough research of the art of projection along scientific lines, attained such an eminence in this work that to-day exhibitors and operators consider him an authority who may be consulted with the utmost confidence on any and every matter pertaining to the projection of motion pictures.

Will C. Smith.

Mr. Smith has recently compiled a booklet entitled "Hints to Operators," in which he explains in a helpful manner a great many projection problems that daily beset the "man behind the machine," and in which he also expounds in great detail the theories regarding the upkeep of all apparatus pertaining to motion picture projection. This booklet is considered invaluable by every operator, and so great has been the demand for it that several large editions have been exhausted.

Mr. Smith established the record for long distance projection in May, 1915, when he installed two Power's cameragraphs in Madison Square Garden, New York City, and obtained a perfect picture thirty-four feet wide at a throw of three hundred feet. As assistant general manager of the Nicholas Power Company, Mr. Smith has, in addition to other important branches of work, direct supervision of the service department of that company which covers installation, maintenance, etc., of the projection machines. Though of a somewhat retiring and quiet personality, always avoiding publicity, Mr. Smith is, nevertheless, very popular throughout the motion picture industry as a whole, this being evidenced by his recent election to the treasurership of the Screen Club of New York City, of which organization he has been a member for several years.

Exceptional Paramount Program

Pauline Frederick Chief Star for Week of November 27.—All-Star Cast in "Martyrdom of Philip Strong."—Single Reel Features Exceptional.

CANADIAN woods will serve as a background for the thrilling photoplay "Nanette of the Wilds," a Paramount Picture produced by Famous Players, in which Pauline Frederick will be starred and hold sway on the Paramount Program for the week of November 27. The other feature for this week will be "The Martyrdom of Philip Strong," which is founded on the works of the Reverend Charles M. Sheldon "In His Steps," and "The Crucifixion of Philip Strong."

This week marks the return of Pauline Frederick to the screen under her new contract recently signed with the Famous Players, and it will be the first time that she has been seen since her exceptional production of "Ashes of Embers." "Nanette of the Wilds" is a tale of the celebrated North West Mounted Police, written by Willard Mack, the well known author and actor who plays opposite Miss Frederick, the production having been made under the direction of Joseph Kaufman. The role of Nanette is one of the most difficult that Miss Frederick has ever been required to play, it being that of a girl of the wilds, uncouth, unkept, dressed in rags with her hair streaming, lacking all the little feminine touches and adornments which are so dear to the heart of every girl, and upon which so many of them rely for a large measure of their personal attractiveness. In addition to Mr. Mack, those who appear in support of Miss Frederick are, Charles Brand, Frank Joyner, Wallace M. Dudley, Macey Harlan, Daniel Pennell, Jean Stewart and Robert Courville.

The adaptation for the screen of Rev. Charles M. Sheldon's two famous books, to be featured under the name of "The Martyrdom of Philip Strong" was made especially for Paramount with an all star cast, directed by Richard Ridgely and tells the story of Philip Strong, a rising young pastor of a fashionable church, who symbolizes the spirit of Christ on this earth and addresses his fellowmen "Man you are a living lie," which phrase he suddenly realizes the force of, while surrounded by luxury and lionized by a wealthy congregation. The character of Philip Strong is portrayed by Robert Conners, who is supported by the following all-star cast: Mabel Trunnelle, Janet Dawley, Bigelow Cooper, Helen Strickland, Frank Lyons, William Wadsworth, Herbert Prior, Olive Wright, Edith Wright and Brad Sutton.

Surrounding the Paramount Program for the week of November 27, are four "little features;" the 42nd edition of the magazine on-the-screen, the Paramount Pictographs; the 43rd of the series of the "Weeklyn Trips Around the World," personally conducted by Burton Holmes, the world's greatest traveler, in which he gives intimate scenes of the "Real Streets of Cairo," a Paramount-Bray cartoon from the pen of L. M. Glacksens, entitled "What Happened to Willie," and the Paramount-Black Diamond Comedy, "Their Counterfeit Vacation."

Four very interesting subjects are treated in the Paramount Pictographs, the "magazine-on-the-screen" this week, the leading subject being the war pictures secured exclusively for Paramount by Donald C. Thompson, the most successful of war photographers, who recently returned to this country with the most intimate views of the "war of nations." The first of this series will be released this week, in which there will be close-up views of the Battle of the Somme, fighting in the trenches, a charge of the London Scotties, and the charge of the French Dragomen, during which there is shown a background of "curtain fire," pictures of bombs bursting in the very face of the camera, blowing thousands of men to their death.

Another interesting subject in the Pictographs, "the magazine-on-the-screen," is shown in "Why the Apple Tree is Crooked," and picturing how trees are grafted, and mothered, from the time of their youth in the modern nursery. There is also a section showing that in Nature's garden there are enemies more vicious than those in the world of men, the principal victims being the valuable shade trees in America, which are pestered each year by insect depredations. The closing feature is the picturing of the manner in which New York and other large cities in the United States are kept supplied with water adequate to meet the demands of drinkers and those who take daily baths.

Burton Holmes in his travels this week, takes his audience to the "Real Streets of Cairo," where one has nothing to do but use his eyes, for everywhere something new appears. These streets are full of striking types, queer conveyances, dancing girls and merchants, arch dukes from Russia and millionaires from Pittsburgh, all moving along like the changes of a kaleidoscope. A visit is made to the University of Mosque of L'Azar, where some 7,000 young men are taught along the ancient lines of traditions based upon the principles of the Koran, their young minds filled with ideas and methods as ancient and out of date, as the picturesque buildings in which they are gathered together to be "miseducated."

L. M. Glackens, one of the foremost of the animated cartoonists in the country today, contributes for this week, his most interesting cartoon, "What Happend to Willie," which is a screaming success from start to finish, and tells the story of some of the interesting complications that come to poor little Willie and the clever devices which he uses to squirm out of them. "Their Counterfeit Vacation" is the Black Diamond Comedy for this week, which is filled with a rapid-fire of comedy situations of unique continuity, injected with a great variety of trick photography, telling a story of a Swede and his pal who find $1,000,000 in counterfeit money and proceed to have the vacation of their lives.

Lesser Begins Operations in the East

In Association With Leon D. Netter, Establishes New Offices and Makes Big Purchases of States-Rights Features.

IN LINE with the announcement that Sol Lesser, in association with Leon D. Netter had begun activity in the East, to take care of the ever increasing expansion and volume of business, which their recent purchases entailed, comes the news of the buying of other big features and the opening of a buying office in New York, and branch offices in Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Cincinnati and one to be opened in Chicago, to handle the business of eleven western states.

Of the latest acquisitions which Lesser and Netter have taken over, is the contract with the Triumph Film Corporation, which gives the Masterpiece Film Corporation control of twenty-four states in the Union on "The Libertine," a six reel feature directed by Jules Steger and Joseph Golden, featuring John Mason and Alma Hanlon.

Moreover, in conference with Lewis J. Selznick, Lesser has negotiated the purchase of "War Brides," directed by Herbert Brenon, featuring Nazimova, for his western coast territory. This is the second deal, which Lesser consummated with the Selznick Enterprises, this being prompted to a good degree by the success being achieved with the Clara Kimball Young pictures, which Lesser also purchased for the coast some time ago, and which are being booked at advanced prices and longer runs wherever played.

Of vital interest to the exhibitors who have been eagerly desirous of booking "Purity," the rights of which are controlled by The Masterpiece Film Co., for New Jersey, is the fact that the Newark Board of Censors have passed this film after a delay of more than six weeks.

Max Linder Ready for Camera

French Laughmaker Will Produce One Comedy a Month for the Next Year.

MAX LINDER, Europe's foremost screen comedian, is at Essanay, where he is prepared to produce one comedy a month for one year. An unlimited amount of excellent material has been gathered by President Spoor for Mr. Linder. From this the comedian is selecting that which is best adapted to his style of mirthmaking. Studio facilities have been especially prepared, one whole studio of Essanay's big plant having been allotted him.

America will see a new brand of fun with Max Linder. An artist born, he depends on his art as a comedian rather than on his strength as a wielder of slapsticks or his aim as a twirler of custard pie. He has brought to Essanay the latest Parisian sartorial designs.

For his support Mr. Linder has asked for and will obtain the most beautiful young woman on the American screen. Mr. Spoor has promised as much, and already Essanay has begun its search of photoplay studios for the necessary bevy of beauties.

Max Linder will produce twelve of his comedies for Essanay. His contract provides for one each month. At the end of the year, it is stipulated, this contract may be renewed at his option.

G. VERE TYLER WRITES NOVEL.

G. Vere Tyler, author of a number of photoplays, including "The Wax Model," a big forthcoming feature of the Paramount program starring Vivian Martin, has written a novel entitled "The Superlative Masculine." It is published complete in the December number of The Smart Set, and said to contain unusual screen possibilities.

"The Man She Married"

Gail Kane the Star of a Five-Reel Peerless Production—Released by World Film Corporation.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel

THE five-reel Peerless production, "The Man She Married," was adapted from a story by Harold Vickers. It is dramatically effective. Starting with the marriage of the heroine to a sharper who is after her money and who robs and deserts her, the events are carried along to the big situation where the woman, now the wife of a worthy man, goes to the rooms of her former husband in order to save her stepdaughter from becoming another of his victims. Although far from novel, having received in the last forty years the endorsement of a number of prominent French dramatists, the situation has lost none of its ability to score. The preceding threads of the plot are woven into the author's design with skill, and the result is a story that is theatric, but maintains a firm hold on the interest of the spectator from first to last reel. To the observer who cares to look beneath the surface and deduce a moral lesson from Mr. Vickers' work, one thought, at least, must be impressed upon him; the ease with which the handsome scoundrels who prey upon women accomplish their ends. Another and more significant fact is the bringing home to the heroine the consequences of not telling the man who really won her love the truth about her past life.

Gail Kane, in the character of Beatrice Raymond, the young heiress who is tricked by a mock marriage, is an excellent selection for the part. She indicates the confiding nature of the woman, and makes her course of action consistent throughout. She also meets the demands upon her emotional powers with an adequate response. Arthur Ashley's performance of Ralph Semple is a smooth piece of forceful acting of a gentleman who looks upon the world as his own individual oyster. Montagu Love gives a thoroughly satisfactory impersonation of the likeable Jerry Trainer, and Muriel Oestriche is the light-headed but good-hearted Edith Trainer to the life. Louise M Bates makes a fair Ada Semple. Travers Vale's direction of the picture sustains his well-known reputation for competent work.

"The Mediator"

George Walsh Featured in Five-Reel Visualization of Novel—Produced by William Fox.

Reviewed by Ben H Grimm.

FROM the book of the same name by Roy Norton, the William Fox forces have screened, in five reels, "The Mediator." George Walsh is featured in the picture, whose locale is the "wild and woolly" West of gunplay and primitive passions. In the name part, Mr Walsh is called upon for a portrayal of a character who would go to any length to secure peace—he even fights for it. Although pleasing or the whole, Mr. Walsh does not always rise to the possibilities of his role. Juanita Hansen is seen in support of the hero.

The action of the story is melodramatic in the extreme, and during the running of the five reels plenty of gun-play and fist-fighting takes place. There are quite a number of subtly humorous situations, aided considerably by piquant sub-titles. At times the spectator is more or less bewildered in an effort to follow the story, because continuity is not all that could be asked. This is compensated for in a considerable degree, however, by the exteriors, which, photographed in the Sierra Mountains, lend a convincing background to the action.

Action is slow for the first two reels, these being used to register the character of the man whose personality and physical ability to fight for peace dominate the story proper. This is gotten to when the "Mediator" goes to Peaceful Valley in search of the estranged wife and daughter of a man he has wounded in the cause of peace. Before he gets there he is instrumental in stopping a riot at a mine, thereby earning the enmity of the leader of a lawless gang. Further fights with guns and fists follow, with the "Mediator" always victorious. He helps work a mining claim for the woman and her daughter, and falls in love with the latter. He saves her from the son of the leader of the lawless crowd. The husband of the woman he came in search for quits his wicked ways because of the "Mediator's" philosophy, and reconciliation takes place. The hero marries the girl, and to the wedding oath of "love, honor and obey," asks the preacher to add a peace clause.

Others in the cast than the two mentioned are James Marcus, Lee Willard, Pearl Elmore and Sedley Brown. Directed by Otis Turner.

"The Great Truth"

Plimpton Epic Pictures, Inc., Makes Propaganda Film for National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis.

THE GREAT TRUTH," which is to be exhibited as a holiday film in the interests of the Red Cross Seal and general educational campaigns of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, was made by the Plimpton Epic Pictures, Inc. The production, which is in two parts, teaches with considerable force some important facts concerning the prevention of the dread disease known most commonly as consumption. We learn through this film that hunchback is caused by tuberculosis of the spine; and most important of all that tuberculosis is not inherited, but is communicated only by contact. We are also shown that where tenement rooms are excluded from the sunlight, the most favored one, even though it be for parts, should be used for sleeping purposes, providing there is plenty of fresh air.

The scenario for "The Great Truth" was written by Elise Williamson Prater. The story takes the form of a drama, with a hunchback and his wilful nephew as the chief characters. Its plot pivots about a difference of opinion between the uncle and nephew on the question of the nephew's marrying, the old man contending that as an offshoot of a consumptive family, he has no right to marry and propagate the curse. The discussion of the subject is then carried out to a logical explanation of the real truth.

This production will be exhibited throughout the country in theaters, schools, churches, etc., for propaganda purposes.

"The Sunbeam"

Five-Part Metro Production of Delightfully Wholesome Type Features Mabel Taliaferro.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE Rolfe Photoplays, Inc., are responsible for one of those clean types of picture plays that we are always glad to see on the screen. There are at least thirty children appearing in this picture with Mabel Taliaferro, and a large supporting cast consisting of Raymond McKee, Gerald Griffin, David Thompson, Helen Alexandria, Lillian Shaffner, Al Lee, Mrs. Breyer, Warner Anderson, Louis Wolheim, Eddie Reddway, and Daniel Bertona.

As a basis for the production Sannon Fife's story has been scenarioized by June Mathis. Edwin Carewe as the director of the production has handled the theme delicately, never losing sight of the purity of purpose which it displays.

The story introduces us first into the home of Prue Mason, employee in a candy factory, and known as "The Sunbeam," who lives with her grandmother and a reformed crook, named Danny O'Maddigan, a product of the reformatory. Across the hall from Prue lives a widow woman with her little boy, who has been left to the mercy of the world by a hardened father-in-law. Her inability to pay her rent opens a situation through which Danny is arrested and sent back to prison for stealing a ten dollar bill from his employer for the purpose of carrying out previous plans for the celebration of "Grammy's" seventy-fifth birthday. These plans had been disturbed by Prue's taking upon herself the responsibility of paying half of her friend's rent with the celebration money.

As the story develops little Bobby, the grandson of the candy manufacturer, and son of the woman across the hall, is knocked down by his grandfather's automobile, an incident which marks the opening up of the old man's heart. The child is taken to his home, and cared for. Later his playmates, some thirty in number, along with his mother and Prue are summoned to the rich man's house to play with Bobby, all of which affords room for an abundance of interesting action, not unmingled with comedy.

While the construction of the story might evoke criticism from a professional standpoint, it cannot be denied that it makes an unusually pleasing picture.

Two More "Tweedledum" Comedies.

Fernandez Perez (Tweedledum), has completed two more pictures of the Tweedledum series of comedies at the Jacksonville, Fla., studios of the Eagle Film Company. "Tweedledum in Burlesque" and "The Near-sighted Motorpedist" are the titles of the two most recent films. In the former Tweedledum falls in love with the star of a burlesque organization and follows her fortunes to numerous misfortunes of his own as a general roustabout carried by the company. In the latter he duplicates, though in an entirely different manner, many of the "stunts" which made his "Near-Sighted Cyclist" one of the most talked of European comedies.

"Divorce and the Daughter."

THE theme of "Divorce and the Daughter," the five-reel Pathe Gold Rooster Play featuring Florence La Badie, is handled with excellent effect. A young girl's ideals are shattered by the conduct of her father, who decides to give his wife grounds for divorce in order that he may wed another woman. The entire family narrowly escape moral shipwreck, but his daughter's danger brings the man to his senses. Save for one extraneous incident—the introduction of the betrayed maiden—the material employed in telling the story is well adapted to its purpose. The opening scenes show the beauty of congenial home life, and the dramatic qualities of the remaining reels are thrown upon the screen in strong relief. Florence La Badie is earnest and capable as the heroine, and J. H. Gilmour is equal to all demands as the father. The uniformly competent cast also contains the names of Sam Niblack, Edwin Stanley, Zevaide Williams, Ethelmary Oakland, and Arthur Le Vien. The picture was made by Thanhouser and is well produced.

"The Vanishing Mantle."

The tenth episode of "The Shielding Shadow" has as neat an exhibition of the "Black Art" as ever lead to the burning of a witch during the dark ages. To see a woman at the critical moment of a serious situation wrap a black mantle about her form and then vanish, mantle and all, into the air is to behold a modern miracle. This is one of the thrills in "The Vanishing Mantle"; another is a realistic fire scene.

"The Old Fogy"

Nell Craig is a prominent member of the cast in this three-reel comedy-drama which uses circus life as a background. The old fogy is an aged bookkeeper whose youthful sweetheart runs away in the early days with the ring-master of a circus. She comes into his life again and nearly causes his ruin. The story is fairly interesting, and the circus scenes have been skilfully reproduced.

THE Lasky company will release on November 13 "The Plow Girl," a drama in which Mae Murray is featured. The story has strong situations, the sort that are described as "actor-proof." The picture goes over in spite of the fact that the young woman whose names stands at the top of the list fails to impress the spectator. It goes over and goes over well because of the plot and also of the excellent supporting cast. There are moments that carry a distinct thrill. Those where the young lawyer comes upon the South African farmer horsewhipping the girl that he "owns" because she has fallen exhausted, and the young man, seizing the whip, turns the tables and lashes the big fellow into the handles of the implement and away on the next furrow are some of these. It is a situation that ought to go far to upsetting the poise of any house. Then, too, there are moments, especially near the Theodore Roberts is Varley, the brutal, drunken South African farmer, who after serving the purposes of the girl Margot, took her into his near home. Mr. Roberts gives a powerful portrayal, one that stands out. Elliott Dexter is the young lawyer who is sent to South Africa to look after the estate of Lady Brentwood, portrayed by Edythe Chapman. Mr. Dexter plays his part with marked skill; Miss Chapman, as the lonely grandmother, appeals strongly to the sympathies—from first to last. William Elmer is a realistic Kregler, the lustful bartender. It is a strong characterization.

"The Plow Girl" is a good picture.

"The Years of the Locust."

Fannie Ward shines as always in "The Years of the Locust," the Lasky release of November 16. Like the preceding release of this company for the same week, there is an atmosphere of South Africa, and much attention has been given to the staging of the scenes laid in that far-off country. The script was adapted by Harvey F. Thew, a recent acquisition of the Lasky scenario department, from the tale of Albert Payson Terhune. Mr. Thew gives us an interesting and smoothly told story. There was a cutting-room slip noted in the print shown to the reviewers, but undoubtedly this was corrected before the exhibition copies were shipped.

Miss Ward portrays the role of a woman who marries not only a man she does not love, but fails to marry one for whom she has a reciprocated affection. Roth, the husband, is a swindler. He escapes the hand of the law and is reported drowned. Lorraine marries Mead and with him goes to South Africa. There she is found by the husband, who after blackmailing her is killed when he attempts highway robbery of the husband conveying a big diamond to Kimberley. That's the shell of the story, but in its working out there is much of serious drama. Miss Ward's interpretation is marked by a fine perception of the possibilities of the situations both gray and of lighter hue.

Walter Long is Roth, the well-dressed husband whose innate brutality comes to the surface with undeviating regularity. Jack Dean is Mead, the second husband. Charles Ogle is Mead's mine manager. This short cast is a good one.

Fifteenth "Fairfax" Episode

IN THE fifteenth episode of the International Film Service's "Beatrice Fairfax" newspaper series, titled "Wrist Watches," Jimmie Barton, the reporter, and Beatrice Fairfax not only unite two lovers, but unearth and bring to justice a band of smugglers. The story of this episode is more straight narrative than drama. There is little mystery or doubt as to the outcome, but there is interest nevertheless. Harry Fox and Grace Darling are again seen in the leading parts. They are supported in this two-reel number by Nigel Barrie and Evelyn Fariss.

A U. S. Revenue Service man is at Smith's Harbor sleuthing for smugglers. He becomes enamoured of the niece of a fisherman. Although at first unsuspicious, he is given reason to believe that all is not right with the girl's uncle. He follows him down a well and finds a smugglers' cave. He is overpowered by the gang and bound. A letter to Beatrice Fairfax from the niece brings Jimmie and Beatrice on the job—Jimmie in the guise of a peddler. "War Brides"

Eight-Reel Screen Version of Marion Craig Wentworth's Play Contains Many Tense Moments and a Powerful Climax—Herbert Brenon and Nazimova Leading Factors in the Success of the Picture.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

JUDGED solely by its greatest dramatic moments, "War Brides," the eight-reel screen version of Marion Craig Wentworth's one act play, reaches a tragic height never before attained by a moving picture. Marred by an opening that is both incongruous and commonplace and hampered by slow development during the first four reels, it then starts to gather force and, although the final situation is retarded unnecessarily and is open to further criticism, the climax which marks the end of the drama is probably the most powerful ever seen on the screen. After a plethora of endings where the lovers entwine their arms about each other and roll up their eyes to slow music, it is a positive relief to be given a finish that has all the electric effectiveness of a flash of lightning. Such moments are rare upon the spoken stage; they are rarer still upon the screen.

Scene from "War Brides" (Selznick).

"War Brides" is a tragedy. In strength of theme it may be classed with the greatest dramas of all times. In certain portions of the screen play the possibilities of the theme have been fully realized. Its story sounds the deepest depths of human suffering, and the acting of Nazimova and the supporting company brings out to the full the intensity of every poignant emotion that is felt by the devoted women whose hearts are torn by the relentless hand of war. In arranging the story for the screen, Herbert Brenon has taken the play, with its one act and simple cottage interior, and elaborated plot and setting so that the action embraces a battle scene and the equally absorbing moments which mark the preparation and the aftermath connected with the harvest of death. Throughout the eight reels, there are evidences of the care and skill of the director, every device that money and experience could employ has been used in making the picture, beautiful photographic effects are of frequent occurance, but its most potent appeal is the bitter cry of suffering womanhood that rings through it and strikes on the heart of the spectator. The screen, though it have no tongue—to paraphrase the line from Hamlet—speaks with most miraculous organ!

Many of the reading and thinking public of this country are familiar with the theme of the picture. The spoken play was first published in a leading magazine and, later, Nazimova used it as a starring vehicle in vaudeville. Its scenes are laid in a hypothetical country, and its characters have the idealism and mysticism of the Russian peasant whose mind has been awakened. Realism and symbolism go hand in hand through the play, and only a very strong story could triumph over so many repeats of scene. The Joan of Nazimova, in her fierce resentment of the war brides decree and her out-spoken determination that she and her sex in general shall rear no more children to become food for cannon, belongs to the band of social firebrands that have been exiled, imprisoned or executed in the cause of Nihilism. For a brief space, it resolves itself into an unmistakable piece of Woman's Suffrage propaganda.

Objection has been raised to the almost revolting realism of the episode where Joan pictures to herself her fear that the women of her family will become the victims of an assault at the hands of the invaders. Director Brenon has spared but few of the details, and is vindicated on truthful, if not on artistic grounds. The actions and facial contortions of the soldiers are those of fiends, not human beings, but, the scene does not actually take place—except in the over-wrought imagination of the fear-tortured Joan. Under such conditions it is not a distortion of fact at least. To return to the climax and the stricture that it is retarded and is open to further criticism; from the moment that Joan first sights the automobile of the king until she has gathered her hordes of followers, returned to the cottage for her revolver and stopped the car of the ruler upon the highway, the lapse of time is so long that the royal motor car would have been miles beyond the horizon before her plans were half completed. This prolonging of the situation almost results in an anticlimax, but when the king and Joan do meet, the impact strikes fire. From then on until the woman makes good her threat not to bear her child unless the king promises there shall be no more war, and her lifeless form, selfslain, is held aloft before the eyes of the horrified monarch by the arms of the frenzied women who have sworn to resort to the same desperate means, the movement sweeps the beholder along with overwhelming force. A striking contrast of emotions is invoked during a scene in a church crowded with wounded and dying soldiers, while a number of recruits hurry gayly up the main aisle with the laughing girls who are to become war brides.

To Nazimova and her associates belongs the credit of a fine artistic achievement in the acting of the play—a masterly control of the emotions and their expression by means of the silent drama. The Russian actress' one flaw is in giving too freely of her inward fire. A woman of her intellectual and histrionic breadth need but sit in judgment upon her own work to correct the faults incidental to a first attempt. She will study the impersonation that Gertrude Berkeley gives of the mother—an example of screen acting that for beauty, truth and quiet force has never been excelled—and the way for her to tread will be made clear. Nila Mac is an appealing bit of womanhood as Amelia, of fine moral texture and grateful to the eye. Charles Hutchinson, Charles Bryant, William Bailey and Richard S. Barthelmess as the four brothers of Amelia, who are killed in battle, justify their mother's pride in them. Alex. K. Shannon, Robert Whitworth, Ned Burton, Theodore Warfield and Charles Chailles are the remaining members of the carefully balanced cast.

Her acting in "Children of the Feud" is so good that it seems a pity to lose sight of the results of her exquisite characterization for the sake of worn-out melodrama. Interest centers entirely upon the mountain girl's self-abnegating appreciation that she is not fit to mate with the cultivated man in the valley, irrespective of whether any shooting [illegible] Default [illegible] should [illegible] worn threadbare. It contributes neither to suspense nor does it arouse human sympathy.

By most delicate means, showing that her long training has done her good, Mistress Dorothy evolves a dainty and delightful characterization. Her feminine submissiveness, her dependence, her childishness, her falterings, all are portrayed with keen intelligence on her part and that of her director. If it is largely in the direction, she is certainly responsive to the right sort of handling and could be far more effective in a modern play. The other roles are all well taken. The men are admirable and the settings carefully chosen. The play's whole fault lies in itself. Oh for a story that has some of the sweetness and courtesy of old Virginia life, of the Virginia girl, one of the most charming and intelligent in the whole world! Instead of that we are given whiskey stills and feuds.

"The Main Spring"

Ben Wilson Featured in Universal Offering Adapted from Story by Charles Agnew McLean.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THIS five-reel subject tells an entertaining story of the street and gives Ben Wilson opportunity to play a double role of interest. The strongest scenes in the production are found in the fourth and fifth reels. The storm at sea and struggle abroad the motor launch are very realistic. The later events, on the stock exchange, while similar to many others, are exciting and well handled.

The last two reels bring the story up to a strong finish and atone in considerable measure for the slow, mechanical start. The observer has a feel that in the opening reels a certain amount of the story interest has been lost in adaptation. But little effort has been made to infuse any dramatic action into the production for fully three reels, despite the plot complexities and opportunities offered.

The cast is a large one and generally pleasing. Mr. Wilson appears as Ashmore, a young newspaper man, who is mistaken for the son of a dying financial magnate. Larry, the real son, is kidnapped and Ashmore agrees upon request to impersonate him and thus save the Craven fortune. This he succeeds in doing as the story progresses. The girl in the case is portrayed agreeably by Francelia Billington, and others in the cast are Wilbur Higby, Edward Brady, Marc Robbins and Thomas Jefferson.

"A Pair of Bluebirds"

Patriotism the Theme of "The Eagle's Wings" and "The Bugler of Algiers," Two Five-Reel Photoplays Ready for Early Release.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel

"THE EAGLE'S WINGS" is not on the regular Bluebird program. This five-reel photoplay is the work of Rufus Steele, who wrote the story and supervised the production. It is called a patriotic appeal for industrial preparedness, and the claim is made for it that it shows the first authentic pictures of munition factories in operation. Its preparedness appeal is made with force and clearness, and it strongly emphasizes the fact that it takes the labor of five industrial workers to keep one soldier in the field. The interior views of the different government factories, showing the manufacture of cannon, shells and cartridges, are full of interest. Although the main purpose of "The Eagle's Wings" is to arouse the feelings of patriotism and the story it tells is only a means to an end, there is a fairly successful attempt to carry a love interest through it and to follow the lines of a well-balanced screen drama. The Villa raid on Columbus, N. M., is made a part of the action and the exciting scenes of that now famous night attack are vividly reproduced. Congress also is the scene of a number of the leading incidents in the picture.

Taken as a whole, "The Eagle's Wings," although not so ambitious an effort as some of the former "preparedness" dramas, accomplishes its mission with credit to itself, and will receive a substantial amount of popular endorsement. Rodney Ronous, Herbert Rawlinson, Charles Hill Mailes, Grace Carlyle and Viola Smith are the principals in a satisfactory cast.

"The Bugler of Algiers."

A tale in the All Story Magazine, by Robert H. Davis and Perley Poore Sheehan, was the inspiration for "The Bugler of Algiers,' the five-reel Bluebird photoplay, featuring Ella Hall, Rupert Julian and Kingsley Benedict. The picture is a gem. It tells the history of two French soldiers, the brother and sweetheart of Gabrielle Picard, who is separated from them by the fortunes of war, and the lovers do not meet again for many years. Gabrielle's brother, who performed a brave deed when a young soldier, is lying dead, and his comrade goes in Anatole's place to receive the old bugler's decoration. The story is thoroughly French in spirit and breathes the French love of country and devotion to duty. The director has succeeded in preserving this spirit with commendable fidelity and excellent artistic result. There are scenes of battle upon the sand of Africa, that have the requisite amount of thrill; other scenes of life in a French village, that have the proper atmosphere, and still others, authentic scenes of official life in Paris, before the Great War. Rupert Julian, who had the production in charge, exhibits an accurate knowledge of his subject and a fine scene of its dramatic possibilities. The picture is full of healthy sentiment and holds the interest in spite of the simplicity and narrative form of the plot. The acting of the three principals leaves nothing to be desired, and the rest of the cast make an equally favorable impression.

"An Enemy to the King"

Vitagraph Produces Six-Reel Screen Version of an E. H. Southern Stage Success, With the Celebrated Actor in His Original Role of Ernanton De Launay.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel

IN CONNECTION with "An Enemy to the King," the six-reel Blue Ribbon Feature picture which the Vitagraph-V-L-S-E, Inc. has made from the romantic drama written by Robert H. Stephens and produced by E. H. Sothern some twenty years ago, it is pertinent to observe that a good motif, like a good deed, will bear repeating "in a naughty world." The plot of the Stephens drama hangs upon the action of a young woman who conceives that the hero of the story is her bitter enemy, and consents to lure him into the hands of his real enemies and ends by falling in love with the gentleman. Excellent material for a drama and used to great advantage sixty years ago by the English playwright, Tom Taylor, in a piece called "Plot and Passion," and also utilized by the French dramatist, Victorien Sardou, in "Fedora," one of the earliest of his works written for Sarah Bernhardt. With such a brilliant ancestory at its back, it is a pleasant duty to record that "An Enemy to the King' is worthy its lineage. Laid in the romantic, if somewhat hazardous, period when Henry III was seated on the throne of France and Henry of Navarre was championing the cause of the Hugenots, there are intrigues and counter intrigues, the pursuit of human beings by men with instincts and the compassion of bloodhounds, an aged prisoner chained to the wall of a dark dungeon, the sweep of plumed hats before highborn damsels, processions of horsemen, the wide interiors of ancient castles, the rush-strewn floors of wayside inns, and, at the finish, the flash of swords and the skilful play of thrust and parry, with the villain done for and the lovers in each other's arms.

In adapting this wealth of material to the screen, the form and color of the time have been carefully and truthfully retained. There is much fine achievement all through the production, but the action is set at too slow a pace. The need of quick movement is felt at frequent intervals, and a decided acceleration of its tempo would greatly improve the picture.

E. H. Sothern as the hero Ernanton de Launay, experiences no difficulty in repeating the unqualified success he made in former days. He wears his helmet and sword with the ease and grace of long practice, and endows the gallant young French noble with a fine chivalry and an engaging display of manly vigor and depth of feeling. Edith Storey is the heroine, Julie De Varion. It can hardly be called a congenial role for her. There is a want of vivacity and its accompaning facial expression, and too great a limitation of moods. Neither does she appear to advantage in what is known technically as a costume part. Miss Storey has an enviable record of screen triumphs to her credit, but her Julie De Varion will not be added to the list. John Robertson, Frederick Lewis and Brinsley Shaw are a trio of well-schooled actors, that gave life and verity to their several impersonations. Roland Buckstone is

"The Fight for Paradise Valley" and "The House of Three Deuces," Installments of the Serials.

"The Fight for Paradise Valley."

THERE is as much story crammed into the two reels of "The Fight for Paradise Valley," sixteenth episode of Kalem's "The Girl From 'Frisco" series as there is to be found in many pictures of much longer length. And interest is kept up throughout by fast action and exciting occurrences.

Scene from "The Fight for Paradise Valley" (Kalem).

This number is a "Western" of the type that should please almost any motion picture audience. In the film are found several good scenes of irrigation projects, and photography and backgrounds are better than in many preceding episodes.

Marin Sais is again seen as Barbara Brent. This time Barbara undertakes to superintend the building of an irrigation system in Paradise Valley for her father. Many obstacles are met with, among them being the mysterious man who causes many accidents to happen. After the spectator learns the identity of this man—learns that he is the tool of the Water Trust—several good rifle fighting scenes are shown. A run on the bank operated by Barbara's father is also well staged. With Miss Sais are seen True Boardman, Frank Jonasson, Ronald Bradbury, Edward Clisbee and Hart Hoxie.

"The House of Three Deuces."

Robert Welles Ritchie, author of the stories for Kalem's "Grant, Police Reporter," series, has taken a section of New York police history as a nucleus for his scenario of "The House of Three Deuces," with successful result. Although the story is founded on the famous "barrel murder" of some years ago, the author has woven into his plot a stunt which is thrillingly performed by George Larkin, as the reporter. Mr. Larkin, having trailed the murderer to his lair, battles with him on an unstable fire escape. The landing of the fire escape breaks, leaving the reporter swinging in the air, suspended on a rung of the fire escape ladder. This is a daring and dangerous feat, and shows up well on the screen.

The reel holds interest through its story and the stunt of Mr. Larkin. Director Robert Ellis plays a strong part. Ollie Kirkby is also seen in support of Mr. Larkin. Others in the cast are Arthur Albertson and William McKey.

"Jealousy"

Valeska Suratt in a Five-Reel Melodrama Produced by William Fox.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

THERE is no question concerning the commercial value of "Jealousy," the five-reel melodrama produced by William Fox, with Valeska Suratt as the star. Numerous bodies of spectators will give it a hearty welcome and delight in the vigorous method of its portrayal. The story is consistently commonplace, but put together with a keen eye for the "punch" at the finish. It follows the career of a young woman who marries for money and then proceeds to make life somewhat difficult for the man she claim to really loove, and also for his wife. Her jealousy is of the unreasoning kind that puts her beyond all human sympathy, but ample justice is handed the lady when her energetic husband drags her down the stairs and bundles her, neck and crop, out of the front door.

For the admirers of this grade of drama, Valeska Suratt's acting of the leading character will be appreciated most in the strong scenes. The actress does not spare herself physically; neither does she withhold any of the denotements of the evil passion which brings about the downfall of Anne Baxter. Even her dressing of the part is made to enhance this quality.

Walter Law, Charlie Mayfield, Curtis Benton, Joseph Granby and George McAdams do their work well. The scenario was written and directed by Will Davis.

"Miss George Washington"

Marguerite Clark Is Featured in a Most Amusing Comedy Produced by the Famous Players.

Reviewed by George Blaisdell.

IN its release of November 20, "Miss George Washington," the Famous Players company has a delightfully polite comedy, one that should cause in any house a steady ripple of mirth. Marguerite Clark sustains the name role, and she carries it with a girlishness and an abandon that mark the production as one out of the usual. In school girl roles Miss Clark is at her best, and so she is here.

Berenice Summers, pupil at a young woman's academy, gets a medal because the Truth Society is convinced she is a remarkable exemplar of what a veracious girl should be. Berenice is also given the title of "Miss George Washington." She wears the honors with her tongue in her cheek and a wink in her expressive eye. One fabrication, one fib, leads to another, and then to an interminable train of successors. Complications multiply, and there is a comic twist to them all. For the portrayal of light screen comedy Miss Clark has had no medium which provides so fine an opportunity for the bringing out of her art in its charm, its ingenuousness.

Playing opposite Miss Clark is Niles Welch, a youngster who puts over a performance that would do credit to one of more years. He plays the part to the life. In the strong supporting cast are Frank Losee and Herbert Prior as diplomats; Florence Marten, in the role of the friend of Miss George Washington; and "Billy" Watson as Miss Perkins, a prim head of the girls' school.

Scene from "Miss George Washington" (Famous Players).

The picture is finely staged and directed by J. Searle Dawley. It is an unusually attractive release; it ought to smash to smithereens the worst case of blues.

Scenic Photographer Goes to Orient.

C. J. Hubbell, one of the foremost scenic photographers in the country, sailed from San Francisco last week on an extended tour of the Orient, where he will make moving pictures for the Hearst International News Pictorial.

Mr. Hubbell will visit Honolulu, Japan and China. In all of these countries, he will penetrate the interior, securing pictures of places that have never before been shown on the screen. Pictures will be made of Pali Mountain in Honolulu, of the wonderful chrysanthemum gardens of Japan, the celebrated Fijiyama Mountain, Picture Island, declared to be one of the most beautiful spots on earth, and scenes of the copper mines, the mausoleums and temples of former rulers of Japan and the Sacred Bridge of Tokio. There will be pictures from Korea and Manchuria, as well as from the mysterious cities of the interior of China, many of which have never before been visited by a white man.

The negatives will be forwarded by Mr. Hubbell as fast as they are taken and will soon be shown in the Hearst International News Pictorial.

"The Wager"

An Obviously Good Attraction With Emily Stevens in the Leading Role.

Reviewed by W. Stephen Bush.

THIS feature contains in great abundance the one thing exhibitors prize most—entertainment. Such film plays it would be foolish to put under the microscope of dramatic criticism; we forgive what

The direction of the feature is excellent throughout and the acting equally so. Emily Stevens was fitted to her task to the last detail and she put all her unquestioned talent into the performance. The situation offered considerable possibilities for humorous sidelights and these were utilized to the limit both in the action and in the titles. Indeed, the titles call for special praise. There is nothing that appeals more forcibly to the average audience than "adventure," and adventure is the keynote of the play. Unstinted praise is due to the settings, both interior and exterior. It is evident that much good taste and unusual technical knowledge played a gratifying part in the creation of the atmosphere of the often widely differing milieu.

Paramount Gets Klever Komedies

Victor Moore Is the Star and the First Release Will Be December 4.

CONTRACTS were completed during the past week by which Paramount Pictures Corporation will release exclusively, in connection with their other "little features," the productions of Klever Pictures, Inc., known as "Klever Komedies," in which Victor Moore, the well-known comedian, will be the star. These comedies will be released bi-weekly, alternating with the single reel, Black Diamond comedies, which have been distributed by Paramount during the past two months.

Victor Moore, who has had a particularly enviable career, both on the stage and the screen, has been keenly interested in single reel comedies for the past two years. When he obtained his release a few months ago from the Lasky Feature Play Company, in whose productions he had appeared for Paramount, he immediately set out to organize a company to produce single reel comedies, and his affiliations were naturally with those concerns who were than negotiating to release through Paramount.

There are few comedians who have held sway on the boards and on the screen as long as Mr. Moore. His first appearance on the screen was in "Snobs," and later as "Chimmie Fadden" and "Chimmie Fadden Out West." The first release, "The Best Man," will be given to the public on December 4, and will be followed every two weeks by a new subject. Mr. Moore has surrounded himself with an excellent cast of legitimate comedy players and will be assisted in the direction of these comedies by Harry Jackson.

"One-Round O'Brien" Litigation Settled.

The litigation which tied up the famous "One Round O'Brien" shortly after its release has been finally settled, and through the co-operation of Charles H. Van Loan, arthor and owner of "The Supreme Bumper's Decree," Street & Smith, the publishers, and the Popular Magazine, in which publication Van Loan's story appeared, the Biograph Company have again secured the rights to release this funny comedy.

The comedy idea in this subject is the funniest ever produced in film. It treats with a supposed "champion" in a western mining town who meets all comers and offers to pay a reward to anyone who stays one round with him. To enable him to dispose of all his challenges in the stipulated length of time, he places his accomplice behind the scene in the theater with instructions to use a mallet on his opponent whenever he backs him to curtain. Then the fun begins. To describe the comedy beyond that point would simply mean a continuous series of laughs.

It has not been definitely decided how this subject will be released—full particulars will be announced later.

Cub Comedies Improved

Mr. Horsley Says That the New Series Is Better Than Any Yet Made.

FEATURE one-reel comedies is the term David Horsley applies to a new series of Cub Comedies, presenting George Ovey, which he will distribute through the Mutual exchanges every Friday, beginning with "Jerry's Double-Header," which is to be released November 24.

"Cub Comedies of the past have been highly popular because of their high standard of merit. But in the new series exhibitors will have them even better than heretofore," said Mr. Horsley. "We have devoted more time and money to produce a one-reel Cub Comedy than is often expended in making a picture of much greater length. I am satisfied that exhibitors will be interested in this announcement and that the venture will be profitable to all conerned."

The Cub Comedy company has been working all summer at Mr. Horsley's studio in Los Angeles, and now has a number of pictures ready for release. Due to the fact that the company was so far ahead in releases there was no occasion to rush a picture through to meet a release date and the result is highly favorable to the company's product.

George Ovey is the featured player in all of the releases to be made in this series, the direction of which is in charge of Milton H. Fahrney.

Seven Reels from Gaumont Week of Nov. 26.

From the Gaumont Laboratories and Studios motion picture theaters will receive, through Mutual, the week of Nov. 26, seven reels, the second episode of "The Vampires" and four single reels. The week's instalment of the photo-novel is entitled "The Red Notebook," released Nov. 30, it deals with the efforts of the reporter-hero to decipher the secret code in which the Vampires have set down in the red notebook some of the secrets of the band.

"Reel Life," the Mutual Magazine in Film, released Nov. 26, will contain four interesting sections. "Gathering Cacoa" in Brazil is the first. From the cacao bean cocoa is made. One of the seasons fashionable dances, "Taps," is demonstrated next by G. Hepburn Wilson, supreme master of the dancing organization known as the Inner Circle. The third section describes the life and haunts of the scallop, the delicious sea food that is so little known away from the Atlantic coast. The fourth section is a series of charts showing the various kinds of accidents in 100,000 accidents reported to insurance companies.

"Tours Around the World," No. 4, released Nov. 28, will be devoted entirely to "A Trip Through the Swiss Alps via the St. Gothard Tunnel." The pictures are so remarkable and the photography so effective that it was decided not to divide the reel with any other subject.

Upon the Gaumont split-reel are the two highly entertaining subjects. "See America First," No. 64, takes spectator to Mount Hood, the highest peak in Oregon. It is a wonderful adventure among the glaciers and snow fields of the most-visited snow-capped mountain in America. In place of the customary Gaumont Kartoon Komic which ordinarily divides the reel with the scenic Kartoonist, Harry Palmer this time offers a Shadowgraph novelty entitled "Haystack Horace, or a Knight of the Road." It is a humorous silhouette offering.

"The Stolen Triumph" on Metro Program.

For the first time in many months Julius Steger is to be seen again on the screen. Announcement has just been made by Metro that "The Stolen Triumph," with Mr. Steger as star, will be released as a Metro-Rolfe feature on Dec. 11. Mr. Steger's last screen appearance was in "The Blindness of Love."

"The Stolen Triumph" is a play that is filled with powerful dramatic situations. The scenario was written by Mr. Steger and that master of motion picture craft, Maxwell Karger, general manager of the Rolfe and Columbia studios. David Thompson directed the play.

This new Metro-Rolfe production deals with a struggling young playwright who is robbed of his masterpiece. Mr. Steger, as Edwin Rowley, the playwright, has a part well fitted to his talents.

"Yellow Menace" Bookings Increased.

Since taking charge of the New York Exchange, distributing "The Yellow Menace," Messrs. Merrill & Harwell have increased the bookings on this popular serial over thirty per cent. in the past two weeks. Careful count of the theaters showing serials in the metropolitan district shows that "The Yellow Menace" is running second. At the present rate of increase, the new managers of the Unity Exchange hope to catch up with their leading rival within a very short time.

Beginning next week, the Unity Service Corporation will offer to exhibitors other features, the first of which will be "The Lottery Man." This popular comedy-drama has not been released in this territory up to this time and bids fair to prove a popular release. Its vogue as a Broadway attraction is sure to bring to the screen version a large number of old friends.

WHEN CUPID SLIPPED (Selig), Nov. 11. Victoria Forde wrote, produced and plays the lead in this one-reel comedy. There is an amount of rural comedy to be found in the film. Action is quite fast. The story is of the trials of Hiram and Lizzie, who, eloping, are mistaken for a pair of lunatics. They are placed in jail and Lizzie's father mistakes the lunatics for the eloping couple. Others than Miss Forde in the cast are Pat Chrisman and Sid Jordan.

NEAR TO EARTH (Biograph), Nov. 13.—A one-reel reissue produced a few years ago by David W. Griffith. The reel ranks with the best one-reelers of today. The simplicity of the story—an Italian romance—is given added charm by excellent photography and some quite beautiful locations. In the cast are Gertrude Bambrick, Walter Miller, Robert Harron and Lionel Barrymore.

THE SELIG-TRIBUNE, NO. 91, 1916 (Selig), Nov. 13.—Extension of William Penn Highway opened, Easton, Pa.; "Vic" Grove operates boat with aeroplane motor, Macon, Mo.; Sir Ernest Shackelton reaches New Orleans; Pennsylvania National Guard artillerymen in artillery drill, El Paso; Capitol Building washed, Washington; Field Day at Wellesley brings out many girl athletes; fashions in furs; Republican torchlight parade, New York; U. S. Department of Agriculture opens annual chrysanthemum show.

THE NEW SALESMEN (Kalem), Nov. 14.—Ham, Bud, Ethel Teare and Henry Murdoch show up to fairly good comedy advantage in this number of the Ham comedies. Ham and Bud get jobs as salesman in a department store where Henry is the detective. Of course, they both fall for Ethel, a shoplifter, and the detectives goes on their trail.

CANIMATED NOOZ PICTORIAL, NO. 19 (Essanay), Nov. 15.—A split-reel offering embracing cartoon burlesque on news events and a scenic. The "News" section is devoted to an earthquake in Turkey, wives of policemen training for their husbands' jobs and other features. The five-hundred-foot scenic shows Lake Tahoe, California, a most beautiful spot.

HIS WEDDING PROMISE (Vim), Nov. 15.—Quite an amount of subtle humor is found in this number of the Vim Feature Comedies, featuring Harry Myers and Rosemary Theby. At no time will the spectator laugh out loud, but all through the running of the reel he will chuckle, especially if he, like Mr. Love, promised his wife that he would not smoke. That promise made Mr. Love leads almost to a domestic rupture in the Love household, but in the end Friend Husband's cigarette is lit by wife.

PIPE DREAMS (Vim), Nov. 16.—Kate Price and Babe Hardy keep things moving in this comedy reel. Kate is seen as a cook who has social ambitions, and Babe is seen as the driver of a garbage cart who would like to step high too. They meet when dressed in their best and each tries to make the other believe that they are the real goods. A moderately good comedy number. Also in the cast are Edna Reynolds and Joe Cohan.

THE ROGUE'S PAWN (Kalem), Nov. 17.—An episode of the "Grant, Police Reporter" series, in which George Larkin performs two unusually daring feats. He swings from a broken telephone wire into the window of a burning building and later jumps from the fourth floor of the building into a life net. Other thrills occur, also. Ollie Kirkby and Director Robert Ellis are also in the cast. Reviewed in the issue of November 25, page 1183.

POKES AND JABBS (Vim), Nov. 17. A knockout comedy reel with Pokes and Jabbs (Robert Burns and Walter Stull) rivals for the favors of an actress. Jabbs manages to get the actress to dine with him. Pokes disguises as the waiter, and things start going rapidly when the actress's husband appears. The reel closes with a whirlwind fight.

THE RUNAWAY SLEEPER (Kalem), Nov. 18.—Helen Gibson's stunt in this number of the "Hazards of Helen" series is a flying leap from a [illegible] capable, too, when she catches a rope flung from the locomotive to the car. With the aid of the rope the car, the brakes of which are out [illegible] stopped after having been set loose by two tramps. With Helen Gibson [illegible] broke.

RIVAL FAKERS (Kalem), Nov. 21.—Ham, Bud, Ethel Teare and [illegible] humorous comedy. There is plenty of action and a number of laughs. Ham and Bud are seen as bell hops in a hotel where rival demonstrators stop. The difference in size of Ham and Bud is responsible for several funny scenes when the rival demonstrators show the crowd their powers of their respective syrups.

THE QUESTION MARK (Knickerbocker Star Feature), Nov. 10.—A rather old idea with several new twists has been used in the making of this three-reel drama. The film runs along at an even rate of interest, and has its moments of suspense. The story concerns a girl whose identity is not known. She falls in love with a rich youth who, at first, appears to be her own brother. It turns out, however, that the two are not brother and sister, and everything ends happily. Dorothy Davenport is featured. Supporting her are Fred Whitman, C. U. Baker, Gladys Wilder, Maud Wycherly and William Reed.

THE TEMPTATION OF ADAM (Selig), Nov. 13.—So much plot material has been crowded into this three-reel drama that its strength is somewhat weakened thereby, because at times it confuses. On the whole, however, it is an acceptable short-length offering, well played by a cast headed by Kathlyn Williams. The story tells how a man was tempted to, and did, steal through the extravagance of his wife, and of how a confession was finally wormed from him. Several highly dramatic situations occur during the action. Supporting Miss Williams are Guy Oliver, Eugenie Besserer, Charles West, Vivian Reed, Al Filson and Frank Clark.

NOT IN THE NEWS (Essanay), Nov. 14.—A two-reel drama of ordinary strength. Marguerite Clayton shows up to good advantage, as does also Sydney Ainsworth. The film tells the story of two brothers, convicts, one of whom decides to go straight. He marries a society girl and her husband's brother makes her pay for his silence as to her husband's past. When the bad brother breaks into the house he is discovered by the elder brother and shot. The police are told that the intruder was a burglar.

LORD CHUMLEY (Biograph), Nov. 15.—Henry Walthall is the leading player in this three-reel picturization of the play of the some name in which E. H. Sothern made such a success. The story has been screened with only fair results, and is rather slow in spots. The cast does efficient work, however. On the screen are seen Lillian Gish, Charles H. Mailes, Mary Alden and Walter Miller.

THE MYSTERY OF THE BRASS BOUND CHEST (Kalem), Nov. 15.—This, the fifteenth, episode of "The Girl from 'Frisco" series, "compels interest throughout its two reels by a well-sustained element of mystery," according to a review printed in the issue of November 25, page 1182. Marin Sais, True Boardman and the other members who have appeared in preceding episodes, are seen. The story is of a secret order of Armenians and of their disbandment by the girl and her companions.

AN ENEMY TO THE KING (Vitagraph), Nov. 27.—A six-reel screen version of one of E. H. Metro Pictures Corporation.

THE GATES OF EDEN (Columbia), Oct. 3.—A rather gloomy subject in which Viola Dana is featured. The work of the star is something that should be well commended. Interest in this film will be lessened by the morbid atmosphere sustained throughout. A more extended review appears in a previous issue.

THE SUNBEAM (Rolfe), Nov. 27.—Five-part production, featuring Mabel Taliaferro. This picture is unusually wholesome in type, and of more than the average interest. In it more than thirty children appear as visitors of little Bobby Rutherford when he is a convalescent patient in the home of his rich grandfather. Mabel Taliaferro playing the role of Pru Mason, "The Sunbeam," does pleasing work. A full review of the production will be found elsewhere.

FREE SPEECH (Metro-Drew Comedy), November.—This Drew comedy is immense. Its fun is created by the efforts of a wife to break her husband of swearing. Every time he swears he promises to put money in his wife's moneybox. The scheme works beautifully and reaches a grand climax with the arrival of the wife's mother. The manner in which the tables are turned by the husband brings a big laughing climax. Also—it is played by the Drews. Epes Winthrop Sargent wrote the scenario.

Mutual Film Corporation

MUTUAL WEEKLY, NO. 98 (Mutual), Nov. 15.—Interesting items of this issue are scenes with the French at Combles, showing the effects of the terrific bombardment, the Capitol getting its annual bath, demonstration of the new automatic mail tying machine, the first book printed on the western hemisphere, and the dedication of the Penn highway.

REEL LIFE, NO. 29 (Gaumont), Nov. 19.—A number of diversified interest, showing how zinc is prepared for the market, catching fish in large nets, tea raising in South Carolina and how gowns are draped to the figure in fashion shops.

MUTUAL TOURS AROUND THE WORLD, NO. 3 (Gaumont), Nov. 21.—This number contains views of Cairo, Egypt, showing the citadel, a mosque, public fountain and natives on the streets. Interesting views are also shown along the region of the Maritime Alps and in Belgium before the war.

Mutual Film Corporation Specials.

THE BAD SAMARITAN (Fclair), Nov. 18.—A moderately entertaining two-part western drama featuring Edna Payne and Norbert Myles. The story is, morally speaking, a good one, and shows how a weak-willed man on his way home to his wife and child with three hundred dollars in his pocket, gambles it all away. A cowboy sees the man about to commit suicide and saves the situation by getting a friend of his to obtain a position on a ranch with three hundred dollars down on his salary. This is straightway given to the unfortunate man, who goes on his way rejoicing. Other developments also enter into the interest of the picture.

WITH OR WITHOUT (Victor), Nov. 19.—A two-part comedy that can not be recommended. The moral trend of this comedy is altogether unwholesome and vulgar. It burlesques an unhappy relation between husband and wife, showing an absolute disregard on the part of both for the marriage relation. In short, the subject is handled coarsely.

UP THE FLUE (Victor), Nov. 26.—This is a two-part [illegible] farce comedy of a harmless and fairly entertaining type. It concerns the [illegible] money from an oil magnate by threatening letters, get in a mix-up with the lover of the oil man's daughter. A tall chimney is wrecked, and [illegible] plot.

WHEN THE [illegible]

by Karl L. Coolidge, featuring Fred Church, Lillian Hamilton, Malcolm Blevins and others. This is a story of two generations, Fred Church playing both father and son. The youth grows up and is sent to purchase oil lands in the place where his father formerly lived. His mother, who had run away with another, recognizes the boy, after her present husband tries to rob him. The construction is not strong and the subject as a whole is ordinary in type.

Paramount Pictures Corporation

THE PLOW GIRL (Lasky), Nov. 13.—This is a strong picture, as is pointed out in a review in another column. While the work of Mae Murray does not stand out, that of her supporting cast does. Among the principals are Theodore Roberts, in remarkable characterization and make-up; Elliott Dexter, Edythe Chapman and William Elmer.

THE YEARS OF THE LOCUST (Lasky), Nov. 16.—Fannie Ward finely plays a strongly dramatic role in this story, a part of which is laid in a South African atmosphere. She is well supported by Walter Long, Jack Dean and Charles Ogle. The subject is reviewed in another column.

MISS GEORGE WASHINGTON (Famous Players), Nov. 20.—An unusual and a delightful comedy featuring Margarete Clark, supported by Niles Welch, Frank Losee, Herbert Prior and Florence Marten. It is reviewed in another column.

Pathe Exchange, Inc., Specials

ARMS AND THE WOMAN (Pathe), Nov. 26.—A five-reel Gold Rooster drama, directed by George Fitzmaurice, the leading role in "Arms and the Woman" is played by Mary Nash. Play, cast and production are all of a high order of merit. The picture is given a longer review on another page of this issue.

Signal Film Corporation

THE BURNED RECORD (Signal), Nov. 21.—No. 5 of "The Lass of the Lumberlands." Helen Holmes and company in this number present a small town election of rather timely interest. The result is very close and it is necessary to call in the militia to prevent a general war. The returns from one of the logging camps are declared false, but the number closes with Blake, the dishonest candidate, claiming the election. There is a fire scene, in which all the records are burned. The number has no particularly big moments, but runs along entertainingly and has good action.

Triangle Film Corporation.

THE CHILDREN PAY (Fine Arts), Nov. 26.—An interesting problem story by Frank E. Woods, with some fine characterization. Lillian Gish in the leading role.

THE DEVIL'S DOUBLE (Kay-Bee), Nov. 26.—A powerful story of mental struggle between wrong impulse and right motive in a primitive character. William S. Hart is the leading role, with strong support from Enid Markey and Robert McKim.

THE CRIMINAL (Ince), Dec. 2.—A rather gloomy and long-drawn-out story of an ignorant Italian girl of strong maternal instincts, in which there is neither compensation nor relief.

Unity Sales Corporation

THE YELLOW MENACE, NO. 13, Nov. 27.—"The Spy and the Submarine" is the name of this episode which concerns Ali Singh's entry into the submarine disguised in European clothing. Smithson, after being attacked by Ali Singh's confederates, smashes the air-lock and escapes, leaving the others to their fate. Ali Singh causes his companion to shoot him to safety through a torpedo tube.

Universal Film Mfg. Company

ANIMATED WEEKLY, NO. 45 (Universal), Nov. 8.—Athletic events, parade of Episcopal bishops, troops returning from the border, Canadians starting for Europe, and many other scenes are included in this interesting number.

THE WHITE TURKEY (Nestor), Nov. 27.—A good holiday number, featuring Priscilla Dean, Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran. The girl's white turkey becomes lost and the rival lovers pretend to find it, each offering a laughable substitute. The decorative effects and rural scenes are attractive.

THE MOTHER CALL (Big U), Nov. 30.—A holiday number, by Lynn Reynolds, featuring May Talbot, George Pearce, Chas. Cummings and Dorothy Davenport. This is a simple story of the heart interest type, in which a mother prepares a turkey dinner for her children, who [illegible] little offering.

Universal Film Mfg. Co. Specials

THE MAIN SPRING (Red Feather), Nov. 27.—This five-reel num- [illegible] slow, mechanical start, but pulls up strongly in the fourth and fifth in order to save the fortune of the Craven family. Francelia Billington plays the girl. The cast also includes Wilbur Higby, Edward Brady, Marc Robbins and Thomas Jefferson. The number leaves a pleasing impression in spite of its slow start.

COURT MARTIALED (Special Universal), Nov. 27.—No 16 of the "Liberty" series. This installment pictures the fortune of Liberty and Pedro at the hands of the bandits. Later the girl finds herself in a room filled with skeletons and snakes. These scenes are all realistic in the extreme, but entirely in keeping with the story. Judicious cutting will render them passable and effective. Major Winston is found on the desert by Capt. Rutledge and his men. A strong number.

SHOULD SHE HAVE TOLD (Gold Seal), Nov. 28.—A three-reel number, by John McDermott, featuring George Beranger, Ruth Clifford and Edward Hearn. This is the tale of two brothers, one of whom marries a pretty girl and introduces her to the members of the rough gang of which he is a member. The girl's efforts to save her husband from a criminal life are dramatically shown, the scenes being capably handled. The later part of the story continues the interest well, the girl marrying the good brother after the first one is sent up. This is much stronger than the average offering dealing with underworld types. The action is good.

THE LAST OF THE MORGANS (Laemmle), Nov. 29.—A two-reel story of the old South, by Constance Crawley and Arthur Maude. Wm. V. Mong and Harry M. Holden play the leading roles. The story concerns an old veteran who returns to his former home, long after the war. No one is there but his old slave. The place is sold under the hammer, and restored to the old veteran when the negro turns up some buried jewels. This is rather entertaining in its way, though not at all dramatic. It makes an average offering of the old-fashioned type.

THE MANSARD MYSTERY (Imp), Dec. 1.—A pleasing two-reel number, by Sylvester Jones, featuring Howard Crampton, Francis MacDonald, Neva Gerber and Wadsworth Harris. Colonel Mansard succumbs to poison at the dinner table, in the presence of his son, his ward, a visiting count and the butler. Suspicion points various ways and is finally directed toward the proper individual. The solution is plausible and the number, as a whole, makes a good offering of the type.

THE GREATER POWER (Bison), Dec. 2.—A two-reel western number, by Willis Y. Robards. This centers about a gang of cattle rustlers, a newly elected sheriff and rivalry between his deputies over a girl. The treatment is rather conventional and there is considerable overacting, particularly where gun play is featured. The latter part of the story is the strongest and the sheriff's efforts to redeem a man makes a good motive. The number is about of average strength.

World Pictures.

THE MEN SHE MARRIED (Peerless), Nov. 27.—Gale King is the star of this five-reel Peerless production, which follows the difficult path of a young heiress who is tricked into a mock marriage. The action leads up to a big situation. The picture is well acted. A longer review is printed on another page of this issue.

SELIG'S GENERAL FILM RELEASES.

For the first two weeks in December, the Selig Polyscope Company announces a series of very unusual pictureplay features. William N. Selig following out his policy of providing good pulling subjects in shorter length productions announces "The Brand of Cain" for release in General Film Company's regular service on Monday, December 4. This feature play is presented by the world-famous "Ne'er-Do-Well" cast, including Kathlyn Williams, Wheeler Oakman, Harry Lonsdale, Sidney Smith and Frank Clark. Many of the scenes at sea were filmed enroute to the Panama Canal Zone.

In connection with "The Brand of Cain," the Selig Company is to issue, without extra cost to exhibitors, a beautiful one-sheet poster of Miss Kathlyn Williams the star in the Selig production. This poster is of heavy plate paper, and Miss William's head was sketched from life by a famous artist. The poster is in five colors.

On Monday, December 11, the Selig three-reel feature, "Twisted Trails," will be released in regular service of the General Film Company. An all-star cast will be presented including dashing Tom Mix, Bessie Eyton, Eugenie Besserer, Al W. Filson, Will Machin and others. Tom Mix presents a thrilling feat. Astride a horse he dashes over a narrow footlog that spans a deep chasm. A misstep by the horse and the rider would have plunged hundreds of feet onto the rocks far below.

"The Purchase Price" is a Selig one-reel drama released Saturday, December 9, and "The Road to Fame" is a stirring pictureplay released Saturday, December 16.

"JEALOUSY" RELEASED NOVEMBER 20.

William Fox released "Jealousy," starring Valeska Suratt, on November 20. This is Miss Suratt's third Fox production. The supporting cast includes Walter Law, Charline Mayfield (Lincoln's grandniece), Curtis Benton, Joseph Granby and George M. Adams.

Will S. Davis wrote the story and directed the picture, his eighth for William Fox. Mr. Davis is a Philadelphian, who began playing juveniles at sixteen with a stock company, and soon graduated into stage directorships for the Frohmans, Klaw and Erlanger, George M. Cohan and other well-known producers.

Five Big Plays for Screen

Famous Players-Lasky Corporation Acquires Right to Notable Stage Successes.

A MOST important acquisition of material for the motion picture screen was made recently when the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation purchased the rights to five big stage successes, written by such well-known authors as Augustus Thomas, A. E. W. Mason, Gene Stratton Porter, Frederic Arnold Kummer, Harvey O'Higgins and Harriet Ford.

The list includes "Freckles," which was adopted for the stage by Neil Twomey from the tremendously successful book of the same name by Gene Stratton Porter; "The Dummy" will be remembered by thousands as one of the great Broadway successes of two seasons ago, when it created a positive sensation. It is the joint work of Harvey O'Higgins and Harriet Ford, two of the most successful collaborators among contemporary playwrights; A. E. W. Mason's play, "The Witness for the Defense," in which Ethel Barrymore starred at the Empire theater in New York, in 1911, is another to be added to the list. The action of the play transpires in India and in England, an effect which is much more obtained with realism in the motion picture than it can be done on the stage; "Mrs. Leffingwell's Boots," by Augustus Thomas, is the fourth play to be added to the list. It was a distinct success when first produced in 1905 and has been presented most successfully on many occasions since that time; Frederick Arnold Kummer, author of many successful photoplays, is the writer of "The Painted Woman," which was produced at the Playhouse in 1913. The action of the play transpires in semi-tropical settings, a fact which again places the camera at an advantage over the stage as the production will be actually filmed in the South.

JANE GREY IN "WHEN MY SHIP COMES IN."

Because of the marked success she made in the International's Golden Eagle Feature, "The Flower of Faith," Jane Grey has been engaged by the International to appear in "When My Ship Comes In," which will be released as a Golden Eagle Feature.

The latest of the Golden Eagle Features is from the novel of the same name by Gouverneur Morris, which achieved such prominence when it appeared as a serial recently in Hearst's Magazine.

The photoplay is being made by the A. H. Jacobs Photoplays, Inc., Mr. Jacobs having also made "The Flower of Faith."

In "When My Ship Comes In," Miss Grey will assume the character of Silver Sands, which has much in common with that of Ruth Judson, the lovable and faithful heroine so successfully impersonated by Miss Grey in "The Flower of Faith."

The International has selected an all-star cast to support Miss Grey in this charming story of Gouverneur Morris. Among the number are William J. Kelly, the popular leading man who is known from the Atlantic to the Pacific as the creator of a large number of roles; Nigel Barrie, long prominent as a legitimate actor and for his work on the screen particularly in several of the recent episodes of the International's photoplay series, "Beatrice Fairfax"; Eleanor Blevins, a talented young California legitimate and screen actress who has a large series of successes to her credit on the Pacific Coast; Walter P. Richardson, Edith Campbell Walker, Ruth Chester, Morgan Jones and Robert E. Lee Hill.

WHAT PIONEER FEATURE FILM IS DOING.

The Pioneer Feature Film Corporation, 126 West 46th street, New York City, has acquired the Greater New York and northern New Jersey rights to "The Human Orchid," featuring the fascinating and popular screen artists, Walter Miller and Irva Ross. It is a five part drama of unexcelled quality and sustaining interest, portraying throughout the feverish desires and follies of modern life. "The Human Orchid" is now ready for release and booking dates are being contracted for.

The third E. Gorman feature, entitled "The Little Mother," is nearing its completion and will be released in December under the "Pioneer" banner. Nathan Hirsh, president of the Pioneer Feature Film Corporation, is elated by the excellence atttained in this picture by the popular juvenile star. It is a powerful, dramatic story which strikes the keynote of intense emotion and provides baby Gorman with a vehicle suitable for the advantageous display of her precocious histrionic talent. In view of the great favor enjoyed by the preceding Gorman pictures bookings for "The Little Mother" will be eagerly sought by exhibitors. The picture is in five reels.

Mr. Hirsh, who recently acquired the rights to Thomas Ince's magnificent photoplay, "Civilization," for Greater New York, has just extended his rights to the entire state.

TRIANGLE DECEMBER 9TH RELEASES.

Bessie Barriscale, Mae Marsh and Robert Harron are the stars of the Triangle feature releases for the week of December 9. Bessie Barriscale appears in a Kay-Bee production of life among the remote districts of the Southern mountains entitled, "Bawbs o' Blue Ridge," written for her by Monte M. Katterjohn, and directed by Charles Miller. Mae Marsh and Robert Harron are co-starred in a Fine-Arts play named "The Wharf Rat," written by Anita Loos and directed by Chester Withey.

Manufacturers' Advance Notes

"THE VANISHING MANTLE" (Pathe).

Ravengar, whose mystic powers have enabled Leontine to escape Bianca's bondage, is turned over to her men realizing that she can do nothing further to save his life. But again he vanishes before the very eyes of his chagrined and amazed captors.

Meanwhile, Leontine, who has miraculously escaped from Bianca's scathing house by means of an under water slimeway, hastens to the police where her wet and bedraggled appearance coupled with her apparently wild story make the officers skeptical as to her sanity. Her husband, Sebastian, is phoned to, who quickly sizing up the situation, replies with a crafty lie that she is mentally unbalanced and to hold her until he arrives. He then phones to Bianca to dress as a nurse and with her men hasten to the spot and claim Leontine as her escaped patient.

Again she is made a prisoner, and Ravengar who has rushed to her assistance is also made a captive. To save her he gives up his closely guarded mystic treasure- "The Vanishing Mantle." With a sudden movement as though throwing a mantle over Leontine's head she disappears into thin air. A vanishing mantle! How is it possible?

ALICE BRADY AS RUSSIAN DANCER.

In Alice Brady's next picture for the World Film Corporation she will appear as a Russian dancer. The mother of this character was also a dancer in the royal ballet at St. Petersburg, and had a love affair with a grand duke, which created a scandal of such magnitude that by order of the Czar the woman was banished from his dominion.

The woman's little daughter therefore had royal blood in her veins, but this was kept secret and she grew up to be a great exponent of the art of Terpsichore, and the rage of Paris and other cities of Continental Europe.

But the Russian government had kept a watchful eye upon the beautiful girl through whose lithe figure coursed the life-blood of its reigning family, and one night she was kidnapped and spirited away, plunging into a series of adventures of the most startling and novel nature.

Some of the events occur behind the scenes where great ballets are being rehearsed and produced, and in order to insure complete realism, director general William A. Brady has engaged Alexis Kosloff to direct these episodes and also appear in them. This will not be a matter of any considerable difficulty to Mr. Kosloff, inasmuch as he will have for his working staff the entire troupe of real Russian dancers with which he has long been identified.

This is one of the most important special engagements ever made in the motion picture business for the purpose of perfecting a small number of incidents. Engaging a great Russian ballet for a single performance in a theater or opera house is regarded as a rather costly matter, but Mr. Brady's pursuit of realistic effects for World pictures is not to be halted by figures.

McCLURE WILL FEATURE CLIFFORD BRUCE IN "PASSION."

"The Sin of Passion," in the film drama of that name, sixth play of the McClure series, "Seven Deadly Sins," will be Clifford Bruce, selected for the role because of his extraordinary masculine qualities and splendid physique. Mr. Bruce plays the role of Leonidas, "the perfect physical specimen," champion swimmer, champion wrestler, and champion in the art of attracting young girls.

The story of "Passion" has to do with the fascination the giant Leonidas exercises over a beautiful and refined young girl, and with her endeavors to free herself from an influence which her better self tells her will result in degradation. In Leonidas, Clifford Bruce has undoubtedly one of the most dramatic parts in his notable career as a stage and film star.

There are several tremendous scenes in the drama. The setting of one of the episodes is in Madison Square Garden, where Leonidas appears as "The Masked Marvel," and before the eyes of the captivated girl (played by Shirley Mason) wins the wrestling championship of the world. Another scene shows the club-house and grounds of a noted athletic club, the members of which belong to the millionaire class. Leonidas craftily uses his association with these gay young bloods to strengthen his hold on the little girl, who is too willing to believe that her connection with him will lead to social success.

In the end, Leonidas meets his Waterloo, and there comes a pathetic scene in which the modern Samson stands revealed to the young girl as a pigmy of moral purpose. Fortunately George Le Guere comes in the role of her true knight to show her the noble side of love, and the play ends with Passion defeated, Chivalry and Virtue triumphant.

"IGNORANCE" (Private).

"Ignorance," a morality picture in six reels written by Anthony P. Kelly, has just been completed under the direction of J. A. Fitzgerald for The Private Feature Film Mfg. Co., of Cleveland.

Earl Metcalfe, former Lubin star and director, plays the leading role, that of a fearless and upright District Attorney. Strong in the supporting cast of "Ignorance" are Eleanor Scene from "Ignorance" (Private).

Black as the girl who becomes the victim because of her ignorance of the social evil, Ethel Tully as the society girl, and Arthur W. Mathews is the leader of the underworld. Mr. Fitzgerald also plays the role of "Red, the Peddler," described by the author as "the meanest and lowest thing on God's green earth."

Without incorporating any offensive or indecent scenes in "Ignorance," the author has written an absorbing and thrilling plot around the need of insistent watchfulness in the home of every young girl.

"THE SIGN OF THE POPPY" (Bluebird).

Hobart Henley will be introduced to the Bluebird program Dec. 4, in J. Grubb Alexander's mystery play, "The Sign of the Poppy." At the same time Gertrude Selby, his leading lady, will be seen for the first time as a Bluebirder. Harry Maquire was the photographer, and Charles Swickard directed the production.

Henley will play in this feature a dual role, each character being of such importance that the actor is on the screen practically all the time, impersonating one of twin brothers who dominate the plot. Mina Cunard, Wilber Higby, Robert Clark and Garland Briden will be in Mr. Henley's support.

Some of the locations disclose sections of San Francisco's Chinatown. There are many sensational episodes that deepen the "mystery" element of the story and the interest is sustained in several counter threads that intensify the love element and make the "happy ending" all the more satisfactory when it is attained.

"FARMER AL FALFA'S BLIND PIG" (Paramount).

Paul Terry has contributed another exceedingly funny animated cartoon which the public will undoubtedly stamp with its enthusiastic approval, for "Farmer Al Falfa's Blind Pig," a Paramount-Bray Cartoon which will be released by Paramount Pictures Corporation on December 7, is one of the most screemingly funny cartoon comedies that has ever been conceived.

Having heard so much of the white ribbon wave which is sweeping o'er the country, the old bewhiskered farmer quits the soil and turns his attention to the disreputable enterprise of making "redeye." He locates his distillery in a little cave far on the back of a ridge on a rocky range, hidden from both the inclement weather and the eyes of the law. His little dog Fido is his only accomplice and together they thrive. Fido keeps watch while the old man works, and also delivers the liquor to their various customers who lie in wait along the rugged passes.

Upon one of these trips Fido is discovered by "Eagleyed Pete," the revenue officer, and let it be known that "Eagleyed Pete" is one tough bird, who shoots to kill. The Federal officer commands the dog to halt, and just as he is about to examine the contents of Fido's load, the dog spots his star and with one big yelp is off in a cloud of dust. The Federal officer follows and soon trails Fido to his master's dive. Al Falfa, seeing them coming, grabs his gun and the battle is on—but leave it to Al to get out of a tight place!

"INCORRIGIBLE CAPTIVE" (Pathe).

The ninth episode of Pathe's Wonder Serial, "The Shielding Shadow," is entitled "The Incorrigible Captive." It is announced for release on November 26 and deals with the appearances and disappearances of Ravengar, the mysterious.

Leontine is imprisoned by Sebastian in Bianca's gambling house. Again the mysterious Ravenger laughs at his shackles —comes to her aid and shows her the secret stairs to an underground sluiceway.

Bianca discovers her trying to escape and when Leontine is half-way out, turns on the electric switch controlling the sluicegates, and Leontine is caught in a watery trap.

The Shielding Shadow protects her. The switch is clicked back by an unseen hand and from the dungeon below she shoots through the sluiceway to the river and swims to safety.

Exhibitors throughout the country report great success with "The Shielding Shadow." It is being booked by a number of the best theaters. Two high-class houses in Detroit that have heretofore never run serials, have contracted for "The Shielding Shadow." These theaters are the Liberty and the Knickerbocker.

FOLLOWING THE FLAG" (Selig).

"Following the Flag" is a Selig three-reel Diamond Special, released Monday, November 27th, in General Film Company's regular service.

The country was patriotically stirred when President Wilson ordered Uncle Sam's land forces to the Mexican border. These forces included not only the regular army, but the National guardsmen of the various states.

When Pershing and his column crossed the border and penetrated into Mexico in search of Villa, there was not a man, woman or child in this country who was not proud of the courage displayed by this indomitable little force, which entered the desert plains of Mexico after a blood-thirsty bandit.

"Following the Flag" is a motion picture lesson in the cause of preparedness, and is worthy of presentation in any theater in America. The film shows the soldiers arriving on the Mexican border, the training of guardsmen to become seasoned veterans, hikes and other maneuvers, mountain batteries, machinegun batteries and heavy artillery in action; cavalry maneuvers, and the negro survivors of the 10th Regiment, which was almost annihilated by the Mexicans, is shown turned over to United States forces on the International bridge at El Paso. Beautiful photography and many scenes along the border not heretofore presented, make "following the Flag" a very entertaining production.

"PATRIA" TO BE PRIVATELY SHOWN.

"Patria," the great preparedness serial of the International, in which Mrs. Vernon Castle is the star, is practically ready for the public. Two showings of the first three episodes of "Patria" will be held next week. The first will be in the grand ballroom of the Ritz-Carlton Hotel on Monday evening, November 20. This is being arranged for the members of the literary, art and dramatic professions of the city, the members of the army and navy, aeronautic and similar defense organizations, for the personal friends of Mrs. Castle, and for the press.

The showing at the Ritz will be the most pretentious ever given a motion picture. An augmented orchestra under the direction of Professor Armand Vecsey, of the Ritz-Carlton, will furnish the music which has been especially written and arranged by Professor Vecsey.

Many notables in public and private life, government and city officials, and others particularly interested in national defense, the theme upon which "Patria" is based, will attend. Mrs. Castle, the star, will be present in person as will also Milton Sills, her leading man, and Warner Oland, who has one of the principal roles.

The second showing will be held on Tuesday morning, November 21, at 9:30 o'clock, in the Strand theater, and will be primarily for exhibitors and the press.

THIRD VAMPIRE EPISODE, "THE GHOST" (Gaumont.)

With the appearance December 7 of the third episode of "The Vampires," a startling chapter called "The Ghost" in this remarkable Gaumont photo-novel, a character who dominates the story for four episodes makes his appearances. This is Enrique Moreno, skilfully played by the French matinee idol, Jacques Hermann. Mr. Hermann has the role of a thief who attempts to operate in opposition to the organized Crime Trust of the arch criminals of Paris known as The Vampires. The daring ingenuity he displays is a tribute not o ly to his own ability as an actor but also to the directing genius of the photo-novel, Louis Feuillade, who both wrote and directed the production.

"The Ghost" tells of the appearance of Enrique Moreno in a flat next that used by the Vampires. A safe in his apartment which has a panel at the back easily removable by the Vampire, discloses to the band that in Moreno they have a rival. The lone bandit begins to be a power in Paris just at a time when the Vampires are planning to rob a bank messenger.

On the Kalem List

Border Troubles Theme of Coming "Frisco" Episode—Thrills in "Grant" and "Hazards" Series.

THE Mexican border troubles furnish a lively background for the action of "Border Wolves," a coming episode of Kalem's "Girl from Frisco" series scheduled for release on the General Film programme on Wednesday, November 29. Director James Horne, a company of nine players and a technical staff of seven were forced to make a trip of over eight hundred miles to the Southern California border to secure the exact locations necessary for this episode. A Mexican rebel army of three hundred plays an important part in the action.

Scene from "The Wizard's Plot" (Kalem).

"Mexican rebels are not at all averse to acting in motion pictures," wrote Director Horne to the Kalem officials in describing his work on "Border Wolves." "But by the time you have greased the officers and met all the demands of the men they cost considerably more than plain every day extras. They also eat up a lot of film, for each of the officers demanded plenty of close-ups when they noticed us bringing Marin Sais and True Boardman up to the camera. They tried to show me that they were real actors, but I won't have the nerve to come down again after they discover that all these close-ups have been 'cut out' of the picture when released."

"Border Wolves" is preceded on the release schedule for "The Girl from Frisco" by the issuance on November 22 of "The Fight for Paradise Valley." The vast irrigation projects of Southern California are the theme of this episode of the Kalem series by Robert Welles Ritchie. Director Horne secured some photographic gems in filming the billion dollar Los Angeles Aqueduct which is made the background of the action of the thrilling story in which Marin Sais and True Boardman wage a bitter battle with the "Water Trust" which attempts to prevent their successful completion of the irrigation project. A run on a desert town's bank and some realistically staged battle scenes are features of the offering.

Ham is on hand in the list of coming Kalem's with two good one-reel comedies, "Dudes for a Day," released on Tuesday, November 28, and "Jailbirds," issued on Tuesday, December 5. In both of these laugh-makers the star is supported by Bud, Ethel Teare and Henry Murdoch. In the former Ham and Bud are engaged by a clothes dealer to parade in evening dress as walking advertisements. When they escape the dealer's watchful eye they become real dudes and have some exciting adventures with a newly-rich bricklayer and his pretty daughter, Ethel [illegible]. Ham and Bud make a pair of laughable, if not capable, jailers, with Murdoch their most bothersome prisoner, and Ethel Teare, the adventuress, who seeks to effect [illegible].

A number of [illegible] to the Kalem programme by the coming "Grant, Police Reporter," and "Hazards of Helen" episode. "The Trial Run" is the "Hazard" scheduled for release first in December, being issued on Saturday, December 2. Helen Gibson contributes a dare-devil feat to this one-reeler by her leap from a speeding automobile to a runaway freight train. In "The Forgotten Train Order," released on the preceding Saturday, Helen overtakes a speeding train on a motorcycle which she runs within inches of the train before leaping to the hand-rail.

"The Wizard's Plot" and "The Trunk Mystery" are two episodes of the "Grant, Police Reporter," series issued on the first two Fridays of November. Daring feats aboard a ship are features of the first-mentioned offering with George Larkin, Ollie Kirkby and Robert Ellis taking the reckless chances. Included in the support in the two episodes are Mary Taylor Ross, William McKey, G. Chira, Arthur Albertson, Harry Gordon and many others.

PALLAS' "RIGHT DIRECTION."

"The Right Direction," in which Vivian Martin sets out to "motor" from New York to California with a baby carriage, has been completed by the Pallas Pictures Company and will be released on the Paramount Program December 21. The supporting cast is an exceptionally strong one, which includes the ever-popular Herbert Standing, Colin Chase, Alfred Hollingsworth and Billy Mason.

SELIG ATHLETIC SERIES POPULAR.

The Selig Athletic Feature film series, released through Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay Service, is being booked in all the large feature theaters in the United States and Canada. It is reported that the Athletic series has proven such a success that arrangements are under way for a similar series. The Selig Athletic feature films are proving of particular interest to combination vaudeville and picture theaters. Among the latest to book this series is the Shaffer Brothers vaudeville theaters, Chicago. These theaters, the Crown, Star and Victoria are among the largest and most popular in Chicago. The first reel of the Athletic series so pleased at these theaters that plans were immediately completed to show each one of the ten of the series for an entire week in each house.

THE BATTLE OF THE SOMME IN PARAMOUNT PICTOGRAPHS.

The first installment of the remarkable war pictures secured by Donald C. Thompson, pictorial war correspondent for Pictographs and Leslie's Weekly, will be presented in an early edition of the Paramount Pictographs. The scenes included in the first reel are of even a more thrilling nature than those which have already been presented in motion pictures, and show more actual fighting which took place in the great spring drive of the Entente Allies, and what will always be known in history as the Battle of the Somme.

These pictures show the miles of violent trench fighting and "curtain of fire" which was sustained for hours at a time, to prepare for infantry attacks, which finally turned the tide of battle, and which may have been the crucial moment in the world war, starting with thousands of siege artillery pieces of large caliber, among them the famous French 120's, painted so as to be invisible to the enemy, belching out death from their concealed emplacements. In the front ranks where trenches are within forty yards of the enemy, the low range fire is supplemented by a timely duel with trench bombs, carrying thousands of pieces of jagged shrapnel, so timed as to burst directly within the enemy's lines.

Every foot of this picture is actual war, such as has never been presented on the screen in America, and is built up in such a manner as to give the whole story of a successful onslaught of a magnificently equipped army of the most modern type. Finally the battle is brought to close range with the actual capture and return of the prisoners.

"THE MISCHIEF MAKER" (Fox).

The spirit of mischief runs rampant through the soul of Effie Marchand, the character whom June Caprice portrays so delightfully in "The Mischief Maker," her newest photoplay of gladsomeness for the William Fox Films. The picture will be released on November 27.

Hary Benham has the role opposite Miss Caprice. Mr. Benham has been in the silent drama for six years, during most of which time the villain of the cast, John Reinhard, has "still pursued him." Benham and Reinhard have been seen together in many photoplays in which the latter always has done the pursuing, but the former always triumphs.

Mr. Reinhard, like Benham, has had a long career in musical comedy. He had leading parts in "About Town," "The Girl Behind the Counter," "Algeria," "Miss Innocence" and "Madame Sherry."

The author of the story for this new Caprice picture is Alfred Solman, who has written more than a score of popular songs, including "If I Had a Thousand Lives to Live," "Mine," "Why Did You Make Me Care," and the old-time favorite, "The Bird on Nellie's Hat."

It is worthy of note that the statue which plays an important role in the photoplay was actually posed for by the persons it is supposed to represent. The head was made from a cast of June Caprice's head, and the body was moulded complete in a cast posed by Margaret Fielding.

"WHERE DO YOU GET THAT STUFF?" (Argosy).

That the public is always willing to accept something new and original was proved a few days ago, when the first public showing of "Where D'ye Get That Stuff?" was tried out on the audience of the Stanley thater. The audience soon caught the atmosphere of the picture, and before the first reel was ended the entire house was giggling and weezing, and finally roaring at this funniest of funny productions.

The success of "Where D'ye Get That Stuff?" lies not so much in the action—which is humorous enough to get it over—but in the extremely funny dialogue, which was written by that joint team of "World renowned manipulators of Webster's dictionary," H. C. Witwar and H. H. Van Loan, and they have given the public a rare treat.

H. J. Shepard, of the Argosy Films, Inc., advises that they intend making "Where D'ye Get That Stuff?" a universal slogan, and a number of prominent newspaper cartoonists have agreed to feature a series of cartoons based upon this title.

"Where D'ye Get That Stuff?" will be the first production to be released through the Argosy Company on the state right basis.

BURLAND THEATER BOOKS "THE LIBERTINE" FOR SEVEN DAYS.

In answer to many inquiries regarding the release of "The Libertine," a photoplay in six reels, recently produced by Julius Steger and Joseph A. Golden, F. E. Backer, president of The Mammoth Film Corporation, through which the picture is being handled in New York, New Jersey and the New England States, has made the announcement that "The Libertine" will be shown at the Burland theater, Bronx, during the seven days beginning November 26.

At a recent showing before experts, this picture was pronounced one of the most remarkable vehicles ever employed by John Mason, and the work of Alma Hanlon and a score of other prominent screen artists brought forth the highest praise. In a word, it is predicted to be a "sensation," as its plot carries a tremendous moral lesson and abounds in situations true to life.

MOSS FILMS THROUGH QUALITY OF PITTSBURGH

The Quality Film Service of Pittsburgh have completed arrangements with the B. S. Moss Motion Picture Corporation, whereby they will become the exclusive distributors of the one-a-month Moss Feature Program in Western Pennsylvania and Western Virginia. H. A. Lande, manager of the Quality, plans to launch this program for his territory by releasing on the first of December "The Power of Evil," an original screen play, written by the famous playwright George Bronson Howard, which has met with great success wherever it has played. This will be followed by "Boots and Saddles," a screen version of Eugene Walter's great play scheduled for release on the 15th of Demember and on the first of the New Year, the Quality will release a Moss feature with Marie Empress as the principal figure.

"THE JOCKEY OF DEATH" TO BE SHOWN NOVEMBER 15.

"The Jockey of Death," the first of the International's Adventure Series, will be released throughout the country on next Wednesday. "The Jockey of Death" is one of the most thrilling and interesting feature photoplays ever presented. It is a story of circus life, but it also tells in a clean, wholesome way a beautiful romance in which a little circus rider, who is in reality a countess, is restored to her ancestral estate, of which she has been deprived by an unscrupulous relative.

The principal roles in "The Jockey of Death," are portrayed by Mlle. Evelyn and M. Arturo, both of whom before their entrance into motion pictures were members of one of the most famous circuses in the world.

GAUMONT COMPANY SPECIALIZING IN SINGLE REELS.

The Gaumont Company is gradually building up a list of single-reel releases that will result in a film library of remarkable excellence. The subjects are both scenic and pictorial narrations of various industries, processes and customs. There is also a due appreciation of the demand for humor on the screen. This is satisfied by the Gaumont Kartoon Komics, animated for the screen by Harry Palmer, and by the Gaumont Shadowgraphs, also devised and directed by Mr. Palmer. The three series of travel, interest and magazine character are "See America First," "Tours Around the World" and "Reel Life." In addition there is the Gaumont screen newspaper, The Mutual Weekly.

"THE FINAL FRAUD" (Essanay).

A love story grows out of a clever plot to frustrate the operations of a coterie of desperadoes in this photoplay. A supposed member of the gang falls in love with the daughter of one of its intended victims. The crooks are arrested in a spectacular raid. It then develops that the younger man instead of being a crook, is in fact a secret service agent who has assumed that disguise to round up the criminals. Bryant Washburn is seen as the pseudo crook and Gertrude Glover as the girl. Ernest Maupain is the chief desperado, and John Cossar the victim. It is a well worked out plot with many tense situations and constructed for a screen time of 48 minutes.

GIANT GUNS AT VERDUN IN HEARST PICTORIAL.

The Hearst International News Pictorial has just received some remarkable motion pictures, which show the fighting at Verdun and on the Somme fronts. One of the most wonderful of these pictures is an armored train, upon which is vividly portrayed the manner in which the giant shells are placed in the big gun. All of the action is revealed from the time the shell starts on its way to the mouth of the gun until the explosion sends it on its mission of death and destruction. This is the first time that these guns have been shown in action.

"MASQUE OF LIFE" IN CHICAGO.

"The Masque of Life" will be played for an indefinite run at the La Salle theater, Chicago, starting on November 20th, according to an announcement by A. B. Jones, of Jones, Linick & Schaeffer, who arrived in New York City early Friday morning, November 10, and completed his contract with J. L. Kempner, who is releasing the film. Mr. Jones' firm is considered the leading buyers of states-rights for the middle west and their theaters in the Loop district of Chicago are greatly sought after.

LESSER ACQUIRES "CIVILIZATION" FOR COAST.

The All Star Picture Distributors, Inc., of San Francisco, of which Sol Lesser is the presiding genius, has shown its astuteness once more. They have acquired state rights for Thos. H. Ince's spectacle, "Civilization," for California, Arizona, New Mexico. The deal was effected last week. Mr. Lesser has returned to the coast to make arrangements for the booking of the picture. There were several bidders for this piece of territory the allotment of which leaves very little left. The transaction was, as usual, supervised by J. Parker Read, Jr., general manager of the Harper Film Corporation.

MORE STOLEN REELS.

A pick-up man known as Peter Tadduce, and nicknamed "Midget No 2," accepted a two-reel episode of the "Scarlet Runner No 7," entitled "The Red Whiskered Man," from our office for delivery to the Marion theater, 2416 South Halsted street, Chicago, and claims that he left his wagon unguarded in the rear of the City Hall Square building, at which time the said episode of the "Scarlet Runner" was stolen from the wagon.

Any exhibitor who has any knowledge as to the whereabouts of this subject will not only confer a favor upon the Vitagraph-V-L-S-E Inc., but will assist in bringing about a better condition as regards the receipt and delivery of films. The Exhibitors' League should take the item up to the extent of bringing about the prosecution of any one guilty of such a misdemeanor.

Trade News of the Week

GATHERED BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS

Mutual's New Exchange in St. John, N. B.

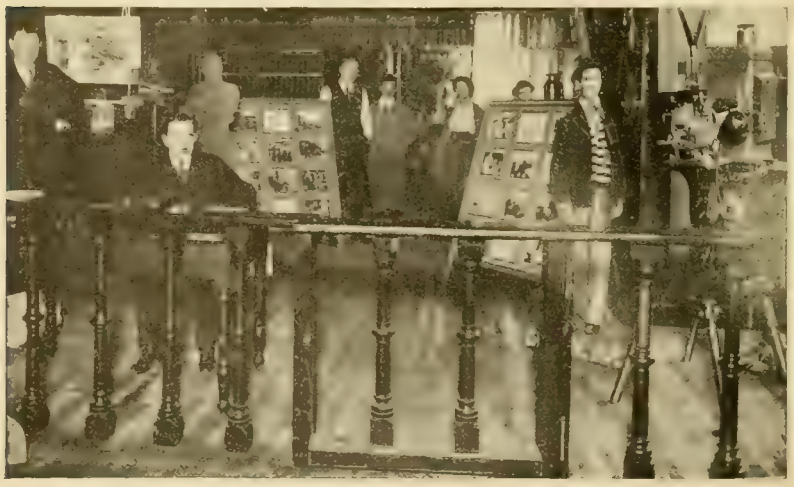
Manager Charles H. Kerr Has Enviable Record as Film Man in the Province—Some Interesting Details of His New Quarters.

By F. L. Sully, 68 Lansdowne Ave., St. John, N. B.

ST. JOHN, N. B.—The newly renovated offices of the Mutual Film Corporation are now said to be the best in the city. A gradual growth of St. John as a moving picture center has resulted in expansion by all the companies doing business here, and not least among these has been the Mutual company, which, from the standpoint of service of its attaches is the oldest in the city. The present quarters of the company on Waterloo street, adjoining the Gem theater, comprise the entire floor space of the second and third stories of a large building. The second floor is devoted to the business offices, and exhibitors' waiting room. In addition to this there is a fireproof cabinet for the housing of all films.

On the third floor the company boasts of the best projection room in St. John. Here a representative of the New Brunswick Board of Censors sits two afternoons a week. The lithographing and shipping departments adjoin.

Charles H. Kerr, the present manager of the office, has been stationed in St. John as a representative of the trade longer than any other moving picture executive. He began his career some nine years ago with L. E. Ouimet, who then controlled the Ouimetescope. E. Auguar was manager and Mr. Kerr assistant manager of the exchange which was operated above the old "Biograph" on Charlotte street. A year or so later Mr. Ouimet sold out to the Kinetograph. Mr. Kerr remained with the company in the same capacity. Following this the Gaumont company assumed control, and moved from the old quarters on Charlotte street to the present location. Mr. Kerr was then assistant manager, and A. R. Macbeth manager. About six years ago Mr. Macbeth resigned, and Mr. Kerr after three years' experience as assistant manager was given entire charge of the exchange. Two years later the Mutual corporation bought out the Gaumont agency, and Mr. Kerr through four changes in management remained at his post and his chosen work. The office force at that time was but three. Now it numbers ten. Business has been more than doubled, and within the past few weeks the working space of the agency has likewise been doubled. With Mr. Kerr, as assistant manager is R. D. McKay, formerly with the Warner Feature Company. During the decade that he has been affiliated with the moving picture industry in this city, Mr. Kerr has seen scores come and go, while he himself has weathered all storms and changes of management. His son, Roy, has charge of the shipping department and is as fond of the business that has given him bread and butter for the past ten years as Mr. Kerr himself. In addition to those who are seen in the picture Miss McGowan, bookkeeper, and Miss Ethel Rae, stenographer, are members of the office staff.



Mutual Film Exchange, St. John, New Brunswick.

As New Year's Gift to New Glasgow.

New Glasgow, N. S.—N. W. Mason, proprietor of the Academy of Music for the past five years is investing $80,000 in a fine new auditorium, to be ready for business soon after New Year's. The new theater, which is not yet named, is located at Provost and Archimedes streets, and will seat about 1,200. Mr. Mason, prominent in theatrical circles for many years has brought such stars as Robert Mantell to Nova Scotian audiences. Exhibitors and moving picture men in general are watching New Glasgow with interest. Warren Smith is also constructing a large theater for moving pictures that is to be opened about the same time as Mr. Mason's. They say competition is likely to be lively.

In Higher Admission on North Shore.

Chatham, N. B.—North Shore exhibitors recently organized in a move to raise the admission price from ten to fifteen cents on evenings that Paramount features are shown. This affects the houses in Chatham, Bathurst and Campbellton, N. B.

Solomon Soffe to Open Theater.

Pictou, N. B.—Solomon Soffe, who is soon to open a new theater here was a recent visitor in St. John, getting acquainted with the exchange men and making purchases for the new house. Mr. Soffe bought a Powers 6B machine from the Mutual agency, and has made arrangements for Mutual service as well as Metro features.

"As good as gold." "As white as snow." "As fine as silk." Why do other papers in this field invariably try to compare with the standard of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD? There's a reason.

Fred H. Trifts to Manager St. George Theater.

St. George, N. B.—T. J. O'Neill has severed his connection with the Broadway theater and turned the management over to Fred H. Trifts of St. John. Mr. O'Neill has resumed his interests in the dry goods business. Mr. Trifts, who controls the Gem in St. John is changing the policy of the house from pictures alone to pictures and three acts of vaudeville, with bookings out of Loew's, Boston.

Fred Coughlan to Take the Gayety.

St. John, N. B.—The Gayety theater, Carleton, which has changed hands several times during the past few years, is now, it is said, about to transfer from the management of William Smith, who also controls the Empress, to Fred Coughlan.

M. J. Franklin to Lease Opera House.

St. John, N. B.—It is understood from good authority that M. J. Franklin, manager of the Strand theater, Halifax, has closed negotiations with R. H. Dockrill, owner of the St. John opera house, for a lease to become effective March 1st. Mr. Franklin, it is said, will renovate the interior of the opera house, install new seats, have new scenery painted, and add several new features to the general equipment of the building.

Baltimore News Letter

[illegible] 1 W. Saratoga [illegible] Mt. Royal Terrace, Baltimore, Md.

S. L. Wonders Leaves the Walbrook.

BALTIMORE, Md.—It has come as quite a surprise that Sol. L. Wonders has severed his position as manager of the Walbrook Theater on North avenue at Rosedale street. Mr. Wonders, it is understood will take a brief rest before accepting another position, and while doing so, will visit relatives in Cleveland. Mr. Wonders is well liked in Baltimore and has had wide experience in the managing of theaters in this and other cities.

Hull Theater Will Enlarge.

Baltimore, Md.—The Hull theater, at 1444 Hull street, will take on a new lease of life in a short time as James Goeller, the owner, intends to build a one-story addition of brick to this house. Mr. Goeller states that he expects to spend about $3,000 on the improvements.

Colonial Shows Films.

Baltimore, Md.—The Colonial theater on Eutaw street, which is now used to present plays with colored artists, also runs three acts of vaudeville and moving pictures as an added attraction for its colored patrons. The General Film is furnishing them with two and three-reel subjects for their programs.

American Ambulance Benefit.

Baltimore, Md.—On Friday night, November 24, the war films entitled "Our American Boys in the European War," showing the Americans now serving in the French trenches, will be shown at Albaugh's theater on North Charles street. The affair is being held under the auspices of some of the most prominent society leaders of Baltimore and is for the benefit of the American Ambulance Corps. Programs and caramels will be sold by pretty misses, and members of Battery A will act as ushers.

Parents' League as Censors.

Baltimore, Md.—The Parents' League of Baltimore now has a censor committee whose duty it is to pass on the theatrical productions and moving pictures that may be recommended as permissible for children to see, which come to this city. Last week the regular Saturday morning special children's matinee at the Parkway theater was mentioned.

N. B. Morgan Honored.

Baltimore, Md.—N. Basil Morgan, a prominent member of the Operators' Union, Local 181, has had a prominent part to play for the past two weeks acting as messenger to the American Federation of Labor Convention, which is now being held in this city. Mr. Morgan worked hard for the convention and deserved the honor bestowed upon him.

Mutual Business Brisk.

Baltimore, Md.—Business seems to be rushing at the Mutual exchange in this city and, according to the statement of O. D. Weems, the manager, they are busy. "The series in which Margarita Fisher and Mary Miles Minter are very popular with the exhibitors," stated Mr. Weems, "and the Great Wizard and Wilson theaters have both booked the first of Miss Fisher's series, 'The Pearl of Paradise.'"

Somerset Theater Dark.

Philadelphia, Pa.—The Somerset theater, which was recently offered at Sheriff's Sale, failed to find a purchaser. It is now closed and will remain in an attorney's hands, apparently for some time.

Week's Philadelphia Happenings

Charlie Chaplin's "Behind the Screen" at the Stanley, Arcadia, Victoria and Locust —Expecting Alice Brady on a Visit—Many Interesting Notes from Local Filmdom and Prominent Picture Men.

[illegible] 1 N. Salford St., West Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—Charlie Chaplin has had something of a vogue here during the last week, even for him, and numerous central and suburban theaters are giving pleasure to their audiences and profit to their managements by showing his latest comedy, "Behind the Screen," which in the parlance of the profession has "gone over big." At the Stanley, which in a sense sets the photoplay fashions of the town, the new Chaplin picture was a decided hit the first three days of the week, shown in conjunction with Fannie Ward's feature, "The Years of the Locust." The Arcadia, which enjoyed a week of enormous financial success, played "Behind the Screen" in conjunction with "The Prince of Graustark" every day. The Victoria in addition to showing Bessie Barriscale in "A Corner in Colleens," showed the comedy the first three days of the week and repeated it to record houses on Saturday.

"Behind the Screen" also was shown at the Locust for two days, at the Germantown for two days, at the Alhambra for three days, and the Fairmount, the Jefferson and several other local houses of equal prominence booked it for early runs with unvarying success. Charlie's big feet find ample place to rest in the city of Brotherly Love.

Alice Brady Coming.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"Bought and Paid For," starring Alice Brady, has been booked at the Belmont theater, 52nd and Market streets, for the week of November 20. Arrangements are now being completed to tender Miss Brady a royal reception upon her visit to this theater when she arrives on Thursday, Nov. 23.

Painful Tragedy in Film Row.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Herbert Effinger, of the Leader, was stalled in his Buick down in film row one day last week and received a surprising number of "helpful" suggestions from various luminaries of the local exchanges, including G. Ames, J. Clark, H. Scott and Wm. Smith. "G. A." thought his shutter was loose, John Metro Clark said his carburetor was out of focus. Messrs. Scott and Smith brazenly inquired why, "even if Herbert was delayed, 'Musty Suffer?'"

"Stick to It," Says Pierce.

Philadelphia, Pa.—J. W. Pierce, formerly assistant manager of the local Mutual exchange, has joined the Pathe forces in the same capacity. His success in film affairs he attributes in great part to the habit of never missing a chance to secure a customer. A case in point is that of Jack Gold, of the Family theater in Harrisburg, who came to Mr. Pierce's office one hot day and sank into a chair. When he attempted to arise he found himself held by some particularly sticky fly paper. Mr. Pierce made a steady customer right there, for while Mr. Gold's nether garments were in the hands of the cleaner, Mr. Pierce's suave conversation convinced him that no one else could so well supply his needs. "Stick To It" is Mr. Pierce's motto whether he admits it or not.

An Interesting Camden Theater.

Camden, N. J.—James F. McClellan, proprietor of the Forest Hill theater, at Haddon and Kaighn avenues, states that he is meeting with good business at 10-cent admissions. He is running three serials, "The Yellow Menace," "The Scarlet Runner" and "The Shielding Shadow," in addition to a special feature releases. About the first of the year Mr. McClellan will install a handsome organ as it is his aim to keep pace with the latest developments. It is interesting to note that he allots fifty per cent. of his gross receipts to purchase pictures, and that large productions form ninety per cent. of his programs. The most remarkable thing in connection with this house is that it is not situated in a thickly populated section, but draws it's public from those who must travel many blocks to reach it. Quality pays in Camden as elsewhere.

John H. Weber Takes Attractive Offer.

Philadelphia, Pa.—John H. Weber accepted a tempting offer last week and sold his Park theater to the owners of the Jefferson. Though the Park was Mr. Weber's first venture in the picture business it proved a good investment. He built the house at a cost of $80,000, and always did a flourishing business. His recent presentations consisted of Paramount, Triangle and other high grade pictures. His patrons were chiefly of residents of the neighborhood in which the house was located, and he took care to see that they received uniformly courteous treatment. He also did not neglect to cater to transient trade. The situation of the house, directly at one of the principal entrances to Fairmount Park made an attractive lobby display effective in drawing casual visitors, and as Mr. Weber also advertised in the daily papers and the trolley cars he left few stones unturned.

During the winter months Mr. Weber states that he will probably take the management of another high class theater to keep in touch with the latest events of filmdom, and in the spring he plans to build another house of his own. An automobile of the favorite "flivver" type will enable him to enjoy a little relaxation in the shape of a motor trip now and then.

Great Northern in Ivory and Old Rose.

Philadelphia, Pa.—The Great Northern theater, at Broad street and Erie avenue, will reopen on Saturday, November 25th, after having undergone extensive alterations and improvements at a cost of between $40,000 and $50,000. The theater was closed all summer, and has undergone a complete change under the supervision of Henon and Boyle, architects, and the J. B. Barbarita Company, of Philadelphia and Pittsburg, decorators. Reproductions of Louis XVI mural designs and furnishings have been adhered to throughout. Ivory, old rose and gold is the color scheme of the auditorium. A well nigh perfect indirect lighting system displays the coloring to advantage. The projection booth is hidden and the necessary openings are well concealed. The exit of the booth is on the outside of the building thus insuring the operators from annoying interruptions, and by isolating the machines and electrical equipment decreasing the danger of fire.

Harry Ertel, an experienced film man, who formerly managed several downtown houses, is the new manager and is at present busy with the details of the construction work.

More Fortunate Than Some.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Albert Brown, of the Overbrook theater, is diligently engaged in collecting election bets. Mr. Brown, it may be inferred, is a Wilson man.

Boosting Children's Matinees

Washington, D. C. Film Men Putting Shoulder to the Wheel with Women's Clubs to Give Shows Especially Adapted to Children—What the Women's Clubs Are Trying to Accomplish.

Clarence L. Linz, 622 Riggs Building, Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Another of the conferences between the exchange managers and the Motion Picture Committee of the Federation of Women's Clubs looking to "cleaner pictures" for children, was held at the Hotel Ebbitt last week. As a result of the campaign of the Federation ten of the city's theaters have signified their willingness to give matinees for the benefit of the children each Friday afternoon for the period of one month, for which there is no charge for admission. On their part the exchange managers have agreed to furnish the films necessary for these matinees.

This meeting was the most interesting of any had thus far. Superintendent of Schools Thurston advanced a plan for determining by votes in the schools what the children want. J. H. Butner, president of the recently-formed Managers' Association, declared he was behind the movement so long as it does not attempt censorship or disparagement of theaters where the special matinees are not given. Dr. William B. Herbst, of the Circle theater, was among the first of the exhibitors to signify his approval of the plan by offering the use of his theater for the four matinees. W. A. Marceron, of the Dumbarton theater, and R. H. Campbell, of the Olympic theater, have also promised to do all possible to aid in this cause. The Motion Picture Operators' Union has offered the free services of men to operate the projection machines at the special matinees. The theaters where these matinees are to be given are the Circle, Dumbarton, Empire, Home, Carolina, Lyric, Meader's, Olympic, Victoria and the Howard theater for colored children.

What Clubs Want to Do.

The movement is being backed by Mrs. John Jacob Locher, chairman of the Women's Committee. In speaking of the plan Mrs. Locher says that "the films are to be selected not so much along educational lines, although where that class of film will be attractive to a juvenile audience, it will be shown, together with clean comedy and wholesome stories. Entertaining and amusing programs are to be the feature, however, in an effort to win the children from the questionable and pernicious subjects they have in many instances acquired a taste for.

"The men interested in the motion picture industry claim that 'motion pictures are made, and always will be made, to meet the demand of the public.' If this be true, then it is time the right-thinking majority of our public demonstrate conclusively to the producers that we do want, and will have, clean pictures.

"When we realize that we are injuring the little ones of this generation by allowing pictures of crime and the lower world in all its phases to be thrown on the screen for their eyes to see, and their minds to interpret as best they may," contiuued Mrs. Locher, "no futher appeal should be necessary to arouse every American citizen to the true importance of the question.

"On the other hand, if we are to 'co-operate,' as the resolution adopted by the general federation stated, we must not forget that the motion picture industry is one of the biggest commercial enterprises in the country today; that millions of dollars are invested in it, and that we are indebted to the men, the pioneers of the business, who have risked fortunes in the development of one of the greatest discoveries of the age; that through their efforts such excellence has been reached in the production of films that we are now able to use the motion picture in every branch of education and we are bigger and broader as a nation in our knowledge of the world through the agency of the screen; that they have placed within the reach of every one an amusement which can be made the greatest asset of our land in educating and making good, loyal American citizens.

Demonstrating Value of Good Film.

"But we must demonstrate practically to the men of this great commercial enterprise that we will do as we would be done by. The public who want clean films must take the place of the public that will only go where they are fed on sensationalism, in which crime, the life of the underworld and the triangular situation are featured.

"We must constitute ourselves a board of recommendation. This means the public; every good picture we see we would tell our neighbor to see; it will only be a short time before the managers will begin to feel the influence of this movement, and when they understand that the public want clean, wholesome pictures that is the only kind that will be shown. It is a fair readjustment of existing conditions.

"In order to bring about this change we must have the co-operation of the public; not their good will, but their active support; not for a month, but for a year. By that time our films will be as clean and well selected as the books on the shelves in our public library."

Taxes for Vaults Under Sidewalks

Washington, D. C., Exchanges and Theaters Get Blanks Which Must Be Filled Out and Sent to Police Captains of Precinct.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Exchange managers and exhibitors of Washington have had distributed among them by the office of the Assessor of the District blank forms to be filled out by them giving information upon which can be based taxes on vaults under the sidewalks. In the District Appropriation Bill for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1914, which became a law on September 1 last, is a provision authorizing and directing the District Commissioners to assess and collect rent from all users of space occupied under sidewalks and streets in the District of Columbia, when such space is occupied or used in connection with the business of such users.

To carry out the provisions of this law, each user of space as above described is directed to fill out a schedule which is to be returned to the police captain of the precinct in which the vault is located. The captains of the precincts are then to forward the returns to the assessor through the police department.

The schedule, which must be filled out under oath, requires the insertion of the name of the user of the vault space, address, number of square and lot, information as to whether the space is under the street, alley or sidewalk; number of square feet of vault space, and any other information the writer can furnish. The printed oath to be signed by a notary public reads that the person giving this information "being duly swirn, deposes and says that the statements given above are true to the best of his knowledge and belief, and that he has had an actual measurement made of the dimensions of said vault space and that the number of square feet in said vault space given above is based on actual measurement."

At the time this measure was pending in Congress there was a great deal of adverse comment, the men connected with the motion picture industry, and all other interests, felt this to be an imposition in view of the fact that the vaults under the sidewalks, used for the storage of merchandise, coal, and other commodities and materials and as a receptacle for heavy machinery, was as much a part of the building as the cellar itself, and that a tax was already paid on it because of the value of the building being enhanced by the additional space. Congress, on its part, overruled the objection and the provision for the tax stood as originally proposed.

Manager Spurrier's System of Handling Paper

Out-of-Town Exhibitors Can Now Order for Several Shows in Advance and Save on the Carriage—Lightens Labor All Around.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Manager Frank B. Spurrier, of the local Vitagraph exchange, has recently installed a novel system for the handling of paper which seems to be proving quite popular with the exhibitors in the territory as well as with the employees of the exchange, and his office has had the co-operation of the exhibitors because of the way the business has been facilitated.

The out-of-town exhibitor especially likes this new manner of handling paper, inasmuch as he can order posters for as many shows in advance of exhibition as he may desire, and have the advertising matter come in one shipment. In this way he saves on expressage, which heretofore has been quite an item with the theaters. It must be understood that the exhibitor fills out the order for paper himself. The blank is complete in itself, outlining every piece of paper that may be wanted by the exhibitor and information regarding it.

For the exchange, this means the elimination of advance billing, which heretofore has been quite expensive in the use of bill heads, envelopes, postage and clerical labor. The exhibitor in sending in his order to the office attaches his check, and this in itself lightens the work of the bookkeeper and means the elimination of small balances on the books for paper, which invariably causes correspondence.

In ordering for several shows in advance, as the exhibitor usually does, the loss of paper in transit is reduced to a minimum since the packages are more bulky than when but one show is moved at the one time. In this way the shipping clerk of the exchange is given an advantage, for he can ship paper for the several shows all at the one time, whereas under the old system each show's advertising meant a separate shipment. When there is a shortage of paper and the shipping clerk is unable to completely fill the order he notifies the bookkeeping department, which in its turn issues a credit memorandum to cover the shortage and the money so involved can be applied by the exhibitor on adver-

E. R. Haas Assisting S. B. Lust.

Washington, D. C.—E. R. Haas who [illegible] with the World Film Company [illegible] Little Theatre, this city, has been appointed assistant to S. B. Lust, who has charge of the World Film exchange in this city. Mr. Haas will assist Mr. Lust in the handling of the Essanay, Selznick productions. In addition to looking after the work in the office, Mr. Haas will travel through the territory in the interest of these films. Miss E. M. Gaffney formerly secretary of the Hy Art Motion Plays Company, and at one time connected with the General Film, has also entered the employ of Mr. Lust for work in connection with the Selznick films.

Changes at Local Metro.

Washington, D. C.—Quite a number of changes have been made at the Metro exchange since the appointment of Abe Dresner as manager and assistant to L. M. Day president and general manager, and by the way Mr. Dresner has been appointed treasurer of the corporation. One of the most important things that Mr. Dresner has done has been to supplant the girls in the inspection department with experienced union motion picture operators, he finding them far more satisfactory and capable.

Another change in the Metro offices is the addition of Harry Cohen as salesman, succeeding Roscoe B. Dayton. Mr. Dayton was vice-president and secretary. He had no previous experience in the business and did not find it quite to his liking and withdrew to enter another line.

Since the local Metro exchange has extended its activities to include the booking of travelogues, comedies, features, and the "Crimson Stain Mystery" serial, President Day has found their quarters far too small for the business now coming to them. The floor space has been distributed and redistributed, shelves have been put up in every available section of the place, until now there can be no new distribution and no more shelves. A change must be made in the near future, although probably nothing will be done until the matter of the new film exchange building is finally settled.

C. O. Moss Returns to Pathe.

Washington, D. C.—C. O. Moss, who for some few months has been managing the Charlotte, N. C., exchange of the Unicorn Film Service, has severed his connection with that concern and has re-entered the employ of the Pathe company. Mr. Moss has been assigned to his old territory and will start out within a very few days to greet his old friends among the exhibitors. And Moss has a lot of friends who are glad to see him traveling under the Gold Rooster banner again.

SMOKY CITY NOTES.

McDonald Opera House Prospers.

McDonald, Pa.—The Opera House, McDonald, which changed its policy from road shows to moving pictures recently, has been re-opened after undergoing an extensive remodeling process. With the appearance of the theater most inviting and its offerings of a high order, capacity audiences are being cared for daily.

R. B. Gallagher with Metro.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—R. B. Gallagher has taken charge of the film inspection department of the Pittsburgh Metro offices, succeeding C. A. Weaver, who was recently transferred to the Chicago branch.

Pittsburgh's Past Week

George P. Jacobs Takes Charge of Masterpiece Attractions — Changes in Local Famous Players and Pathe Exchanges—New Houses and Reopenings—State Censors and Posters.

From Pittsburgh News Service, 6016 Jenkins Arcade, Pittsburgh, Pa.

PITTSBURGH, PA.—George P. Jacobs [illegible], a representative of the World Film in Pittsburgh for the past year, has resigned to take charge of the Masterpiece Film Attractions in Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia. Offices have been established in the Seltzer film building, Liberty avenue and 12th street. Mr. Jacobs broke into the film business four years ago with the Noted Players company. He then owned the Life Photo Film and later came to this city, where he has won a host of friends. He is said to be the youngest manager in the film business.

Geo. P. Jacobs.

Mrs. S. P. Dillard, formerly with the Consolidated, Atlanta, Ga., and recently with the World office in Pittsburgh, is Mr. Jacobs' secretary. Among the Masterpiece subjects now meeting with much success in this territory are "Purity," "Neptune's Daughter," and "The Libertine."

New Additions to Local Famous Players

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The Famous Players service has recently added to its force Henry P. Zapp, as special traveling representative out of the Pittsburgh branch. Mr. Zapp was formerly connected with the Casino Feature Film Company, Detroit, Mich., and is widely known in the trade. C. H. Powell, formerly connected with the Cincinnati office of the Famous Players, has been appointed special traveling representative of the same company in the Pittsburgh district. L. W. Loranger, who was recently appointed special traveling representative out of the local Famous Players office, is now publicity manager of the exchange. He succeeds J. S. King.

Lewiston's National to Open.

Lewiston, Pa.—The new National theater, Lewiston, Pa., is rapidly nearing completion and the management has announced that its opening will take place about December 15. Henry Whitehouse is owner of the theater, which gives promise of being one of the handsomest and best equipped in its locality. The seating capacity will be 800. Only the best film productions will be shown at the National, as Mr. Whitehouse is desirous of maintaining as excellent a standard in his attractions as he has set in the erection of his theater.

Pathe Forces Re-organized.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The re-organization of the forces of the Pittsburgh Pathe exchange under Manager George W. Fuller is about completed, several important additions having been made during the past few weeks. H. S. Morrison, formerly traveling out of the Pathe branch at Minneapolis, Minn., has been transferred to this city. J. R. Grier, formerly connected with the Cleveland branch of the Triangle film, has joined the road forces of the Pittsburgh Pathe. E. E. Errickson, formerly associated with Manager Fuller at the World Film offices in St. Louis, Mo., is another valuable acquisition here. In order to secure the highest possible efficiency in the shipping department, Manager Fuller has placed in charge Edward Phillips, formerly head shipper at the General exchange at 23d street, New York. Cameraman C. V. Burton has just been assigned to this office by Pathe to look after the news happenings in the Pittsburgh territory.

State Censors Now See Paper.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Pittsburgh exchange men and exhibitors are aroused over a new order of the Pennsylvania Board of Censors by which all paper issued in connection with moving picture films must be submitted to them for approval. Heretofore the censors have demanded paper for inspection in certain instances, but, according to the latest ruling, the posters and other advertising matter must accompany the film that is to be censored. Until the paper has been thus submitted it is understood that a certificate of approval will not be issued for the film. The trade in this city is strongly in favor of a movement to enjoin the censors from enforcing this sweeping order and it is likely that exchangemen throughout the state will test its legality. It is believed that this gross discrimination against the advertisement of films will not be upheld by the courts.

Thos. Thompson Heads Nixon Theater.

Tarentum, Pa.—The management of the Nixon theater, Tarentum, has been assumed recently by Thomas Thompson, formerly manager of the Columbia theater, Fifth avenue, Pittsburgh. Mr. Thompson is one of the most able men in the exhibiting field, and indications are that he will meet with much success in his new connection. The Nixon is a 1,500-seat house and is now doing a thriving business. The attractiveness of the Nixon has been greatly enhanced by the improvements made recently and high-class feature pictures are shown exclusively.

Fort Pitt Film Sold.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The plant of the Fort Pitt Film Company, in the Cameraphone building, Pittsburgh, was taken over recently by the Spencer Film Studios. The new concern is engaged principally in commercial film work, being one of the leaders in this line here.

The Garrick Reopened.

Glassport, Pa.—The Garrick theater, Glassport, has been remodeled and opened under new management. The house was taken over recently by the owners of the building in which it is located. Much up-to-date equipment has been installed, including two Simplex projection machines. New decorations and other improvements make the Garrick very attractive throughout.

Elmer A. Calhoun Joins Fox.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Elmer A. Calhoun, formerly traveling representative out of the Pittsburgh office of the General Film, has become connected with the local office of the Fox exchange.

Buffalo Ball Committee Is Named

Ball Will Be Held in the Elmwood Music Hall and the Date Set Is Monday, January 29—Committees Named to Look After the Special Arrangements Assure a Record-Breaking Success for the Affair.

By Joseph A. McGuire, 5 Lewis Block, Buffalo, N. Y.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—The second annual ball of the Buffalo Screen Club will be held at the Elmwood Music Hall, Monday evening, January 29. The date was fixed at a meeting of the club Monday evening. A high mark was set by the ball last spring, but the coming event promises to break all former records. The names of film favorites who will come will be announced later.

The decorations will be on an elaborate scale. The music will be complete and costly. A reception committee will greet the guests and look after their comforts. The following members are in charge of the ball:

Decoration committee, Messrs. Marsey, chairman, Hofmeister, Hopkins and Becker.

Entertainment committee, Messrs. Christoffers, chairman, Mosier, Sitterly, Taylor, Mack, Leonard, Brady and Cohen.

Patronesses committee, Messrs. Brandon and Penn.

Program committee, Messrs. Mack, chairman, Becker, Hughes, Brink and Brady.

Publicity committee, B. Taylor, chairman, C. A. Taylor, Messrs. Willats, McGrath and Penn.

Music committee, Messrs. Hofmeister, chairman, and Marsey.

Ticket committee, Messrs. Taylor, chairman, Savage, Morgan, Brandon, Sitterly, Siegel, Hofmeister and Brink.

Reception committee, Messrs. Christoffers, chairman, Hopkins, Sitterly, Brandon, Mack, Brink, Mosier, C. Taylor, Hall, C. A. Taylor, Willats, Becker, Savage, Morgan, Leonard and Lorence.

Refreshment committee, board of governors of the club, and C. H. Christoffers.

President Christoffers presided at the meeting of the club. It was decided to have an entertainment, including dancing, music and refreshments, at the clubrooms Thanksgiving evening. The program will be in charge of Harry Marsey, chairman, and Messrs. Taylor, Brink, Penn and Becker. The following were elected new members of the club, Herbert Griffin, representing the Nicholas Power Co., and G. H. Penn and H. Lorence, Mutual.

Ten Per Cent. Off On Advance Payment On Serial.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Manager James K. Morgan of the local branch of the Pathe. Mr. Morgan allows a discount of ten per cent. for advance payment on any entire serial of that company.

"More than thirty exhibitors have taken advantage of our offer," said Mr. Morgan, "and the plan is being enthusiastically received. These exhibitors are living up to one of the basic principles of business, that of discounting a bill and thereby saving money. Knowing that they are dealing with a reputable firm and that our serials will be profit makers for fifteen to twenty weeks, they are willing to pay in advance."

Jack Siegel Becomes Pathe Roadman.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Jack Siegel has been appointed traveling representative of the Pathe, Buffalo. He is covering the Southern territory.

H. E. Coffey Heads Victor Film.

Buffalo, N. Y.—H. E. Coffey was recently appointed Buffalo manager of the Victor Film Service, handling Universal films. He came here from Washington, where he represented special features. He was formerly manager of the Universal office in Cincinnati. Mr. Coffey is an agressive campaigner after business. He will make personal calls on many of the leading exhibitors of his territory.

F. S. Hopkins Becomes Chief Bluebird.

Buffalo, N. Y.—F. S. Hopkins, former manager of the Victor for seven years, has taken over the management of the Buffalo branch of the Bluebird. Mr. Hopkins is held in high esteem by the exhibitors of New York, and his friends are wishing him every success in his new position. His assistant is F. M. Zimmerman, who was associated with Mr. Hopkins while with the Victor Service. Mr. Zimmerman will be road representative of the Bluebird plays. He has many acquaintances among the exhibitors. Mr. Hopkins has booked first run with the Regent theater, Rochester.

New Picadilly's Opening Offerings.

Rochester, N. Y.—Daniel J. Savage, manager of the William L. Sherry office, Buffalo, recently visited W. H. Seeley, managing director and secretary of the new Picadilly theater, Rochester, which opens November 24. Paramount programs will be featured at the Picadilly. The opening picture will be "Miss George Washington," with Marguerite Clark as the star. Howard Brink, representative of the Sherry offices, Buffalo, is working out of Syracuse this week.

J. M. Sitterly in Syracuse.

Syracuse, N. Y.—A representative in the Syracuse territory is J. M. Sitterly, of the Popular Film, Buffalo.

"Fall of a Nation" at New Victoria.

Buffalo, N. Y.—An orchestra augmented to fifteen pieces was one of the attractions at the recent showing of "The Fall of a Nation" at the New Victoria theater, Buffalo. Edward L. Hyman, manager, supervised the decoration of the theater in connection with this film. The entire house emphasized the spirit of preparedness.

"This was the first time the picture was shown in Buffalo at our prices, and we did a wonderful business," said Mr. Hyman. "We are getting fine results from our mailing list, which now exceeds 5,000. In a few weeks we will play Mary Pickford in the first of her productions, 'Less Than Dust.' Another attraction will be Sir Forbes Robertson's success, 'The Light That Failed,' by Rudyard Kipling. We are co-operating with the Buffalo high schools on this picture, and have arranged for a special matinee for the students. This picture will be played at the Victoria first in Buffalo."

Buffalo Picture Playhouse Directory Co.

The Buffalo Picture Playhouse Directory Co. has been organized in this city with a capital of $5,000. The directors are Victor F. Vieregg, Ira M. Mosher, Perry R. Cant and Edward Regester.

Complain of Careless Shipping

Southern Exchanges Suffer Losses from Mismated Features—Part of a Five-Reeler Comes Back and Part Is Sent Off Some Other Place.

By J. L. Ray, 1014 Stahlman Bldg., Nash- ville, Tenn.

NASHVILLE, TENN.—A question which is becoming more acute each week, and which is proving a heavy burden upon the exchanges, is that of mismated reels arriving as feature shows. Considerable complaint has been received within the past few weeks with regard to the careless handling of multiple-reels by employees having charge of shipments to the exchanges. For instance, many exhibitors offer a program consisting of one five-reel feature, with a one-reel filler, usually a comedy or travelogue. Quite often the exhibitor finds it necessary to ship the five-reeler to one point, and the single reel to another, and one Chattanooga exchange reports that three times within one week the comedy has been shipped with four reels of the feature, and the remaining section of the multiple forwarded to another destination. This entailed a heavy loss upon the exchange in question, which, however, was not alone in this respect.

It has been pointed out by the exchange men that the shipping instructions are plainly given with each shipment, and there seems to be no reason why a multiple feature should be split up in this manner. An exhibitor receiving a mixed shipment of this kind is at a complete disadvantage, so far as running a program for that day is concerned, unless, possibly, the exchange is located in the same city, which is rarely the case in matters of this kind. Regardless of who is to blame, the exchange invariably gets the worst of the argument, and much friction between the exhibitors and exchangemen could be eliminated merely by more care being exercised on the part of the theater managers themselves, in giving these matters their personal attention.

It is important that shipments be properly billed, in the first place, and secondly, that all parts of each picture be packed together. While many of the larger theaters, and especially chains of theaters operated by one company, maintain exclusive shipping departments, errors of this kind manage to occur with almost the same degree of frequency as experienced with the small town showmen. To quote a prominent exchange manager: "If the exhibitors would give this matter their close personal supervision, and not leave this important phase of the business to irresponsible usher and door-boy, a large part of the trouble would be prevented."

Southern Exhibitors Thriving.

Chattanooga, Tenn. — According to Manager Arthur S. Dickinson, of the Southern Metro, the exhibitors of the South are forecasting prosperous times for the winter season. "There are very few exhibitors in this territory who complain of hard times," declared Mr. Dickinson recently. "With the increase in the price of cotton, all of the Southern exhibitors are looking forward to good times this winter."

Ethridge Does Not Run Strand.

Chattanooga, Tenn.—An erroneous impression has gained wide circulation recently to the effect that D. S. Ethridge of Chattanooga has taken over the Strand at 240 Main street. Mr. Ethridge has suffered considerable annoyance as a result of the confusion and requests that the matter be made clear. The property alone figured in the transfer, which property was disposed of by Messrs. E. R. and J. W. Lawless to D. S. Ethridge for the sum of $15,000. Mr. Ethridge is in no way connected with the operation of the Strand theater, that house continuing to operate under the same management as heretofore.

"The Common Law" Scores Heavily.

Nashville, Tenn.—True to predictions, Clara Kimball Young in "The Com-

now law proved a "camp cold" at the Knickerbocker during its four day run. Twenty-five cents for any seat in the house was the admission charged on this occasion.

North Carolina Letter

By Clarence L. Lutz

Charles H. Arrington Weds.

ROCKY MOUNT, N. C.—Chas. H. Arrington, the manager of the Arrington brothers' owners and managers of the Alamo and Grand, is receiving the congratulations of his many friends here as well as members of the trade throughout the territory on his marriage to Miss Annie Barrett of Wilson, N. C., on November 4. The happy bridegroom is one of the best known exhibitors in this section. Although only twenty-three years old he has had a five years' experience in the moving picture business. With his brother John, he is devising plans for the enlargement of the Grand theater so as to give it about 1,500 seats.

New Theater at Enfield.

Enfield, N. C.—Britt and Whitaker, who are operating the Grand theater here, are erecting a new building which will be equipped in the most approved manner, and it is expected will be ready for occupancy on or about December 1. Altogether seating accommodations will be provided for about 450 patrons. The house is being so constructed as to make possible the demolition of a store occupying a part of the building so that an additional 200 seats may be obtained.

Hurrying Work on Strand.

Fayettesville, N. C.—Work is being rushed on the Strand theater being built here by Mr. Drake that it may be ready for occupancy before the end of this month. This is a very handsome house equipped with very attractive lobby and balcony, which, as well as the auditorium, is elaborately decorated and outfitted.

Edenton Bell's Becomes the Alkrama.

Edenton, N. C.—A. Kramer, of Elizabeth City, N. C., has taken over the interests of H. Bell in Bell's opera house. He has remodeled this theater and has renamed it the Alkrama, which name is the same as that applied to his house in Elizabeth City. With their long experience it is to be expected that Mr. Kramer and his son will make this new venture as successful as their other.

Marx S. Nathan Opens New Exchange.

Wilmington, N. C.—The Great Atlantic Feature Film Company is the latest addition to the field here. Marx S. Nathan, who was at one time employed as a traveling representative of the Vitagraph V-L-S-E, and later in a similar capacity with the George Kleine Company, is manager of this organization, and has taken offices in the Murchison Bank Building. Charlie Chaplin releases are being handled exclusively, and Mr. Nathan has been successful in placing them in the best houses in the two Carolinas. He announces that special slides and special paper, both mounted and unmounted, are carried.

R. A. Davis Joins Mutual.

Durham, N. C.—R. A. Davis, formerly manager of the Strand theater here, has joined the forces of the Mutual Film Corporation at Charlotte, N. C. He has been succeeded in the management of the Strand by J. F. Goodrich, its former manager, who has been away from the theater during the incumbency of Mr. Davis.

F. A. Abbott to Manage Lynchburg Theater.

Asheville, N. C.—F. A. Abbott, formerly manager of the Strand theater in this city, has gone to Lynchburg, Va., where he has assumed the management of the Broadway theater.

Musicians Unfair to Small Shows

Louisville Musicians Union No. 11 Declares Unfair All Local Theaters Except Five That Employ Musicians at the Union Scale—Theaters Without Orchestras Stigmatized by Labor Paper Article.

Ohio Valley News Service, Correspondents, 1904 Starks Bldg., Louisville, Ky.

LOUISVILLE, Ky.—On account of differences of opinion between members of the local musicians union and the operators of the Ideal theater, the musicians are opposing not only the Ideal theater, but every theater in Louisville with which the Broadway Amusement Enterprises have any connection, these theaters nine in number are as follows: Alamo, Walnut, Rex, Baxter, Preston, West Broadway, East Broadway, Ideal and Crown.

In a recent article appearing in the New Era, a labor trades paper of Louisville, under the heading, "The Ideal Theater Refuses to Employ Union Musicians," the following was stated:

"There are picture shows innumerable in Louisville, some of them fair to Musicians' Local No. 11, and some of them unfair—unfair because they refuse to employ members of the American Federation of Musicians or pay the scale demanded by them. Owing to this fact the Ideal theater has been declared unfair by the United Trades and Labor Assembly, and the musicians ask the moral support of all union sympathizers and friends. Elsewhere in this paper we produce a card issued by the musicians which specified the Ideal theater as refusing to recognize union musicians.

"The Moving picture theaters that employ musicians and comply with the requirements of Local No. 11, are the Mary Anderson, Orpheum, Strand, Norman and Casino. Union men and their friends will please bear this in mind when patronizing picture shows."

This article is highly unfair to a large number of small theaters in the city, which do not maintain orchestras, and which use automatic instruments, or merely employ a piano player. Out of a total of nearly thirty moving picture houses in the city, the labor organizations and their followers are asked to attend but five theaters, naming these as union musician employers, and making no comment on the large number of small theaters which are not opposing the union further than that they do not employ musicians at all.

Press L. Hamilton Dies.

Louisville, Ky.—Press L. Hamilton, 48 years old, one of the best known theatrical men in Louisville and the South, died at the Jewish hospital, Louisville, after an illness of several weeks. Mr. Hamilton for many years was connected with Macauley's theater, having had charge of the box office for twenty-five years. He was also well known at the local race tracks where he also had charge of the ticket gates during the active racing season. The old house had just been remodeled, and Mr. Hamilton was enthusiastic over this change, there not having been any real improvements made in the theater for many years prior to this fall.

Thomas Barnett in Town.

Louisville, Ky.—Thomas Barnett, formerly connected with some of the Switow theaters on the Northside of the river, who has been in charge of the Garrick at Madisonville for three years, is back in Louisville, where he is looking for a location for a new house. Mr. Barnett's lease on the Garrick recently expired, and the house was taken over by R. W. Dozier, who also took over the Princess which Mr. Barnett sold a few months ago to William Hays.

Lee Goldberg Pleased With Children's Shows.

Louisville, Ky.—Lee Goldberg, manager of the Mary Anderson theater, returned the early part of last week from Cincinnati, where he looked up some film service for the local house. Mr. Goldberg is much pleased with the way in which the new Universal Children's program is taking at the Mary Anderson. On Wednesday, November 15, the first two episodes of "The Lass of the Lumberland," featuring Helen Holmes, were shown; and "The Dollar and the Law," a Vitagraph picture, featuring Lillian Walker, has also been booked. The local bankers are behind this picture, and are preparing to give it strong support as an object lesson on saving money.

Louisville News Notes.

A. C. Farrel, manager of the Central Film Service Co., made a trip to Columbia, Ky., and other Central Kentucky points last week, getting good results.

M. Switow, head of the Switow Amusement Co., of Louisville, and also of the Phoenix Amusement Co., of Lexington, made a trip to Lexington last week to visit the Strand theater.

TO EXHIBITORS

If you are doing something new and interesting at your theatre let our correspondent know about it. It may help others and help you as well.

Helpfully yours,

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD.

Kentucky News Notes.

Bowling Green, Ky.—The Elite theater, formerly the Strand, was reopened to the public on November 14, after having been idle for months.

Paintsville, Ky.—The Stafford theater has just announced that it will give two shows a week, on Thursdays and Saturdays.

Campbellsville, Ky.—Work has about been completed on the new Alhambra theater. Wilson Offut, of Lebanon, handled the decorations which are carried out in Rose and Old Ivory.

Middlesboro, Ky.—A third moving picture theater has been arranged for here, J. A. Thompson having just made preparations to remodel a building on Third street for this purpose.

LaCenter, Ky.—The Globe theater raised prices to ten cents during the showing of "The Garden of Lies," featuring Jane Cowl.

Paris, Ky.—Due to delay in receiving its equipment the Columbia theater postponed its opening, which was to have been held on Saturday, November 11.

Georgetown, Ky.—A. B. Barkley, manager of the Opera House, has announced that higher class features will be shown every Thursday and Saturday, and that prices on these two days will be ten and fifteen cents, instead of five and ten cents.

Auburn, Ky.—T. J. Vick, operator of the Vick Hotel, has opened a new moving picture theater, planning to give shows on Tuesdays and Saturdays.

Owensboro, Ky.—The Queen theater management is well pleased with the way in which the new serial, "The Shielding Shadow," is taking at that house.

Cincinnati Exchanges Organize

Meeting Under Auspices of Chamber of Commerce Chooses Tentative Officers—Drafting of the By-Laws Will Be Followed by a Regular Election—Committees on Organization Have Been Appointed.

By Kenneth C. Crum, 6th 1st Nat. Bank, Cincinnati.

CINCINNATI, O.—As a result of a meeting held under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce, film exchange men of Cincinnati have formed a tentative organization, under the name of the Associated Film Exchanges of Cincinnati, with H. A. Buge, of the George Kleine exchange, as temporary president, I. W. McMahan, of McMahan & Jackson, vice president; C. E. Holah, of the International Film Service, treasurer, and H. Serkowich, of the Chamber of Commerce, secretary.

All of the offices are temporary, and will remain so until a permanent organization is formed, as it will be following the drafting of by-laws and an election under them. The meeting at which the association was formed was attended by a considerable majority of the film men of Cincinati, and there was virtually no dissent to the objects of the organization, which are to advance the cause of good pictures with the public.

Committees on membership and on rules and regulations were appointed, and another meeting will be held at an early date, at which time the permanent organization is to be formed, and it is hoped to have every film man in Cincinnati present.

International Office On Walnut St.

Cincinnati, O.—C. E. Holah, of the new International Film Company's service branch, is enthusiastic over his new connection, and while he is not yet in a position to announce some of the good things which he says the company has in store for the future, he says that "Jaffrey," the film dramatization of the famous William J. Locke novel, is to set a high mark. This release is to be shown privately to local exhibitors at an early date at the exchange's new quarters on Walnut street, where the Famous Players exchange was formerly located. The International will have both the second and third floors, and the space available is ample for all purposes.

League Nominating Committee Named.

Cincinnati, O.—The nominating committee of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League is wrestling with the selection of two full tickets to be voted on at the December meeting, and the members will have a regular campaign. Messrs. Thomas Riley, Herman Bley, Charles Weigel, Otto Luedeking and Otto Dieckman are on the committee.

Takes Lease on Site for Theater.

Youngstown, O.—The Federal Holding Co., organized recently for the purpose of erecting a fine moving picture house, has taken a 50-year lease on property at the northeast corner of West Federal and Hazel streets, at an annual rental of $30,000, indicating its intention of going ahead with its plans. The company is capitalized at $200,000, and is backed by C. W. Deibel, L. J. Campbell, R. C. Steese, A. E. Adams and others. The tract leased will afford a splendid site for an up-to-date house, such as the company intends to build. The lease dates from April 10, 1917, and the work of construction will probably not begin until then.

Gives Projector to Public Library.

Youngstown, O.—Henry H. Stambaugh has presented to the public library a picture-projecting machine of the latest model, and plans are under way for a systematic course of classic and educational films during the winter. The popularity with which the Shakespeare films shown during Shakespeare week were received gave birth to the idea of showing pictures of that nature regularly, and the gift of the projecting machine was one result. Programs for children will be shown every Saturday afternoon, and for adults every Saturday evening.

Two Week Run of Dixon Feature.

Cincinnati, O.—Manager Riley, of the Colonial, reports large and enthusiastic houses at the run of "The Fall of a Nation," which was shown at the Colonial for two consecutive weeks, beginning Sunday, November 5. The original intention was to run the picture for one week only, as the high price, 25 cents, and the fact that more than a week's run of a film at one house is distinctly unusual in Cincinnati, were thought to make a longer run inadvisable. However, Mr. Riley says the success of the first week decided him to double the run, and he was able to secure the picture, fortunately. A full orchestra has been used to render the Victor Herbert music written for the picture, thus securing some telling effects.

Libson Pleased by Feature Hits.

Cincinnati, O.—Manager I. Libson expresses himself as highly pleased over the success which has so far greeted his fine trio of houses, the Strand, the Family and the Walnut, and has recently been able to land some powerful attractions for the Walnut, which, on account of its location, finds it hardest to pull the big crowds. However, Mr. Libson has found that when the attractions are there the crowds come, proving this in the two weeks' run of Fox's "Romeo and Juliet" and the two weeks of the first new Pickford release, "Less Than the Dust." All of the Mary Pickford releases will be seen at the Walnut, as well as those of the Clara Kimball Young organization, and Mr. Libson believes the Walnut, as well as his other two houses, will have the biggest season yet.

Double-Header Film Shows in Toronto

Four Instances of Simultaneous Duplicate Shows in One Week—Messenger Boys Carry the Films Back and Forth.

By W. M. Gladish, 1263 Gerrard St. E., Toronto, Ontario.

TORONTO, Ont.—A double-header form of film presentation was witnessed in Toronto in four distinct instances during the week of November 13. In three cases the films of one feature were screened in two different houses while in the fourth place two different sets of reels were used in two nearby theaters. "The Blind Girl of Portici" was exhibited practically simultaneously in the Rialto and Globe theaters, and the one set of films forming "The Battle of the Somme" were screened in the Garden theater and the Playhouse, both of which are situated on College street. Metro's "The Eternal Question," starring Olga Petrova, was also shown at the Globe and Rialto theaters during the last three days of the week, the one print being used in both places. The Mutual-Chaplin comedy, "Behind the Screen," was released simultaneously in the Strand and Loew's Yonge Street theater, two prints being used here.

With the exception of the Chaplin releases, the arrangements for the exhibiting of these features necessitated the employment of messengers to carry the reels from one theater to another and back. The Globe and Rialto are located in the downtown district, about three blocks apart, and particular care had to be taken to insure a quick delivery service between these two houses from 9:30 a. m. to 11 p. m. each day of the entire week. Telephones at these two theaters were also employed to guard against possible delays, and the time schedules were fixed to dovetail each other.

In the case of the Garden and Playhouse, the reels of "The Battle of the Somme" were sent back and forth over the intervening distance of two hundred yards between the two houses immediately after each reel had been screened. The war views make up a five-reel feature, while "The Dumb Girl of Portici" is in eight reels. No difficulties were experienced in the double screening of either of these or the Petrova film.

Toronto exhibitors generally took considerable interest in the double-header arrangements, and the double billing of a special attraction will undoubtedly become a popular practice, judging by the attention aroused.

Buys Astor and Park Theaters.

Toronto, Ont.—A big move in Toronto picture circles has been the acquiring of the Park and Astor theaters by W. J. Alexander, owner of the Doric theater. The Park theater has been one of the best-known and largest film houses in Toronto's West End, while the Astor forms a substantial addition to the string which will now be controlled by Mr. Alexander. Jack Harris, formerly manager of the Park theater, has left the city.

Projection Machine Missing.

Toronto, Ont.—The moving picture projection machine, owned by the Toronto Recruiting League, has vanished. This machine was widely used for almost a year in various portions of the city in recruiting activities for the Canadian Expeditionary Force. It was frequently set up on a motor truck or wagon for a street-corner show, while it was used in a number of auditoriums and other buildings for the screening of war views and other subjects. Now the machine is missing and the league officials have not the slightest idea as to its whereabouts.

Richard Bennett Visits Local Metro.

Toronto, Ont.—While filling a week's engagement at a Toronto legitimate theater, Richard Bennett, the film star, took advantage of his presence here to pay several visits to the Toronto Mutual branch where he met C. B. Price, Canadian general-manager for the Mutual, Mr. Barrett, the Toronto Mutual representative and other local film folks. An after-theater party was held in the Mutual offices late one evening.

J. A. Davidson Becomes Roadman for Mutual.

Toronto, Ont.—J. A. Davidson, formerly with the Mutual and V-L-S-E, has returned to his first love in order to become roadman in Ontario for the Mutual Star Productions.

E. Bissell Becomes City Salesman for Vitagraph.

Toronto, Ont.—R. O. Caveness, city salesman for the Greater Vitagraph since the opening of the Vitagraph offices in Toronto eight months ago by W. C. Gookin, has been recalled to the New York headquarters of the company. E. Bissell, formerly manager of the Strand theater, Camp Borden, and recently appointed cashier of the local Vitagraph offices, has been appointed city traveler in succession to Caveness.

L. H. Watrous, Montreal manager for the Greater Vitagraph, recently spent three days here to confer with the Canadian general manager, Mr. Gookin.

Clara Kimball Young Features Notes.

Toronto, Ont.—I. Soskin, formerly at the St. John, N. B., and Vancouver branches of the Famous Players, has been installed at Toronto as the manager of the Monarch Film Corporation, in which capacity he will look after the distribution of Clara Kimball Young features throughout Canada. Louis Rosenfeld, formerly manager of the Famous Players' branch at St. John, has been transfered to Toronto to arrange bookings of C. K. Y. releases in the local territory. M. S. Bernstein, traveling representative of the Famous Players at Toronto, has been sent to manage the F. P. branch at St. John, where he formerly represented Metro.

Local Theater Notes.

Collingwood, Ont.—The Lyric theater, in this city, has been purchased by Lee and Houghton of Collingwood.

Orillia, Ont.—The King theater, Orillia, has been sold by W. Wescott to J. Welch of that place.

Daniel V. Picker a Detroit Visitor.

Daniel V. Picker, proprietor of the Garland, Spooner, Rialto and Miners Eighth Avenue theaters, New York and Brooklyn, was a recent visitor in Detroit, getting theater pointers. He was favorably impressed with the amphitheater construction of the Majestic, and he has decided to use this method of seating in some new houses he will shortly build in eastern cities.

Theater Equipment Houses Busy.

Detroit, Mich.—Ray J. Branch, proprietor of the Enterprise Theater Equipment Co., 109 Peter Smith building, Detroit, reports a big business on Hertner transverters and Motiograph projection machines. C. A. Weddige of the Michigan Motion Picture Supply Co., and L. J. Gardiner, of the Detroit Theatre Equipment Co., report a big business on Powers projection machines.

Film Club Files Articles.

Detroit, Mich.—The Film Industry Local Managers' Association of Detroit, otherwise known as the Film club, has filed articles of association with the secretary of state at Lansing, Mich. The association is for non-profit.

Guy J. Trask Resigns.

Detroit, Mich.—Guy J. Trask for the past two years manager of the Mutual exchange, 97 Woodward avenue, Detroit, has resigned same taking effect Nov. 18. No announcement has been made as to his future plans. Mr. Trask came to Detroit from Cincinnati. The Detroit office of the Mutual was known to have been doing the largest business of any office in the country.

Central Exchange Coming.

Detroit, Mich.—There isn't the least doubt any more that Detroit will have a film building. The realty company planning to erect such a building has completed its plans and specifications, which are now being submitted to the exchange managers for approval. The plans call for a ten-story structure, absolutely fireproof. Every exchange, with the exception of three, have agreed to take space in this new building.

Michigan Theater Changes.

Williamston, Mich.—H. A. Thompson has taken over the Opera House here for motion pictures.

Ovid, Mich.—Beatler & Waltz are the new owners of the Pastime theater, Ovid.

Programs vs. Open Booking

Paramount Publicity Man Returns from Trip Through State of Michigan and Tells World Man What Exhibitors Have Been Saying to Him on the Question of Booking Picture Shows.

By Jacob Smith, 307 Free Press Building, Detroit, Mich.

DETROIT, Mich.—As open booking vs. program booking is a very important subject at present, anything on the matter is certain to be of interest. The World correspondent dropped in at the Paramount office, 278 East Jefferson avenue, Detroit, and met Will M. Elliott, publicity manager, who had just returned from an extended trip through the state. "I talked with exhibitors, large and small, in the smallest and the largest cities, and I found a big sentiment against open booking," remarked Mr. Elliott.

"The reason which most of the exhibitors gave me for favoring the program booking was that they had been successful with that policy and they could not see the necessity for changing to independent booking. Another argument was that the pictures being put out on the open booking policy are no better, and in many instances, not as good as those on the regular programs. I am not speaking particularly of Paramount but I refer to all of the producing companies releasing features on the regular program.

"I believe all this talk about independent bookings has been misjudged. No exhibitor is more independent than when he is associated with the leading programs and can feel assured of getting the very best pictures that money can produce. Another thing, how much time can the average small theater, away from the big cities, spend in booking independent releases. He would be worse off than ever if he tried the independent policy. I can't for the life of me see where the exhibitors can see any advantage in the open booking policy as compared to program booking."

Programs and Open Booking in Detroit.

Detroit, Mich.—How the first-run situation stands in Detroit at the present time: Regent theater, Paramount; Majestic theater, Triangle; Duplex theater, Metro; Liberty theater, open booking; Washington, Greater Vitagraph, World and open booking, and Broadway-Strand, Fox and Selznick productions.

New Theater to Be Called the Dawn.

Detroit, Mich.—J. Nebis, proprietor of the Library theater, Gratiot avenue, Detroit, will shortly open a brand new house at Gratiot and Iroquoise streets, which is to be known as the Dawn theater. It will seat about 1,200. Mr. Nebis has always gone on the assumption that nothing was too good for the Library theater. He made a success of the Library, although his predecessors failed with the same house.

High Class Films or Sensations.

Detroit, Mich.—Many exhibitors are under the impression that sensational film is the only kind that will get them the money. This is not always correct. Wesley Schram, who operates the Bijou in Detroit, and Edgar Kirchner, who manages the Family, both on Monroe avenue, for many months thought they had to give their particular clientele film of a sensational character. Personally, they were opposed to such film. One day they decided to experiment with better grade features. To make a long story short, today these theaters are showing the high-class film in preference to the sensational kind, and they are doing an increased business that is steadily growing larger. Today the sensational film is gradually taking a back seat for the better grade production.

M. H. Hoffman Says, "We Never Had As Big a Fall Business."

Detroit, Mich.—M. H. Hoffman, general manager of exchanges for the Universal and Bluebird, was in Detroit, Saturday, October 28. "Business is going along splendidly in all sections of the country, and we never had as big a fall business as this year. This is certain to be a wonderful year for the moving picture industry and for exhibitors who are progressive. I also find that as the years go by a better class of men are going into the business, and they are doing things in a businesslike way. There has been a wonderful improvement in the grade of exhibitors." Mr. Hoffman, by the way, spent a few days with his mother, who is a resident of Detroit.

Will Enlarge the Rosedale.

Detroit, Mich.—William F. Klatt, proprietor of the Rosedale theater, Detroit, announces that the Rosedale theater, 2394 Woodward avenue, is to be materially enlarged. At present the seating capacity is 1,100; the new plans call for a seating capacity of 2,000, most of which will be on the main floor. It will make the Rosedale the largest photoplay house in Detroit's north end. Mr. Klatt also announces an increase in the admission prices at the Rosedale from 10 to 15 cents on Sundays and holidays to 15 cents straight. Evening and matinee prices during the week will remain unchanged.

Will Remodel the Theatorium.

Detroit, Mich.—J. M. Neal, manager and owner of the Theatorium, North Washington avenue, Lansing, has let the contract for the entire remodeling of his playhouse. The cost will be $40,000. The framework of the new building will be of steel and the blueprints show a most handsome front, of tile and terra cotta. New foundations will be laid and the new playhouse so constructed that all adjacent walls may be removed without affecting the new structure. It will be ready in 70 days. The Theatorium, however, will be able to continue business while some of the preliminary work is being done.

Saginaw's Palace Changes Policy.

Saginaw, Mich.—Mortimer Hoffman, general manager of the Palace theater in Saginaw, writes the World that the policy of that theater will be changed to musical comedy and pictures, instead of a straight picture policy. W. V. Newkirk is the house manager at the Palace.

Grand Circus Pays a Creditors' Dividend

Detroit, Mich.—A dividend of five per cent has been sent by the receivers in bankruptcy of the Grand Circus theater, 301 Woodward avenue, Detroit, to the creditors. It is the first dividend paid since the bankruptcy was filed. The Grand Circus is now under the management of the Woodward Theater Co.

A New 2,000-Seat House.

Detroit, Mich.—Wadlow & Wilkinson, proprietors of the Virginia Park theater, Detroit, have purchased the property adjoining and will immediately erect thereon a new theater seating 2,000. C. Howard, Dime Bank Building, is the architect.

Fort Wayne's Strand a Beauty

Renovated Picture Theater a Marvel of Comfort and Attractiveness—Has a Rich and Restful Colored Interior—Concert Orchestra of Twelve Pieces Furnished Music for the Premier Night.

By Indiana Trade News Service, 861 State Life Building, Indianapolis, Ind.

FORT WAYNE, Ind.—The Strand, Fort Wayne's marvel theater, in all its exquisite comfort and transcendent beauty, was opened last Sunday, and the occasion afforded thousands of devotes of the film drama their first glimpse of the transformation that has been effected within the four walls of the old Empress theater, at the corner of Wayne and Clinton streets.

Every line of the drab, dull uninviting interior of the old Empress has been effaced with the result that the Strand is now regarded without a peer in any city the size of Fort Wayne in the entire United States

The heavy draperies, the rich yielding carpets that cover ever inch of the floor of the auditorium, the soft glow of the hidden lights that peep through the bowers baking the walls, the massive chandeliers and restful old ivory color scheme followed throughout the lobby and auditorium, give a feeling of complete enjoyment as one enters this new home of the film drama. That much abused abbreviation, "comfy," best describes one's feeling when entering the Strand for the first time.

In addition to a special feature bill, the Strand concert orchestra of twelve pieces conducted by Samuel M. Malanes, cornetist and for several seasons first soloist with Sousa, furnished an elaborate musical program for the opening. The new theater is owned by the Rialto Amusement Company, of Fort Wayne.

A. N. Nokes Buys Ft. Wayne Theater.

Fort Wayne, Ind.—A. N. Nokes, president of the Rialto Amusement Company, the organization that will operate the new Strand theater on the site of the old Empress, has purchased the Elmer Leonard home on Berry street, near Broadway. The consideration was $11,000. Mr. Nokes will move his family to Fort Wayne soon.

Col. Hoover Takes Over Star Theater.

Union City, Ind.—Col. E. L. Hoover has purchased the Star theater from Edward Fouts and Pearle Turner, who have been operating the house for the last few years, and will assume active charge in the next few days. Col Hoover, who has moved to Union City from his farm along the Mississinewa River, says he will continue the theater along the same policy as it has been run in the past. The Star Theater Corporation was organized about six years ago and has been a success financially.

Star at Van Buren Sold.

Van Buren, Ind.—The Star theater, Van Buren's popular motion picture house, has been sold by Wilson Grove, of Bluffton, to Mrs. Emma Leverich, of Van Buren. The consideration was not made public.

Grand Theater Changes Hands.

Kokomo, Ind.—The Grand theater in North Main street has been sold to Walter Dolan, of Upland. Mrs. Alice Sweeney, who owned the house, is said to have secured eighty-one acres of farm land near Upland and a cash consideration for the property. Mr. Dolan announces that he will continue the same excellent service that has characterized the Grand under Mrs. Sweeney's management.

Newcastle Theater to Be the Kaler.

Newcastle, Ind.—The Alcazar theater, recently purchased by Peter Kaler, will henceforth be known as the Kaler theater. Workmen are rapidly changing the interior into a place of real beauty. A new lighting and ventilating system will be the big features of the remodeling. The theater will not be opened for several weeks.

Improving Pruett Theater.

Rockville, Ind.—John Pruett, proprietor of the Pruett theater, is building a large addition to the rear of the theater. Mr. Pruett says the patronage of the theater has increased so rapidly that he is forced to have more room to accommodate the crowds.

Roy Whitesell to Manage the Cozy.

Rockville, Ind.—Roy Whitesell has assumed management of the Cozy theater for J. T. Johnson, the owner, who has gone to Terre Haute, where he will open a shoe store.

Court Theater Now Ready.

Auburn, Ind.—That Auburn's new playhouse, the Court theater, will be thrown open to the public sometime this week was the prediction of the board of directors of the incorporated Court Theater Company. The company had hoped to have the theater open earlier, but as with all improvements, it takes longer to get the work done than first expected. Owing to the unusual amount of building and remodeling in Auburn the last few months, the company has had difficulty in obtaining labor.

New Montmorence Theater.

Montmorence, Ind.—G. M. Shoemaker, of Otterbein, has opened a moving picture show in the vacant brick storeroom in Chestnut street. The theater will be opened twice each week, Wednesday and Saturday nights.

Screening Room Under the Alhambra.

Indianapolis, Ind.—This city is the possessor of one of the smallest of photoplay houses. It is situated in the basement of the Alhambra theater, and has a seating capacity of twenty persons.

The new theater, according to Edwin Booth and Thomas Moss, managers of the Alhambra, is for showing the newest releases. The films are screened, and the managers point out to their representatives, about to cover the district, the good or bad points about the pictures. The theater's hours are from 9 to 12 in the morning, and from 4:30 to 6:30 in the afternoon. By a special arrangement with the managers, pictures may also be shown after 10:30 at night. The new theater is proving very popular and fills a long felt need

Iowa Injunction Won by Selig for "Spoilers"

Gate City Feature Film Restrained from Showing Beach Feature—Claim That Contract With Selig Has Expired.

By Frank H. Madison, 623 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago.

DUBUQUE, Ia.—An injunction was granted by Judge Reed of the United States Court of the Northern District of Iowa against the Gate City Feature Film Co., restraining that company from showing "The Spoilers" in Iowa. The injunction was asked by the Selig Company of Chicago, declaring that it had leased the Iowa rights for the film to the Gate City company, but that the contract expired Dec. 31, 1915. The Selig Company further declared that the Iowa concern had been showing the picture in this state since the expiration of the contract.

A Change Among Mill City Exchange Men

Fred S. Meyer Resigns from Minneapolis Universal and Is Succeeded by J. F. Cubberley Whom P. A. Carey Succeeds.

By John L. Johnston, 814 Produce Exchange Building, Minneapolis.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn.—A big surprise was sprung in Mill City film exchange circles last week when Fred S. Meyer resigned as manager of the Minneapolis Universal-Laemmle exchange, 721 Hennepin Avenue, and was succeeded by Jesse F. Cubberley, who resigned as general manager of the Zenith Feature Film Co., Inc., 606 Produce Exchange. Mr. Meyer, well known and well liked by the Northwest territory, has gone to New York City, and although before leaving he made no statement to that effect, it is believed he went East in search of good features to be put on the state rights basis. Mr. Cuberley, who was one of the organizers of the Zenith, and has done much to make that company a big success, has been succeded by Patrick Howard Carey. Mr. Carey was for some time an exhibitor in two different Minnesota towns, and began in the exchange business as shipping clerk. His rise to the post of manager has been rapid, his energy, patience and ability strongly asserted. Mr. Cubberley and Mr. Carey assumed their new duties Monday, November 6.

Thurlow Bergen in St. Paul.

St. Paul, Minn.—Thurlow Bergen, Pathe and Unity film star, spent all of last week here, and was the guest of Manager Morton Nathan, of the Starland theater, the first few days, and visited various theaters of the Twin Cities under the auspices of the Minneapolis Pathe exchange later on. Mr. Bergen, formerly director of the Shubert Stock Co. here, is visiting his wife, Elsie Esmond, leading lady of the Shubert Stock Co. now, and who played opposite him in "The Lottery Man" to be presented at the Starland theater Nov. 26, 27, 28 and 29. Mr. Bergen visited several theaters showing "A Woman's Fight" (Pathe) in which he also starred.

Changes at Greater Vitagraph.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Three additions to the Greater Vitagraph's sales force were made last week. C. L. Booth has been secured to handle Twin City bookings, H. P. Johnson succeeds George W. Malone as Northern Minnesota roadman, and C. J. Howard, brother of Manager Howard, has been secured to cover Northern Wisconsin and the Michigan peninsula. Manager W. K. Howard, of the Vitagraph, reports an increasing business and demand for Moreno, Storey, Stewart, and Sothern releases especially brisk. "The Devils' Prize," and "The Price of Fame" have been booked in the New Astor, Minneapolis.

Among Twin City Exchanges.

Minneapolis, Minn.—H. C. Andress, manager of the International exchange, Produce Exchange building, spent five days in visiting exhibitors of Southern Minnesota last week. Mr. Andress made several bookings on "Jaffery," "Beatrice Fairfax" and weekly films while away and found several requests for films awaiting his return.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Gilbert M. Tyler, who led the United States in booking "The Strange Case of Mary Page," has resigned from the road staff of the Minneapolis General exchange.

Minneapolis, Minn.—C. J. Ver Halen, publicity manager, Paramount exchange, visited several out of town exhibitors the last two days of last week.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Henry P. Greene, one of the Twin Cities' foremost exhibitors, has booked Pathe Gold Rooster features and a serial for several of his houses.

Minneapolis, Minn.—S. N. Robinson, manager of the local Fox exchange, Jewelers' Exchange building, has returned from the international convention of Fox exchange managers at New York. Mr. Robinson is loud in his praise of "The Daughter of the Gods" and "The Honor System."

Minneapolis, Minn.—Ben Rosenberg, jovial manager of the E. L. K. Film Co. exchange, has returned from Chicago, where he secured a big feature, the name of which he will not announce until a later date.

Northwest Brevities.

Winner, S. D.—The "finishing touches" are being put on the new picture theater here.

Stevens Point, Wis.—Fred Shaurette will soon reopen the Ideal theater.

Dillon, Mont.—The new $50,000 picture theater here is rapidly nearing completion and will probably be opened the first week of December.

Minot, N. D.—The Shubert theater here has been closed.

Shelly, Minn.—Messrs. Englestad, H. G. Magrund, Hanson and Mauritson have opened a picture theater here.

Little Falls, Minn.—H. B. Smoots, manager of the Milo here, has leased the Victor theater here.

Peterson, Minn.—C. K. Sundby has resigned as manager of the local opera house.

Oelwein, Ia.—Fire almost wrecked the Princess theater here recently.

Jewell, Ia.—G. H. Peterson contemplates erecting a new picture theater.

Dyersville, Ia.—A. E. Bennett has bought the Nemo theater here.

Colo, Ia.—F. C. Perry is erecting a picture theater here.

Tandy Interests Get Triangle

Ernst Boehringer Nearly Had the Brand in His Safe, but Tandy Interests, Already Controlling Paramount and World Film Locally, Get the Triangle—Boeringer Keeps His First Runs in New Orleans.

By N. E. Thatcher, 1501 Canal St., New Orleans, La.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—Another shift has been made in the Triangle situation as it affects New Orleans and adjacent territory. A few weeks ago the announcement was made that Ernest Boehringer has secured control of the franchise and also a half interest in all of the film for Louisiana, Mississippi, Arkansas and portions of other territory. The retainer fee passed and the actual cash for the consummation of the deal was in hand upon the specified date. There were conditions to the sale which Manager Boehringer insisted should be observed and which were in the process of adjustment.

Meanwhile C. E. Tandy and his associates, of Atlanta, who control the eleven Southern states for the distribution of the Paramount and the World films, continued to bid for the Triangle franchise. An alignment was effected with the Welsh interests at Atlanta and the Hulsey interests in Texas, both of which had been interested in the Boehringer deal, and Manager Boehringer decided to relinquish his claim to the service, in the exchange sense, for the territory which he had purchased. On November 5 he left for New York to make the official transfer of his interests as they stood at that time and the report which announced the acquisition of the Triangle service for the eleven Southern states by the Tandy interests was marked "official."

With the acquisition of the Triangle, Mr. Tandy finds himself in control of three feature releases that are considered among the best in this section—the World, Paramount and Triangle. He has been eminently successful with the first two and it is naturally predicted that he will apply the same business methods to the Triangle features when he actively begins their distribution. It is stated that Manager Boehringer will continue to control the first-run Triangle features in New Orleans and that they will remain a feature in the Triangle theater.

P. A. Blankenship Joins Boehringer Interests

Has Been Put in Charge of the Columbia Theater and Has Made It Not Only Distinguished but Popular.

NEW ORLEANS, La.—An affiliation that is regarded of more than ordinary moment in local motion picture circles is that of P. A. Blankenship with the Boehringer Amusement company. He, for the time being, is in charge of the Columbia theater which Manager Boehringer has converted into a first-class house and installed first run features of the best class.

P. A. Blankenship.

The Columbia has been practically rebuilt and all of its former griminess has been removed. It is one of the most attractive of the smaller of the Canal street theaters and Manager Blankenship has put it on the road to as great popularity as Manager Boehringer has gained for the Triangle theater which he took over when its atmosphere was about as commonplace as has been that of the Columbia. The initial high-class feature to be exhibited on regular program in the Columbia was Mary Pickford in the new Artcraft production, "Less Than the Dust." The success of the exhibition was unquestioned. The S. R. O. sign was frequently in evidence and the audiences were pleased with their reception and with the picture.

Manager Blankenship had removed the gaudy trappings which for so long had marked the character of the house, and replaced them with potted plants, palms and judiciously selected and properly framed lithographs and portraits. The effect was immediate upon the patrons and they set their approval upon the enterprise. The new manager is an adept in the art of motion picture exhibition. He served his apprenticeship of several years with the Pearce interests and tried to learn something about the business every day. Then he took over the Isis.

Recently he disposed of his Isis interests and was not long in forming an alliance with the Boehringer interests and was placed in charge of the Columbia pending the completion of the new Liberty theater when it is the intention to place him in charge of the house management. It is hardly likely that a better selection could have been made for Manager Blankenship has that rare quality of being able to make and retain friends and to have people seek him out in order to cultivate his friendship. He is quiet and unassuming, but he is never asleep on the job and there is nothing with relation to the conduct of a first-class theater with which he is not familiar. He is always on time, neat, without conceit and always obliging, which, it is submitted are characteristics much to be desired.

Change for Better in Local Showmanship

New Orleans Audiences Are Easy-Going and Not Critical, but Theaters Are Beginning to Feel the Need of Improvement.

NEW ORLEANS, La.—C. R. Seelye, business manager for Pathe, Inc., spent several days during the first of the month in New Orleans to study conditions. First of course, he went over the field with local manager Raoul Junet with an eye only to the Pathe interests but, finding them in good shape, he soon branches out to the broader contemplation of the general field and his deductions in this direction naturally become of general interest.

Mr. Seelye was not slow to express his surprise at the equinamity with which the photoplay patrons of the city accept the miserable service that is offered by some of the theaters in the suburban districts. The fact is that Canal street is not one glittering array of bewitching beauty when it comes to the picture shows, but some of those in the outskirts of the city are absolutely depressing. Yet the people flock to them and happily make excuses for their primative appointments, for there is not a more careless, pleasure-loving people in the world than those in New Orleans.

Nevertheless Mr. Seelye sees a marked change coming and in a way his vision of the future of the New Orleans picture field is already taking tangible shape. The very evident unrest of the people has caused a general brushing up. Improvements in the physical condition of all of the houses is the rule, and the house that presents the best front is the house that is getting the best patronage.

Exhibitors and exchange men did everything in their power to make the stay of Mr. Seelye a pleasant one and one of the most enjoyable events of his visit was a short cruise as the guest of J. Eugene Pearce, of the Josiah Pearce & Sons syndicate, in the latter's trim yacht, Spitfire III. In the party were S. T. Stephens, manager of the Mutual exchange; Karl A. Bugbee, manager of the Metro; Manager Raoul Junet of the Pathe exchange and N. E. Thatcher, photoplay editor of the Times-Picayune. A short visit was made to the elaborate club house of the Southern Yacht Club and a most delightful trip followed. Mr. Seelye was quite complimentary in the expression of his opinion concerning the conduct of the Pathe business in this territory and manager Junet is now trying out new inventions in efficiency.

Charles Burkes and Miss Edna Duffy Wed.

New Orleans, La.—For over five years Charles Burkes has been one of the trusted huse managers in the employ of the Josiah Pearce & Sons Amusement Syndicate. The greater part of this time he has presided over the immediate affairs of the Trianon theater. Henceforth, however, he is to have another house over which he is to preside and in this house there will be but one person to please. That person was formerly Miss Edna Duffy, but is now being proudly introduced as Mrs. Burkes, by the proud manager of the Trianon. In order that the event might properly be remembered, the employes of the Pearce houses clubbed together and presented the happy pair with a chest of silver and another of linen. The presentation was in the nature of a surprise. Mrs. J. Eugene Pearce quietly slipped down to the Pearce business office and garnished the beautiful gifts with flowers and other attractive decorations while "'Gene" lent his artistic influence to the operation. Then the managers of the eight local Pearce houses filed in and the bride and groom were summoned. Their surprise was only equalled by their appreciation of the beautiful gifts and the event was the occasion of a most enjoyable hour of comradeship.

Cameraman Weigle Locates Here.

New Orleans, La.—E. F. Weigle, cameraman for the Selig-Tribune news service has taken up permanent residence in New Orleans and is preparing to put on some special news features for the Selig-Tribune weekly. He believes he has discovered a fertile field for his operations for there are many points of interest and many odd industrial enterprises in this city which will have a distinct news value when properly presented.

Heard Along Film Row.

NEW ORLEANS, La.—Manager T. O. Tuttle of the General Film company exchange has returned from Houston where he had been sent to straighten out some of the kinks in the Texas business for the company.

Manager J. E. Evans, of the local Fox exchange has returned from New York where he was called to take part in a conference of all of the Fox exchange managers. Manager Evans is highly elated with the success of his trip and is busy at putting some of the new trade plans received at the conference, into practical execution.

A Melange of the Victory Amusement company, of Lutcher, La., and Max Bloomenstein, of the Grand, the first at Donaldsonville were among the visitors to the New Orleans exchanges this week.

NOTES FROM WISCONSIN.

By Frank H. Madsen, 625 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago.

Brewery Workers' Secretary Gets Censor Job.

MILWAUKEE, Wis.—Fred Stange, secretary of the Brewery Workers' Union, has been appointed by Mayor Hoyer as a member of the citizens board of motion picture censorship. He succeeds John J. Handley. J. S. Grammer also was appointed to succeed E. K. Fischer, as the exhibitors representative on the commission.

Worth a Passing Glance.

Waupaca, Wis.—"Captain Courtesy" was shown at the Lyric theater under the auspices of the high school.

Milwaukee, Wis.—The local Paramount program was transferred from the Alhambra theater to the Princess the week of Nov. 12, when Manager George Eschert inaugurated the Artcrafts' service with "Less Than the Dust." The orchestra was increased to twenty-five pieces for the engagement of the Pickford picture.

Chippewa Falls, Wis.—R. Hoch, of Duluth, has recently acquired the Victor theater, and has been planning to remodel the building.

Hiawatha, Kan.—Roy Sweetland, Sixth street theater, Hiawatha, is co-operating with the mothers and teachers' club of that place by selecting and running such subjects as they recommend. One of the first pictures run under this arrangement was the "Eternal City," and another was the "Life of Shakespeare."

Now for the Kansas Censor Law

New Legislature Has Many Members Who Either Favor the Killing of the State Censorship Law or Want It Radically Changed — An Extended Discussion of the Matter Is Sure to Follow Opening.

By Kansas City News Service, 205 Corn Belt Building, Kansas City, Mo.

TOPEKA, Kan.—Exhibitors of Kansas feel that the recent election has put [illegible] with reference to the censorship law. Governor Capper, who has been responsible for the censorship law, has always been friendly to the exhibitors and absolutely no complaint against him. Indeed, he has rather been considered the best possible man to help the exhibitors in their troubles. Superintendent of instruction [illegible] head of the censorship department, has been reelected and it is well known that Ross has frequently made the [illegible] merely doing his best to enforce the censorship law as the lawmakers had given it to him.

The crux of the situation lies in the fact that in nearly every district, candidates for the legislature were put on record as to their position on censorship and in a very large number of districts, the legislators elected were those who favor a change in the state law. Some of them favor abolishing censorship altogether, others favor a radical modification of the law, others the placing of the [illegible] than in the department of education.

There will surely be an extended discussion of the law at the next session of the legislature and almost surely a change of some kind. What the change will be, may depend somewhat on the activity of the exhibitors in recommending what they want. And the associations, it is said, will not be asleep when it comes to making suggestions. They have a legislature favorably disposed to listen.

Rose Tapley Coming.

The Vitagraph exchange of Kansas City is sending letters to all of its exhibitors in the territory notifying them of the coming of Miss Rose Tapley under the auspices of the Vitagraph. A number of replies have been come to their town and give talks. Miss Tapley will speak at all the women's exchange clubs in Kansas City, besides a number of other clubs and high schools.

Frank Smith Gets the O. K.

Paola, Kan.—Frank Smith, proprietor of the Empress theater, Paola, recently purchased the O. K. theater of the same town, which gives him possession of the two shows in the town. Mr. Smith will run one of the theaters, and his wife will run the other.

Business Notes of Interest.

R. C. Cropper, manager of the Universal Film and Supply Co., of Kansas City, and district manager of the Midwest territory, together with P. L. Ryan, salesmanager of the company, recently returned from Oklahoma City, where they have been instituting a new sales promotion plan for publicity and advertising. This plan is now effective in the entire territory and is proving a big success.

J. W. Morgan, manager of the Unicorn Film Corporation exchange, at Kansas City, reports that the new serial, A. K. Lincoln in Jimmie Dale, alias the "Grey Seal," will be ready for release December 4.

Walter Quade, traveling representative of the Unicorn Film Corporation, while in Kansas City recently reported that the "Billy West" series is going well in the territory including Iowa and Nebraska.

Kansas City, Mo.—H. G. Gill, manager of the Motion Picture Supply House, reports that he has increased his mailing list for the "Dope Sheet," which he publishes to two thousand. The sheet is meeting with the approval of the exhibitors.

Screen Club Doings.

Kansas City, Mo.—The Kansas City Screen Club is already practically self supporting, and the plans for further facilities for members will, it is believed, provide an income that will enable the club to do much constructive work for the benefit of the industry. The club rooms are popular, not only as a meeting place during the day, but in the evenings when the ladies are present.

The club gave a dance and received bulletins of the election returns on election night. A large crowd was there to spend the evening.

Recent Visitors in Kansas City.

Recent visitors to the Kansas City exchanges were: Stanley Chambers, of the Palace theater, Wichita, Kans.; Don Powell, of the Colonial theater, Witchita, Kan.; Lee Gunnison, of the Crystal theater, Atchison, Kan.; Herbert Thatcher, of the Strand theater, Salina, Kan.; Chris Smith, of the Golden Bell theater, Ellsworth, Kan.; Abe Frankel, Casino theater, Des Moines, Ia.; Robert Welsh, of the Orpheum theater, Atchison, Kan.; E. F. Feeney, Cozy theater, Okmulgee, Okla.; T. K. Fridoritz, of the Opera House, Hays, Kan.; J. I. Miller, of Cameron, Mo.; T. J. Tindale, Elite theater, Iola, Kan.; Miss Anna McLaughlin, Grand theater, Nevada, Mo.; and Mrs. Howard, of the Lyric theater, Salisbury, Mo.

J. S. Applegate Opens International Branch

Leases Third Floor of Building at Thirteenth and Walnut Streets, Kansas City—Official Opening Nov. 27—Local Forces.

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—The International branch recently opened in Kansas City, at Thirteenth and Walnut streets, will be managed by J. S. Applegate, formerly manager of the Pathe exchange at Denver, Colorado. The company has leased the entire third floor of the building, some five thousand feet, but will sublet a part of it to some other exchange. The official opening for business will be November twenty-seventh, but booking is already beginning to come in by mail.

J. S. Applegate.

The St. Louis office was too far away from the great southwestern country to take care of it adequately and so the company established the Kansas City branch. The new exchange will be equipped completely. It will handle "Mysteries of Mira" series, Split-reel cartoons, the "Beatrice Fairfax" serial, Golden Eagle features, and Hearst News pictures.

Two road men will handle the territory for the present, and W. R. Clarkson, formerly booker for the General Film and the Paramount exchange of Kansas City, will be the booker for the International Film Service. B. J. Lyon, district manager of the company, who has recently established branches at Cincinnati, Seattle, Cleveland and Oklahoma City, was in Kansas City helping to get the Kansas City branch started.

F. L. Newman Supervising Butterfly Theater.

F. L. Newman, proprietor of the Royal and Regent theaters of Kansas City, is now supervising the Butterfly theater at Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

Take Over Theater at Slater, Mo.

Kansas City, Mo.—Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Jenkins, formerly proprietors of the St. John and Highland theaters of Kansas City, have recently leased the Auditorium theater at Slater, Mo., which is owned by a stock company. The theater has a seating capacity of six hundred. As a result of their luck with Blue bird features in Kansas City, Mr. Jenkins has booked a contract for Bluebird features at the Auditorium.

G. W. Hinton Joins Universal.

Kansas City, Mo.—G. W. Hinton, formerly with the World Film at Denver and at Cincinnati recently joined the salesforce of the local Universal. He has just returned [illegible] trip to the territory and has been very successful.

Ted Morris Loses Young Son.

Kansas City, Mo.—Ted Morris, traveling representative for the Universal, recently suffered the loss of one of his two boys, who died from diphtheria, and the other boy is now recovering from the same disease.

Texas Film Trade Improves

Southwest Texas Had Been Feeling Something of a Slump, But Is Picking Up Splendidly—Exchanges Report Thirty Per Cent. More Customers and a Fifty Per Cent. Better Business Than Ten Weeks Ago.

From C. A. Walker, 614 Milam St., Houston, Texas.

DALLAS, TEXAS.—All over Southeast Texas there is a noticeable improvement in conditions among the exhibitors. Ten weeks ago many theaters in the smaller towns were closing down altogether, and those running every night, dropping to two and three nights a week. Every day one hears of a house that within the past week or two has been closed, opening up again; and in many instances the towns where the exhibitor has been running only part-time, is now running every week-day night and a lot of them Sundays also, the business being so good. Film exchanges report almost 30 per cent. more customers on their books now than three months ago; and say that business is at least fifty per cent. better.

Central, New Exchange, at Waco.

Waco, Texas.—The Central Film Service Corporation has opened offices at Waco, Texas, composed of D. J. Byars, formerly in the Central Feature Film Co., at Waco, and W. H. McCullough, president of the Central Texas Exchange National Bank at Waco. The company will operate in Texas, Louisiana, Arkansas and Oklahoma, with headquarters at Waco, Texas.

The concern has made contracts with B. S. Moss Motion Picture Corp., for all Moss productions in the territory; and are now busy exploiting their initial Moss production, which is "One Day," never before handled in the Southwest. It is rumored that the Central will also handle the productions of another prominent manufacturer within a short time.

Exhibitor J. N. Stewart.

Dallas, Texas.—J. N. Stewart, owner of the Dreamland theater, Denton, Texas, and partner of E. O. Kirkland in the Roseland theater, Dallas, died November 7, after a brief illness. Mr. Stewart, formerly in a mercantile business, started his exhibiting career last year, when he purchased the Dreamland at Denton from Mr. Kirkland; and he built up an excellent business with this house and was well liked by the people of Denton, for giving a clean, wholesome show. Mr. Stewart leaves a widow, two boys and a daughter.

Manager C. C. Ezell Coming to Dallas.

Dallas, Texas.—Claude C. Ezell, formerly manager of the General at Dallas, and recently at the head of that company's exchange in Atlanta, Ga., has been transferred to Dallas, succeeding Dave Prince, who was sent to Detroit for the General. Mr. Ezell has been in New York, in conference with heads of the organization, and a booming reception is planned for him when he returns to Dallas. He is one of the most popular exchangemen ever in Dallas, and is well liked by his competitors as well as exhibitors.

President Dave Reed Called to New York.

Dallas, Texas.—Dave Reed, president of the Metro Pictures Corp. of Texas, at Dallas, returned from an extended trip to New York on November 9, and was greeting fellow exchangemen when a wire was received from the New York office of the Metro, asking him to "take the first train for New York." Old Dame Rumor is whispering many things that are "going to happen" because of the suddenness of Mr. Reed's second trip. One exchange man said "Something's going to happen quick—but it hasn't yet."

Made Quite a Record Already.

Dallas, Texas.—F. J. Boyer, head of the Southern Cabiria Company in Dallas, is the proud owner of a new Overland automobile. Mr. Boyer says he, the new car and a print of "The Unwritten Law" will start traveling over the territory as soon as he learns to drive "all right." He's evidently learning rapidly—one lamp post, the rear of his garage, a policeman's coat-tail and a yellow houn' dog is the sum total so far.

W. G. Underwood Taken Sick.

Dallas, Texas.—W. G. Underwood, manager of the Pathe exchange, Dallas, was taken ill November 8, and after a hasty examination his physician ordered him to prepare for at least a month in bed, as he was completely "run down." Word was gotten to the Pathe company and Mr. C. A. Meade, former manager of the V-L-S-E in Dallas, and recently with Pathe in Atlanta, was transferred to take charge of the Dallas office until Mr. Underwood was fully recovered.

J. W. Cotter Now Mutual Roadman.

Houston, Texas.—J. W. Cotter, formerly Joplin, Mo., manager of the Western film exchange, and connected with the Universal and other concerns in the Middle West, is the new road man in the Southeast Texas territory for the Mutual, with headquarters at the Mutual exchange in Houston.

Theater Changes in Texas.

Seadrift, Texas.—R. H. Beirman has purchased the equipment for a picture house from E. J. Fitzpatrick and has opened a new house at Seadrift.

Refugio, Texas.—W. R. Glass, at Refugio, has thrown open the doors of his new Majestic theater.

Sinton, Texas.—The Isis theater at Sinton, closed for some weeks, has been reopened by J. V. Swinney.

Ellinger, Texas.—Another house to reopen after being dark for some time is the Majestic at Ellinger, operated by Chas. Meyer.

Galveston, Texas.—The Rex theater at Galveston has been sold by the Bell Enterprises to M. Forest and J. F. McFarland.

Moulton, Texas.—Fred Marbarger has sold his theater at Moulton to A. F. Kountzebue; and his house at Shiner to L. B. Richter.

Henderson, Texas.—The Star theater at Henderson, formerly operated by Mrs. W. E. Young, is now in the hands of Sterling Brothers, formerly of the Texas Fire Prevention Bureau at Houston, who purchased the theater from Mrs. Young.

Beaumont, Texas.—J. I. Pittman, for several years an exhibitor at Beaumont, has bought the Crystal, a modern house, from J. C. Christopher.

Berclair, Texas.—Arra Bros., who have been operating a show at Tivoli, have opened a new house at Berclair, Texas, seating 250.

Marlin, Texas.—A new negro theater has been opened at Marlin, Texas, known as the Lincoln, operated by J. S. Washington, colored.

Bremond, Texas.—Ed. Muret has leased his Rosary theater at Bremond, Texas, to Jas. Turner.

Brazoria, Texas.—Another South Texas theater to reopen after several weeks of darkness, is Hopkins Bros.' theater at Brazoria.

Blessing, Texas.—The Cozy theater at Blessing, operated by George W. Baker, has been reopened after making several improvements.

Maramaros, Mexico.—At Maramaros, Mexico, across the border from Brownsville, A. W. Barthel has leased his light plant from his theater to the city authorities, because of the failure of the local plant to produce electric current—this condition caused him to close his theater for the past several months. He has reopened the theater as the Matamaros city government has installed a new electric plant capable of taking care of the electric consumers. The theater is the Germania, and is getting a good business since reopening.

Nederland, Texas.—A new theater, recently opened, is the Key West theater at Nederland.

Aransas Pass, Texas.—E. Warren has purchased the Acme theater at Aransas Pass.

Mission, Texas.—T. A. Humason has sold his Lyric theater at Mission to E. J. Richards.

Texas Business Notes of Interest.

The Consolidated Film & Supply Co., Houston, have installed a projection room for their customers.

Miss Lucille Watson, formerly with the Mutual, Coquille, World and Pathe at New Orleans, is now stenographer at the Consolidated's exchange in Houston.

IN DENVER, COLORADO.

By E. C. Day, Denver Times.

Charles R. Gilmour Local Park Head.

Denver, Colo.—Charles R. Gilmour, manager of the Pathe exchange in Denver, who succeeded J. S. Applegate, is not new to this territory. He is one of the best known exchange managers in the Rocky mountain region, and his appointment is a popular one with the trade.

He is a native of Colorado, and served his apprenticeship in the moving picture industry in this city. Up to a few months ago he had been connected with the World Film Corporation. He served this company as branch exchange manager at Salt Lake, Denver, and Minneapolis. On a recent visit to New York he opened negotiations with the Pathe company which led to his being appointed representative of the business manager in the West. He was making a trip over the Denver territory in this capacity when he received a wire ordering him to the Denver office to assume the duties of manager.

C. R. Gilmour.

Gilmour is of the youngest managers in the business.

MORE SEATTLE NOTES.

(See page 1370.)

Seattle Exchange Managers Make Trips.

Seattle, Wash.—Last week seemed to be one of globe trotting for most of the exchange managers in Seattle.

Mike Rosenberg, of the De Luxe company, made a quick trip to San Fran-

Frisco, and while there entered into a transaction with Sol Lesser, of the All Star Feature Distributors, for "The Libertine," a forthcoming John Mason feature.

C. R. Coulter, owner of Coulter's Attractions, has just returned from New York, where he bought several big features, the names of which will be announced later.

H. G. Rosebaum, manager of Artcraft, returned the first of the week from a trip through Western Oregon, making the larger towns. Every one of those towns, he says, are now assured of seeing Mary Pickford pictures.

E. S. Coates, manager of Fox's Seattle office, is just back from a trip through eastern and central Washington. Mr. Coates says that, with potatoes high and still climbing, the farmers are getting ready to make a lot of money in that section and that Fox business has already begun to feel the reaction.

W. A. Mead, traveling representative for Triangle out of Seattle, recently returned from a two weeks' tour of Eastern Washington, where he reports contracts closed for Triangle pictures in nearly every town visited.

New Assistant Manager for Artcraft.

Seattle, Wash.—Manager Roseblum of the Seattle Artcraft office announces the engagement of an assistant manager to help him out with his volume of work. The new man is Guy Navarre, recent graduate of the University of Washington Law School.

Unity's Vice-President in Seattle.

Seattle, Wash.—Andrew J. Cobe, vice-president and general manager of the Unity Sales Corporation spent several days in Seattle this week. We had a nice little talk with Mr. Cobe about the motion picture business, and among other things he told us that he had just arranged with the Reel Play Feature Film Company to handle for Seattle all productions of his company, and that a similar arrangement with the De Luxe-Lasky Corporation in Portland completed the list of cities in all parts of the United States from which Unity pictures were distributed.

Interesting Visitors in Seattle This Week.

Seattle, Wash.—Nell Clark Keller, who with her husband, Edgar Keller, played the parts of Madame Croissett and Jean Croissett in "God's Country and The Woman," called at the Seattle Vitagraph office en route to New York from Los Angeles.

W. L. Stern, business manager of the G. A. Metcalfe Company arrived in this city the latter part of the week for an indefinite stay here.

John W. Drum, Coast division manager for World, and H. B. Dobbs, road man for World, are making things interesting around the Seattle World office this week.

Chehalis, Wash.—A new theater has opened in the new town of Onalaska, 16 miles by stage from here. The house seats 250, and is operated by a local timber company. The patrons are mostly loggers and business is reported good.

North Bend, Ore.—Geo. Hegle has sold his theater.

California Briefs.

Oakland, Cal.—Emil Kehrlein & Sons, who have taken a lease on the Oakland Photo theater, will change the name to the Kinema when this house is opened by them in December.

Dinuba, Cal.—The Dinuba theater was destroyed by fire on Nov. 3.

Lindsay, Cal.—The building formerly occupied by the Rink theater has been remodeled and reopened as the Empress theater. Contracts have been signed for Bluebird, Paramount, Triangle and Metro pictures, which will be offered at 5 and 10 cents.

Frisco License Fees Abolished

City Attorney Long Finds That New Ordinance Superceding Censorship Abolishes Old License Fee of $25 the Quarter Paid by Picture Theaters—New Measure May Call for a Fee of Some Kind.

From T. A. Clinch, 1507 North Street, Berkeley, Cal.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal.—According to an opinion rendered by City Attorney Percy V. Long moving picture theaters will hereafter not be required to pay a license fee of $25 a quarter. This opinion was rendered to the Tax Collector, who wanted to know if the recently enacted ordinance by which the Board of Censors was abolished also repealed the prior license fee ordinance passed in 1909. The City Attorney held that the new act specifically repeals all sections of the old ordinance which are inconsistent with it. This will make it unnecessary for the proprietors of moving picture theaters to obtain a police permit and pay a license fee. The present ordinance provides merely that the police have authority to prevent the showing of pictures of an immoral nature.

The new ordinance was adopted solely for the purpose of getting rid of censorship, and the ruling of the City Attorney came as a surprise to exhibitors. But little complaint has ever been made here in regard to the local license fee, and it is considered likely that the Board of Supervisors will pass a measure calling for the payment of a fee of some kind, possibly on a graduated scale.

Fred Frisk Buys Out Partners.

San Francisco, Cal.—Fred Frisk has purchased the interests of his former associates in the United theater exchange, Pacific building, and is now the sole owner. Among the recent sales made through the medium of this office has been that of the Modesto theater, Modesto, Cal., whereby the interests of A. A. Richards have been taken over by Alabert & Berand; the Poppy, on Sixteenth street, San Francisco, transferred from Mr. Coffee to Mr. Bolt, and the Park on East Twelfth street, Oakland, which has been sold to a company recently organized to conduct a chain of theaters. Mr. Frisk is also representing Mrs. Emma J. Whitman, who has invented and patented a hat holding device for theater chairs, and who intends to place this on the market shortly.

Magner Sells Kellermann Production.

San Francisco, Cal.—Nat A. Magner has disposed of the California, Arizona and Nevada rights to "Neptune's Daughter," featuring Annette Kellermann to Sol Lesser for the amount originally paid by him to the Universal. Mr. Magner recently went East in company with S. Hertzberg, of the Apollo theater, Shanghai, China, whom he represents in this country, and returned after a short stay in New York to meet Arthur Zeihm, who conducts a large theater at Manila. Mr. Zeihm has since left for New York, but will return shortly. Mr. Magner does a very large export business, and this is showing a steady increase.

Fox Film Exchange to Move.

San Francisco, Cal.—Arrangements have been completed for the erection of a fine building on Golden Gate avenue, just beyond Leavenworth street, to be occupied exclusively by the Fox corporation. The location is one block from the present quarters, and just beyond the site chosen by the Mutual for its new home. Work has already been started on the building, and as there is but little excavating to be done, it is believed that the structure will be completed some time in February. The building will be of fireproof construction, with a frontage of forty feet, and will have a basement and mezzanine floor, with the most modern facilities for the handling of film and advertising matter.

Manager William Citron returned from the convention of branch managers at New York in time to cast his vote and is very enthusiastic over the forthcoming offerings of the concern he represents, and its new policies. Charles I. Luntz and Harry Carney, traveling representatives of the firm, came in from the road to meet Mr. Citron and have gone out again.

Empress Books "The Libertine."

San Francisco, Cal.—Sid Grauman, manager of the Empress theater, has booked "The Libertine" for the week of Nov. 19, and is now following the policy of offering a stellar moving picture production each week as a part of his vaudeville bill, feeling that this is essential. Sol L. Lesser recently secured rights for about one-half the United States for this picture, and is offering it in California, Arizona, and Nevada through the All-Star Feature Distributors, Inc.

Mrs. Vernon Castle May Appear.

San Francisco, Cal.—Mrs. Vernon Castle is coming to California, where a portion of "Patria" is to be filmed, and an attempt is being made to secure her presence at the Imperial theater when the first showing of this serial is made in December at this exclusive house. Manager Knappen of the International is hopeful that an arrangement of this effect can be made. This concern has booked the third of its feature releases, "The Ocean Waif," over the entire Turner & Dahnken circuit.

Rialto Plans Theda Bara Week.

San Francisco, Cal.—The management of the Rialto theater announces a novelty for the week of November 12, when the seven days and nights will be given over to the presentation of productions in which Theda Bara is the star. Each day there will be a change, the following being the program in the proper order: "Sin," "A Fool There Was," "The Clemenceau Case," "The Devil's Daughter," "Kreutzer Sonata," "Carmen" and "The Galley Slave."

"Intolerance" Engagement Extended.

San Francisco, Cal.—Owing to the unprecedented demand to see "Intolerance" arrangements have been made for rerouting other attractions and this production will be shown for two weeks longer. It is still necessary to secure seats in advance and the picture is shown to capacity houses at all performances.

San Francisco Notes.

J. J. Unger, district manager for Metro, is making a business trip to Seattle.

J. R. Saul has secured a lot on Clement street, in the Richmond District, and plans to erect a moving picture theater with a seating capacity of 1,800.

A number of changes have been made in the plans for the California theater on Market street since construction work started and it is now planned to have the Fourth street side finished to conform with the Market street frontage.

William P. Muir, manager of a moving picture house at 1264 Jackson street, passed away recently under mysterious circumstances.

The Savoy theater has been closed, owing to trouble in regard to the lease.

Herman Wobber, general manager of the Progressive Company, is making a trip of inspection to the southern part of the State.

Merced, Cal.—The Lyric theater has been reopened by Mike Athens, of Fresno.

Oregon Blue Law Repealed

Sunday Closing Statute Enacted in 1864 Repealed—Vote in Portland Overwhelmed Adverse Voting in Agricultural Neighborhoods—Power of the Screen a Telling Factor in the Election.

PORTLAND, Ore.—Oregon's Blue Laws are no more. Section 2125, Lord's Oregon Laws, which prohibits "keeping open any store, shop, grocery, bowling saloon, billiard room, etc., for the purpose of labor or traffic, or any place of amusement (theaters excepted) on the first day of the week," has been wiped from the statute books by a substantial majority. The victory of the liberals over the kill-joys was decisive, and before the middle of the evening the outcome of the vote was clearly apparent.

The repeal of the measure was most favored in Portland and vicinity. Many of the small towns in the state voted to keep the law on the books, but the overwhelming vote in the state's metropolis overbalanced the votes in the small towns and farming communities.

Although enacted in 1864, Oregon's Blue Law first attained notoriety a few months ago when it was put into effect against a small grocer who had always kept his store open. His arrest resulted in litigation and injunctions, and many people then for the first time became aware of the existence of the law.

The motion picture industry in Oregon was interested in the law for the reason that while it excepts theaters from its operation, there is no decision here that a motion picture show is a theater. The exhibitors anticipated that if the law were not repealed, the Sunday closing faction would immediately test the issue.

Will Home Rule Not Apply?

The legal question now arises: Will the Oregon Home Rule amendment permit municipalities to pass local laws closing theaters on Sunday? Judge Coke indicated in a recent Eugene decision that where there was no Sunday closing provided by state statute, local laws would govern and demand that Eugene's theaters close Sundays in a manner noted in another article on this page. The Oregon Home Rule amendment provides:

"The legal voters of every city and town are hereby granted power to enact and amend their municipal charters, subject to the constitution and criminal laws of the State of Oregon."

Screens Are Effective.

The Sunday closing law was defeated largely through the efforts of the Independent Retailers' Association working in conjunction with the Oregon Motion Picture Men's Association. An extensive campaign was carried on by means of slides and the work of the motion picture men is conceded to have played the most important part in the victory.

Oregon Theater Changes.

Ralph Hoyle has taken over the Majestic theater here. Mr. Hoyle formerly managed the Hoyle Musical Comedy Company in Portland, which played a long engagement at the Nickelodeon last year.

Sheridan.—E. M. McGann has sold the Grand to E. E. Lewis.

Silverton.—M. G. Cooley has taken back the Gem, reported as sold last week.

Portland.—The Derby, Kenton, reopened Nov. 5, by Neil O'Hare, who recently purchased the building.

Roseburg.—Woods and Woods are preparing to reopen the Palace. These men formerly conducted a theater at Cottage Grove, and A. H. Woods was piano player at Hood river at one time.

McMinnville, Ore.—F. A. Watrous sold the Star theater to C. L. Dagg. Mr. Watrous had owned the theater for several years. Mr. Dagg formerly managed the Emma theater, Payette, Idaho.

Astoria, Ore.—The Columbia theater has been purchased by Verd Wilson from D. H. Welch. Mr. Welch has signed up for Universal service.

Baker, Ore.—L. Pefferie has reopened the [illegible].

O. Wogg Working Montana With "Purity."

Portland, Ore.—O. Wogg, formerly roadman for the Standard Feature Film Co., is now working Montana with "Purity" for M. Rosenberg.

Portland, Ore.—The Pastime theater, Pendleton, and the Baker at Baker, Ore., are reported to have installed new photoplayers, operators to handle them coming from San Francisco.

Portland, Ore., Visitors.

Portland, Ore.—Among the visitors on Film Row were S. Danz, Star, Astoria, Bart Bertleson, with Clemmer, Seattle, R. W. Bertleson, road man for K-L-S-E, Hugh Renny, World, Geo. P. Endert, Greater Features, Seattle.

Use Power of the Screen Intelligently

Oregon Election Has Demonstrated the Political Power of the Picture Screens—Vote-Power of the Screen Should be Carefully Guarded.

PORTLAND, Ore.—The election demonstrated to the motion picture men of Oregon the value of the screen to educate the people on political measures. The re-election of Judge Gatens to the Circuit bench was undoubtedly due to the fact that he had the support of the Portland motion picture theaters, and that moving pictures of the judge in characteristic action were shown in the city's show houses.

It is anticipated that next election politicians will be [illegible] using them to run moving pictures of candidates for pay. A prominent picture man warns exhibitors against so doing.

"Never [illegible] part of any candidate unless you are actually supporting him and his policies," he said. "The moving picture is a more effective way of spreading political propoganda than the newspaper. Use it like a newspaper uses its power. Take sides with the man who is one your side. Support the man because he is your man and not because he pays you to run his film. In fact, it is not advisable to take pay for running any political film. Make it a matter of policy and not one of money. The screen is the exhibitors' weapon against adverse and ruinous legislation. Don't throw your weapon away by running political pictures for money.

People of Eugene, Ore., and Sunday Closing

Judge Coke of the Trial Court Says That Sunday Shows Are Now Up to the People of the Locality—Law's Constitutionality.

EUGENE, Ore.—The Progressive Amusement Company, of which A. H. McDonald, Rex theater, is the leading spirit, recently sought to enjoin the city of Eugene from enforcing its Sunday closing law against theaters. Theaters here are closed under a city charter adopted before the enactment of the Oregon Sunday closing law exempting theaters. After the passage of the state law, known as Section 2125, the Eugene charter was reenacted carrying the original Sunday closing provisions.

The Progressive Amusement Company contended that the provisions of the original charter were made void by the enactment of Section 2125, and the the reenacted charter had no more effect than the original one, and further that the reenacted charter conferred a greater power with respect to Sunday closing than the state itself had, and that the local provisions [illegible].

[illegible] ing the injunction, the judge took the view that inasmuch as theaters were exempted from the state Sunday closing law, there was no state law applying to theaters. Concluding his decision, the judge said: "The entire question of whether theaters may be opened and operated on Sunday was and is a question exclusively for the consideration of the people of Eugene, unless the ordinance is unconstitutional, and I regard this as a question for the Supreme Court of the state, rather than the trial court."

Mr. McDonald, of the Rex, contends that Judge Coke's decision will have a far-reaching effect unless it is reversed by the Supreme Court. Although the state Sunday closing law has been repealed, the fight will have to be carried up on constitutional grounds, namely, that it is discrimination for cities to close theaters and permit other businesses to remain open. Mr. McDonald and his attorneys believe they will be on the winning side if an appeal is had. So far Mr. McDonald has borne the expense alone.

New Supply Store to Open in Seattle

Glen W. Waring and W. H. Fink Are Starting Out in the Supply Business—Will Have Temporary Store at 1014 Third Avenue.

[illegible] Benvenuto, East Seattle, Wash.

SEATTLE, Wash.—Glen W. Waring, manager of the G. A. Metcalfe supply store here, tells us that he is getting ready to go into business for himself. W. H. Finck of this city will be his partner, and the new supply house will operate under the name of "Waring and Finck."

Mr. Waring has been in the supply business for about seven years, having been with the firm of George Breck in San Francisco for six years. He left Breck to go with G. A. Metcalfe, and after two or three months with that firm in San Francisco he came to Seattle to open up the Metcalfe branch here. During the year he has been here he has made a long list of friends for himself among the exhibitors of the Northwest and has acquired an enviable reputation as a business man.

Mr. Finck was formerly associated with the banking and mining businesses in this city. He is a native son of Seattle, a former student in the University of Washington law school, and a National Guard Officer. His wide popularity is sure to be an effective asset in his new business venture.

The new store will open within the next week or ten days at the temporary address of 1014 Third avenue. As soon as the new exchange building is completed. "Waring and Finck" will move into it with a complete line of projection machines, supplies, motor generators, and general theater equipment. A repair department will also be installed.

International to Open Office in Seattle.

Seattle, Wash.—L. M. Hyslop is here from the San Francisco office of the International to open a branch. The location has not been decided upon, but F. W. Locker will be manager, while Mr. Hyslop will have charge of the booking end of the business. The exchange will open within a couple of weeks.

Strand at Winnipeg Reopens

"Mezzanine De Luxe" With Especially Luxurious Chairs Is One of Its New Features—Will Be for Ladies and Children and Ladies With Escorts—House as "Lightest Spot on Main Street."

By E. C. Thomas, 821 Rogers Bldg., Vancouver B. C.

WINNIPEG, MAN.—The Strand theater, entirely remodeled in the three weeks during which it was closed, reopened on Nov. 6 to capacity houses. A prodigious amount of work has been accomplished in the theater, under the personal supervision of James Lailey, of Lailey & Menzies, who held the contract.

The seating capacity has been increased to about 1,500, and new opera chairs have been installed throughout. The balcony is to be reserved to be designated "mezzanine de luxe," and here especially luxurious chairs have been provided, as this section has been set aside exclusively for ladies and children, and ladies with escorts. At the rear of the balcony is a spacious lounge room, which is designed as a waiting room for balcony patrons, especially during inclement weather. Connecting with this is the ladies' room, with tables and easy chairs.

The entire house is now a blaze of light, inside and out, and amply deserves its appellation of "the lightest spot on Main Street." In the auditorium have been installed lights with a combined power of 26,000 watts, while an additional 15,000 watts have been used in decorating the exterior.

The stage is equipped with entirely new scenery, drop curtains and hangings, and the redecoration of the interior has been carried out in old rose, ivory and gold. This work was done by J. E. Dolen, who also had charge of the decorating of the Orpheum and Pantages theaters. A new ventilating plant has been installed, with an exhaust capacity of 7,000 cubic feet per minute.

E. F. Seamans contiues as manager of the Strand, with N. Chambers as assistant manager. The house is the principal Canadian unit in the Allardt circuit, controlled by L. F. Allardt, of Chicago. In addition to the Strand in Winnipeg, other houses have lately been secured in Port Arthur, Fort William, Saskatoon, Regina, Moose Jaw, Weyburn and Brandon, in association with C. P. Walker of this city and Barney Groves of Regina.

Vaudeville and moving pictures will be shown at the Strand, and the "Yellow Menace" serial will be featured. Performances are continuous, with matinee prices at 5 and 10 cents, and 10 and 20 cents after 6 p. m.

Herbert Lubin, Slinger of Type.

Winnipeg, Man.—Under the guiding hand of Herbert Lubin of the Standard Film Service, the smashing Metro publicity campaign in behalf of M. J. Williamson's National and Imperial theaters has begun. The Motion Picture Department of the Winnipeg Tribune on a recent Saturday contained a one and one-half page ad. setting forth the attractions for the following week at the National, and the remaining half page was also devoted to Metro publicity, in the form of reading notices. In addition to all this there was a further half-page giving the bill at the Imperial theater, and still more readers scattered about. (When H. Lubin, Esq., starts to sling type, no one else on this side of the line can keep within sight of his flying coat tails. As a publicity promoter he is in a class by himself.)

The Imperial Made Quite a Beauty.

Winnipeg, Man.—The newly-opened Imperial theater, formerly known as the Majestic, has been vastly improved by the alterations made recently. The auditorium has been decorated in cream and gold, while the seats are finished in silver-gray. In the foyer old ivory and gold are the predominating colors, with handsome draperies of old rose. Here also have been added new rugs and mirrors. A large ladies' room has been fitted up, and a new ventilating and heating system installed. A four-piece orchestra is used.

Vancouver Expects a Better Censor

Vancouver, B. C.—The moving picture interests recently came to the rescue of the Vancouver City Liberal Association, which found itself financially crippled following the recent election which resulted in a Liberal landslide. There existed a deficit of about $2,000, to relieve which various local exhibitors and all the Vancouver film exchanges except one, each contributed $50.

The counting of the overseas soldiers' votes gave Premier Bowser a seat in the next Legislature, but the five other members from Vancouver will be Liberals, and the entire house will be overwhelmingly Liberal. It is generally thought at this time that a new censor will be appointed, and it is persistently rumored that the mantle will fall on a veteran Vancouver exhibitor who has only recently retired from active participation in the management of a theater.

Pickford Production Blanks Asks Questions.

Vancouver, B. C.—Local exhibitors have recently received application blanks for the new Mary Pickford productions, which are being handled in Canada by the new-formed Monarch Film Co., Ltd.—a subsidiary of the Famous Players, with I. Soskin as general sales manager. Very detailed information is required from exhibitors applying for the service, including seating capacity, amount now spent on advertising, additional amount which would be spent on the Pickford subjects, exact location of the house, prices charged, etc. Ben Soskin, manager of the Famous office in Vancouver, states that all contracts will be made direct with the head office of the company in Toronto. The Monarch will also handle the new Clara Kimball Young releases.

Studio for Dominion Educational Films

Site in Victoria, B. C., Has Been Chosen—Proposal to Spend $10,000 at Once on Improvements and $100,000 in Three Years.

VICTORIA, B. C.—Considerable progress has been made in regard to the establishment of a moving picture studio in this city, and the Dominion Educational Films, Limited, now located in Vancouver, is willing to commence operations at once if the citizens will give them a site. The committee of business men recently chosen has already selected such a site, and the property has been inspected and approved by J. Arthur Nelson, manager of the company. The land in question is situated near the Gorge, and at present belongs to the Hudson's Bay Company, to whom a definite offer and agreement have been forwarded, for approval or rejection.

The proposal is that the film company shall expende the sum of $10,000 in improving the property, and pay out in actual cash in conection with the business $100,000 within the next three years. If this is done the title to the property is to be handed to them free of all charges. Should the company fail to fulfill the provisions of the agreement the land would revert to the Hudson's Bay Company. Should the Hudson's Bay Company turn down the proposal of the citizens' committee another site will be chosen at once, as several were inspected during Mr. Nelson's recent visit to this city.

"Ashes of Embers" Censored Out."

Vancouver, B. C.—The Famous Players subject, "Ashes of Embers," with Pauline Frederick, booked for showing at the Globe theater here, and extensively advertised, was rejected by the British Columbia censors. It was found impossible to so cut the film as to meet the approval of the censors, so the B. S. Moss production, "The Salamander," the Canadian rights for which are controlled by the Famous Players, was thrown into the breach.

The officials of the National Amusement Company were especially disappointed at this rejection, as Pauline Frederick is a very heavy drawing card here.

A TIN SOLDIER (Two Parts—Nov. 28).—The cast: Mr. Bridge (George Beane); Mrs. Bridge (Florence Oberle); "Rats" Bridge (Bruce Kent); Miss Dilly Dally (Florence Barr).

Mrs. Bridge, making preparations for the mask ball, is not in sympathy with her husband's predicament. He is suffering with a severe toothache. Dragged to the ball in his costume of a soldier he escapes early and, leaving the uniform at home, goes to a dentist. "Rats" Bridge dons his father's uniform and goes to the ball. Miss Dilly Dally, a coquette of considerable weight, resumes her attentions to the supposed Bridge, Sr., and starts a riot. Mrs. Bridge discovers the deception but it doesn't make her feel any more kindly toward her spouse. She drags him out of the dentist's chair at the early morning hour and leaving the tooth behind hurries him home. "If a fat woman comes here chase her until she evaporates," Bridge orders his son. Mrs. Bridge's second cousin, somewhat fat, arrives for a visit and "Rats" promptly locks her in an ash pit. But all's swell that ends swell and Bridge gets rid of his aching tooth, his affinity and his other troubles.

DREAMY DUD JOYRIDING WITH PRINCESS ZLIM (Nov. 29).—Dreamy Dud finds himself in Africa, the reluctant escort of Princess Zlim, the ebony lady of pronounced pulchritude. She invites him to take a ride in the Royal Jitney Bus and after cranking the elephant's tail, they climb aboard. Gasoline is taken on for the elephant and after drinking it he becomes unsteady and engages in various fights with other animals, making it extremely hard for the Princess to make love to Dreamy Dud. The resultant adventures give Dud a thrilling time, but he soon wakes up to find his mother calling him.

Half a reel of Apache Trail, and the beautiful scenery of the adjoining locality make up the rest of this offering.

THE FINAL FRAUD (Three Parts—Dec. 2).—The cast: Richard Denton (Bryant Washburn); Marie Weston (Gertrude Glover); Louis Le Strange (Ernest Maupain); Henry Weston (John Cossar).

Dick Denton, a young man of uncertain identity, wins the love of Marie Weston. Notwithstanding that Denton refuses to give an account of himself, her father, a millionaire, finally consents to their marriage. Weston is entrapped by Le Strange, the chief of a coterie of international blackmailers. Led to the crooks' den, he finds Denton, apparently a crook, also. Weston tells his daughter and forbids the marriage. She is heartbroken. However, when Dick and the blackmailers are arrested finally in a spectacular raid, Marie goes to him at the prison. She tells Dick she will marry him if he will promise to reform. It is then that the chief of the federal secret service enters and congratulates Dick. For instead of being a crook, Denton is in reality a secret service agent who had disguised himself in order to round up the blackmailers.

BIOGRAPH.

THE INFLUENCE OF THE UNKNOWN (Reissue—Nov. 27).—The cast.—The Girl (Mae Marsh); her Sweetheart (Robert Harron); Revenue Officer (Henry Walthall).

He was a young man and out of work. The baby was about to come and he was in despair. He took a position with the revenue officers who were about to leave to suppress the manufacture of illicit whiskey. Down in the Kentucky hills they were sent on the trail of the moonshiners. They seemed a hard band to capture. The young officer hit upon a plan which would gain admittance into their hard and secret natures. He posed as a hunted moonshiner and the other officers were on the trail. They pursued him to the cabin of the old leader and then across the valley to another cabin where dwelt the old man and the girl. The girl was impressed by his story and agreed to save him from the officers. She hid him in the cabin and the officers went their way leaving the young man a spy.

On the old father's return, he believed the young man's story and when the other moonshiners, a father and his young son in love with the young girl, came in, they consented that he should join the gang. Soon he was at work on the still with them. But down in the valley the officers called to him. The moonshiners heard and covering up their still with the brushes which they use for this purpose, they compelled him to be blindfolded and led away from the territory. He asked for one moment to be alone and was given a little freedom. He had arranged with the officers that a certain tree should act as their post-office. The girl who had climbed a tree nearby saw one of the officers come to the appointed tree and leave a note behind. Her curiosity overcame her and she went to the tree and took out the note and read: "Your wife sends this and longs to see you now the baby has come. The chief says now is the time to strike the moonshiners." A photograph of the baby was also enclosed. The horrible truth dawned upon the girl—the man was a spy, yet the baby in her young mother heart aroused her sympathy and her heart went out to the man.

From a distance she watched him approach the tree, take out the letter, which she had placed back, and return to the shack. The other members of the gang, however, had become suspicious and coming into the shack they declared that the man was a spy and demanded that he be searched. In the next room, however, he heard them and escaped through an open window. He was pursued, brought back and tied. They decided to wait a few days and then make away with him. The girl, who had kept the copy of the baby's photograph, left alone in the cabin with the man while her boy lover paraded outside, looked at the picture of the baby. Again her sympathies were aroused. She thought of the little baby and the mother waiting at home. She went into the next room and let the man go. There was another chase over the mountains, but this time the man got away by hiding in a clump of bushes. The girl tried to explain that she did it for the baby, but naturally the moonshiners could not understand. Perhaps they understood better when a letter came, telling them that the young revenue officer had left the service and would never return to molest them.

THE WAGES OF SIN (Reissue—Three Parts—Nov. 29).—The cast.—Barbara Dale (Irene Howley); Rev. George Brand (Walter Miller); Stephen Marley (Franklin Ritchie); Lieutenant Wentworth (William Jefferson); Rose Dean (Frances Nelson); Ruth Hope (Violet Horner).

Sentenced to a term in prison for stealing money to save her baby's life, Ruth Marley comes out to find the world against her. Ill and destitute, forsaken by the good-for-nothing Stephen Marley, whom she married in the belief that the man she really loves has committed a great wrong, Ruth sends for her foster-father, Mr. Dean, and his daughter, Rose. They take her home, where she is denounced as a thief by Lieutenant Wentworth, Ruth's fiance, whom she robbed.

Despite the fact that she has given the alarm that prevented her husband and his pal from robbing the house, she is turned out. Juliana, an actress, takes her in. Stephen and Ned, hiding in a basement, are found by Barbara Dale, a girl whom Marley first betrayed and then forced to accuse the Reverend George Brand, Ruth's former lover, as the guilty man. Barbara discloses the hiding place to Ruth, who confronts Stephen and threatens to denounce him if he will not clear George Brand's name. He is beating her when George and a policeman enter. A confession follows, and Ned, in panic, fires a shot which finds its mark in Stephen. Ruth and her lover are married and she is reconciled with the Dean family.

KNICKERBOCKER STAR FEATURE.

BUTTS CASEY, CROOK (Two Parts—Dec. 1).—Butts Casey, crook, is summoned to the police station and questioned by Chief of Police Curren about a robbery that took place the night before in which a watchman was stabbed. Third degree methods are used with the knife that had been found on the scene. Butts rises and calmly says, "Curren, you haven't anything on me, and never will. So long." And Butts walks out unmolested.

Then a new element comes into the life of Butts. Ruth West, stenographer in a factory office, and her crippled mother, move into the tenement flat adjoining Butts' room. Butts rescues Ruth from the attentions of a gang of young toughs, and they become acquainted. Harry Allen, Ruth's sweetheart, who is employed by the factory where she works, has been ordered out on the road for a month's trip. Therefore, Butts knows nothing of Harry, and Ruth is silent on the subject because she never dreams that Butts is falling in love with her.

Butts, however, is hard hit. He puts away his burglar tools and gets a job on a construction gang. Chief Curren is amazed when he learns that Butts has gone to work. Meanwhile, in another city, Harry has fallen into the hands of Bert and Olga Lang, card sharpers. When Harry finally quits the game, Lang holds his I. O. U. for $2,000.

At a holiday picnic Butts tells Ruth of his love. The girl is surprised. She tells him that she is engaged to Harry. Butts takes the blow like a man, promising always to be Ruth's friend, and resolving to himself to continue on the straight path.

Harry returns, trailed by the Langs and the fatal I. O. U. Harry's worried manager seems coldness to Ruth. One day Butts finds her crying after she had seen Harry had spoken to Olga. Butts starts an investigation and trails Olga. In a cheap cafe, Butts overhears Olga telling Lang that Harry will "get the money from the office tonight and meet us here."

Butts, alarmed, fearful for Harry, hurries from the cafe.

Harry, threatened by the Langs, who say they will tell the factory boss about the I. O. U., has finally, in desperation, gone to the office to ride the manager's desk, knowing that there is money in one of the drawers. Butts gets his revolver and tools and hurries to the office, where he finds Harry breaking open the drawer. For the sake of the girl, Butts saves Harry from a fatal theft and so arranges the trial that it points plainly to Butts Casey as the intruder. Then Butts takes up the I. O. U. with his own money and gives it to Harry and Ruth as a wedding present, making Harry promise that he will not transgress again. Butts, again brought before Chief Curren, acknowledges he is caught this time. As Butts is led to jail the chief puzzles over the strange case, of which he has seen only the outward signs.

THE PRIZE WINNERS (Nov. 30).—When Babe and Billy are released from the county jail where they were serving sentences for chicken stealing, they resolve that in the future they will work honestly for a living. However, they are not wonders at keeping their minds on work, for the first job they secure is that of inspectors of the beer at a local brewery. All that they know of inspecting beer is to sample it, and after they have sampled it for a few hours, they couldn't even see the buildings, so, of course, when the boss comes around, they lose their positions.

The question of food now beset the Babe and Billy, so to ease their famished stomachs they enter Lady Kate's house where a big masquerade ball is in progress. Finding their way into the cloak rooms they steal everything that they see, but once having secured the silver and other trinkets, they discover that their exit is blocked by the servants, who insist on mistaking them for guests. Forced into the ball room, they are seen by Lady Kate, who immediately gives to them the prize for being the best masqued persons in the room.

After basking for a few moments in the sunny smiles of Lady Kate, Babe decides that honesty is the best policy, so he catches the unwilling Billy and forces him to give up all the stolen jewelry. Babe leaves it on the table for Lady Kate, and with his disgruntled pal leaves the house before their deception is discovered.

FOLLOWING THE FLAG (Three parts—Nov. 27).—The country was patriotically stirred when President Wilson ordered Uncle Sam's land forces to the Mexican border. These forces included not only the regular army, so-called, but the National guards of the various states.

When Pershing and his column crossed the border and penetrated Mexico in search of Villa, there was not a man, woman or child in this country who was not proud of the courage displayed by this indomitable little force, which entered alone the deserts of Mexico after a blood-thirsty bandit.

To see how quickly the National Guardsmen become real soldiers; to see these troopers on long and dusty hikes; to see the artillery and cavalry maneuvers; to see the life in the encampments, the soldiers at mess, etc., are not only entertaining but instructive details.

The difficulties encountered by Pershing and his cavalrymen, the long lines of communication necessary to supply the Pershing forces with munitions, and provide them with supplies are but details of the scenes afield and in camp of Uncle Sam's army. Lessons of patriotism are instilled, and the cause of preparedness is fostered.

MISTAKES WILL HAPPEN (Dec. 2).—The cast: Tom Warner (Tom Mix); Vicky Mason (Victoria Forde); Sneaky Bill (Pat Chrisman); the Sheriff (Sid Jordan). Written and produced by Tom Mix.

Tom Warner and Vicky Mason are to be married, but Tom forgets the marriage license and starts for town after it. While Tom stops at a creek for a drink, Sneaky Bill, a horse thief, takes Tom's fresh horse and leaves the horse he has been riding.

A posse searching for Sneaky Bill sees Tom on the stolen horse and jails him. Vicky's father goes in search of Tom, and seeing Sneaky Bill on Tom's horse, gives chase. Bill jumps from the stolen horse into an automobile, which finally blows up. Vicky and her father rescue Tom from jail, and while Sneaky Bill takes Tom's place in the cell, the wedding ceremony begins.

THE FASCINATING MODEL (Split Reel Release—Nov. 30).—The cast: Billy (Eli Sedgwick); his wife (Violet Eddy); a husband (Jay Belasco); his wife (Belle Bennett). Written by Harry Wulze. Produced by Roy Clements.

Billy is a ladies' tailor who is blessed with a very jealous wife. Jay is a husband of the type that considers their wives as mere servants. He refuses to allow his wife to buy any new clothes and is a tyrant in his home.

Jay's wife gets an idea and goes to work as a model at the tailor's establishment to get a new dress. The tailor is very much taken with her and they go home to have a fitting. There the hubby comes in and there are a great many complications. In the end, however, the jealous wife and the stingy husband are both cured and the picture ends happily.

The second half of the picture is a series of views of Alaska, in which much of the beautiful scenery is shown, as well as the way that the natives live. The natives are shown at their sports and dances and also in one of their primitive hunts.

SAMMIE JOHNSIN'S LOVE AFFAIR (Split Reel Release—Dec. 3).—Sammie has a terrible time. He is in love with a little pickaninny, but she does not return his sentiments. He buys her all sorts of candy and other goodies, but in the end, after taking all these things, she turns him down in favor of the other fellow. So Sammie vows that never again will he fall for the fair sex.

BIG U.

THE MOTHER CALL (Special Release—Nov. 30).—The cast: Mother (Mary Talbot); John (Charles Cummings); Mary (Dorothy Davenport); Doctor (George Pearce). Story by Lynn Reynolds. Produced by Ruth A. Baldwin.

Mary Page's two children, John and Mary, have given their attention to making a success, rather than to their mother. Her letters stir their sympathies, yet the two always seem to find some reason for remaining away from home and mother. As mother's birthday approaches she invites her children to come to see her.

John instructs his secretary to write that he will be unable to come home, and Mary sends a card saying that some social event will claim her. But through some prank of chance the letters were not delivered until the evening of the birthday. Fate brings Mary and John together at lunch time. Each thinks the other is going home and they decide to break all engagements and surprise mother.

Meanwhile with the dinner prepared and table arranged, mother sits down to the table with only the pictures of her children before her. But at last the mother's heart can bear the loneliness no longer—in spite of herself the tears will come. Suddenly the sound of an auto is heard and the children rush in and make up to the dear old mother for all the heart hunger which had been hers.

THE CIRCLE OF DEATH (Special Release—Dec. 1).—Mona is a little Indian girl who is friendly to the settlers. When some of the white men infringe on the Indians' reservation rights they go on the war path, but Mona warns the whites in time so that they can escape.

THE LAST OF THE MORGANS (Two parts—Nov. 29).—The cast: Col Morgan (William V. Mong); Peter (Harry Hollen); the Wife (Nellie Allen); Frank (Billy Human); "Smooth" McGuire (Wm C Carlock). Scenario and production by William V Mong.

Colonel Morgan, the last of the Morgans, has finally come to the end of his resources and is compelled to sell his old homestead. On the day before the sale he visits the grave of his wife and before his vision pass the many happy events of their married life. While he is dreaming the real estate man brings some prospective purchasers to see the place. Morgan cannot stand this invasion of the spot so sacred to him and orders them from the premises.

The next day the place is sold and Morgan is forced to leave. His colored servants feel this keenly, and old Peter tells Morgan that if only he could find the jewels which Mrs. Morgan had hidden when the Northern army invaded the town it would enable him to repurchase the old plantation

Meantime, with the money obtained from the sale, Morgan goes to the city. "Smooth" McGuire, a confidence man, notices the roll of money and with a confederate of his frames up a deal to sell Morgan a street car. They show the old man many passengers riding on the cars and point out that it would be a lucrative investment. Old Morgan buys the car, but soon learns that he had simply given his money to the stranger A kindly policeman gives him sufficient money to return to the old homestead

Old Peter, while ploughing the fields, has discovered the jewels and with the money obtained from the sale of them Colonel Morgan is enabled to buy back the old plantation, although the present owners are loathe to part with it and only do so when Peter threatens to establish a colored church on the adjoining plantation.

EAT AND GROW HUNGRY (Nov. 29).—This is the sad tale of a poor husband who is the janitor in a boarding house. His wife runs the house and gives the star boarder all the good things to eat so that all he can get is a little pea soup. In sheer desperation he plans a scheme. He ries up a string so that he can pull things off the dumb-waiter as they go up to his rival. In this way he is at last satisfied.

TATTLE-TALE ALICE (Dec. 1).—Alice is the tattle-tale of the whole village. So when a real opera singer comes to town she has a great deal to do. There are two of the men in the town who are smitten with the opera singer and first one and then the other gets into a compromising situation with her. Alice tells on both of them and in the end she gets the proper deserts for such conduct. There is a motor boat race and then a ducking.

IMP.

THE HEEL OF THE LAW (Special Release—Two parts—Nov. 30).—The cast: Officer Benton (King Baggot); his sweetheart (Jane Gail).

Benton is promoted to the position of lieutenant of the vice squad for his exceptional services. He tries to break up the vice trust that is flourishing, but encounters strong opposition. At last he is about to succeed when they frame a bribe on him. But his sweetheart has overheard the plot and takes it down on a dictaphone so that she is able to prove his innocence when the marked bills are found on him.

THE MANSARD MYSTERY (Two parts—Dec. 1).—The cast: Geo. Etherbridge (Francis McDonald); Col. Mansard (Howard Crampton); Count Des Auteils (Wadsworth Harris); Brina (Neva Gerber); Butler (William Quinn); Dr Ballard (Joseph Girard). Scenario by Harvey Gates. Produced by Stuart Paton.

On the evening of the Colonel's marriage he attends a dinner given in his honor. The next morning at the breakfast table he is laughed at by his ward, Brina, and nephew, George Etherbridge, who has just returned from Europe, because he does not seem to relish the dishes set before him. But their laughter turns into fear when the Colonel falls unconscious and they are not able to revive him.

Dr. Ballard is sent for and he declares that the Colonel has been poisoned. While the Colonel is conscious Count des Auteils, who has been paying court to Brina, is seen to bend over him and whisper something in his ear. Then the Count repairs to the bathroom and a short time later he rushes forth, highly insulted because one of the servants has been spying upon him.

The Count wants to leave the house, but George and the doctor smooth matters over. As they are in the hall they encounter the butler, who has been spying upon the Count. He declares that the Colonel's tooth-brush is missing.

The Colonel's fiancee arrives and voices her opinion that some one had poisoned the Colonel to prevent their marriage -some one who would be deprived of their inheritance should the marriage be performed.

The doctor administers a stimulant to the Colonel, who responds, and with great effort orders the Count held. He is not a count at all, but a chap from India, who has come to revenge an ancient wrong done his mother by the Colonel.

The Count had poisoned the Colonel's tooth-brush.

THE WALL OF FLAME (Special Release—Dec. 3).—Wallace is a fire inspector who is in love with the daughter of a wealthy factory owner. The latter says that the match is impossible, as Wallace is incorruptible and insists that he make his factory fireproof. Then the building catches fire with the daughter in it. Wallace rescues her and then her father consents to the match.

JOKER.

SCRAPPILY MARRIED (Dec. 2).—The cast: Dr. Keen (William Franey); his wife (Gale Henry); Maid (Lillian Peacock); her lover, Bill (Charles Conklin); Cop (Milburn Morante). Written by Harry Wulze. Produced by W. W. Beaudine.

It is all a bad mistake because Bill calls to see the maid. The maid is the servant in the home of the terrible doctor, and Bill is just naturally afraid of the doctor. So he leaves a note to the maid to that effect, and it is found by the master of the house. This makes the old man angry, as he thinks that it is his wife whom Bill has come to see.

Bill escapes, but is hurt in getting away. So they take him to the hospital and there he is operated upon by the doctor himself. With fiendish glee he goes to it. But Bill manages to escape from this delicate situation and at last the whole affair is cleared when the old man finds that Bill is attentive to the maid and not to his wife.

GOLD SEAL.

SHOULD SHE HAVE TOLD? (Three Parts—Nov. 28).—The cast: John Randall (Edward Hearn); Ed Randall (George Beranger); Mary (Ruth Clifford). Written and produced by John McDermott.

Of the brothers, John and Ed Randall, the one employs his spare time in studying law, while the other seeks low companionship and drink. Before long the ways of the two are so far apart that Ed decides to leave his brother assume another name, go to a distant city, and there live as he pleases.

Soon he becomes the leader of one of the most notorious bands of crooks in the vicinity. Then he meets Mary, a little flower girl, whom he befriends, and ere long she has become his bride. She remonstrates with him, tries to persuade him to give up his evil companions, but he will not listen to her. On the night of their wedding he receives a note calling him for a big "job." He starts to leave, but Mary, reading the note, knocks him unconscious and for a time prevents his going, but later he leaves. She follows and the whole gang are apprehended and arrested. Ed is sent to prison, but Mary is released and the district attorney's wife takes her into her home as her daughter.

Soon after the attorney brings John home with him, and the two meet and love. Mary, hiding her past from her lover, marries him and for some time everything goes happily in the little household, until John discovers that their son, Roy, is reading bad books and smoking.

One day while Mary and Roy are playing ball, it rolls away to a park bench upon which is seated Ed, just recently released from prison. He recognizes Mary and later extorts money from her as the price of his silence. The time comes when she has no more money for him, and then he kidnaps Roy, intending to make him a member of his gang, which Roy is willing to do. Mary rescues him from the den, but Ed, awakening and finding the boy gone, follows to Mary's home, where there is a scene between the three. John returns home as Ed and the boy hide behind a curtain, but Roy calls and John comes back into the room. A fight takes place and a ray of light falling upon Ed's face, makes it possible for John to discover it is his own brother. Ed begs forgiveness, tells John that he had come to rob the house and had been prevented by Mary—so her secret remains with her.

LIBERTY (Episode No. 16—Two Parts—Nov. 27).—The cast: Liberty Horton (Marie Walcamp), Major Winston (Neal Hart), Jose Leon (L. M. Wells), Capt. Bob Rutledge (Jack Holt), Pedro (Eddie Polo), Pancho Lopez (G. Raymond Nye).

This episode opens with the Major crawling out of his improvised grave where he left the bodies of his dead men. He is horror stricken as he sees the ravages of death that are strewn about him. His wounds pain him so that he can scarcely walk. He takes a canteen from one of the bodies, and after quenching his thirst he starts out alone on the desert, to find civilization.

In the meantime Jack and his band of men have decided that they will not go back to the States until they have found Liberty. So they start out in the direction of the Leon Hacienda to hear what news they can. Marie is still in the subterranean chamber. She has not had anything to drink for more than two days, and the thirst is terrible.

In the torture chamber Eddie is faring scarcely any better. They have tortured him so that the spark of life has almost gone out. At last he faints from utter exhaustion and they toss his limp body and put it through an aperture. The door falls back and as Eddy is swallowed up in the black. In the dungeon Liberty is about to weep and, drunk sense of the water when the body of a man came down the chute. It is Eddie. Liberty drags him out of the water, and so saves him from drowning.

In the meanwhile Major Winston is wandering on the desert. He has no more water and is almost dying of thirst. In a frantic effort to find water he digs into the sand. The burning are covering legs of the dogs that he had left soon to die. They are also exhausted and there is no food to eat.

JUST HER LUCK (Two Parts—Nov. 30).—The cast: Marie (Irene Hunt), Jack Gardner (Lee Hill); Miriam's Father (A. E. Witting); Gerbeau Gardner (Nona Gaward), Mrs. Vandervelt (Lydia Titus); Mrs. Dupont (Helen Wright), Grady Ferris (Peggy Coudray).

Miriam and Jack are lovers who have a slight quarrel and Jack goes to the city without leaving any address. Later Miriam decides she will go to the city also but finds that she has little money. To one of the girls in the apartment house where she takes up her abode she gives practically all her funds when the latter appeals to get her last. So Miriam decides to pawn her ring so as to be able to procure a hat and cloak so she can make a presentable appearance when she answers the advertisement for an understudy.

It so happens that the star, Geraldine Gardner, playing at one of the opera houses, becomes tempermental one morning and orders her maid to get rid of a beautiful cloak and hat. The maid takes them to the pawn shop and Miriam exchanges the ring for them.

Arrived at the opera house, Miriam is so busy trying to comfort a girl who did not secure the position that she forfeits her turn and the other girl secures the place. On her way home some crooks attempt to kidnap her, thinking that she is the celebrated Geraldine, but Miriam is rescued by a policeman, and, finding the singer's address in the pocket of the cloak, takes her to the singer's apartments.

When Geraldine returns she is astonished at Miriam's presence, and the next morning, after hearing her story, gives Miriam the position of maid. While Geraldine is absent at rehearsal Jack calls upon Miriam. Geraldine and her friend, Mrs. Vandervelt, return sooner than Miriam expected, and she makes Jack leave. Later Mrs. Vandervelt discovers Jack's hat, which he left behind in his hurry, and Geraldine dismisses Miriam. She sees Jack and tells him that he had better tell his sister the truth, but Geraldine will not believe him.

Returning to her apartments, Miriam finds that they have burned during her absence and she has lost all her possessions. She leaves and falls exhausted in the park, where she is seen by Jack and taken to the hospital. Jack secures a minister and they are at last married.

RED FEATHER.

THE MAIN SPRING (Five Parts—Nov. 27).—The cast: Lawrence Ashmore and Larry Craven (Ben Wilson); Jesse Craven (W. J. Higby); Richard Creelman (Henry Hebard); Edith Craven (Francella Billington); William Ramsdale (C. Benson); Shackleton (R. Whittaker); Israel Farnum (Max Robitan); Jane Carr (Thomas Jefferson); Jarvis (E. J. Brady); Bernice (Mr. Maurice); Directed by William Parker. Produced by Jack Conway.

Jesse Craven, the great financier, is all but is so closely guarded that the public can get no details. Lawrence Ashmore, a young reporter, is detailed by his paper to obtain an interview. Larry Craven, however, is expected one morning, and the chauffeur mistakes Ashmore for him. But when Edith, Jesse's niece, and Richard Creelman, Jesse's friend, see Ashmore they realize that he is not Larry and hold him a prisoner, fearing that he may be a reporter. Larry has been kidnapped by the orders of Shackleton, who is the confidential man—also the former secretary to Craven to Farnum and Sharp, two brokers who are bent upon the ruin of Craven and the thousands of stockholders who have entrusted their investments to him.

Creelman and Ram ale the latter's broker, offer Ashmore a large sum of money if he will pose as Larry, and he agrees. He and Edith become friends. Farnum and Sharp, thinking they have Larry safe, manipulate the stock market and the are looking rather serious for the Craven interests.

In order to carry out their bluff further, it is planned that it shall be reported that Larry—in reality Ashmore—has a fatty will take a yachting cruise. Ashmore and the party leave on the trip, and Shackleton, who has secured the services of a hanchman of the Craven's, kidnaps Ashmore, having entered him there as Larry, but by a ruse, and takes him on board their vessel. A storm comes up and the boat springs a leak. All are forced to jump overboard. Ashmore reaches the shore more dead than alive.

Edith and the other think that Larry has deserted them at the crisis. Ramsdale and Creelman decide to give their entire fortunes to trying to save Craven, Shackleton is better, but Larry has control of his account, and he is helpless. Ashmore hails a passing car to take him back to the Craven place. He rushes to the stock exchange and turns the tide against the conspirators. The Craven fortune is saved.

Farnum threatens to have Ashmore arrested for impersonating a member of the stock exchange. Ashmore defies him and tells him that he is the son of the man whom Farnum ruined, and that he possesses evidence which will send his enemy to jail. Farnum sees himself defeated at every turn.

In the meantime Larry has caught Bernice trying to drug him and has made good his escape from the apartment. He hurries to the Craven's and is recognized at once as the man Larry Craven. He arrives just in time to prevent the shooting of Ashmore by Farnum. Ashmore is presented to Larry as the man who saved the Craven fortune. Larry sees that Edith and he are in love and offers him the position of manager of the Craven interests which Ashmore accepts. Soon after Edith accepts him as her life partner.

THE VAMPIRES (Episode Two—"The Red Notebook"—Three Parts—Nov. 30.)—The cast: Philip Guard, (Edmond Mathe); Mrs. Guard (Florence Simoni); Normandin (Marcel Levesque); Irma Vep and Amie Goff (Juliet Musidora); Great Julot (Eugene Ayme).

When Philip Guard and the police broke into the cellar where the Vampires had planned to execute him, the mysterious bandits fled through an underground passage. However, one of them dropped a red notebook which contained a mere jumble of letters. Guard, a wide-awake newspaper man, finally deciphered it, and from its pages learned many of the secrets of the Vampires. Upon finding that the book had come into the reporter's possession, the desperate men planned to get it back. A spy was set to watch him, but Philip escaped from his home unnoticed and made his way to a cafe in the slums where the band often met.

At the cafe, Guard was surprised to find that a pretty woman who sang there, Irma Vep, appeared to be in league with the Vampires. The Grand Vampire, or as he was known, The Great Julot, soon led his followers into an inner, secret room. Here the reporter was unable to follow them. Returning home, he was overtaken by the breaking of day and knew that it would be hard to escape the spy. Fortunately, he remembered that the chimney in his room was very large, and down this he climbed to escape observation. No sooner was he in his room than a brick about which a note was tied came crashing down the chimney. It said: "A friend who knows the house is watched is waiting above for you to make a signal in the chimney, as he must pay you a short visit." Philip burned a newspaper in the fireplace as a signal. Soon Normandin crawled out of the chimney.

Normandin warned Philip of the Vampires' scheme to do him harm and at the same time recover the red notebook. He gave Philip a fountain pen filled with a deadly poison, which he had stolen from the Grand Vampire. No sooner had Normandin disappeared up the chimney than a ring of the bell announced the arrival of Amie Goff, a new maid. Mrs. Guard found nothing unusual about her, but Philip, instinctively suspected the pretty young woman. He kept wondering where he had seen her flashing eyes before.

When Amie had been observed by Philip trying to drug him, he knew that she was a Vampire. The girl thought that she had administered a sleeping potion. Word came for Mrs. Guard that her brother had been dangerously injured. Despite the lateness of the hour she set out to go to him. Philip was unable to accompany her, but he pressed upon her the poison pen which he had received from Normandin.

Mrs. Guard had been tricked. Her brother had not been injured. She found herself in the clutches of the Vampires. A mute, Father Silence, was left to guard her and extort from her a letter to her son telling him to come to her. Mrs. Guard stabbed Father Silence with the poisoned pen, and made her escape from the den. She hastened home to find that Amie Goff had admitted a Vampire to search for the red notebook. Philip had shot him, as he thought, and then hurried for the police. Upon his return they had vanished, and when his revolver was examined it was found that the Vampires had substituted blank cartridges for those which he had himself placed in the chambers.

The Great Julot, the Vampire admitted by the maid, who was herself Irma Vep, hastened with the girl to the den of Father Silence in the hope of finding Mrs. Guard there. What they found was the dead body of their comrade. The Vampires swore a mighty oath to continue their efforts to kill Philip Guard.

McCarty). Directed by Milton H. Fahrney.

In this picture Jerry has a serious duty to perform, that of rescuing his girl from a "perfectly horrid" boarding house where her father has taken her. True to his character, Jerry causes mix-ups in which the landlady, the father, the policeman and Hank figure prominently.

The first difficulty into which Jerry projects himself is a melee with the police in which the latter get the worst end of a garden hose encounter. Jerry escapes and disguises himself as a woman. In this garb he goes to rescue the girl. He cannot resist the temptation to have a little fun out of the cop, the boarder, and the father, who are misled by his costume and make love to him. But Jerry's fooling on the job and neglecting the serious business in hand finally gets him into trouble and at the end he suffers for his pranks.

MISMATED (Two Parts—Nov. 20).—The cast: The Girl (Reina Valdez); Her bethrothed (Dick Le Strange); His rival (Harry Schenck).

Flo is forced to marry a man she hates. Her real lover still holds an affectionate part in her heart, and she is unhappy with her husband. In a little play given in the fishing town, Flo takes the leading part. The theme of the play is a reconstruction of the happenings of her daily life. The husband is cross and unbearable, and the lover pays secret visits to the heart-sick wife. Finally the husband is saved from drowning by the lover. When he revives he thanks the young man and forgives his wife for all of her past.

Later Flo's lover is actually wrecked at sea, and she pleads with her husband to get into a boat and save him from a watery grave. This the husband does, but it results in his death. Before he dies he realizes that he has been cruel to his wife, asks her forgiveness, and dies blessing she and her lover.

WHEN THE TIDE TURNED (Two Parts—Nov. 27).—The cast: Fred (Frederick Church), Lillian (Lillian Hamilton); Mal (Malcolm Blevins). In After Years—Lillian (Carolyn Higby); Fred, Jr. (Frederick Church).

The woman's husband is jealous of her former suitor, Mal Blevins, and decides he can stand it no longer. He sends their only child, a boy, to his brother. Some few days later he is brought to her dead, and it is not long before the woman marries Mal.

Years later, the woman, whose husband is owner of a western hotel, is surprised to see a young man resembling her first husband come to the hotel. He registers under a strange name however, and does not make known his identity. Mal learning that the young man has a sum of money on his person decides to get it from him. His wife learns of the plot and protests to him, for which she is locked in her room. Later the woman finds, after saving the young man's life, that he is her son.

A DREAM OR TWO AGO (Five Parts—Nov. 27).—The cast: Millicent Hawthorne (Mary Miles Minter); Millicent (at the age of six) (Dodo Newton); her mother (Lizette Thorne); her father (Clarence Burton); Humpy (John Gough); Kraft, manager of cafe (Orral Humphrey).

Millicent Hawthrone, the petted and pampered six-year-old daughter of a wealthy New York family, becomes estranged from her nurse, during a panic in a jewelry shop, and is found by Mother Gumph, the leader of the crooks of the underworld. The little girl is brought up to be a "stool" and becomes a match girl. At day she remembers nothing of her old life, having been injured in the panic. But at night she continually dreams of her beautiful home and her mother's fond love. Later Millicent becomes a cabaret performer. She is trapped by the manager of the cafe and in the struggle that ensues she drops a purse which identifies her as the daughter of the owner of the cafe. She is returned to her home and after an operation regains her memory.

MISS JACKIE OF THE NAVY (Five parts—Nov. 30).—The cast: Jackie Holbrook (Margarita Fischer); Captain Robert Crowne (Jack Mower); Bill Blount (J. Gordon Russell).

Miss Jackie Holbrook is the daughter of wealthy Californians. She is noted for her frolicsome nature, and is the favored of all but Captain Robert Crowne, U. S. A., whose ship is anchored off Coronado awaiting further orders. Jackie decides to make Crowne fall in love with her, and her opportunity comes when she hears of a new sailor going to ship with Crowne to the Isle of Vergania, to quell a native uprising. The girl dons sailor clothes and sails with the ship. She is the butt of Pig Bill Blount's jokes and jeers because of her effeminacy and causes the others on board much laughter. When they arrive at Vergania she is one of those chosen to go into the interior and is the one that saves Crowne's life. Her identity is discovered to the delight of the sailors, and Crowne asks her to marry him immediately.

THE MISCHIEF MAKER (5 Parts, Nov. 27).—Effie Marchand is so full of fun that she keeps Auntie Marchand sitting up nights worrying about her pranks. When the girl finally refuses to notice the photograph of the man her aunt has selected for her—Effie's—husband, the old lady decided Effie must go to Madame Briand's boarding school. Such procedure does not dampen Effie's ardor in the least.

When the art instructor, Jules Gerard, asks that Effie come to his home and pose for him, she never though of hesitating. It meant another lark. The only objection comes from May Mupree, who had posed for the figure, and who does not wish Jules to take another model.

Neither Madame Briand nor the other girls know of Effie's latest prank. One day, in visiting Jules, Effie meets Al, his friend. It is a case of love at first sight—that is all. May continues to get incensed about Effie's visits to Jules' studios. In a final outburst of exasperation, she tells Madame Briand that the other girl has been posing for the figure at the artist's home. Jules, jealous of Al, says that May is telling the truth.

Effie is expelled. As she leaves the building,

BLUEBIRD PHOTOPLAYS, INC.

THE BUGLER OF ALGIERS (Five Parts—Nov. 27).—The cast: Gabrielle (Ella Hall); Anatole Picard (Kingsley Benedict); Pierre Dupont (Rupert Julian). Scenario by E. J. Clawson. Produced by Rupert Julian.

In a little town in France live the orphan, Gabrielle Picard, and her brother, Anatole. She has been a mother to the boy since their own mother died and they are devoted to each other. A friend of the two is Pierre Dupont, who is in love with Gabrielle. When the call comes to fight for France, the two men join the colors. Gabrielle promises Pierre that if he will watch out for her brother that she will marry him upon his return.

In the field, Anatole becomes the bugler of the regiment and during one of the skirmishes he and Pierre become separated from the main division of the army and with them, Peppy, the drummer boy, who dies. So it is that the report comes to the village that the two men are dead. Later the invading army reaches the village. They enter the cottage of Gabrielle and order her to serve them with drinks, which she does, but when they order her to drink a toast against France, she throws the liquor in the officer's face.

Years elapse and Anatole and Pierre return to the village. No one knows of Gabrielle's whereabouts, as she was last seen when the invading army entered the village. Their search is fruitless. At last they settle down in the rebuilt cottage. But never does Pierre lose an opportunity to recount the valor of Anatole when the commander of the foe ordered him to give the bugle call for retreat with the promise that he would be spared and instead Anatole had given the call to charge. Thus the enemy was routed.

Dissard, an officer of the French Government, is at the head of a committee to bestow honors upon those who have done brave deeds. It so happens that the reception which he has planned for a certain officer will have to be abandoned, owing to the hero's death, unless Dissard can find some other one to take his place. The records are searched and it is decided to decorate Anatole Picard. Accordingly he is sent for.

Pierre and Anatole decide to march to Paris in spite of the protest of the villagers, but just as they are at the gates of Paris, Anatole becomes so weak that he cannot go further and dies in a peasant's cabin. Pierre goes on alone and receives the decoration from the President and makes a speech which wins the hearts of his audience. He tells them of Gabrielle and the part she had had in making a hero of Anatole, the spectators thinking that Pierre is Anatole. Much to his surprise, Gabrielle, now an old woman, enters the banquet room and the two are united.

On their way back to the village, she asks where her brother is and Pierre promises to take her to him. They go to the little peasant cabin where Pierre left Anatole ensbrouded in the flag of France. Then Pierre decorates the body with the cross which he received for Anatole; as he never intended keeping the honor for himself.

GREATER VITAGRAPH.

THE DOLLAR AND THE LAW (Five parts—Nov. 20). The cast: Lola Brandt (Lillian Walker); Amost Brandt (Edward Elkas); George Gray (Walter McGrail); Richard Denton (Thomas R. Mills); A. L. Jenkins (Arnold Storrer); Cora (Josephine Earle); Tommy Connolly (Victor Notman); Rose (Vera Norman); Mrs. Connolly (Mrs. Ashley); Mahitable King (Mrs. Maurice); Micha Conle (Harry Fisher); Mrs. Adams (Mrs. West); Butler (Hugh Wynn). Directed by Wilfred North.

Lola Brandt, upon her graduation from high school, enters college. She is not encouraged in her ambitions by her father, who is a miser, so she finally decides to work her way through without his aid. George Gray and Richard Denton are suitors for her hand, and although Denton is far more wealthy, Lola shows a marked preference for George, and before she is through college they are engaged.

Meanwhile a company has been organized and urges the people to place their earnings in a twenty per cent. investment. Many foolishly do this. Denton becomes a member of the firm and, with the president, he continues to exploit the fraudulent scheme. Amos Brandt, Lola's miserly father, makes her a present of a dollar bill, as a reward for working her way through college. One night Denton's business is investigated by the postal authorities, and in order to save himself from the penitentiary it becomes necessary for him to raise $10,000. While at a nearby cafe he learns of old Brandt's wealth and determines to use this means out of his difficulties.

While he is visiting at the house that evening a thunder shower comes up and makes it necessary for him to remain there through the night. Coming upon the miser when he is counting his hoard, he learns the secret hiding place, and late that night, when he believes all to be sleeping, he descends to the library. Just as he is about to extract the money, Brandt appears, and a struggle ensues in which the old miser is killed. In the morning when the old butler, who discovers the body, is accused of the murder, Denton believes himself freed of all complications and returns to his office, where he is arrested by the postal authorities.

The dollar bill which was given to Lola falls into the hands of George Gray, and he finds upon its face the initials which her father had placed there (proving it to be the same bill) and a bloody finger-print. Lola and George rush to the authorities with the bill and the finger-mark thereon is found to agree with that found on a wine decanter the night of the murder. This evidence points to Denton, and, placed under the third degree, he confesses his guilt. Lola, now wealthy through her father's years of hoarding, proceeds to put the money into circulation by depositing it in the savings bank, and George is able to claim the bride who has waited so long.

THE SCARLET RUNNER (Episode No. 10—"The Lost Girl"—Two Parts—Dec. 4).—Christopher Race receives a letter from a Mr. Brown saying he would like to hire Scarlet Runner for a month's trip, provided it meets with his approval. Race sets out to make a record trip, but on the way he meets Paul Western, who is making a trip in his balloon. Christopher through sheer love of adventure is persuaded to forego his mission and goes with Western instead. They land near a large house in time to see a man apparently committing suicide. The balloon breaks loose and flies upward, but not before they have seen a lovely girl on the roof of the house who implores them to take her away. They try to descend but find themselves over the water. They are forced to drift until they reach land again. Then they go to where they left Scarlet Runner and the search for the girl and the house starts. They find both in an unexpected way and they arrive in time to present important evidence to the coroner's jury, clearing the girl of a charge of murder. Paul has fallen in love with the girl, almost at first sight, and the feeling seems to be reciprocated. Thus does Scarlet Runner win another bride, but not for its gallant owner.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX (Episode No 15 "Wrist Watches"—Two Parts—Nov 13). The cast Jimmy Barton (Harry Fox), Beatrice Fairfax (Grace Darling); Dorothy Dane (Evelyn Farriss), Clinton Harding (Nigel Barrie).

Clinton Harding of the U. S. Revenue Service, sleuthing for smugglers at Smith Harbor falls in love with Dorothy Dane, the niece of Donald Dane of whose occupation as a smuggler Harding in unaware. He tells Dorothy of his love and when he bids her good night at her cottage inadvertently leaves his gun. He is stopping at the village hotel and late that night goes to the cottage for his gun which he finds against a tree near the old well, just where he left it. He is about to return when he sees Dane and two fishermen slide down the well rope. Harding hides his gun in the bushes and follows them. At the bottom he comes upon a large cave which extends through the cliff to the sea. He sees Dane and his helpers taking cargo from a small boat at the cave's opening, but before he can get away with the information he is discovered by the smugglers and overpowered.

Two days later Beatrice Fairfax received a letter from Dorothy saying that her sweetheart has mysteriously disappeared. At the same time Jimmy Barton a reporter on the same paper with Beatrice, who has been on the trail of a smuggling story, learns that Harding has not been heard from by his chief in two days. The fact that both disappearances occurred at Smith Harbor leads the reporter to connect the two. He advises Beatrice to pay a visit to Dorothy and without taking Beatrice into the secret goes down to Smith Harbor himself disguised as a peddler.

While Beatrice is talking to Dorothy Jimmy as the peddler appears and arouses Dorothy's interest by a display of wrist watches. Dane coming up is induced to put on what he thinks is a watch, but which is in reality a sympograph. "That won't tell," he says "No," Jimmy replies. "It tells secrets. I can sell it cheap because I buy from smugglers." The hand on the dial of the instrument attached to Dane's wrist rises to "high" and Jimmy is elated. As he is going away he stumbles over Harding's shotgun and observes the initials G. H. carved on the stock. He looks down the well and mentally connects it with Harding's disappearance.

Quickly hiding his pack Jimmy writes a note telling Beatrice to summon the revenue officers and creeping to the edge of the cliff drops it at Beatrice's feet as she is returning to the village from her visit to Dorothy. Jimmy then returns to the well and lowers himself by means of the rope. He finds the cave at the bottom and sees Harding bound in one corner. He crawls to him unobserved by the smugglers and cuts his bonds, returning to the well opening, where he shouts, "Didn't I tell you that watch told secrets?" As the smugglers rush for him Jimmy climbs up the rope, and Harding running the other way escapes by diving into the sea. The revenue officers arrive in time to arrest the smugglers and the lovers are made happy in their reunion

THE SUNBEAM (Rolfe Photoplays, Inc.—Five Parts—Nov. 27).—The cast: Prue Mason, "The Sunbeam" (Mabel Taliaferro); Danny O'Maddigan (Raymond McKee); Stephen Rutherford (Gerald Griffin); Stephen Rutherford, Jr. (David Thompson); Ellen Rutherford (Helen Alexander); Mrs. Helen Van Tuyl (Lillian Shaffner); Launcelot Van Tuyl (Al Lee); Granny (Mrs. Breyer); Bobby Rutherford (Warner Anderson); Biff the Brute (Louis Wolheim), Ike the Rat (Eddie Reddway), Hogan the Mush (Daniel Bertona). Scenario written by June Mathis. Directed by Edwin Carewe.

Prue Mason, who is employed in Stephen Rutherford's candy factory, is known as "Sunbeam" because of her happy spirit. Prue lives with her old grandmother. With them is Danny O'Maddigan a product of the reformatory. Across the hall from Prue lives a young widow, Ellen Rutherford, with her little son Bobby. To Prue Ellen confesses that that she is the daughter-in-law of the wealthy Rutherford. When his son married beneath his station the old man disinherited him, and when the son died the young wife struggled along as best she could to support herself and her baby out of work she sends a letter to Rutherford appealing for aid. He refuses it, and the rose that she encloses from his son's grave he throws into the fire. But he cannot forget Prue's reminder that "a rose is a message from Heaven."

When Prue and Danny reach home they find Granny just waking. It is her seventy-fifth birthday, and she has dreamed that she had a birthday cake with seventy-five candles on it. Prue and Danny make up their minds that she must have that cake, and they combine their savings to get it for her. Prue goes over to see Ellen, and finds that she is about to be dispossessed for not paying the rent. Prue gives her the money, and goes back to Danny to tell him they cannot buy the cake. Danny, angry and disappointed, leaves the house and meets the gang, who try to induce him to "crack" Rutherford's safe for them. He refuses but later goes to the safe alone and extracts from it a ten-dollar bill to pay for Granny's party.

Hearing a noise, Danny hurries away, leaving the safe open. The gang comes and rifles it. The "job" is traced to Danny, and he is arrested. He tries to escape, but Prue prevents him, saying "You must take your medicine like a man. I shall be waiting for you." A rose-bush Prue has given Ellen blooms, and Prue takes the first blossom and puts it in a vase on Rutherford's desk. He knocks it over angrily, and calling Burke, the old bookkeeper, asks where it came from. Burke tells him the young lady who placed it there said it was a message from Heaven. Rutherford throws the rose into the waste-basket, but later picks it up again. The rose seems to work Rutherford's reformation. He sends for Prue, kisses her and raises the old bookkeeper's salary.

Soon after, Rutherford's automobile knocks down a child in the street. It is his own grandchild. He takes Bobby home and gives him every care. Bobby has toys without number, and when he is lonely his little friends of the tenement house are brought in to play with him. The Helping Handers, under the leadership of Mrs. Van Tuyl (who has an ambition to become Mrs. Rutherford) have been invited to dinner. Rutherford has not told the butler who his guests are, but only the number of them, so when the children come he ushers them all into the dining room to partake of the elaborate feast that has been prepared. The Helping Handers come later, find the dinner eaten, and leave in high dudgeon, Mrs. Van Tuyl suddenly abandoning her ambition to become Mrs. Rutherford. A storm comes up and the children are all put to bed on mattresses on the floor, Prue acting as "little mother."

Rutherford realizes that it is the love of little children he has needed all these years. The moment is auspicious, and Prue brings the young mother to him. Ellen and Bobby remain under his roof. Prue steals over to the window and cannot keep the tears from falling. Ellen tells Rutherford: "All her life Prue has been a sunbeam to others, but no one has ever thought of her." Rutherford tells Prue he will be needing her Danny very badly at the factory, and he believes he has influence enough to get him free.

THE PLOW GIRL (Lasky Five Parts—Nov 13). The cast Margot (Mae Murray) John Stoddard (Elliott Dexter); James Varley (Theodore Roberts); Lord Percy (Charles Gerard); Lady Brentwood (Edythe Chapman), M Pantani (Horace B. Carpenter) Kregler (Lillian Leighton); John Stoddard's mother (William Elmer).

Lady Brentwood is continually longing for her grandchild of whom no trace has been found since her parents perished in South Africa. She tells Lord Percy, a titled fortune-hunter and distant relative, that if he will find her granddaughter, he may marry her and share the estate. He imparts this news to Pantani, his friend and confidential agent, and they make arrangements to send John Stoddard, a struggling attorney, into South Africa to find the heiress or a substitute.

Margot a delicate little girl is the family drudge of John Varley, a drunken South African farmer. She is forced to work in the fields. Varley sells her to Kregler, for forty pounds, the amount of his indebtedness. Kregler goes to Margot's room at night and she flees. She is overtaken by Kregler and her screams are heard by Stoddard, who rescues her. Stoddard has previously whipped Varley with the lash which he (Varley) was wielding upon Margot, and he now takes the girl to his own cabin. Lord Percy instructs him to present Margot to Lady Brentwood as the lost grandchild and Stoddard makes Varley and Kregler sign a receipt for forty pounds, the price he pays for Margot's release.

Lady Brentwood's cordial reception wins the girl's love and a wonderful transformation takes place in Margot, now Alice. Stoddard and Alice decide to make known to Lady Brentwood their deception, and as the girl is telling the old lady she is an impostor. Varley enters and states that she belongs to him. THE YEARS OF THE LOCUST (Lasky—Five Parts Nov 15)—The cast: Lorraine Roth (Fannie Ward); Aaron Roth, her husband (Walter Long); Direk Mead (Jack Dean); Williams, Roth's secretary (H. M. Best); McKenzie, Mead's mine manager (Charles Ogle).

Aaron Roth and his wife, Lorraine, are unhappily married. Roth deals in fake oil and mining stocks, and by enthusiastic promises sells the worthless stock to the poor and needy widows and orphans. Finally the federal government takes a hand and investigates these worthless companies, and Roth is compelled to flee to escape prison.

Before Lorraine's marriage to Roth, she and Direk Mead were deeply in love, but Mead had very little money, and Lorraine finally married Roth. Mead goes to South Africa and soon becomes the head of a big diamond mining company. He returns to New York just as Roth is on the verge of exposure. Roth tries to induce Lorraine to get Mead to invest in his stocks, but this she refuses to do. Roth stows away on a vessel and just as he is approaching the southern coast of Africa, he jumps overboard and swims to the shore. It is reported that he has committed suicide. Lorraine sells all of her possessions and goes to live in a cheap boarding house, where she is found by Mead. When they hear that Roth is dead, they marry and go to Mead's home in South Africa.

Roth has drifted to the mining district, grown a heavy beard, and has made a fair living. He recognizes Lorraine, and discloses his identity. She is panic-stricken and starts to leave Mead and return alone to America. A big diamond has been found and Mead, fearful of keeping it around the camp, starts to take it to Kimberley. Roth and other tough characters hear this and plan to intercept him. Lorraine learns of Roth's plan, notifies the police and the mine manager, and they start to the rescue. In a fight over the diamond, Roth is killed, and Lorraine returns to Mead without having to tell him of the reappearance of her husband.

MISS GEORGE WASHINGTON (Famous Players—Five Parts—Nov. 20). The cast: Berenice Somers (Marguerite Clark); Judge Altwold (Frank Losee); Cleverly Trafton (Niles Welch); Alice Altwold (Florence Marten); Paul Carroll (Joseph Gleason); Mrs. Altwold (Maude Turner Gordon); Miss Perkins ("Billy" Watson); Col. J. P. Worthington (Herbert Prior). Directed by J. Searle Dawley.

Berenice Somers, a pupil at Miss Perkins' School for Young Ladies, so impresses the George Washington Truth Society with her truthfulness that she is presented with a medal for her veracity. As a matter of fact, she is a frightful little fibber, as her school friend Alice Altwold can testify. Berenice is engaged to Paul Carroll, who is not known to any of the Altwold family except Alice. Carroll invites the two girls to meet him and go to a matinee. They accept, Berenice telling Miss Perkins that they are going to the Marblend Hotel to meet "Mr. and Mrs. Gardner." But Miss Perkins accompanies them to the hotel and they are forced to pass Carroll in the lobby without recognizing him, and finally flee into Room 72 in a blind effort to dodge Miss Perkins.

But Room 72 is occupied by Cleverly Trafton a young diplomat who is about to be sent abroad on a secret mission. Astounded at the sudden arrival of two strange girls in his room, Trafton is told of their predicament. A few moments later, Mr. and Mrs. Altwold encounter Miss Perkins in the lobby of the hotel and are told of their daughter's presence in the "Gardner" apartment. Rushing upstairs to find her, they discover her in the presence of Trafton and Berenice. The latter promptly introduces herself and the stranger as Mr. and Mrs. Gardner in order to save the situation.

Alice is taken home by her parents and Berenice accompanies them. Trafton's diplomatic complications forces him to consult Mr. Altwold, who is an international lawyer, and he goes to his home. Berenice, meanwhile, has accounted for the absence of her "husband" by saying that he has been called abroad suddenly. When Trafton arrives at the Altwood home there is a scene, but he declares that his real name is Gardner, the name Trafton being used in secret diplomatic work. When it comes time for them to retire, Berenice and Trafton are frightfully embarrassed by the efforts of their hostess to place them in the same room. After many complications, Berenice succeeds in getting into Alice's room for the night, and Trafton retires on a balcony.

Matters are still further complicated by the arrival of Carroll, who is engaged to Berenice and his jealousy when he discovers her trying to be affectionate to Trafton. Meanwhile Trafton and Alice are becoming interested in each other and the betrayal of this fact leads to still deeper complications. Finally, in order to save her host and hostess from dying of apoplexy, Berenice persuades her three friends to tell the truth, and decides to forfeit all claims to the truth medal which has helped her over many serious difficulties in the past.

A BATH TUB ELOPEMENT (Nov.)—Tweedledum decides to go on a lark with another man's wife, leaving his own to sit lonesomely at home. But like many another adventurer, who plans to stray away from his own fireside, Tweedledum proceeds to get into trouble.

The wife goes out on a still hunt for her erring partner and catches him with the third member of the triangle. Tweedledum and the woman naturally try to elude the pursuing wife and finally take refuge in a bath tub, which they find floating on the water. The last we see of them, they are in mid-ocean. Just how long Tweedledum can dodge the wrath of the wife in this manner is left entirely to our imagination.

THE YELLOW MENACE (Episode No. 14—"The Interrupted Nuptials"—Two Parts—Dec. 4).—It will be remembered that one of Ali Singh's victims was Maxwell Judson, who invented the formula for quadrinolite, the highest known explosive. After his death the invention came into the possession of Captain Cook, his nephew, who, being warned by Errol Manning, turns over the formula to Police Captain Kemp for safe keeping.

Thinking that Captain still has the formula in his possession and determined by all means to get possession of it, Ali Singh's followers lasso Cook from a bedroom window and drag him to the top of a high building. He is subjected to terrible torture at the hands of Ali Singh, but is saved by one of Hong Kong Harry's erratic changes of mind.

Najla is again brought under the spell of her uncle's baleful influence and is made the innocent means of introducing a bomb to Errol Manning's house. But for the quick work of Willard Bronson, who detects the presence of the bomb in time to get rid of it, both the house and those who were caught in it at the time would have been doomed to certain destruction.

TRAMP, TRAMP, TRAMP (Nov. 27).—The cast: The tramps (Eddie Barry and George French); the girl (Billie Rhodes); the boys (Harry Ham and Frank Schroeder); Mr. Morton (Harry Rattenberry). Scenario written by H. B. Hagenah. Produced by Al. E. Christie.

Harry and Frank have been promised $1,000 by Mr. Morton, retired theatrical manager and their guardian, upon completion of their dramatic course. Mr. Morton receives a note saying the boys will arrive next day in a disguise which he and his niece, Billie, are challenged to penetrate.

Upall Knight and Gud Knight are touring by freight and alight in Mr. Morton's town to eat. After funny misadventures with dogs and irate housewives, Upall vows that he will go to no more back doors. He tries Mr. Norton's front door and he and Gud Knight are mistaken for the boys in makeup and welcomed.

Meantime Harry and Frank arrive in town, while the tramps make the best use of their cordial reception, and joyfully receive the thousand dollars tendered by Mr. Morton. Their weird manipulations of the food considerably alters the wall paper pattern, but Mr. Morton and Billie, who is in love with one of the boys, are tolerant of their "acting."

The tramps are sent upstairs to dress and there pack up everything in sight for the final getaway. Harry and Frank, donning false beards, come to the door and get the "cold shoulder." When they remove the disguise Mr. Morton's first thought is of the thousand dollars he gave the tramps, and he calls the police.

The Knights escape, but they are so closely pursued by the boys and the police that they have to "impress" a flivver. This meets with an accident and they are caught. The boys get the money and the tramps sixty days. Even in jail, Upall Knight is not cast down, but only awaits his release to try some more front doors.

WORLD PICTURES.

BOUGHT AND PAID FOR (Five Parts—Nov. 13).—Virginia Blaine, on the death of her mother, is thrown on her own resources with no one except a married sister to turn to for help. She secures a position as telephone operator at a club and here attracts the attention of Robert Stafford, a self-made millionaire. When he sees that Virginia is not to be won by dinners and jewels, he falls in love and courts her. Virginia is attracted to this man of the world, so different from the uncouth Gilley, her sister's husband, but because of this difference the wide gulf between their social positions and most of all because of Stafford's love of drink, she fears to marry him. However, his pleas finally win her and she marries him. She receives every luxury that she could expect, and, he even takes the happy-go-lucky James Gilley, her brother-in-law, into his office, paying him a salary entirely out of proportion to his ability. But in spite of all these attentions, a growing spirit of discontent gnaws at her heart strings. She loves her husband, for he is invariably attentive and affectionate. But of late he has succumbed to a habit of drinking to excess, and at such time he has given evidence of a growing disposition to degrade her.

One evening Mr. Stafford comes home intoxicated. He is pleasant until his wife refuses to drink to a toast which he desires to propose to her. The beast in him is aroused and he attempts to compel her to do his bidding. When this fails he asserts his legal authority as husband to compel her to obey him. This she rejects with the assertion that the husband who would claim such authority confesses that he no longer possesses the only authority which exists in marriage—the moral one. He taunts her with the charge that he has bought and paid for her and therefore she must do what pleases him. Her finer instincts rebel at this insult and she decides to leave him. On the following morning when he is sober she makes known her determination. He is repentant and beseeches her for pardon. She tells her husband that she will remain with him under one condition and that is he must stop drinking. He denies her right to make this demand. She asserts her right to make the demand and leaves him with the vow that she will never return to him until he has sent for her or come for her, an act which will be a confession that he will comply with her demand.

Three months later Mrs. Stafford has obtained a humble position as saleslady at a modest salary, and, together with her sister and brother-in-law, is living in a humble apartment. She is constantly importuned to return to her husband, but she refuses every plea. James, her brother-in-law, resorts to a little deception to bring the husband and wife together. He sends for Mr. Stafford, and leaves him under the impression that Mrs. Stafford has sent for him.

In the meantime Mrs. Stafford comes from her day's toil thoroughly exhausted. Just as she goes to her own room to change her clothes and rest, Mr. Stafford enters, and when she returns to the living room again and sees her husband there she falls into his arms. She professes her deep love for him, especially because of the sacrifice he has made in coming to her unbidden, and he, immediately perceiving the ruse that has been practiced upon them both, though he does not reveal his discovery, tells her how he had fought the battle and how she had won, for he now could promise her that he will never drink again, that he will make himself worthy of her. She, too, discovers the deception which has been practiced to bring them together, but the plea of her husband is so earnest, and his admission that as she did not send for him she had therefore really won the victory, is so convincing that she forgets and forgives him and returns to him.

THE MADNESS OF HELEN (Five parts—Nov. 20).—Dane Ashley, a successful young author, is informed that he has inherited an old estate in a small village, and being tired of his work and life in the city, he decides to go down and stay on the place for a brief rest. One Day Dane is amazed to find a crowd of boys and girls pelting a young girl. He rescues the girl and would punish her tormentors, but she begs him to let the matter drop and hurriedly disappears through the door in the stone wall which separates his house from the one next to it. Much impressed with his young neighbor, Dane makes inquiries about her and learns that she is a Miss Virginia Carlton and that nothing is known concerning her except that she is crazy. Disbelieving the rumors as to Virginia's insanity, Dane uses clever little ruses to further his acquaintance, and the friendship so strangely begun, soon develops into love. Although Virginia cannot conceal her love for him, she tells him their friendship must cease—that there is a wall of shame and misery between them which prevents their ever being anything to each other. Dane thinks he has guessed her secret when he hears a baby at play on her side of the wall—he believes she has been the victim of an unwise and too great love, but when he is with Virginia her purity and innocence totally contradict this theory.

One night he is startled to see a face, which he is sure is Virginia's, but which is lit up by a wild and impish gleam, peering in at his window. When he reaches the window he sees the girl fleeing over the high stone wall. A few nights later he meets her on the road. She gives no sign of recognition, but leads him on. Dane cannot understand—his heart sick at the thought that the pure-souled Virginia whom he loves could act thus wantonly; but the next day, when he meets Virginia, she is again the sweet simple girl, and he becomes convinced that it must be during moments of temporary insanity that he make her nocturnal excursions.

Nightly the girl is seen in the village, a beautiful evil spirit luring men from their firesides, to render them mad with strange passions and unfulfilled desires, for she always escapes from her victims. At last Virginia can restrain her feelings no longer and she tells Dane that she wants him to hear her story and to help her. Two years before, her twin sister, Helen, had fallen in love with a young naval surgeon, and when their father had sternly forbidden her ever to see him again, the impulsive girl left home and went to the surgeon's hotel. There she lived with him as his wife for two weeks, until he was suddenly called away to foreign waters. Returning to her father's home, Helen was injured in an automobile wreck and her mind shattered. The father died of the shock, and Virginia, realizing her sister's condition, had rented the house in the country. Here Helen's child was born.

Dane is overwhelmed with happiness to know that the girl he loves is neither insane nor the mother of the child he had supposed hers. He tells Virginia she will locate her sister and bring her back. He sends his friend, Dr. Robert Haskell, to Virginia to aid her. Virginia denounces Dr. Haskell for his treachery to her sister, and before he can reply, Dane brings in the unconscious Helen, whom he found wandering about the streets. Dr. Haskell works over the wounded girl, and while they await anxiously the result of his operation, he explains to Virginia that she is doing both her sister and herself grave injustice. He tells the astonished girl that he and Helen were married on the day she left her father's home, and that ever since his return from the foreign parts he had been searching vainly for his wife.

Gradually life and memory return to Helen and she throws her arms about her husband's neck as Virginia and Dane look on.

THE DEVIL'S DOUBLE (Ince—Five parts—Nov. 26).—The cast.—"Bowie" Blake (William S. Hart); Naomi Tarleton (Enid Markey); Van Dyke Tarleton (Robert McKim).

Van Dyke Tarleton is an artist. He is absorbed body and soul in his latest creation, "Lucifer, Son of the Morning," but lacks a model to depict the brooding evil, the smoldering, sardonic sin that he has visualized in the spirit's face. Naomi Tarleton, his wife, is a beautiful and gentle creature.

Tarleton has an attack which necessitates a sojourn in the desert, and he, with his wife, arrive in Tophet, an Arizona border town, where "Bowie Blake," bad man, witnesses their arrival. Tarleton recognizes in Blake a Lucifer in the flesh, and insists that "Bowie" become his model. His demand is refused.

Later Blake becomes enthralled when he sees Naomi. Tarleton witnesses the meeting from a window and determines that his wife shall accomplish what he has failed to do. He sends her to the gambler, telling her to beg Blake to come. She does this, and Blake becomes the model. Tarleton insults his wife continually in Blake's presence to prevent the brooding evil, sardonic hardness, and the grim deadliness in the eyes and face of his model from disappearing. One day Tarleton faints at the canvas and the doctor advises that he be taken to the mountains. The three find an ideal camp, and the painting goes on, Tarleton insulting his wife more and more, until Blake decides to leave them, as he can stand it no more. He hesitates on the road, not willing to leave Naomi alone with Tarleton, and eventually returns to find that "Red" Gleason and Jose Ramirez, two outlaws, have killed the painter and are drawing cards to see who shall possess the woman. He kills them both, and takes Naomi to a cave farther in the mountains.

Through an injury, Naomi loses her mind. Blake treats her as a child, until her mind becomes clear. He then tells her that he intends to have her as his own. Naomi exerts her influence, and he fights his battle, and wins over himself, upon which he agrees to take her back to town.

They stand where the trail leads to the desert town. She holds her hand out to him: "What can I say?" she cries plaintively; "what is there for you and me to say to each other?" Bowie remarks: "I'm sayin' just this—some day I'm comin' after you." She looks at him and answers softly: "Yes, I think you will do that—but I make no promise—there are things to be done—that time and striving will do—it is in your hands, Bowie." "That's all I ask," he answers. "I'm takin' that chance."

THE CHILDREN PAY (Fine Arts—Five parts—Nov. 26).—The cast.—Millicent (Lillian Gish); Jean, her sister (Violet Wilkie); Horace Craig (Keith Armour); Theodore Ainsley, the girl's father (Ralph Lewis); Elinor Ainsley, their mother (Loyola O'Connor); Editha, their step-mother (Alma Ruebens); Susan (Jennie Lee); Signor Zucca, an impressario (Robert Lohmeyer); Judge Mason (Carl Stockdale); Officer (Tom Wilson). Directed by Lloyd Ingraham.

Millicent and her little sister, Jean, are the subjects of much gossip in a small town. The two girls with an old nurse and an servant live alone in the "House of Mystery," and have no intercourse with their neighbors. Horace Craig, a law student, who has come to temporarily fill the place of schoolmaster, sees the mischievous girls while they are playing pranks upon the minister. He asks who they are and is told as much about them as any one in town knows. It is reported that the parents have been divorced and so the innocent girls are shunned by the "righteous" villagers.

Craig decides it is his duty to see that the girls come to school. He goes to their home and when he states his errand Susan, their governess, informs him that she has always been their teacher. In the village one day he interrupts a fight between Millicent and Jean and a crowd of village kids and hears the girls home. He is invited in by Susan and is shown the school room and Millicent's work [illegible] a girl of a really remarkable bent for mechanics and proudly displays the results of her skill.

An officer from the city arrives with an order from court that the children be returned to the city. They refuse to go, but he captures little Jean and takes her away [illegible]. Craig comes tells him the story of their family tragedy. Craig explains to Millicent that [illegible] and offers to help them if he can. Jean arrives in town and is taken to her father's home. Having secured his divorce, he is married again to a young society woman. The officer shows an order that they must appear the following morning to have the court decide what disposition shall be made of the girls.

The next day in court Millicent is given to the father and [illegible]. At a reception Millicent overhears gossip concerning her father and mother and their neglect of their girls. This brings little Jean's possessions [illegible] and goes to the mother's home. She goes up to Jean's room and says she has come to take her away. They hurriedly escape. While Millicent has been at her father's house she has wondered at the neglect of Craig, for she does not know that he has called upon her and been told that she was not at home. He suspects that [illegible].

The father and mother miss the girls and locate them at Susan's. In the morning a deputy sheriff arrives and the three are ordered to court. There Craig, having been admitted to the bar, suddenly appears and assumes their defense. He pictures the condition of the children and wins the judge's sympathy, who remarks that if the older girl were married he could give her custody of Jean. Craig asks a minute private conference with his clients and taking them into an ante-room proposes that Millicent marry him. Jean and Susan urge her to accept and her own heart prompts her to say yes. They all return to the courtroom where Craig announces to the court that he is to marry the older girl immediately. The judge gives them the custody of little Jean and their troubles are at an end.

PATHE EXCHANGE, INC.

PATHE NEWS, NO. 91 (Nov. 11).

New London, Conn.—Count von Bernstorff, German Ambassador to the United States, and his wife arrive to congratulate Captain Koenig on the achievement of the Deutschland. Subtitle: A welcome reunion.

Medfield, Mass.—Exclusive New England society people take part in the equestrian games of the Norfolk Hunt Club in celebration of Farmers' Day. Subtitles: The club's famous hunting pack. Some of the fair entries.

Altoona, Pa.—Sixty steel cars are smashed to pieces when a runaway freight train crashes into several stalled locomotives, killing seven and injuring scores. Subtitle: The cars are so tightly telescoped that acetylene torches are used to cut them apart.

Aldershot, England.—Before leaving for the front the Royal Engineers are given a taste of actual warfare conditions to better prepare them to meet their stubborn foe. Subtitles: [illegible] an infantry attack with hand bombs. Exploding a mine in the enemy's trenches. A regiment of trained Australian volunteers starts on its journey to "somewhere in France."

[illegible]. The eyes of the Allied armies—the French aerial squadron which directs the great offensive by scouting over the enemy's lines to learn its weak positions: One of the aerial heroes who has brought down six German machines.

Somewhere in America (Magazine section).—An animated cartoon by John C. Terry—process patented by J. R. Bray.

Mt. Wilson, Cal.—The task of climbing the [illegible] Mt. Wilson grade with a ten-ton load of casting for the huge telescope of the Carnegie Observatory encounters many difficulties. Subtitles: At one point the car with its heavy load almost careens over the precipitous side. The Observatory, which will be one of the largest in the world when completed.

Chicago, Ill.—Illinois women vote for the [illegible] and even aged inmates of the Hospital for Incurables turn out to share in this great honor. Subtitle: Losers of election bets are now facing the merry music of the winners.

New York City.—The great superdreadnought Arizona, recently put in commission at the Brooklyn Navy Yard, leaves on her maiden voyage to undergo trial tests. Subtitle: The 32,000-ton warship, passing out under the [illegible] of New York's skyscrapers.

PATHE NEWS, NO. 92 (Nov. 15):

Cambridge, Mass.—Forty thousand graduates and their friends crowd the Harvard Stadium to see the first big game of the season between the Crimson Eleven and the Princeton Tigers. Sub-title: First play marks the game, Harvard winning by the close score of 3-0.

Cuero, Texas.—Southwestern farmers are busy preparing their flocks of turkeys for the Thanksgiving celebration of our National prosperity. Subtitle: A 35-pound specimen, intended for the President's table. Pheasants are also in popular demand for the Thanksgiving feast.

Ottawa, Canada.—The Right Honorable Duke of Devonshire, successor to the Duke of Connaught as Governor-General of the Dominion of Canada, arrives to take up his new duties. Subtitle: The Duke with his family and staff.

Self-Defense.—How a woman can protect herself when attacked by using several simple jiu-jitsu tricks. Subtitles: A common attack is to seize the victim by the throat. Grasp the assailant's wrist with one hand and force the elbow upward with the other. Then place your leg across your assailant and throw him forward. This requires very little force. The complete throw—note speed and dexterity are most important factors. To hold the assailant down—place your leg across the body, thus holding his free arm, and then bend his other arm over your knee. Another simple way of preventing this attack is to grasp wrist with both hands, pulling arm over shoulder. Throw body forward, twisting wrist at the same time. When attacked from behind, grip assailant's elbows forcing one up and other down, and throw body forward with a side twist. A striking example of the value of such knowledge: Brute force cannot overcome the science of these quick movements.

Moser, Russia.—Peasants in unconquered Polish regions are a great aid to the Russian armies by helping them dig their net-work of trenches to withstand the German assault.

On the Western Front.—The Allied munition factories are rapidly meeting their demands and the supply of shells to the fighting legions at the front is now regular and continuous. Subtitles: The larger shells are pointed so as to pierce the thick concrete fortifications of the Teutons. Space on the Somme battle front is very valuable and in many places huge guns are [illegible] apart. Exploded shells are carefully saved to provide the precious metals for additional munitions. Captured German prisoners passing through first line French trenches to the rear.

Rhinecliff, N. Y.—President Wilson appears hale and happy that the nation has so nobly approved his policies as Chief Executive as he makes his first public appearance after re-election. Subtitle: Crowds cheer him on his journey to the home of his daughter, Mrs. Frances B. Sayre, to attend the christening ceremonies of his grandchild.

New York City.—The crack gunners of the U.S.S. New York, champions of the Atlantic squadron, are presented with a prize for their remarkable record in recent battle practice. Subtitle: The great superdreadnaught, one of Uncle Sam's mightiest war vessels.

Bakersfield, Cal.—(San Francisco and Los Angeles only)—Five thousand school children take part in a monster parade at the opening of the Kern County Fair.

San Antonio, Texas.—(Dallas only).—The Arab patrol of the Alzafar Temple join the Ancient and Accepted Order Nobles of the Mystic Shrine.

Boston, Mass.—(Boston only).—The Aero Club of New England presents the first hydro-aeroplane to the National Guard of Massachusetts. Subtitle: Governor McCall receives the gift for the state.

"Just Crying for American Films"

This is the way a foreign film buyer put the case a few days ago. Even in some of the European countries our American films are steadily gaining favor in competition with the production of the home manufacturers in their own countries.

CINE-MUNDIAL

is the only Spanish film paper that is popularizing American films in all the South American and Spanish speaking countries. The old prejudices against American films are rapidly dying on account of the undeniable excellence of most of the recent big American productions. Even if not quite ready to handle this export business, now is the time to popularize your trade brand.

THE RATE ON EACH MONTHLY ISSUE IS VERY REASONABLE.

The Making of a Photoplay

By Louis Reeves Harrison

Has Just Come From the Presses

A scholarly examination of the new art of writing for the picture screen which points the way for better results thoroughly and logically through deductions by one of the ablest and most widely experienced screen authors of the day.

This latest addition to the list of Chalmers Publishing Company books dealing with the motion picture art has already received the unqualified endorsement of some of the foremost men in the industry and will be found invaluable by photoplay writers who are making a serious study of their work.

It is a University Education on the Subject!

Exhibitors of Maryland

A Special Meeting has been called by the President of the National Organization for Sunday, November 26th, at the Hotel Emerson, in the City of Baltimore. The hour is three o'clock in the afternoon. It seems to be the prevailing opinion among exhibitors in Baltimore and throughout the state that

Organization is the Prime Need of the Hour

All exhibitors in Maryland are therefore urged to attend and make the new organization an instrument of good and a material advantage to themselves. The Moving Picture World, admittedly the best friend of the organized exhibitor, is printing this call at the request of a number of prominent exhibitors in the City of Baltimore.

In Local News Gathering The MOVING PICTURE WORLD Is in a Class by Itself

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD is the only journal in the industry making a specialty of local news of exhibitors and exchangemen. Every week it carries an average of fifteen pages of up-to-date record of the happenings among the film men all over the United States and Canada—of a social as well as of a business description.

In "Trade News of the Week" the Moving Picture World gives the live exhibitor a sidelight on conditions among his contemporaries in other showmanship fields; it keeps the keen exchangeman and his subordinates in touch with the personality and doings of their competitors in other distributing groups as well as informed of the progress of their confreres, those working under the same general orders that come to the branch office. Over ten thousand dollars annually is expended to keep this department "up to the scratch."

The Moving Picture World in this one section covers the news of the men engaged in the distribution and exhibition of motion pictures from the Atlantic to the Pacific and north of the Rio Grande. No other trade journal attempts to devote the space and the effort to this important department of motion picture publication news gathering as is to be found every week in the Moving Picture World.

And "Trade News of the Week" is but one of many informing divisions of this journal maintained for the motion picture industry.

Infringers on "The Spoilers" Enjoined.

Judge Reid, Judge of the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of Iowa, Cedar Rapids division, sitting at Dubuque, Ia., Friday, November 3, after hearing arguments for two days, directed the attorneys to prepare an order enjoining the Gate City Feature Film Corporation from further exhibiting "The Spoilers" in the States of Iowa, Nebraska, Missouri and Kansas.

Cooney & Verhoeven, of Chicago, together with Trewin, Simmons & Trewin, of Cedar Rapids, represented the complainant, the Selig Polyscope Company, and Henry Rickel, W. J. Barngrover and Rickel & Dennis represented the defendant.

The suit was originally brought by the Selig Polyscope Company on the 5th of July, 1916, in Cedar Rapids, Ia., and claimed that the rights which Martin & Estes had and which they claimed were assigned to the defendant corporation had expired December 31, 1915, and that the people who were now attempting to exhibit the picture had no right to do so. Owing to court matters it was impossible to bring the motion for a preliminary injunction up before the present time, and Judge Reid consented to hear the same in Dubuque, where the above order for injunction was directed.—Moving Picture World, Nov. 25, 1916.

A victory for the Selig-Polyscope Co., protected our rights and gives us exclusive control of above territory.

PROFITABLE PICTURES

"The ..... theatre features good films, but I don't go there often because it's so hard on my eyes." How often this remark is heard.

Don't let this be said of your theatre. It's unnecessary. You can project pictures with such clear, steady smoothness that your audience will be unconscious that light is used at all. Projections can be made to appear so real as to be actually restful to the eyes. This result can be obtained by the use of a

TransVerteR

TRADE MARK

Suffice to say, new and remodeled theatres everywhere are installing Transverters, because they can't be fully equipped without them. The Transverter is a compact, simple, motor generator that meets every requirement for a steady, brilliant, easily controlled light for artistic projection. Guaranteed to give satisfaction, or money refunded.

This will be a big year in the moving picture business. Install the equipment that will enable you to get your full share of this business.

Write for further details at once. You lose money every day you do without a Transverter. Easily installed in any theatre. It means larger crowds, increased popularity, and greater profits.

Don't delay. Write today.

HILL MOTOR GENERATOR

For Motion Picture Arc Lamps

Delivers true direct current from alternating lines.

PRODUCING STEADY WHITE LIGHT PROJECTION OF TRUE COLOR VALUE, WITHOUT FLICKER OR FLARE.

It delivers 12,000 candle power on a standard sized screen up to 120 ft. throw, or 3 times more light than is obtained from the alternating current arc for the same current. It also eliminates all current wasting balancing and voltage reduction resistances, hence will pay for itself in this saving alone. Built in capacities sufficient to carry two machines during dissolve, this is accomplished without a break. Covering but 18x15 inches of floor space, it may be installed in the booth under the direct control of the operator. Running in ball bearings, it is quiet and free from vibration.

THROUGH evolution we advanced—by advancing we were able to fulfill our hopes, our aims, our ideals—to consummate an idea that is winning unparalleled success.

EVER pressing onward to higher levels, the quality of SPEER PROJECTOR CARBON advances—the fact is attested by many thousands of pleased operators.

THE best is not sufficient—Fine must be Re-fined—Two years' experience has taught us much.

SPEER PROJECTOR CARBONS, the realization of a great idea; though unchanged in essential principles, are being refined—polished—cultured, if you please.

HIGHER standards for Light Producing Qualities—The Life of the Carbon—Exterior Appearance, etc., have been set and these must ever be developed and advanced.

TO improve the quality of SPEER PROJECTOR CARBONS has ever been our aim and affords inspiration for our present day's work.

EARLY handicaps have been overcome; the new machinery now works smoothly; our employees are skilled and masterly in their work and the progress we are making is noteworthy.

SEEING is believing—experience is the best teacher—operators must try SPEER PROJECTOR CARBONS to appreciate all that we have said. The unprecedented success we have won cannot be described in words; it must be seen, experienced and tested.

WE would say to the pessimist and skeptic who must be shown—"Try SPEER PROJECTOR CARBONS." The trial will place you in the ranks of our pleased customers. To the many friends we already have, we might add: Our developments will continue without end, as we feel a carbon can not be perfected too highly for the demand of the exhibitor and operator.

"Liberty"

Universal Serial Is Proving Itself a Startlingly Realistic Drama of Warfare Along Mexican Border.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

INSTEAD of a slackening interest, which is sometimes felt in a long serial photoplay, "Liberty" has exceded all promises and is now sweeping its way into the hearts of observers. Nothing has been done in the way of thrilling warfare and adventure to overshadow this production. Its thrills are the genuine outgrowth of a well-sustained plot, and each instalment, with its vivid pictures of conditions on the Mexican border, raises rather than lowers the high standard of the serial. The thirteenth, fourteenth and fifteenth episodes are wonderful, indeed.

More Evidence:

"'LIBERTY' is the best drawing feature I have had up to date. The business increases with every episode and the capacity of the house is taxed on 'Liberty' night."—Savoy Theatre, Springfield, Ill.

"'LIBERTY' takes well with the public and in their opinion it is a splendid serial, well acted and staged, and with the punch produced as the natural sequence of preceding events, and without a lot of preliminary posing by the 'stars' in the play."—The Lyric Theatre, Marysville, Cal.

"'LIBERTY' has proven one of the biggest money-getters I have ever handled in the serial line, and my patronage on the days on which I run it proves conclusively that the public agree with me in declaring it the finest and best serial ever produced by any company."—The Globe Amusement Co., McKeesport, Pa.

"'LIBERTY' is turning out to be the best serial my house has ever had. 'LIBERTY' is proving to be Simply Great."—Bijou Theatre, Fresno, Cal.

"My good business on 'LIBERTY,' Saturday nights, is my saving grace. It is a smashing business. 'LIBERTY' is a good money-getter."—Star Theatre, Madrid, Iowa.

LIBERTY

Says

The UNIVERSAL Serial Glorious Is Getting More Money for Exhibitors than any other Serial Ever Produced

Further Proof:

"Only trouble we have had with 'LIBERTY' is our capacity is too small to accommodate the crowds on episode nights."—Olympic Theatre, Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

"'LIBERTY' is one of the best serials ever produced and a money-getter. I have advised other exhibitors about it."—Nicollet Theatre, Minneapolis, Minn.

"'LIBERTY' has some pep and I am doing good business with same. Patrons say it is the best serial I have ever run. I am a booster for 'LIBERTY.'"—Rex Theatre, Chisholm, Minn.

"'LIBERTY' is going fine with me. Book me for your next serial."—H. C. Whittmann, Muscatine, Iowa.

"'LIBERTY' always brings double crowds. We are always sure of good business 'LIBERTY' night, whether it storms or not."—Orpheum Theatre, Ottumwa, Iowa.

"'LIBERTY' will grow to cap anything that has gone before it, barring none."—Cozy Theatre, Cresco, Iowa.

"We have shown almost every serial to date. 'LIBERTY' is doing more business for us than all previous serials."—Navarro Theatre, Los Angeles, California.

"'LIBERTY' is O. K. I wish there were 40 episodes. Average to date over 600 sold tickets. Played last night to 700. Pretty good for small town and run-down theatre."—Fairfield Theatre, Fairfield, Iowa.

"'LIBERTY' is full of thrills and that is what our patrons like. It has been a winner for us."—Princess Theatre, Boone, Iowa.

"'LIBERTY' is good and well received."—Lincoln Theatre, Jefferson, Iowa.

"'LIBERTY' takes very well with my audiences."—Arlington Theatre, Tracy, Cal.

BOOK NOW AND MAKE MONEY

"'LIBERTY' is O. K.—going big. A money-maker for us."—Princess Theatre, Santa Anna, Cal.

"'LIBERTY' all O. K. Great! Best serial ever run in this theatre in six years."—Metropolitan Theatre, Los Angeles, Cal.

"'LIBERTY' is a great serial—second episode business doubled. 'Nuf sed."—New Central and Butterfly Theatre, Los Angeles, Cal.

A Thundering Drama With a Thundering Message

A magnificent and awe-inspiring picture of National Defense. A tremendous photo-drama with a great patriotic appeal. A photo-play triumph that will thrill every American man, woman and child.

"The Eagle's Wings" is a stupendous box office attraction that portrays existing conditions in realistic detail, rather than through so-called spectacles of mimic warfare and imposible visualizations. This epoch-making drama will pack your house at every performance. Remember, it is a BLUEBIRD Extraordinary—NOT on the regular BLUEBIRD Program. Book through your local BLUEBIRD Exchange, or

UNUSUAL in story, treatment and plot development the BLUEBIRD Photoplay, "The Price of Silence," is convincing evidence of the merit of the widely-known BLUEBIRD policy of "The Play's The Thing."

Realizing the importance of good acting in the production of an even performance, the stars—Dorothy Phillips and a brilliant supporting cast were chosen because of their suitability to portray the characters perfectly. Thus you get a STAR play and STAR Players as well.

The plot of the drama deals with the life of a young woman who bears the burden of the tragic romance of her early years. It is vivid, human, appealing, wholesome and inspiring. Staged with convincing realism it is a perfect achievement of the silent drama.

Every week BLUEBIRD advertisements in the Saturday Evening Post carry the story of BLUEBIRD photoplays to ten million readers, the cream of the moving picture patronage of the nation. You can share profitably in this tremendous publicity by showing BLUEBIRDS in your theatre. Book through your local BLUEBIRD Exchange, or

I Have Pu

Understanding as I did, the tremendous success Exhibitors in every part of the world had with "ABSINTHE" and realizing the even greater possibilities of this big winner now during the War, showing the city of Paris, surrounding territory, fighting trenches, artillery action, etc., I made the UNIVERSAL FILM MFG. CO. an offer for negative and complete territorial rights. It was accepted and now "ABSINTHE" belongs to Yours Truly, KING BAGGOT.

Exhibitors who have played it certainly need no information as to the Box Office value of "ABSINTHE." It proved a whale of a winner and one of the biggest money getters that ever came down the line.

Those who have still to book it can rest their faith in the facts that HERBERT BRENON directed "ABSINTHE" while Leah Baird and Myself played the leads. Herbert Brenon produced "Neptune's Daughter," "War Brides," "A Daughter of the Gods," and other huge successes.

In "ABSINTHE" we show the famous spots of Paris, including such places as Montmarte, Tuileries, Arch de Triomphe, Grande Boulevarde, and many other famous spots.

I have spent a young fortune working it up, inserting new titles, new scenes, etc., so that it now outclasses the original picture completely.

"ABSINTHE" as I have it prepared is a tremendous production.

Compared to many of the State Rights propositions now on the market "ABSINTHE" looms up like a house afire. You don't have to gamble on "ABSINTHE." It has drawn hundreds of thousands of dollars into the box offices of thousands of theatres all over the world and is now ready to draw more money than it ever did. I own the picture, complete State Rights and will make interesting terms to State Right Buyers for quick action.

THESE WILL BE GIVEN FREE TO ALL STATE RIGHTS BUYERS, and I want to tell you, you've never seen adv. matter with the "kick" in it like mine. When big newspapers run editorials based on you can judge of the impression it's making on the whole country!

HUGHES' "SHIELDING SHADOW"

In one of the most popular moving picture serials now running, there is a mysterious something or somebody that steps in just at the crucial moment when the heroine or hero is endangered and saves the prospective victim from an awful fate.

This mysterious something is a shadowy shape, vague as to general outline but working with a very real and vigorous pair of hands At the end of every week's episode there flashes out on the screen "WHO IS THE SHIELDING SHADOW?"

The incongruity between the dim, indefinite figure and the muscular efficiency of its hands is one of the things that makes the film go. It is great.

No better portrayal of the national political situation could be given Always hovering about the path of Judge Hughes there is a dim, shadowy form, vague almost to invisibility but with big, strong, gripping hands When dangers threaten, when there are obstacles in the way, then these hands get busy.

"WHO IS THE SHIELDING SHADOW?"

It is not difficult to guess. Guggenheim, Perkins, Morgan, Rockefeller, Whitney, Archbold and Frick are some of the names in the composite personality whose hands alone are so conspicuously busy handing out money, pulling the wires and in general employing every device to put President Wilson out and Judge Hughes in.

Take any name associated with special privilege, exploitation of the government and the degradation of labor and it will surely not be found in the list of those who are supporting Woodrow Wilson. The men who bear these names hate him. If for no other reason than the character of the enemies he has made, Mr. Wilson will receive the undivided support of the great mass of the American people.

Take this idea of Hughes' shielding shadow to the polls with you next Tuesday. Those gripping hands had their hold on you and your government at one time Are you will again to offer them your throat?

PATRIA was given the most remarkable reception ever accorded a motion picture at the private showing in the Grand Ball Room of the Ritz-Carlton, New York, last Monday night. After the Grand Ball Room had been filled to overflowing, a thousand prominent New Yorkers patiently waited for almost two hours until the conclusion of the first performance. Then the Grand Ball Room was filled again and a second performance given.

Patria was shown to more than 1,000 exhibitors of the Metropolitan district of New York in the Strand Theatre Tuesday morning.

These three different audiences, the most critical and exacting, acclaimed "Patria's" success with riotous applause. No motion picture ever had such a reception.

WITH DIALOGUE BY

H. C. Witwer—America's Latest and Funniest Humorist

H. H. Van Loan—The Funniest of All Screen Writers

Every one who has seen this remarkable comedy-burlesque is asking: "Where DID you get that stuff?" At the big downtown Stanley, catering to Broadway patrons, this picture was a knockout. It set everyone to talking. They want to know why a big FIVE-REEL comedy with a hundred punches has never been released before.

Uptown, at the neighborhood NORTH STAR Theatre, 2,000 people sat glued to their seats while the mirth and revelry and laughter amounted to almost a riot.

That's what we are offering you Mr. States Rights Buyer—A novelty that has proven its box office value. You are not only getting a big, fine 5-reel production, a complete entertainment, but you have EDNA AUG, famous musical comedy star; Witwer and Van Loan, the funniest guys in the business; an all-star cast of individual star comedians; interpolated novelties that put this picture in a class by itself.

Read what the manager of the North Star Theatre says in the box below. He said a lot more, but this is all we have room for.

This is YOUR chance to clean up. Send all communications to "A great treat to me to have the first showing of your new film. One of the greatest comedy entertainments I have ever seen. Great cast; great lines and screaming situations. 2,000 people saw it at my house, and the popular gag in my section is: 'Where d'ye get that stuff?'—That's how quick it leaped into popularity. A great five-reeler."—J. Levine, Mgr. North Star Theatre, New York City.

Facts and Comments

ONE of the most interesting questions the future must decide is the growth of the twelve-reel feature and its relationship both to the public and to the industry. Special multiple reel features taking the part of regular dramatic attractions are now a familiar thing in most of the big cities. In New York three or four are having continuous runs. It seems, too, that by far the most of these huge features have made money. We do not think they draw patrons away from the regular motion picture theater; on the contrary, they enhance the prestige of the motion picture. The most magnificent of all the screen possibilities can best be realized in these big features, for which special scores can be written, and on the presentation of which the best exhibiting skill can demonstrate its mettle.

* * *

WE CALL special attention to the symposium of exhibitors' opinions on the relation of the cost of film service to the box office. No more timely and vital topic has been discussed in many a day. Every letter is full of good ideas, some of which we earnestly hope will bear fruit. Incidentally, we may call attention to the fact that the MOVING PICTURE WORLD is in the closest possible touch with the daily problems of the exhibitor.

* * *

THERE are lots of men and women reformers who fall upon an objectionable picture and make it the basis of a general attack on all motion pictures. Of course there are objectionable pictures, but compared to the total output they are today almost a negligible quantity. A movement is on foot among disinterested persons unconnected with the industry in any commercial way to compile a list of specially fine pictures to whom the exhibitor may point as a fairer sample of the motion picture art and of screen ethics. The plan has its difficulties. It is, we believe, perfectly feasible. It surely looks like the best remedy against one-sided and wholesale condemnation.

* * *

SAID one prominent exhibitor to the writer the other day: "I think we are still a good ways from really good and clever titles. There are some companies—not many—that keep their titles distinctly above the average. On the other hand, there are too many that obviously do not strive after perfection in titles. After all, every title is an interruption which too often turns out to be needless and then becomes an intrusion, if not an obtrusion. In nine cases out of ten the presumption ought to be against a title—at least in all pictures that are exceptionally good. When a picture depends too much on the titles it reminds me of a man walking on crutches." All of which is heartily indorsed here, and all of which shows what an observant lot the exhibitors are.

* * *

AT THE recent luncheon of the National Board of Review one of the most gratifying features was the hearty recognition of the Board's services by one of the prominent city officials present. In giving the Board the assurance of co-operation this city official has only followed an example set by many other cities. The licensing and the police authorities of many localities have come to entertain considerable faith in the findings of the Board, and in many cases these findings have been upheld in the courts. The position of the Board is stronger today than ever it was, and deservedly so.

* * *

JUST a curious item we have stumbled on in our editorial correspondence. A theater owner had been making ends meet on a ten-cent admission. He wanted to do better than that and reduced the price to a nickel. Strangely enough, his business fell off immediately. It is a fact that quality films in nickel houses rarely pay. The exceptions prove the rule.

* * *

THE editor of a well-known magazine resents the idea of motion picture exhibitors charging more than a nickel. He thinks that the motion picture theater ought to fulfill its mission to the masses, which he thinks can only be done on the basis of five cents. The only trouble with this theory is the increased cost of film service. As things stand now the wonder to us is that so many five-cent houses still manage to exist. Then think of the difference in quality between 1906 and 1916

* * *

BUYERS for foreign markets are no longer making London their exclusive headquarters. Not only Latin-America but Australia as well is buying right here in New York. Why not? Latin-America is learning more about us than it ever knew before and feels more kindly toward us and our films. The next steamer leaving for Buenos Aires carries an unusually large quantity of American films. Indeed there is not a steamer that has left for Latin-American ports of late that has not had on board either American film men or American films or both; mostly both.

Tales of Woe

By Louis Reeves Harrison

THE most difficult stories to write are those which do justice to our own times. This fact is one very generally ignored in motion picture production. Many a producer who feels a sort of mystical veneration for old examples of literature and the drama, even when they contain no universal appeal, when they pertain merely to conditions which no longer exist, is deeply impressed with their value in modern composition, whereas the best material they furnish is, with certain illustrious exceptions, only fit for the foundations of the modern structure.

Contrast the volumes of learned and literary criticism on the classics with the frankly malicious and enviously slighting remarks passed on any work of art that dares to be new. "Enlighten the world and ye shall be crucified!" Of course, all that is new is not meritorious, but gems and refuse are shoveled into the same production hopper with a weakness of discrimination that shows a lack of artistry in selection and of good common business sense in distribution. Now and then, in the mass of stuff shown on the screen, gems of the purest ray serene shine out for a few months of exhibition and then are consigned to oblivion.

The adaptation is a half-way measure, and who ever heard of a half-way measure succeeding to any large degree? It is true that many of the great novels and plays of the past are still interesting—we have sifted out the best examples—but we have had practically all of them on the screen. Are we to have them over and over again next year? Are we to have three hundred and sixty-five more days of "In the Gloaming?" Nearly all of these old masterpieces are tragic, suited to grand opera, perhaps, but rather depressing for those who go to the picture show.

A very large number of the so-called "strong" stories from foreign sources relate to a form of oppression born in the idea of monarchial rule. We revolted against that kind of tyranny over a century ago and threw it off forever. While we are glad to help those in revolt today, those aspiring souls who would rid themselves of princes and prelates, the particular form of oppression from which they suffer is not so near to our hearts as the cry for greater justice to humanity, greater generosity to its erring members, which comes from our midst.

We are here to govern ourselves and to prove that we can do it in a manner which shall be a departure from the obsolete one-man rule of a self-elected Emperor. Our problems are here, not in Europe. If we must have unpleasant pictures to act as a tonic in our easygoing life, why not utilize great lessons of the past by bringing the scene of action to our own country or so present the theme that its modern application will be of value? Tragedy would then involve either an inner struggle or a vain conflict of great souls against greed, against inhumanity, against ignorance, against all that obstructs enlightenment and happiness.

Shall we deal with existence as we find it? Shall we try to do justice to the times in which we live? "No!" says the Big Distributor. Why not? "Because," he insists, "the exhibitor refuses to buy a photoplay not based on the work of some big author." Big authors of today refuse to sell great copyright works at current rates in sufficient quantity to provide one release a month. Producers are forced to turn to old stories in order to comply with such actions. Old stories can not, as a rule, do justice to the times in which we are living. Such an exaction carries its own condemnation.

If it is true that exhibitors demand that the screen story shall bear the name of some celebrated author, what other resource has the producer than the eternal half-measure of adaptation? The adptation must come very largely from foreign authors of days gone by. They were sincere in their day. Those who believe with Aristotle that tragedy is the crowning achievement of the human intellect wrote in dark measures and not for an evening's entertainment at the picture show. Hence it is that we have so much of death, disaster and misery in the big stories submitted for the pleasure of common people.

Tales of Woe! Tales of Woe! What a relief in the vaudeville show when the lights are turned up and the people in front are not called upon to watch the villainous stock broker plan the ruin of the heroine's husband or father, or the ravings of a half-sane murderer! The gloomy tales of deferred vengeance, the weary recitals of foreign oppression, the hideous workings of a criminal brain—they may do for an occasional heavy dish, but a steady diet of that sort of stuff will deprive the picture exhibitions of the relief that people seek in an evening's entertainment.

What kind of stories best suit the people? Says the editor of Century, "The most acceptable material comes from the man writing out of the fullness of his experience." Such is the view differently expressed by many other editors who have their fingers on the public pulse. What is not suited to a large mixed audience is defined by another editor, "Too long. Unpleasant theme, Unoriginal idea, Something already done, Appealing to too small an audience." He defines what the people do not want as almost exactly what is being given to moving picture audiences under the Big Name policy.

The average adaptation from some old foreign work, when it is not a modernization, is "something already done," is an "unoriginal idea," is only suited to the few who care for that sort of thing, "appealing to too small an audience," and it usually has "an unpleasant theme." Very few of the ancient tragedies are suited to the growing intelligence and hopeful aspirations of our people. Just as we are self-perfecting individuals, just as we are constantly expanding our social life, so we should look to the creative impulses of our people and our time for larger and finer truth in stories told or visualized.

There is an abundance of creative impulse among our writers. That is proven by the finest examples shown on the screen—they grow out of fundamental sincerity on the part of authors and producers. Some of the best photoplays are rich in their appeal to our sense of the beautiful. Others conduce to the upbuilding of social health through ridiculing whatever is false, hypocritical and pretentious. Others bring out of the pain of bitter experience some bright and cheering joy. Others evoke laughter by picturing our common stupidities and weaknesses. We may probe disease to heal it, but not merely to exhibit the morbid.

The play should be the symbol of our content and discontent, of our thwarted hopes and new aspirations, its color and design, its lights and shadows, of ourselves, our sympathies, our thoughts, our very souls. A few ancient lights still burn like fixed stars, but this does not mean that we should forever rake over ashes of the past for our glowing embers. Live author and live producer must come into a finer harmony of relation, the success of one intermingled with the success of the other, before we can show exponents of the older arts that we combine, rather than reflect, them all.

Keep Up the Good Work

By W. Stephen Bush

HOW many of us take time to think of the mighty change which has come over the public attitude toward the motion picture within the past two or three years? Do we realize how many churches and schools have installed motion picture machines? Scarcely any convention or conference of civic societies passses but the motion picture is made a prominent item on the calendar of discussion.

Time was when the motion picture screen needed a public defender, as it were. Conventions of clergymen, meetings of educators and similar bodies just denounced the motion picture and let it go at that. It never even occurred to them that there might be two sides to this question and that they never had heard but one. A few good "denouncers" appeared and poured the vials of their moral wrath upon the screen and all its works and there followed a set of resolutions either written directly or inspired by the same "denouncers." In the endless chain of "denouncers" the newspapers at one time formed an important link. How our dear friends the reporters, aided and abetted by the dear editors, used to love tracing all kinds of juvenile crime to the wicked moving pictures! According to the accepted formula the youthful offender simply blamed a motion picture for his incursion into the field of crime, whereupon he received full absolution.

With what fine scorn these editors then rejected the notion that in the very near future they themselves would have a motion picture department in their papers!

Today not only does the American public know that there is another side, but it begins to favor this other side. The fanaticism of the Crafts and the Chases has overshot itself; truth had been repressed too vehemently and too long and the natural reaction in such cases was bound to come. It is here now. Prejudice has not disappeared entirely, but much of the prejudice is of the wilful variety and is therefore incurable. The prejudice which was born of ignorance has been almost entirely dissipated.

For this profound and welcome change many factors are entitled to credit, and surely there is enough glory to go around. Every producer who has honestly striven to make good pictures has been a factor. The motion picture journals have been factors. The various organizations in the industry have been factors. The National Board of Review has helped considerably.

Of all the factors, however, it seems to me none has been more effective than the example set by the exhibitor. The public, after all, forms its opinions from the motion picture theaters which it patronizes. Here is the true source of the deep change that has come over the attitude of the public toward the motion picture. No ordinary theatrical manager, indeed no manager of any amusement enterprise, is as close to the public as the exhibitor of motion pictures. The successful motion picture exhibitor knows his patrons and his patrons know him. They meet him almost every night of the week. These patrons are just and careful critics and observers. They can tell when a man is in love with his calling and gives them a fine clean entertainment. To them the exhibitor represents the motion picture. They know nothing about problems of production and distribution. They do know what the manager of their favorite theater is doing. They judge both the artistic and the ethical standards of the whole industry by the impressions they derive through him. In nine cases out of ten the occasional waves of public indignation against the abuse of the screen are directly traceable to some short-sighted exhibitor, who has failed to realize the importance and the dignity of his calling and whose level of showmanship is of the dime-museum variety. It is the man who "dresses up" his lobby and the exterior of his house as if he were advertising a cancer cure, the man who chases after every questionable film—in short, the incompetent exhibitor—who is responsible for more than half the agitation against the motion picture. When the public of a large Western city recently rose in indignant protest against the exhibition of certain pictures the fault was admittedly that of a very few but very unscrupulous men who kept their houses in the busiest thoroughfare of the town. The decent exhibitors, very much in the majority, of course, made common cause with the Mayor and the police and the blot on the screen was removed in short order.

The good name of the motion picture is very largely in the hands of the exhibitor.

Co-operation—In Theory and Practice

By W. Stephen Bush.

CO-OPERATION is one of the most beautiful words in the whole dictionary, but it must be made practical to be of any value. Take, for instance, the question of co-operation between exchange manager and exhibitor. Recently a meeting was held in this city avowedly for the purpose of such co-operation. Before the meeting had progressed very far one after another of the exchange managers arose and voiced loud lamentations over bad accounts. A disinterested outsider not having read the call for the harmony meeting and not knowing what it was about was bound to draw the conclusion that the exhibitors present were a specially bad lot of delinquent debtors and sadly in need of a scathing denunciation. I attended the meeting and expected any moment that an appeal would be made to the exhibitors present to pay the bad accounts of the exchanges present.

Now history tells us that as far back as the Phoenicians there were bad accounts. Records of bad accounts are said to have been found in the ruins of Herculaneum and among the cuneiform inscriptions of Assyria. The present indications are that bad accounts will continue to occur in the future; even we ourselves are not wholly exempt from bad accounts. To condemn exhibitors as a class for occasional bad accounts is worse than absurd; it is positively harmful. In Cleveland, to mention but one example, they do these things much better. There a certificate of membership in the league is regarded as an evidence of good credit in the exchange. If there were a disposition to work with the exhibitor the same condition might prevail here in New York.

Talking about bad accounts, I make bold to say that some of them are directly traceable to the door of the exchange. Where an exchange capitalizes the bitterness between competing exhibitors and the film service far beyond its sound intrinsic value what can be expected? An unsound policy produces unsound conditions. The exchange manager who thinks it good business to get exhibitors bidding against each other must know that such competition spells ruin to at least one of the competitors and may result in spoiling the business for that particular section for some time to come. Bad accounts are apt to grow out of just such a condition.

Granting that there are bad accounts, does that mean that all exhibitors are to be treated with suspicion? On the subscription lists of the Moving Picture World are thousands of exhibitors who have substantial investments, who have built up a reputation for prompt payment of their bills, who in any other line of business would be given generous credit. For the sake of an occasional shirker the decent exhibitor is treated as if he was a probable "dead-beat." What would happen if business were conducted generally on such lines? The MOVING PICTURE WORLD has many advertisers who have been with us from the beginning and in whose financial strength and integrity we have an absolute faith. On the other hand, we have had undesirable advertisers who defaulted on their bills. What would our old friends think of us if we insisted on advance payments because some unreliable concern had failed to pay what it owed to us? The same logic applies to the distributing business. What reason and justice is there in treating an old, well-established theater on the same footing as a new beginner of whom nothing is known? Cases are painfully numerous of high-class and thoroughly responsible exhibitors whose show was held up for the sake of a few dollars alleged to be due to the exchange. Quite often investigation proved that the amount claimed against the exhibitors was incorrect.

To sum up: Co-operation is nothing but an empty word if it is not carried out in practice.

Let Well Enough Alone

By W. STEPHEN BUSH.

THE Appellate Division, which comprises the third, fourth and fifth judicial districts of the State, has, by a divided court, sustained the contention that Sunday exhibitions of motion pictures are contrary to law, being in violation of Section 265 of the Penal Code of the State of New York. A considerable portion of the northern section and the western tier of the state will be affected by this decision. To be specific, the decision will or may have an effect on Sunday exhibition of motion pictures in the following counties: Third Judicial District: Counties of Columbia, Sullivan, Ulster, Greene, Albany, Rensselaer, Schoharie; Fourth Judicial District: Counties of Warren, Saratoga, Washington, Essex, Franklin, St. Lawrence, Clinton, Montgomery, Hamilton, Fulton and Schenectady; Fifth Judicial District: Counties of Otsego, Delaware, Madison, Chenango, Broome, Tioga, Tompkins, Chemung, Cortlandt and Schuyler. Then only cities of any size lying in territory described are Albany, Troy, Schenectady, Plattsburgh, Ithaca, Elmira, and Binghamton. The rest of the district is overwhelmingly rural in character.

The decision will have no effect whatever in the First and Second judicial departments, in which Greater New York and the New York portion of the Metropolitan District are located. The authorities in Greater New York have in the past been entirely guided by the decision in the case of the People against Hemleb, of which more extended mention will be found in the news columns of this week's issue of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD. The Supreme Court of both judicial districts has followed the rule laid down in the Hemleb case, i. e., that Sunday exhibitions of motion pictures are not illegal. The police authorities have been guided by this same decision, and so has the Corporation Counsel. It is altogether unlikely that there will be any departure from the doctrine laid down in the Hemleb case, and it behooves us motion picture men to keep perfectly cool in the face of the present situation, in which only alarmists will see any genuine danger.

It is anomalous that there should be two such sharply conflicting decisions on the same subject, for there is no doubt of the irreconcilable difference in the interpretation of the law laid down in the Second and the Third Department. However, that is not for us to worry about.

The greatest tactical mistake, in our judgment, would be to carry this matter to the Court of Appeals. Far better to bear the ills we know than fly to others, etc.

Exhibitors' Views

What the Men on the Firing Line Have to Say on a Vital Subject.

The great and practical question of the relationship between "The Increased Cost of Film and The Box Office" is arousing tremendous interest in exhibiting ranks. We print in addition to the extracts from splendid and illuminating letters we published in the last issue the following letters from exhibitors:

New York City, Nov. 15, 1916.

Moving Picture World:

Gentlemen: These figures may interest other exhibitors as per invited views on film rental statistics of last week's World. Open program—5-reel features with extra one reels to fill up.

Cost of service	Gross for week	Net gross	Per cent for service
$219	$1362 00	$11.43	16%
120	970.00	8.50	12½%

As will be seen by figures we reduced the per cent of film cost the second week 3½% or $99 in cash and reduced our receipts $392. Conditions of weather and other things were about the same so it clearly shows you cannot slip over cheap service and still hold the business. I am going to try some expensive features and will send in figures again later on. C. E. G.

Brooklyn, November, 1916.

Editor Moving Picture World:

Dear Sir—I gladly avail myself of opportunity of sending in views as to what should be paid for film service in proportion to gross receipts as invited by letter on page 985 of current issue of World. On a weekly business of about $450, I figure on paying average of $25 a day for service which amounts to a little under 40% of gross. But it is too much. It allows a very small margin of profit. Open booking I think is bad, yet I see no way out of it.

I don't want one or two reel subjects, I must have good five-reel features and a variety of them as well. What I require I cannot get from any one exchange. I hope to see a combine of some of the big ones so it will be possible to book all from one office and at the right price, as could be done five years ago with the one reelers. If such a combine comes and takes advantage of their strength to boost prices I get out of business.

I believe good features can be run in a neighborhood house for two days, but I won't try them until it is made worth my while in a way of price. Let the combine mentioned give me three shows a week to run two days' each, me to pick one for the Sunday show to be selected from the three and give me a flat figure of $125 a week, and I can make good money and so can the Exchange. BROOKLYN.

There is food for thought and more than that in every one of these letters. The information contained in these communications ought to be plain, practical value to both producer and exhibitor. We will be glad to have more letters on the same subject.

Fox Disavows Attack on President

Says Management of Pitt Theater, Pittsburgh, Acted Without Authorization from Him.

IN ANNOUNCING the forthcoming showing of "The Honor System," W. Patch, manager of the Pitt theater, Pittsburgh, in his house program has made a vicious attack upon President Wilson.

William Fox, president of the Fox Film Corporation, owners of "The Honor System," both regrets and resents this entirely unwarranted act of Mr. Patch. Mr. Fox wishes it to be understood most definitely that the management of the Pitt theater has acted with absolutely no authorization from the Fox Film Corporation, and that the photoplay in no way reflects upon the President.

Mr. Fox is sending this statement to the trade throughout the United States:

"Without the knowledge or sanction of Fox Film Corporation, W. Patch, Manager of the Pitt Theater, Pittsburgh, has attacked President Wilson in connection with an announcement of the photoplay production, 'The Honor System.'

"The attack originated with the management of the Pitt Theater, and we take this means of notifying the public that the conduct and policy of the President are in no way connected with 'The Honor System,' nor have they any bearing on the play.

"Fox Film Corporation, owners of 'The Honor System,' regret that this attack was published by the Pitt Theater in their house program. We consider the announcement unjust, improper and unpatriotic. No act or policy of the President is reflected upon in any scene of 'The Honor System'." FOX FILM CORPORATION.

Pittsburgh, Nov. 27, 1916. William Fox, President.

YALE BOSS BACK IN PICTURES.

The many thousands of admirers of Yale Boss will be glad to hear that he is returning to the screen. As a boy he earned wide popularity among film patrons by his cleverness and his engaging personality. At the height of his success he withdrew to complete his education. Having done this, he has returned and will be featured in "The Halfback," a thrilling football play now being produced by the Edison Company.

Sunday Shows Illegal?

Decision in Case of Albany Exhibitor in Conflict With Former Rulings Made by Appellate Division in Second Department—Legality of Sunday Shows Uniformly Maintained in This Jurisdiction—No Action Contemplated Here

THE Appellate Division of the Third Department of the State of New York has handed down a decision on the legality or rather the illegality of motion picture exhibition on Sunday. The decision was rendered upon an appeal taken by Leroy H. Bender of Albany, an exhibitor, who had been arrested for violating Section 265 of the Penal Code, prohibiting Sunday exhibitons. Bender was discharged on a writ of habeas corpus sued out before Justice Morshauser of Poughkeepsie. Justice Morshauser based his decision on the well-known case of the People v. Hemleb, reported in 127 App. Div. 356, in which the Appellate Division of the Second Department held on the 29th of June, 1908, that Section 265, relative to the prohibition of Sunday shows, did not apply to exhibitions of motion pictures. This decision written by the late Justice Gaynor and concurred in by a majority of the court has since been followed at Special Term and in various decisions of the Appellate Division in other departments. The law, as interpreted by Justice Gaynor, has likewise been followed by numerous corporation attorneys in opinions presented by them to the municipal authorities in various localities.

The other prominent case in which the question of the legality of Sunday pictures came up in a collateral and indirect way was the case of the People ex. rel. Woldon Kiely vs. Lent, which went to the Court of Appeals and is reported in New York Court of Appeals reports, Vol. 215, page 626. The chief issue in that case was the question of whether the Common Council of the City of Yonkers had the right to override the laws of the State as interpreted by the courts.

In that case the Court of Appeals affirming the decision of the Appellate Division declared that "the Legislature alone can determine how Sunday shall be kept." Many lawyers believe that this amounted to a tacit approval of the doctrine laid down by Justice Gaynor in the Hemleb case, others hold that such an interpretation is strained and that the Court of Appeals did not touch upon the legality of Sunday exhibition of motion pictures, directly or indirectly.

Strange Conflict of Decisions.

In the recent case of Bender decided by the Appellate Division of the Third Department the Court renders an opinion whose reasoning sharply conflicts with the logic of the Hemleb case. The decision in the Bender case comes from a divided bench as did the decision in the Hemleb case. In the Bender case four of the Justices sustain the view that motion picture exhibitions are unlawful on Sunday while the fifth justice adheres to the interpretation of the late Justice Gaynor. The opinion in the Bender case reviews the circumstances of appellant's arrest and refers to his contention that he should be discharged because the phrase in the statute, "or other public sports, exercises, or shows," does not apply to indoor performances. Regarding this the opinion says:

"The words 'or other public sports, exercises, or shows' are presumed to have been used by the Legislature in their ordinary and familiar sense and meaning and are to be so understood and construed. Acts relating to the observance of the Sabbath are remedial statutes, and are to be construed liberally in respect to the mischiefs sought to be remedied.

"The vital question to be decided upon this appeal is: What did the Legislature mean when it wrote into the statute relating to the observance of Sunday, following the prohibition against shooting, hunting, fishing, horse racing, gaming, the words, 'or other public sports, exercises or shows'? Did it intend to prohibit exhibitions in the nature of the ordinary moving picture show? It would seem clear that the answer to that question must be in the affirmative."

The opinion also states that the trend of recent legislation has been to protect, so far as possible, the right of employees to rest on Sunday, and that no good reason is apparent for denying that privilege to the thousands of employees of moving picture theaters in the State.

Authority in Greater New York Unlikely to Change Present Conditions.

A representative of The Moving Picture World communicated with the Corporation Counsel of the City of New York to learn whether the Law Department of the city intended to take any notice of the Bender decision and whether any action was contemplated. The attorney in charge of the office declared that no official notice had been received. Even if such notice were received, he felt safe in saying that the Corporation Counsel would not do anything of his own initiative. He said his client was the City of New York and he did not propose to act until he heard from his client. The attorney said he had read the decision in the Bender case and felt that it was in direct conflict with the interpretation which the court arrived at in the Hemleb case. Further than this he did not care to commit himself.

Interviews with lawyers who have had some experience in the fight for and against Sunday closing without exception adhered to the belief that the decision in the Third Department would not be permitted to affect conditions in the City of New York. Said one of them, speaking to a representative of The Moving Picture World: "The law as laid down by Judge Gaynor in the Hemleb case has been followed at Special Term in at last three cases which occurred in the limits of the Greater City. The one case in which the whole question was thoroughly discussed and in which Judge Gaynor's decision was strictly followed was that of the William Fox Amusement Company, plaintiff, against George B. McClellan, a Mayor of the City of New York, et al., decided at a Special Term of the Supreme Court held in Kings County. In that case it was held by Justice Blackmar that 'a decision of a question of law by the Appellate Division should control a judge at Special Term. The Appellate Division having held that a moving picture show is not a public show within the meaning of those words as used in Section 265 of the Penal Code, a Special Term should be controlled by such decision. The indoor exhibitions and performances prohibited by Section 277 of the Penal Code, so far as it is now in force, does not include moving picture shows. The Legislature has not seen fit to prohibit generally all secular business and employment on Sunday, but only those specified acts determined by serious interruptions of the repose and religious liberty of the community."

Baltimore Operators Dance

Hold Seventh Annual Ball at Lyric Theater—Distinguished Guests Present.

ON THE eve of November 15, Local Union No. 181, Baltimore, Maryland, together with friends in the city and as many from outside as could "make it" tripped the light fantastic till the wee sma' hours anent the twa. On the stage of the Lyric, where the affair took place, was a huge, illuminated American flag, which was enthusiastically saluted by the assemblage when the band struck up "The Star Spangled Banner."

The dance was the seventh annual ball given by the Baltimore Union, and is said to have eclipsed any of its predecessors, both in point of "stunts" pulled off, magnificence of decorations, attendance, good timedness and distinguished guests, among whom were Secretary of Labor Wilson and Samuel Gompers, president American Federation of Labor, together with other American Federation of Labor officials. (The American Federation of Labor convention was in session in Baltimore at the time.) Aside from these were Business Agent Louis Krause, Secretary Murray of the Philadelphia Operators' Union, B. A. Spellbring, president Washington Moving Picture Operators' Union; C. A. Canavan, president Detroit Moving Picture Operators' Union; F. G. Dolliver, president San Francisco Moving Picture Operators' Union; Charles Shay, International president I. A. T. S. E. and M. P. M. O.; McDonald, of the Detroit Moving Picture Operators' Union, and I. G. Sherman, of the Hudson County, N. J., local were there. Bunji Souki, Tokio, Japan, and Mrs. Helen Goslin, of London, England, were among the guests, together with other foreigners identified with labor questions.

The Lyric was packed to its utmost capacity, and it goes without saying that everybody had a rip-roaring good time, went home tired, but happy, heartily indorsing the sentiment: Long live the Baltimore men and the Baltimore Union.

Rah, rah, rah! Whee, whee, whee,
Zing, bim, bam, bum, who are we?
Hah, hah, hah; that's it, son,
Local Union one eight one!

Seventy-five Hundred Attend Boston Ball

Former Governor Walsh Star Speaker at the Banquet Following Bay State Exhibitors' Annual Function

THE fourth annual ball of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, Massachusetts branch, was held at the Boston Arena, the same great structure where have been held the two previous exhibitor functions, on Wednesday, November 22. Seventy-five hundred persons attended, and there was abundant room for them. The Arena stands on a plot 420 by 240 feet, and nearly all of this area is in the Auditorium. Practically all of the local exchanges and supply houses were represented among the boxholders.

Beatrice Roberts.

Threescore persons went over to the Massachusetts capital from New York City. It was the annual pilgrimage. In the party were P. A. Powers of the Universal company and Mr. Chadwick of the Ivan company, and many exchange men and players. One of the events of the evening was the selection of one girl from among 150 contestants for a position with the Atlas Film Corporation. This was won by Beatrice Roberts, a Winthrop high school girl. At the close of the ball, about 2 o'clock, 225 exhibitors and film men and their guests sat down to a banquet in Horticultural Hall.

Nearly all of the New York contingent arrived at the Back Bay station at 6 o'clock in the evening. In the party, which was in charge of Captain Charles E. Kimball, were Samuel H. Trigger, representing the New York State exhibitors; J. K. Berger and Earl Gulick, of the International; George Balsdon, of the Greater Vitagraph; M. H. Hoffman and H. H. Van Loan, of the Universal; and "Bob" Taylor and Harry McRae Webster, of the Unicorn-Monmouth. The players and their companies were:

Sherman-Elliott, "The Crisis"—George Fawcett.

Vitagraph—Charles Richman, Harry Morey, Alice Joyce, Rose Tapley and Adele De Garde.

Ivan—Louise Vale, James Morrison, Frankie Mann and Zena Keefe.

Fox—June Caprice, Stuart Holmes, Harry Benham and Ormi Hawley.

Universal—Violet Mersereau.

International—Grace Darling and Ethel Fariss.

Thanhouser—Flo La Badie and Ethyl Cooke.

Unicorn—Paul Panzer, Edna Hunter, Doris Mitchell and Billy West.

Unity—Margaret Gale and Eric Mayne.

The Screen Club was represented by President Billy Quirk, former President King Baggot, Wallie Van and also Leroy Byron, now playing at the Hollis Street theater in "The Master." There was a police detail of seventy men, consisting of a captain, two lieutenants, three sergeants, five mounted men, four plainclothes men and fifty-five patrolmen. It was the largest patrol ever sent out for an indoor event in New England. Captain Thomas F. Good was in charge.

Captain Kimball had looked after the comfort of the travelers, so that from the time of the arrival at the Grand Central station there was no incident to mar. At Providence a committee of five, consisting of President Ernest H. Horstmann, Stanley W. Hand of the World Film, C. H. Phillips of the Fox exchange, Herman Rifkin of the Eastern and Dr. Golden of the Boston Photoplay, met the delegation. At the station in Boston, Vice Presidents R. W. Drown and M. J. Lydon and fifteen others welcomed the New Yorkers and took good care to avoid a crush such as that which marked the arrival of the year before.

The doors of the Arena were opened at 7 o'clock and the arrivals continued until midnight. Samuel Grant, who has managed the two preceding Arena balls, was again general manager. Assisting him were Harry F. Campbell of the Fox Film exchange as floor director and Exhibitor E. R. Gregory as floor manager. E. J. Farrell of the Pathe Exchange was announcer, and was right at home on the job.

A squad of police escorted the players to their boxes, and the guardians of the peace were necessary to make a way through the throng. Mayor Curley was late in arriving, and so, too, was former Governor Walsh. The latter was obliged to leave for another engagement, but returned in time to take his place as chief guest of honor at the banquet, which began at 2 o'clock. The mayor made a plea, when presented on the platform in the center of the arena, for contributions to the Christmas charity fund being conducted by the Boston American. Professor Hugo Munsterberg of Harvard was a guest at the Universal box.

The grand march started at 11 o'clock and was led by the mayor. At its conclusion came what proved to be the feature of the evening, the selection of a winner out of the hundred and a half of entrants of all types. Some one remarked he never knew there were so many blondes in the world. Surely they predominated. The committee to make a choice that proved full of difficulties and which consumed more than an hour's time was made up of Harry Morey of the Vitagraph, Miss Esther Harney and Miss Minnie Mulry of the Boston Traveler, Jack Conley of Washington, Captain Kimball, F. J. McIsaac and George Blaisdell of the Moving Picture World.

During all the time the committee was culling the candidates and reducing the number to be considered the great throng remained standing about and seated in the Arena. Some of the entrants had their partisans present in numbers, who would break into applause when a favorite was brought forward into the thinning lines. The choice was finally reduced to one of three. The decision was given to Beatrice Roberts, a tall girl of striking figure, who had all through the session been the favorite of a majority of the film men who had crowded in behind the committee. The two remaining who received honorable mention were Alice Noak and Lillian White. Miss Roberts is a bit under seventeen years of age and a sophomore at the Winthrop high school.

The box holders were A. G. Pearson, Somerville; R. M. Kane, Spencer; M. J. Lydon, Dorchester; P. F. Lydon, South Boston; H. I. Wasserman, Roxbury; E. H. Horstmann; F. J. Howard; International Film Company; World Film Corporation; Union Film Company; United Booking Office; Leon Dadmun; Atlas Film Corporation; Vitagraph Company; Northeast Universal Film Exchange; George Kleine Attractions; Federal Feature Film Company; Globe Feature Film Company; Eastern Feature Film Exchange; Fox Film Corporation; Pathe Exchange, Inc.; Supreme Feature Film Company; Kriterion Company of Boston; Ivan Film Productions; Unicorn Film Service, Inc.; Mutual Film Corporation; Boston Photo Play Company; Famous Players Film Co.; Sunbeam Motion Picture Company; Clarence Mixer, Somerville; Miss Chace, Unicorn Film Service; Fred J. Ruisseau; Mr. Rogers, Colonial Theatre, Brockton; "Civilization"; R. W. Drown, Boston; Samuel Grant, Boston; A. E. Lord, Lynn; Miss Lola May, Dover, N. H.; N. L. Demara, Lawrence; Glover Ware, Beverly; Nicholas Power Company; American Seating Company, Boston; H. E. Miller, Lynn.

MR. WALSH STAR SPEAKER AT BANQUET.

Former Governor David I. Walsh was greeted with prolonged applause when Ernest H. Horstmann, president of the Massachusetts exhibitors, who officiated as toastmaster, presented him to the diners. It was a fine demonstration of the fact that the recent chief executive of the Bay State is first in the hearts of the moving picture men.

"I want to congratulate Massachusetts business and the members of this organization upon the success of this night's event," said Mr. Walsh. "You have demonstrated that the 'Movie Ball' is still the great social function of Boston and New England. I want, however, to serve notice to the moving picture establishments of the country that if they wish to hold their business in Boston and New England they have got to produce more of their stars on these occasions. The public of Massachusetts and Boston are not quite satisfied with seeing upon the screen the men and women who depict so successfully, so artistically and so beautifully human life. They expect and demand that once a year they appear here in the flesh, here at the Movie Ball in Boston. So please take notice that this organization is as strong and as powerful as the railroad organization that got the Adamson law through Congress (laughter and applause), and unless some of you managers come across you will notice the result in the door receipts in the next 365 days.

"I want to express the appreciation I have and that the community has and that this organization has for the presence of the men and women who at great sacrifice have come this long distance to be with us. My friends, this organization is not working for itself. It is working for the promotion, the advancement, of this business, and it ought to have and must have the co-operation of every agency. It must meet and must fight in this state hostile legislation, and unless it has back of it the real beneficiaries the fight will be in vain.

"That ought to be sufficient to indicate that this event should be made, for the sake of the business of the community, the one great social event of the community, and there is no reason why it should not be. It is already, it must continue so, and it will continue to be so with the co-operation of New York and elsewhere. So I charge and ask you to come to Boston once a year and aid and boom the moving picture business.

"All the billboards we may cover within the next year will not do the business that will be promoted by the appearance here in this city of the stars nor in furthering the welfare of the business itself. We are grateful for this appearance. I want again to congratulate the management upon the success of this occasion. This organization, therefore, is to be encouraged and supported by this community and by all those who have cast their lot in this profession and have spent their money to promote and advance it. We thank every man and woman who has come so far to make this occasion successful.

"I want to thank the management with honoring me with such an attractive partner (applause for Flo La Badie), and who has helped to make this occasion a success. Governors may come and governors may go, but I think I am going to maintain against them all one title and one toast: 'Dave Walsh is always going to be the Movie Governor of Massachusetts.' (Prolonged cheering.)

"Even if I don't take a job I can still be with the boys and help them out and advance the work in this movement. I am very glad I have had the pleasure. I know no better citizens, no more loyal friends, than the boys in this business, and I know them all. I hope that the people who are here from New York will go back to their homes more enthusiastic than ever about the men who are engaged in this business in Boston and New England. We want to see you all here next year. We promise not only to repeat this performance but to give you a still better time."

When there came a subsidence in the cheering a motion was made and carried that Mr. Walsh be elected a member of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America, Massachusetts branch.
